I point out, as I did during the hearings on the bill, that of 77 national banks operating in West Virginia at the close of business June 30, 1960, only 16 had assets in excess of $10 million, and only 5 had assets in excess of $25 million. Of the 106 State banks and trust companies in West Virginia, only 16 had assets in excess of $10 million, and only 2 had assets in excess of $25 million.

Mr. President, I say again, in support of the contention of my colleague from West Virginia, that in our State there simply are not available sources to meet the financial needs which must be met if business is to expand and industry is to be attracted to these depressed areas.

I thank my colleague for yielding to me.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, it seems unnecessary, in the light of the compelling comments and the helpful supporting evidence which has been placed in the RECORD by my colleague from West Virginia, to labor the matter further. We believe, if such an amendment were placed in the measure before us, there would be an inhibiting impact on potential industrial growth and new job opportunities in West Virginia. I trust the amendment of the Senator from New York will not prevail.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, unless there are other Senators who wish to speak on the amendment, I am ready to yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Illinois yield back the remainder of his time?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield back my remaining time.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. JAVITS] to the committee amendment.

On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. ERVIN] and the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT] are absent on official business.

I also announce that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. McCARTHY] are absent because of illness.

I further announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. BLAKLEY] is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. McCARTHY], and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. ERVIN] would each vote "nay."

Mr. KUCHEL. I announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ALLOTT] is absent because of death in his family.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROUTY] is absent by leave of the Senate because of illness.

The result was announced—yeas 32, nays 61, as follows:

NOT VOTING—7

So Mr. JAVITS' amendment to the committee amendment was rejected.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I move that the Senate reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to table was agreed to.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I ask for recognition on the bill in order to offer an amendment, but I shall not submit the amendment until after I have yielded to the Senator from Minnesota, who wishes to offer two technical amendments which have been cleared with the ranking Republican member and other members of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I thank the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. President, the amendments are designated 3-14-61-A and 3-14-61-B. Last evening I discussed the amendments in the Senate, but because the minority leader was not here and the ranking Republican member of the Committee on Banking and Currency was not here, and at the request of the Senator from New York [Mr. JAVITS], I did not press for the consideration of the amendments.

My amendments do two things. Amendment designated "B" permits, under sections 6 and 7, participation by an Indian tribe in providing a share of the funds required for any type of program. This is not to increase the cost; it merely makes a participant out of the tribe, as it well should.

The amendment designated "A" includes in the definition of the United States, where the islands are spelled out, "and the Virgin Islands."

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should like to address an inquiry to the Senator from Minnesota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota has not yet offered his amendments.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I shall do so now. I have cited the amendments. I ask that they be made the pending business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 80, line 6, it is proposed to strike out the period and insert "and the Virgin Islands."

Amend section 6(b)(9)(B) to read:

"That not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by an Indian tribe or a community or area organization which is nongovernmental in character, as equity capital or as a loan;"

Amend section 7(c) to read:

"In making any loan under this section, the Secretary shall require that not less than 10 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made shall be supplied by the State (including any political subdivision thereof) within which such project is located or by the Indian tribe on whose reservation such project is located as equity capital or as a loan."

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, the only new words in the amendment designated "B" are the words "Indian tribe." The rest of the language is in the bill.

In some States, where there is a substantial Indian population, it is possible that a State might not provide, as the bill does, equity capital on the part of the State for a project on an Indian reservation. Therefore, if the State, through its legislature, is unwilling to provide such capital, all the amendment provides is that if an Indian tribe has private resources—tribal resources—and is willing to put up 10 percent or more, as would be required under the language of the bill for any political subdivision or nongovernmental organization, the tribe would not be denied that opportunity.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I should like to address an inquiry to the Senator from Minnesota, based upon the fact that I have several times expressed concern that the attempt to relieve areas of actual continuing, chronic unemployment might be so diluted or watered down as to defeat some of the purposes of the bill. I had been of the impression that the tourist trade and other resources of the Virgin Islands had rendered it an area which would hardly be considered a distressed area. Is the Senator from Minnesota in possession of any facts which would indicate that the criteria of the bill would bring the Virgin Islands under the need for aid to distressed areas, under the distress criteria?

Mr. HUMPHREY. My response is simply that the Virgin Islands were included together with Puerto Rico simply because they are a part of the United States of America. If it is a distressed area, it does not qualify. There is no mandate that every inch of territory or every group of people in the United States automatically qualifies. They qualify only if the request for assistance meets the criteria established in the bill. I do not believe we ought to exclude this area, because it may very well have its own problems.

Mr. SCOTT. I thought the Senator from Minnesota could enlighten me. I was curious as to whether or not the Virgins were in distress. I thank the Senator.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I will comment privately to the Senator a little later.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I am glad to accept the amendments. I think they are meritorious. A number of Senators from the Northwestern States and Southwestern States have suggested them. I hope they will be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing en bloc, to the amendments offered by the Senator from Minnesota.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Senator from Arkansas.

THE OECD CONVENTION

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, the proposed Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development is a recognition of a shift in economic strength which has been taking place steadily since World War II.

At the end of the war, the United States was the giant which dominated the world's economy, and for several years thereafter the rest of the world, and particularly devastated Western Europe, was dependent upon exports from this country, paid for to a considerable extent by U.S. aid.

The very success of our foreign economic programs has created new problems and new opportunities. The renewal of the industrial power of Western Europe, as well as that of Japan, has brought about an ability of those countries to bear a larger share of the free world's requirements of trade and investment, and opportunities for coordinating far greater total economic resources.

While the OECD gives the United States an opportunity to bring about a more equitable sharing by others of the economic problems, of which it has carried a disproportionate share, the Senate should not ratify this convention under any illusion that our own share should be smaller, absolutely. However, it may be, and, in my opinion should be, smaller, relative to the total effort which the free world must make.

While the industrialized nations of the free world have been growing apace, the gap between them and the less developed nations has steadily widened. An effort to narrow this gap is one of the primary purposes of the OECD.

Does it need to be argued, now, that this disparity is something which ought to concern us? I think not, but let me repeat here what the President said about it in his inaugural address.

To those peoples in the huts and villages across the globe struggling to break the bonds of mass misery, we pledge our best efforts to help them help themselves, for whatever period is required—not because the Communist may be doing it, not because we seek their votes, but because it is right. If a free society cannot help the many who are poor, it cannot save the few who are rich.

The shift, from dependence upon the United States, as the dominant economic power of the free world, to interdependence among the countries of Western Europe, Japan, and the United States, has been brought to the forefront by the decline in our balance of payments position.

For the past 10 years our balance of payments has resulted in a deficit—except for 1957, the year of the Suez crisis. From 1951 to 1957 this deficit averaged about $1 billion a year. During these years foreigners held these net dollar earnings in the form of dollars or dollar-earning investments, and at the end of that period our gold reserves were actually slightly larger than at the beginning. In 1958, 1959, and 1960, however, the much larger deficits of $3.5 billion, $3.8 billion, and $3.8 billion, respectively, resulted in outflows of gold of approximately $4.7 billion, total.

The earlier deficits in our balance of payments were, on the whole, beneficial. They financed the export of American goods and services which enabled the rebuilding of other industrialized countries, made possible the restoration of convertible currencies, and increased free world trade. The dollar was being used as the primary reserve currency of the non-Communist world. But the accumulation of dollar holdings abroad placed a heavy burden upon the United States to maintain a dollar "as good as gold." When foreigners began to doubt this would be done they began, increasingly, to exchange dollars for gold.

As the President said—

These gold transfers did not make the underlying balance of payments worse. They did reflect a decision by foreigners to take more of their earnings in gold and to hold less in dollars.

The causes of our balance of payments deficits are well known, and I shall not detail them here. Broadly speaking, our excess of exports over imports have not been sufficient to cover military expenditures abroad, foreign aid programs, and private investment.

While our exports increased substantially last year by more than $3 billion, some of this increase was in goods, such as raw cotton and jet aircraft, which cannot be expected to be repeated, and it is doubtful that we can rely upon last year's rate of increased exports to cover our deficit.

Furthermore, the other industrialized countries are offering increasing competition to our exports, both within those countries and elsewhere.

As currencies of most industrialized countries have become convertible, American investment abroad has become more attractive.

The American economy has not grown at the same rate, in recent years, as have those of other advanced economies of the world. In the OEEC countries of Europe as a whole, gross national product rose at an annual rate of 4.6 percent from 1950 to 1957, while it was rising in the United States at a rate of only 3.6 percent. Canadian GNP rose at a rate of 4.4; France's GNP rose at a rate of 4.7; Germany's at 8.0 percent; Italy's at 5.8 percent. The development of the Common Market and the European Free Trade Association enhanced the attractiveness of American investment in the participating countries.

At the same time, the development of the Common Market and the European Free Trade Association created potentialities of further discriminations against our exports, those of other nations, and as between the two groups themselves.

Monetary policies of other nations have contributed to the imbalance of payments of the United States. At a time when our Federal Reserve discount rate was being reduced to 3 percent, because of recession, the German Bundesbank, fearing inflation, raised its comparable rate to 5 percent, and the Bank of England increased its rate to 6 percent.

This resulted in a flood of short-term funds leaving New York for Germany and Britain, a large increase in gold outflow and speculation on the value of gold. At the same time, the large inflows of American funds contributed to inflationary pressures in Germany. When this was realized, the Germans and British cut back their discount rates. In the meantime, our own monetary authorities have had to maintain relatively high short-term rates, and to operate primarily in the long-term market to bring about an easier monetary situation within the United States.

These developments brought a new awareness of the interdependence of the industrialized nations outside the Iron Curtain. The OECD is designed to deal with such problems.

Developments in the Soviet bloc have emphasized the dangers of division outside it. Some of these are summarized in a report to the Committee on Foreign Relations by the Corporation for Economic and Industrial Research, as follows:

The Soviet intention is to attempt to take over the world for communism, and its latest economic plans show that it is mobilizing its rapidly growing industrial strength for precisely this purpose.

While the income of the Soviet bloc will grow by 120 percent by 1970, that of the free world will grow by only 83 percent, and that of the United States by less than 70 percent. In industrial output, other than for consumers, the Soviet might overtake the United States before 1970.

Soviet cold war efforts are now being focused increasingly on the economic arena, and they have selected as targets the underdeveloped countries and will soon have substantial capital goods production to support their campaign.

World population will rise rapidly (22 percent) by 1970, that of the free world underdeveloped countries by almost 30 percent. Because of this, disparities in per capita income will grow even greater between the rich and the poor countries of the free world.

The underdeveloped countries are stirring under a worldwide dissatisfaction with present conditions and methods, and impatience for rapid economic growth. Unless the free world can make a distinct change and create soundly based hope for rapid economic improvement, the underdevelopment countries might fall prey to the "growth without consumption" formula of the Communist system.

Loss of the resources of the underdeveloped countries to the Communist community would completely change the world balance of power in favor of the U.S.S.R.

This is the background for the necessity of economic cooperation and development among the nations outside the Soviet bloc.

In 1948, when the Marshall plan first began operation, representatives of 16 European nations formed the Organization of European Economic Cooperation. This was an organization which recognized the interdependence of the nations of Western Europe, as well as their dependence upon the United States for economic reconstruction. The OEEC played an important part in Western Europe's recovery. Through it, the member nations liberalized their trade, and, through it, they created the European Payments Union, a system by which the member nations maintained balances of payments among themselves. The OEEC, founded as it was in European dependence upon U.S. economic power, was rendered obsolete, not only by the development of the Common Market, and the European Free Trade Association by members within the OEEC, but also by the growing interdependence of Canada and the United States and the OEEC countries.

Against this background, the Eisenhower administration, late in 1959, took the initiative of proposing the conversion of the OEEC into a new Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, comprising the OEEC countries, with Canada and the United States as full members.

The threefold aims of the Organization are set forth in article 1 of the convention as follows:

1. to achieve the highest sustainable economic growth and employment and a rising standard of living in member countries, while maintaining financial stability, and thus to contribute to the development of the world economy;

2. to contribute to sound economic expansion in member as well as nonmember countries in the process of economic development; and

3. to contribute to the expansion of world trade on a multilateral, nondiscriminatory basis in accordance with international obligations.

Under article 2 of the convention, the members agree that in pursuit of these aims they will, individually and jointly, in general terms of objectives, rather than specifically, promote and pursue policies which will contribute to the economic development of both member and nonmember countries.

In article 3, the members agree that they will keep each other informed, consult on a continuing basis, carry out studies, cooperate closely and, where appropriate, take coordinated action.

Article 5 empowers the organization to take decisions, make recommendations and enter into agreements. The decisions, however, are subject to a provision in article 6 that is worthy of special note. It provides that no decision shall be binding upon any member until it has complied with the requirements of its own constitutional procedures, although the other members may agree that such a decision shall apply provisionally to them.

Article 6 also provides for voting procedures which give each member veto power. Under Secretary Ball explained this provision as follows:

A nation which opposes a particular proposal has the option either of voting against it, in which case the proposal is killed, or of abstaining, in which case the proposal does not apply to that country.

In both the committee report and the resolution of ratification, the committee has gone to considerable pains to explain that nothing in the Convention enlarges, diminishes, or alters the powers of the President or the Congress in respect to any substantive actions which may be taken by the OECD. A clear expression of the interpretation and understanding of the Senate is incorporated in the act of ratification.

The President, in his message on the balance of the payments and gold outflow, described the role of the OECD as follows:

The OECD, in which the industrialized countries of Western Europe, the United States, and Canada will be joined, is of vital importance for assisting, on a cooperative basis, the developing countries of the free world. It will also provide a solid framework within which we can carry out intensive and frequent international consultations on the financial and monetary policies which must be pursued in order to achieve and maintain better balance in the international payments position.

The OECD is to be primarily a forum for communication, education, and understanding. Countries with common interests and common problems will be able to discuss their goals and problems within an organization designed precisely for that purpose.

Within the OECD there will be a Development Assistance Committee, which will include Japan, whose function it will be to consider steps to be taken to increase the total effort of the industrialized nations of the world to close the gap between their own development and that of the less developed areas. This Committee will succeed the Development Assistance Group which was established in January 1960, when the negotiations for the OECD began. According to the Secretary of State, the discussions which have taken place within the DAG already have borne fruit, with some European countries increasing their aid programs and making arrangements to provide grants as well as loans, and long-term development credits as well as short-term export credits.

Also within the OECD will be a Trade Committee. I hasten to quote the words of the Secretary of State with regard to what the OECD and its Trade Committee will not do, as follows:

I can state unequivocally that the OECD will not assume broad trade functions. It will not cut tariffs. It will not assume any of the functions which had been planned for the Organization for Trade Cooperation. Nor will the OECD in any way infringe upon or control the GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) * * * The OECD will have nothing to do with tariff making. It carefully recognizes the constitutional requirements in the United States. It is designed to expand economic activity, including U.S. export markets, not to contract it. It is an essential instrument in our efforts to develop the strength and cohesion of the entire free world.

The Trade Committee will serve as a forum for confrontation on general trade policies. This will provide the United States with an opportunity to press those countries which still maintain restrictions on our exports, particularly our agricultural exports, for the removal of them.

For my own part, let me state here that I believe the time has long since passed when countries in strong reserve positions have legitimate reasons for discriminating against U.S. exports. I intend to do everything in my power to persuade our State, Agriculture, and Commerce Departments and our missions abroad to insist on the removal of these remaining discriminations. It is true that some progress has been made, but it is also true that many protective devices still exist, particularly with respect to American agricultural products, with no substantiation in sound economic policy.

The same observations can be made with respect to the ability of these nations to contribute to programs for the development of the less developed countries of the world.

While much has been said in the hearings and discussions of the OECD about what it will not do, much more needs to be said about what its possibilities are. In determining these we should consider the viewpoint of the administration as to its intentions, for much will depend upon this.

The Wall Street Journal of March 3, 1961, carried an article calling attention to an aide memoire presented to the German Government by the State Department. This article called the aide memoire:

The most definitive declaration to date of a quietly evolving program of far-reaching consequences. * * * The chief draftsman of the aide memoire, in the final stages, was President Kennedy himself.

I read from the text of the aide memoire.

We are on the eve of creating a new phase in the history of the North Atlantic Alliance. We have new tasks; and the recovery of Western Europe in the 1950's has given us new resources. Together the resources which we dispose are much larger than those we could command in the immediate postwar years and they are better distributed among us.

To deal with these new tasks we must begin by recognizing that we are interdependent in all we do; and that our common burdens must be shared in a way that our peoples will recognize as fair.

The economic questions now under discussion between the United States and Germany are not bilateral questions. The deficit of the United States arises wholly from its commitments and actions in the common defense of the free world. Without these freely assumed obligations the United States would now be running a heavy surplus in its balance of payments. These matters therefore must be approached in terms of a rebuilding of the alliance and in terms of the principles which should govern the effort over coming months and years.

Specifically, we must examine how we can share fairly two burdens, the burden of the common defense; and the burden of long-term economic assistance to the underdeveloped areas.

It is clear that we must design formula which take account of the proportions of our total resources now flowing to these two common purposes; and which make allowance, as we do in our domestic taxation systems, for the principle that the richer among us shall bear a higher relative burden than the poorer.

In addition, we must all come to recognize a principle on which the United States has acted in the years after World War II. That principle is that a sustained accumulation of gold and other international reserves by any one country is disruptive to the international community. Especially now, when trade is expanding faster than gold production, we must learn to use our reserves on a communal basis, recognizing that one nation's gain can only be another nation's loss.

The Government of the United States believes that the question of equitable shares in the common effort to assist the underdeveloped nations of the free world should be urgently examined within OEEC, in anticipation of the OECD coming into effect; and that the question of equitable shares in the common defense be urgently examined within NATO.

The United States could have reacted to its balance-of-payments situation—and to the political, economic and military disagreements which have arisen in the Western alliance—as a rationale for escape back into that era of our history characterized by withdrawal, isolationism and Smoot-Hawleyism.

I think it is clear that the present administration—and this applies, in fact, to the past administration as well, for it, after all, originated this convention—has no intention of doing this. I welcome this decision which is, I think, embodied in the OECD, not in any legal sense, nor, in fact, even by way of a moral commitment which would be binding upon those who do not wish to be bound. The OECD, nevertheless, represents a decision on the part of the United States, as well as the other members that, while we may not step forward, in terms of free world unity, as vigorously as some think we should, we need not, perforce, step backward. We shall, in fact, search for ways to move toward closer cooperation through the OECD.

We in the United States can agree, I think, that the other industrialized nations of the world should do more, in terms of trade and aid, without this necessarily meaning that we should do less. This, I think, is the meaning and the opportunity of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I call up my amendment in the nature of a substitute. I ask unanimous consent that, in lieu of its being read, the amendment may be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the amendment was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Area Assistance Act of 1961".

DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

SEC. 2. The Congress declares that, even during periods of prosperity for the Nation as a whole, some of our communities suffer substantial and persistent unemployment; that such unemployment causes hardship to many individuals and their families and detracts from the national welfare by wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the Federal Government in cooperation with the States, should help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment to take effective steps in planning and financing their economic development; that Federal assistance should enable communities to achieve lasting improvement and decrease economic vulnerability by the establishment of stable and diversified local economies; and that new employment opportunities should be created rather than merely transferred from one community to another.

AUTHORITY OF SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

SEC. 101. (a) The Secretary of Commerce, hereinafter referred to as the Secretary, may designate as an area of substantial and persistent unemployment any area certified as eligible for such designation by the Secretary of Labor.

(b) To assist areas in the United States designated as areas of substantial and persistent unemployment, the Secretary is authorized—

(1) to make grants for technical assistance for such areas in accordance with the provisions of section 106(a) of this Act; and

(2) to provide loans for such areas in accordance with the provisions of section 107 of this Act.

(c) The Secretary is also authorized—

(1) to extend the full cooperation of the Federal Government to all areas in the United States (including Puerto Rico) in promoting the more effective use of local resources, in the establishment of new industries based on local resources, and in the expansion of existing industries; such cooperation to be provided through technical advice and consultation and, when necessary, through the conduct of special studies.

(2) to decrease, through grants made in accordance with the provisions of section 106(b) of this Act, the economic vulnerability of (i) towns predominantly dependent on one industry, (ii) small towns which could serve as centers for economic diversification of low-income rural areas, and (iii) other low-income rural areas not subject to assistance as in (ii), by helping them to develop manufacturing, processing, and other activities calculated to diversify and improve their economies; and

(3) to coordinate his functions under this Act with those of the Secretary of Agriculture and other officials administering Federal programs affecting local economic conditions.

(d) As used in this Act:

(1) The term "United States" includes the several States and the District of Columbia;

(2) The term "State" refers to an individual State or the District of Columbia; and

(3) The term "loan" includes loans, immediate participation in loans, and purchase of evidences of indebtedness.

AUTHORITY OF SECRETARY OF LABOR

SEC. 102. (a) The Secretary of Labor shall from time to time, or upon the request of the Secretary, certify the existence of areas eligible for designation as areas of substantial and persistent unemployment whenever he finds, on the basis of available labor force data, or studies which he initiates when he deems necessary that—

(1) the rate of unemployment in the area, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors is currently 6 per centum and has averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in (2) below; and

(2) the annual average rate of unemployment in the area has been at least—

(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years.

(b) In the case of labor market areas for which appropriate historical labor force data have not been compiled, the Secretary of Labor shall certify as eligible for designation as areas of substantial and persistent unemployment those areas in which the unemployment rate and duration, based on a survey of available labor force data, generally equals or exceeds the rate and duration specified in section 102(a).

(c) The Secretary of Labor may also certify under subsection (a) or (b) of this section the existence of eligible areas upon request of any appropriate State government agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision.

(d) The Secretary of Labor is authorized, upon request and whenever he determines that such studies are needed, to undertake, or to provide assistance to others in studies of the size, characteristics, skills, adaptability, occupational potentialities, and related aspects of the labor force of an area certified under this section.

(e) When skills of the labor force in an area designated under section 101 are not such as to facilitate full utilization of the human resources in such area, the Secretary of Labor is authorized to provide advice and technical assistance in developing and carrying out a program to improve the utilization of such labor force.

(f) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds a need for vocational education services in an area designated under section 101 and when such area has an economic development program as provided in section 107(b) (10) he is authorized to assist interested agencies to determine the vocational training needs of unemployed individuals residing in the area, and he shall notify the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare of the vocational training or retraining requirements of the area. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, through the Commissioner of Education, is authorized to provide assistance, including financial assistance when necessary or appropriate, to the State vocational education agency for the provision of such services in the area. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $1,500,000 annually for the purpose of providing financial assistance under this subsection.

AUTHORITY OF HOUSING AND HOME FINANCE ADMINISTRATOR

SEC. 103. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding the following new heading and section at the end of title I:

"AREAS OF SUBSTANTIAL AND PERSISTENT UNEMPLOYMENT"

"SEC. 113. (a) When the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (referred to as 'municipality' in this section) is situated in an area designated by the Secretary of Commerce pursuant to the Area Assistance Act of 1961 as an area of substantial and persistent unemployment, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under the Area Assistance Act of 1961 and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve lasting improvement in its economic development, the Administrator is authorized to extend financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

"(b) The Administrator may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirements or limitations of section 110(c) of this title that the project area be clearly predominantly residential in charter or that it will be predominantly residential under the urban renewal plan.

"(c) Financial assistance under this section may be provided for any project involving a project area including primarily industrial or commercial structures suitable for rehabilitation under the urban renewal plan for the area.

"(d) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this title, a contract for financial assistance under this section may include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the project area designated under the urban renewal plan for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or nonprofit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to such public agency or corporation under this section shall be made at not less than its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And provided further, That the purchaser from or lessees of such public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obligations imposed in conformity with the requirements of section 105(b) hereof.

"(e) Following the execution of any contract for financial assistance under this section with respect to any project, the Administrator may exercise the authority vested under this section for the completion of such project notwithstanding any determination made after the execution of such contract that the area in which the project is located may no longer be an area of substantial and persistent unemployment.

"(f) Not more than 10 per centum of the funds authorized for capital grants under section 103 after June 30, 1960, shall be available to provide financial assistance under this section."

SEC. 104. (a) The first sentence of section 202(c) of title II of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended to read as follows:

"(c) In the processing of applications for financial assistance under this section, the Administrator shall give priority to applications of counties, cities, and other municipalities and political subdivisions for financing needed public facilities in areas determined to be areas of substantial and persistent unemployment under the Area Assistance Act of 1961: Provided, That the Secretary of Commerce certifies there is reasonable probability that with assistance made available under the Area Assistance Act of 1961 and other undertakings such areas will be able to achieve lasting improvement in their economic development; and equal priority to applications of smaller municipalities for assistance in the construction of basic public works (including works for the storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water; sewage, sewage treatment, and sewer facilities; and gas distribution systems) for which there is an urgent and vital public need; the Administrator shall give a first priority above all others to applications for financing needed public facilities in connection with, and that will directly serve, a project eligible under section 107 of the Area Assistance Act of 1961."

(b) The first sentence of section 203(a) of title II of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended to read as follows:

"(a) In order to finance activities under this title, the Administrator is authorized and empowered to issue to the Secretary of the Treasury from time to time, and to have outstanding at any one time in an amount not exceeding $150,000,000, notes and other obligations, which limit shall be increased by such amounts, not exceeding $100,000,000, as may be specified from time to time in appropriation Acts."

URBAN PLANNING GRANTS

SEC. 105. Paragraph (3) of section 701(a) of the Housing Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after "Cities, other municipalities, and counties which" the following: "(A) are situated in areas designated as areas of substantial and persistent unemployment under section 101(a) of the Area Assistance Act of 1961, or (B)."

GRANTS FOR TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

SEC. 106. (a) In carrying out section 101 (b) (1), the Secretary is authorized to make grants for technical assistance including studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of areas designated under section 101(a). These grants may be made without regard to section 3648 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (31 U.S.C. 529). Appropriations are hereby authorized for these grants in an amount not to exceed $1,500,000 annually.

(b) In carrying out section 101(c) (2), the Secretary is authorized to make similar grants for the benefit of towns and areas described therein. Negotiations taking into account the financial ability of the grantee and other relevant considerations shall be made for contributions to costs of projects undertaken hereunder. These grants may be made without regard to section 3648 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (31 U.S.C. 529), and appropriations therefore are hereby authorized in an amount not to exceed $2,000,000 annually.

LOANS

SEC. 107. (a) In carrying out section 101 (b) (2) of this Act the Secretary is authorized to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (including immediate participations therein) to aid in financing any project within an area of substantial and persistent unemployment for the purchase or development of land and facilities for industrial usage, for the construction of new factory buildings, for rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied factory buildings, or for the alteration, conversion, or enlargement of any existing buildings for industrial use. Such financial assistance shall not be extended for working capital, for purchase of machinery or equipment, or to assist establishments relocating from one area to another.

(b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, subject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

(1) The total amount of loans and loan participations (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding at any one time under this section shall not exceed $75,000,000;

(2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants, both private and public, approved by the State (or any agency or instrumentality thereof concerned with problems of economic development) in which the project to be financed shall be located;

(3) The project for which financial assistance is sought is reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the area of substantial and persistent unemployment wherein it is, or will be, located;

(4) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms;

(5) No loans shall be made unless it is determined that an immediate participation is not available;

(6) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there is a reasonable assurance of repayment;

(7) No loan, including renewals or extension thereof, may be made hereunder for a period exceeding thirty years and no evidence of indebtedness maturing more than thirty years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor, or if extension or renewal for additional periods, not to exceed, however, a total of ten years, will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loans or of such evidence of indebtedness;

(8) Each loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the interest rate currently payable under section 108(e) on advances from the Treasury, plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum for administrative expenses and a reserve for losses on loans;

(9) (A) Not less than 15 per centum of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or developing land and facilities, and of constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building or buildings of the particular project shall be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by a community or area organization, as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the financial assistance hereunder has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof, and, if such loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing the financial assistance hereunder;

(B) Of the remaining 85 per centum of the aggregate cost, 35 per centum of the aggregate cost may be loaned by the Secretary under the terms of this Act and security for such a loan may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens which secure any loan or financing other than funds required by section 107(b) (9) (A).

(C) Loans shall not be available hereunder unless other funds are available in an amount which, together with assistance provided hereunder and funds provided under section 107(b) (9) (A), shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate cost; and

(10) No such assistance shall be extended unless there shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an overall program for the economic development of the area and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the State or local political subdivision in which the project would be located.

AREA ASSISTANCE FUND

SEC. 108. (a) There is hereby authorized to be established in the Treasury of the United States a revolving fund to be known as the area assistance fund (hereinafter referred to as the "fund"), which shall be available to the Secretary for the payment of all obligations and expenses in connection with the loans authorized under section 101(b) (2).

(b) When requested by the Secretary, advances shall be made to the fund from the appropriations made therefor. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of making advances to the fund, without fiscal year limitation, an amount not exceeding $75,000,000.

(c) Receipts arising from the loan program shall be credited to the fund.

(d) Any moneys in the fund determined by the Secretary to be in excess of current needs shall be credited to the appropriation from which advanced to be held for future advances to the fund.

(e) There shall be paid into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury at the close of each fiscal year interest on advances to the fund at rates which shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury at the time the advances or commitments for advances are made after taking into consideration the current average market yields of outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to loans made by the Secretary.

(f) Contributions shall be made from the fund to the civil service retirement and disability fund, on the basis of annual billings as determined by the Civil Service Commission, for the Government's share of the cost of the civil service retirement system applicable to employees (and their beneficiaries) performing activities authorized under section 101(b) (2). Contributions shall also be made to the employee's compensation fund, on the basis of annual billings as determined by the Secretary of Labor, for the benefit payments made from such fund on account of employees performing activities authorized under section 101(b) (2). The annual billings shall also include a statement of the fair portion of the cost of the administration of the respective funds, which shall be paid by the Secretary into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

SEC. 109. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as an area of substantial and persistent unemployment have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 101(a) of this Act, no further assistance shall be granted under this Act, with respect to such area and, for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered an area of substantial and persistent unemployment: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall—

(a) prevent any such area from again being designated an area of substantial and persistent unemployment under section 101(a) of this Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such section or

(b) affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secretary that such area no longer qualifies as an area of substantial and persistent unemployment. The Secretary shall keep the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

The power to convey and to execute in the name of the Secretary deeds of conveyance, deeds of release, assignments and satisfactions of mortgages, and any other written instrument relating to real property or any interest therein acquired by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of this title may be exercised by the Secretary or by any officer or agent appointed by him for the purpose;

(b) Whoever, being connected in any capacity with the Secretary—

The Secretary shall make a comprehensive annual report of his operations under this Act for the fiscal year ending on the preceding June 30, to the President, for transmission to the Congress as soon as practicable in each year, but in no case later than the third day of the following January.

AUTHORIZATION FOR APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 119. In addition to appropriations specifically authorized by sections 106 and 108, appropriations are further authorized for the carrying out of other provisions and purposes of this Act.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I shall make a 10-minute record on the amendment. I think I should ask for the yeas and nays on it.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I may well yield back some of my time on the amendment, unless there is a request by other Senators for time. The amendment in the nature of a substitute has been before the committee and has been considered. It is a more modest proposal than S. 1, which is now pending before the Senate. It is almost identical with the bill which was introduced last year after the President's veto.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute provides for $100 million in community facility loans, $75 million in loans for the essential purpose of the bill, and then sufficient money for vocational training, for consulting service, and for technical service to assist in providing aid to distressed areas.

We are familiar with the fact that there is a problem in certain areas of the country. There is something of a problem in my own State. We recognize it. The residual question, then, is: How far do we go, and what do we do?

We can approach the problem from the standpoint of all grants or all loans or a combination of loans and grants. The amendment in the nature of a substitute adopts the loan basis with technical and consulting service and vocational and educational service.

It is not necessary to explain the proposal. It follows, in general lines, the bill which is the business of the Senate at the present time.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute preserves as a mechanism the office of the Secretary of Commerce.

The criteria are substantially the same as those provided in S. 1. The amendment brings into focus the cooperation of the States, and that is important, because in the recital of purposes there is the declaration that the Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, shall carry on the program. That is the point of emphasis. I think that if we fail to energize and put the emphasis on the whole element of self-help, supplemented by some Government effort, the whole proposal will ultimately prove to be illusory, and, in my judgment, it will fail.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute brings into play the first and second titles of the Housing Act. There we already have a form. We have a mechanism with which to do a part of the work.

It includes cities, counties, and municipalities; and it is expanded to include commercial and industrial areas, under the urban renewal plan.

It gives priority.

It provides for planning grants.

Then the loan section provides that no loans for working capital shall be made; no loans for machinery or equipment shall be made. They can be made to public or to private bodies, but there must be State approval. No funds shall be available from this means if funds from other sources are available.

There must be a reasonable chance for repayment.

The evidences of indebtedness can have maturity of up to 30 years.

The interest rate shall be the current rate, plus one-half of 1 percent.

There shall be participation by State or local or private organizations; and 35 percent of the remaining aggregate will be the burden of the Federal Government.

I believe that is where the emphasis must be placed.

The substitute seeks to avoid duplication insofar as the Small Business Administration is concerned, and also insofar as concerns the small business investment associations which Congress authorized last year.

In addition, I have removed the provision in regard to rural areas. The reason for that is that at the present time we have a rural development program, and it is making progress. The aid of a good many State universities has been enlisted, in order to help in that cause; and I do not believe that in a bill of this sort we should include provision for the so-called rural areas.

So this is a streamlined measure. It falls far short of what is contemplated by Senate bill 1.

I think that tells the whole story. This is the measure in which the prior administration had an interest; it is the measure in which President Eisenhower expressed an interest when he entreated the Congress, after 5 years of inaction, to give him a bill dealing with the problems in this field.

So, Mr. President, that is where I rest the case.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois yield for several questions?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH of Massachusetts in the chair). Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. First, let me ask whether it would be necessary for a State to pass enabling legislation, in order that the State or its municipalities could take advantage of the proposed benefits?

Mr. DIRKSEN. No. But if I had submitted an amendment which I had intended to submit, and might still submit—I refer to an amendment which would permit the Secretary of Commerce to pick up general obligations or revenue bonds issued under State industrial revenue bond provisions—then if the amendment were agreed to, of course if there were no authority under the general obligation authority or if there were no statute authorizing the issuance of revenue bonds, there would have to be enabling legislation.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. North Dakota has a statute under which the State Bank of North Dakota can purchase revenue bonds issued by municipalities. Apparently that is proving quite successful; at least, some activity has developed under it, and, so far as I know, it has been paying up fairly well.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I may add that Arkansas, West Virginia, Illinois, and Kentucky have comparable statutes, insofar as I know. So certainly those States could take advantage of the kind of provision I had in mind. But it is embodied in a separate amendment.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Next, would Indian tribes, as such, be eligible under the Senator's substitute?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I have not checked on that, as a matter of fact, although I should have done so, in view of the amendment which has been offered by the distinguished Senator from Minnesota. I did not run through the language of my amendment to see whether Indian tribes were included. But if the substitute were adopted, of course that could be done.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois yield to me?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. BUSH. Yesterday, the Senate adopted an amendment which placed a termination point on the bill; that amendment was adopted by the Senate with agreeable participation of the distinguished colleague of the Senator from Illinois.

I wonder whether the Senator will be willing to modify his substitute so as to accept an exactly similar amendment for termination of the authority.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Inasmuch as that amendment is in print and was adopted, I think it offers no difficulty.

Mr. BUSH. That is correct.

Mr. DIRKSEN. So, Mr. President, I modify the substitute, so as to append or insert after line 2, on page 26, section 118, the text of the amendment adopted on yesterday by the Senate, after the amendment was introduced by the distinguished Senator from Connecticut. I modify the substitute accordingly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. At this point, unanimous consent must be had, for that purpose.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes, Mr. President; and I ask unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois? Without objection, the amendment in the nature of a substitute will be modified accordingly; and the modification will be printed at this point in the RECORD.

On page 26, after line 2, insert:

"TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY

"SEC. 27. (a) This Act and all authority conferred thereunder shall terminate at the close of June 30, 1965.

"(b) Notwithstanding the foregoing, effective on July 1, 1965, those assets, funds, contracts, loans, liabilities, commitments, authorizations, allocations, and records of the Secretary under this Act which the Director of the Bureau of the Budget shall determine are necessary to the liquidation of the affairs and functions conducted under this Act, are transferred to the Secretary of the Treasury for purposes of liquidation.

"(c) The termination of this Act shall not affect the disbursement of funds under, or the carrying out of, any contract, commitment, or other obligation entered into pursuant to this Act prior to the date of such termination, or the taking of any action necessary to preserve or protect the interests of the United States in any amounts advanced or paid out in carrying on operations under this Act."

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois also ask unanimous consent to modify his amendment so as to insert "Indian tribes or Indian reservations," so the substitute will be on all fours with the original bill, in that respect?

Mr. DIRKSEN. We would have to find the appropriate place in the substitute. However, I have no objection, if the Chair will entertain an amendment to the effect that where it appears in the substitute, the words "and Indian tribes," as an organization that can function as a body for the purposes of the bill; shall be inserted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DIRKSEN. That would follow, actually, the amendment submitted a few moments ago by the distinguished Senator from Minnesota to the pending bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois? Without objection, it is so ordered; and the modification will be printed at this point in the RECORD.

The modification is as follows:

On page 6, line 25, following the word "municipality" insert "or any Indian tribe".

On page 9, line 7, following the word "subdivisions" insert the following: "and Indian tribes".

On page 12, line 14, following the word "public", insert the following: "(Including Indian tribes)".

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. President, I appreciate that, because I feared that if the substitute were first adopted, it would then be too late to amend it.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois yield briefly to me, either from the time available on the bill or from the time available on his amendment?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of the time available to me on my amendment; and at this time I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts 2 minutes on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I thank the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. President, the area redevelopment bill which we have before us is essentially a new undertaking on the part of the Government. We hope that in certain areas of our country it will prove very helpful. At the same time, we must not forget that it is an experiment. We want to make it work, so it can be helpful to the building up of communities which need assistance in order to provide employment for their citizens and in order to have profitable enterprises. In doing this, part of the effort must be directed to building public utilities where they cannot otherwise be built.

For some years now, a number of our communities throughout the United States have suffered from substantial and chronic unemployment. That has brought hardship to many of our citizens and their families, and involves a serious waste of our resources, because able citizens who desire employment do not have it.

While there has been general agreement on the importance of stimulating financial aid and technical assistance for these areas, no comprehensive program has ever been enacted into law, because we have not agreed on the size and type of the program.

This is, as I have stated, an experiment on the part of the Federal Government. It will succeed only if local initiative, local energy, and local money have been utilized to attract and to keep industry. In my State of Massachusetts, we are proud of the initiative of our local communities. In many of our cities and towns, this local energy and local initiative have been ingeniously utilized to attract new industry, to train the citizens to become skilled in the new industry, and thus to build up a new type of employment. This has been particularly true in the so-called one-industry towns, and I am always proud of my fellow citizens in these areas who are responsible for this effort, which has made real progress possible. I cite only two examples, the towns of Clinton and Ware, but there are a number of others. Yet in many places, both in New England and elsewhere in our country, such community endeavor has not been strong enough, even though local leadership has done its best to bring about a healthy economic balance of reasonable prosperity. These are the cases where local efforts supplemented by Federal funds may make the difference between successful effort and prolonged frustration. But I repeat emphatically, it is not a matter of substitution; it is a matter of supplementation. Our distinguished minority leader, the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN], told us, on January 5 of this year:

Government aid, if it is forthcoming, will not work without the will of a city to revitalize itself.

That will across the United States must be stimulated, and not suffocated.

I consider an important part of this program to be assistance in reeducation. In my State, our skilled workers were first employed, in the early 19th century, in the manufacture of sailing ships made of wood. Later, the descendants of these workers helped to harness the power of our rivers for the production of textiles, and we became an important part of the textile industry. We also became, and still are, one of the leading manufacturers of shoes. But while the shoe industry and the textile industry still employ many people, we have recently developed industrial competence in electronics research and development. Essentially, the people who work in the electronics industry are the people who have developed their skills through education in our schools, through training in these industries, and, ultimately, through hard endeavor from day to day as skilled operators of the tools of the new trade, so to speak. Clearly, it will be helpful if these people can have training, in areas where unemployment now exists, to understand new industry and to operate its new machinery.

As I have stated, I am in favor of the principles involved in this proposed legislation, and I intend to support it.

If we regard this act as an experiment of the Federal Government, then we must from time to time determine if that experiment has been successful. I believe the sound way of doing this is to make the act a temporary measure that will expire in a given number of years—say 2, 3 or 5 years.

We did that yesterday by accepting the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut providing for 4 years.

In this way Congress can determine whether or not to go forward with it. This is a much better method of determining the success and continuing legitimacy of the program than to have a committee make a study and investigation of it and its administration after a given period of time.

New industry comes essentially within the purview of the Department of Commerce, and certainly the Secretary of that Department should be the ultimate responsible officer of the Federal Government. I agree that the Administrator of this program will have a demanding job, but his office should come under the day-to-day responsibility of the Secretary of Commerce himself. I am glad that the Senate has adopted an amendment to this effect.

This raises the question, in a new law of this character, as to the value of grants rather than loans. Grants tend to stifle rather than to encourage local initiative and participation in self-help efforts. On the other hand, a revolving fund, to be used for loans for qualified public facilities projects in redeveloped areas wherein local cost sharing of at least 10 percent of the total expense of any project is involved, should be adequate if the citizens in that locality really intend to make the effort successful.

I voted for an amendment which would prevent the use of funds under this program for the purchase of machinery and equipment. In its original form, S. 1 provided that funds could be used for this purpose "in exceptional cases." S. 9, which I cosponsored and will vote for should it be offered in the nature of a substitute for the pending bill, specifically prohibits such assistance. The committee bill allows loan funds to be used for the purchase of machinery and equipment in "case of demonstrated need." I do not believe that this qualification on the use of Federal funds really constitutes any significant limitation. All assistance under the bill requires evidence of demonstrated need, and therefore the restriction is virtually meaningless. I agreed with the senior Senator from New York, who has stated that loans for machinery and equipment have no proper place in area redevelopment legislation. This kind of assistance, in my opinion, is basically outside the stated purpose of the bill and unduly interferes with private industrial enterprise and our free competitive economy.

We in Massachusetts are essentially an industrial community. The rural redevelopment provisions of the bill should, in my opinion, be handled in separate legislation, and not in legislation of this character. If they are to be included in S. 1, then certainly we should make every effort to make the language clear that all sections of our country will benefit if the criteria provisions of the bill are satisfied. The aid to build up new businesses in areas which are now agricultural or lacking in industry should be carefully and fairly administered.

I voted against the bill submitted last year because it seemed to me to work to the disadvantage of our State and to aid other regions of the Nation at our expense. It might well have encouraged the pirating of industries. This was a very important consideration from our point of view. Federal funds, I think we are all agreed, should not be used to encourage the stealing of industries from communities which already have, and badly need those industries. S. 1 has been amended so that this difficulty has been removed; and it is removed in the substitute offered by the Senator from Illinois.

No one can object to the expansion of industry, but certainly we can all resist the taking of an industry from a community, which is fully employed, and is successfully operating a plant, and the moving of it to another community in another area which needs industry.

In conclusion, Mr. President, let me reiterate that I feel early enactment of a comprehensive program of Federal redevelopment aid is urgent. I hope, however, there may be amendments offered and adopted to this bill that will make it, in my opinion, even more helpful and will make better administration of its provisions possible. When we adopt Federal legislation of this character, we must always make its provisions consistent with efforts to nurture local initiative, local drive, and local responsibility, and not take away those qualities which have built our communities, our States, and our Nation over the years. For these reasons, and in this manner, I intend to support the bill, but hope that some amendments may be adopted to make it even more helpful, in my opinion, to carry out these principles of self-help.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, the substitute proposed by my colleague from Illinois is the so-called Eisenhower bill which the President sent to Congress last year, after he had vetoed an area redevelopment bill for the second time.

It will be remembered that the Republican leaders in the House in 1956 refused to permit a Senate-passed bill to be considered in the closing hours or closing days of that session.

It will be remembered that in 1958 the House and the Senate passed an area redevelopment bill, which was given a pocket veto by President Eisenhower.

It will be remembered that in 1960 the House and the Senate passed another area redevelopment bill, which was vetoed by the President; and, in an attempt to escape the just wrath of the voters, the President sent to Congress a substitute measure, in order to be able to argue that he had proposed a superior measure.

Mr. President, this issue was fought out before the country last year. The people had a referendum on this issue, amongst others last year and the issue was clear to the American people. They preferred the program which had been advanced by the Democratic Party, and they turned down the program which had been proposed by the Republican Party.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOUGLAS. No; I want to finish.

Mr. BUSH. I have a very interesting comment.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I want to finish. Then I shall yield for a question.

I fought this issue up and down the State of Illinois. My opponent urged the Eisenhower program. I urged that the Democratic proposal was better. I do not like to boast about majorities. Let me say merely that I was elected by a resounding majority, and I think every newspaper in the State was against me, except two.

My good friend, the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH] fought in West Virginia on this very measure, and he was also reelected by an overwhelming vote.

Wherever the people had an opportunity to register their opinions, they voted down the Republican-Eisenhower program and supported the Kennedy-Democratic program.

So what our colleagues on the other side of the aisle are trying to do is reverse the results of the election. This issue was decided. But our Republican friends die hard. They will never admit defeat. When they are beaten in a fair election, they find fault with the election returns. When the people return a clear and unmistakable mandate to the Democratic Party, they say "Our plan is superior."

So, my friends, the question is whether we are going to reverse the popular decision of last fall or stick by the decision which the people have already made.

Let me now discuss the substance of the Eisenhower-Dirksen-Republican amendment. As my colleague has said, it has no rural provisions in it at all. Any help for rural areas is completely omitted.

We pointed out again and again that rural poverty and rural underemployment present an even greater problem than industrial unemployment.

While perhaps we do not get much support from the Senators from the areas which would be chiefly benefited by the passage of S. 1, with certain honorable exceptions, nevertheless I do not propose to cut the people from those areas loose and deny to them benefits because they are in need and they need help.

The program of the Eisenhower administration made no allowance for grants for public industrial and commercial facilities. It provided for some loans to be administered through the Community Facilities Administration, but up to last summer the Administration had made no loans for industrial and commercial purposes, for industrial parks or industrial water. The loans were confined entirely to domestic water drinking systems and sewerage disposal systems. There was nothing so far as industrial water or industrial parks were concerned.

Perhaps under the new administration there would be more leniency in this regard, but the language is not perfectly clear as to how far the Community Facilities Administration could proceed.

So far as the grants are concerned, there is a provision in the Democratic bill (S. 1) for $75 million to help communities which, hard pressed, cannot fully repay loans which are made for needed public facility improvements as industrial water. Some of these facilities will not be directly income producing. They will help to attract industry. They will build up the tax base, but the facilities themselves may not be directly income producing. For a period of time, at least, grants may be needed in order to make the entire process solvent. A combination of loans and grants frequently will be needed. The Eisenhower-Dirksen-Republican proposal would omit this provision completely.

So far as industrial loans are concerned, there would be no loans for machinery and equipment. We have just settled that question by a vote of almost 2 to 1. The Senate decided we should not completely exclude from consideration the possibility of loans for machinery and equipment, even though these were not to be normally the objects of loans. Now my colleague wishes to reverse this recent decision.

The Republicans were beaten at the polls last fall. The Republicans were beaten in the Senate only a few minutes ago, by a vote of nearly 2 to 1, but they never say "die." They come back with the idea that we must eliminate all possibility of loans for machinery and equipment.

Furthermore, the Republicans would restrict to 35 percent the loans on land and buildings. We pointed out a few minutes ago that land and buildings generally form only 25 percent of the cost of a manufacturing enterprise. The Republican proposal would provide only 35 percent of 25 percent, or approximately 9 percent of the capital needed. How much inducement will an interest differential of, let us say, 2 percent provide for only 9 percent of the capital? It will not be sufficient.

In fact, the Eisenhower Republican program, which has been repudiated by the voters, well answers the description Abraham Lincoln gave of a proposal which had no more substance than a soup made out of the pale shadow of a crow which had starved to death. It has no more substance than that. It has been repudiated once.

I hope my friend from Illinois will pardon me if I say he seems to have had a change of heart so far as the percentage of loans which should be made is concerned. In fact, I am amused as I look across the center aisle. One group would restrict the type of investment upon which loans can be made to land and buildings. Almost a solid phalanx on that side of the aisle voted for that proposal, although yesterday the very eloquent and able Senator from Indiana found fault with the bill because it did not provide for working capital.

Some Senators would not vote to permit loans for a part of fixed capital.

In checking over the roll, I find that the Senator from Indiana voted to take out the provision with regard to machinery and equipment.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President—

Mr. DOUGLAS. Just a minute. Yesterday the Senator said "Oh, you do not provide enough. In addition to land and buildings and machinery, you should provide for working capital."

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I will yield in just a moment.

In fact, my Republican friends remind me of that character in Stephen Leacock's novel who mounted his horse and rode off in all directions.

The Senator from Indiana yesterday rode off in one direction. The Senator from Indiana now is riding off in the other direction.

Mr. HUMPHREY. But never forward.

Mr. DOUGLAS. But never forward. I simply ask the Senator to coordinate his cavalry movement.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I ask, as a personal privilege, that the Presiding Officer announce how I voted with respect to the machinery and equipment amendment offered by the Senator from New York. I ask that the Presiding Officer make the announcement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator voted in the negative.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I withdraw the comment.

In the first tabulation of votes I saw the Senator's name recorded as having voted for the amendment.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, if the able Senator is no more accurate in regard to everything else he is saying than he is in regard to the vote, we know exactly what to do with his statements—throw them in the wastebasket.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I say to the Senator, I have in my hand a tabulation sheet. It has the Senator from Indiana tabulated as being the fourth Senator to have voted for the Javits amendment. Somebody may have made a mistake, but the Senator from Illinois was going by what seemed to be the record.

Mr. CAPEHART. Is the Senator saying that the Presiding Officer made a mistake? [Laughter.]

Mr. DOUGLAS. No; I am not saying that. I think it is quite possible the Senator from Indiana may have changed his vote after he became aware of what he had done. [Laughter.] And I am unofficially informed that such a change was made.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I think such statements as the able Senator has made about my vote are absolutely unwarranted and uncalled for. He knows I voted to keep the provision in regard to machinery and equipment in the bill in the committee. I voted to do that today.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I hope the Senator will vote against the Eisenhower-Dirksen Republican substitute.

Mr. CAPEHART. I do not know that the Senator from Indiana always follows the hopes of the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DOUGLAS. No. He seldom does.

Mr. CAPEHART. I agree with the Senator when I think he is right. I disagree with the Senator when I think he is wrong. I thought he was correct with respect to machinery and equipment. I think he is incorrect with regard to many of the things he is saying today.

I repeat what I said yesterday. The bill, in my opinion, will prove to be a hoax which will fool the people of the United States.

I think those who are unemployed in the chronically depressed areas of the United States deserve something better than the particular piece of proposed legislation we are considering, because the bill will not do the job the authors think it will, and will not do the kind of job which, in my opinion, we ought to do for the people who live in the chronically depressed areas of the United States.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I am glad to yield to the Senator for a question.

Mr. CAPEHART. For example, I pointed out that the Small Business Administration has more power and more latitude and can make more and better loans than could be made under the terms of the bill. The bill is limited, so far as business is concerned, to loans on land and new buildings, or for the rehabilitation of old buildings.

One thing these communities do not need is more buildings or rehabilitation of old buildings. What is needed is a business which will employ people, and working capital. The communities do not need old buildings, for they have old buildings.

That is why I voted against taking out the provision in regard to machinery and equipment, because one thing which will create jobs is a machine for a man to run to make things. Without machines to be run to make things, jobs cannot be supplied.

For that reason I say the bill would not do what its authors maintain it would accomplish.

What I should like to do is to refer the bill back to the committee with instructions to report a bill that would accomplish what we hope it would. One of the things I should like to see in a bill is a limitation of its application to areas in which chronic unemployment is 100 percent, areas into which any 6-year-old child could go and see that unless someone would build a new factory or would open a new mine, there would never be a new job in that town. Such a measure would help West Virginia and southern Illinois, where the coal mines have been closed. I wish to limit a bill on this subject to areas of 100 percent chronic unemployment, areas in which anyone could see that unless someone builds a new processing plant or opens a new mine there will never be another job in that area.

When that development occurs, I wish to lend money to such plant or mine for working capital. I wish to lend money for machinery. I want to do a job for people in such areas. That kind of bill I would favor.

We are now appealing to the emotions of people in discussing a bill that might appeal to unemployed people throughout the Nation. We know the bill will not help them.

Through acts passed by Congress we now have a Small Business Administration that can do anything for business that the bill would provide, plus the fact that the agency can lend money for working capital. Under the provisions of the bill which we are considering money could not be lent for that purpose.

I repeat that I shall vote against the bill unless we can make its terms more liberal, because I shall not be a party to a hoax. I am not a hypocrite. As a businessman, a farmer, one who grew up in a marginal section of Indiana, and one who knows what is necessary to create jobs, I shall not support a bill that I know would be disappointing to the people of the United States. In my opinion, such action is not necessary. We ought to send the bill back to the committee with instructions to write a good bill or to defeat it. We ought not to fool the people; and unfortunately that is exactly what the bill would do. It would not accomplish what is proposed to be accomplished.

I listened to the remarks of the able Senator from Massachusetts on the bill. I must say in all frankness that I do not think he understands the terms of the bill. I honestly do not, because, with respect to employment in Massachusetts, for example, there are all the buildings in that State that are needed. No new buildings are needed. Machinery and working capital are needed.

The need is for some man or group of men who would come in with an idea of a product to manufacture. They would need working capital to manufacture that product. Then they could give permanent jobs to the people in that area.

I could discuss other sections of the bill. There is the farm-rural area section. There is also the section relating to public facilities. I am not discussing those two subjects at the moment. I am talking only about the business end of the bill.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I yield time to the Senator from Minnesota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. How much time does the Senator from Minnesota desire?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I wish only 3 minutes.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I am touched by the arguments of the Senator from Indiana. I know of his sincerity, and I agree that he is surely a man of deep conviction.

Let us face it. The opposition to the bill has not presented any program that is considerably broader and considerably more meaningful in its application. Area redevelopment legislation has been before the Congress since 1955.

There have been vetoes of such measures, and we have not had offered more constructive measures on this subject than those we have been able to report from the committee.

Every vote has been rather close, and each time we have had the determined opposition of pretty much the same group that opposes it in the Senate today.

It is true that the bill does not have in it all the provisions that I would like to have in it.

First, working capital will be available from the Small Business Administration under the administration of the proposed legislation, when the Small Business Administration makes loans to independent business on the basis of a philosophy of being a little more liberal than the most conservative banking terms.

Second, the Farmers Home Administration makes loans in rural areas for working capital.

Third, the Community Facilities Division of the Housing and Home Finance Agency makes loans and grants available for certain types of community facilities.

There are two sections of the bill which relate to loans. They are sections 6 and 7. Section 6 relates to loans to the individual firm that may be establishing facilities or acquiring land or rehabilitating structures.

Section 7 relates to the public agency that may wish to move in and improve the land, establish facilities, and build a factory.

If we can get factory sites, if we can acquire land, if we can provide the renovation of old facilities, making them sufficiently modern for new-type production, we shall be able to attract capital. There is capital available in our capitalistic society. Let me say to my friend who is in opposition to the bill that if there is not capital available from private sources, and since there are bleeding hearts about the lack of jobs because of the inability to acquire capital, perhaps the Federal Government ought to go into a loan program of that kind over and beyond what it has.

But the administration is attempting to be reasonable. This administration, through our President, has extended the hand of cooperation to business. Every newspaper has so noted. The President went out of his way to do so, and the President has said, "We are going to use the Small Business Administration to its maximum. We are going to utilize the Housing and Home Finance Agency with respect to these facilities. We are going to use the Farm Credit Administration, and the Farmers Home Administration."

The President has said that, as a former U.S. Senator, on three occasions he helped to lead the fight for the proposed legislation in the Senate. He said, "I need the area redevelopment program." He did not say it was a cure-all. The President does not say that the Federal Government ought to remedy every problem. The President and the administration are merely saying, "Give us some of the tools to do the job to help private industry and localities, and to help the development corporations that are established as public bodies in many of our States and localities. Give us a little extra equipment, tools, and financing to do this job, and we will attempt to put these people back to constructive work."

We have debated this measure for nearly 6 years. Some of the unemployed who live in the chronically unemployment areas must be becoming a little bit disillusioned. The issue is quite simple. I believe the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] has been very fair and candid about it. He has an alternate substitute proposal. He has presented it on other occasions. It is well known and has been debated on the public platform. His proposal has been debated in the Senate.

I say to the Senator from Illinois that we can vote this measure up or down, as he suggested. If we vote for the proposal of the Senator from Illinois, we will know exactly what we shall get. We shall get a watered down, lukewarm proposal that has been before the Senate on other occasions.

If we vote for the area redevelopment bill—S. 1—we shall get a bill that is a middle-of-the-ground approach, I must say in all candor, to try to remedy some of the problems of unemployment.

The Senator from Illinois has already said that we have had a vote on this subject in the country at large. I wish to say in conclusion that I hope the vote here will result in a little larger majority than the last time we went to the country. I have a feeling that my fellow Democrats who support this measure would like to rally around the flag for this particular experience; and, as suggested by the song sung at the famous Gridiron Club dinner, "Two for You and Three for Me"—on that basis we will settle.

Mr. DIRKSEN. How right my distinguished friend from Minnesota is. "Three for them and two for us."

Mr. HUMPHREY. Votes.

Mr. DIRKSEN. What difficulty we had in getting the count. Perhaps we can organize a new agency against the next election day. I would not suggest a corps for it. Only to get a count.

I am intrigued by the industrial wisdom of some people who never met a payroll in their lives. I have looked at a good many balance sheets, as a contractor and as a businessman, and sometimes they have been in the red. Sometimes it makes one a little goggle eyed. I did not get all my business wisdom out of an economics textbook in a college. It does make some difference. Therefore we can discount some of the wisdom, even though it has the the habiliments of omniscience, when it is uttered on the floor of the Senate. Some of the omniscience which is uttered on the floor, under the cold and calculating scrutiny which is required when looking at this kind of proposal, takes on an absolutely different form.

I have a little article from a newspaper in a distressed area in Illinois. I will put the whole article in the RECORD later. First I wish to quote from it.

The article comes from Pinckneyville, in Washington County, Ill. The first paragraph reads:

A drive to bring a $700,000 factory employing 200 men has started in Pinckneyville and the chamber of commerce says $30,000 in contributions is needed to buy a plant site.

The man who sent the article to me resides in a different town. He said:

DEAR SENATOR: This article appeared in our local paper on March 1. Somebody had better go down to Pinckneyville and inform these characters that they are in a depressed area and they should wait for help from Washington.

They are being un-American. These jokers may even set a precedent. I realize you must be under terrific pressure from various groups, but don't go overboard on financial assistance programs. It is surprising how many local problems we can solve without Federal aid.

I have an editorial from the Marion Daily Republican of March 3, 1961. It reads, in part:

Marion and Williamson County, which are included in the areas that Senator DOUGLAS has described as depressed, have been busy—and still are busy—and are not asking for more Federal "Santa Claus" visits.

Wednesday, the Central Illinois Public Service Co. announced that they planned to spend $1,700,000 on projects in the southern division, headquarters of which are in Marion. Much of it will be in Williamson County.

Previously the General Telephone Co. had announced plans for spending $4,876,000 in southern Illinois, a large portion to be in Marion and Williamson County.

Evidently all of this is not coming to the attention of the spenders. It is going to bother me more than some of the messages which are now coming every hour on the hour from 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

Continuing, the editorial says:

Work has started on the new Federal prison to cost $10 million. Herrin recently voted 2 to 1 to spend $130,000 for additional sewers.

Marion is building a $60,000 waterline to serve the industrial area in the northwest part of the city.

Allen Industries at Herrin is consolidating a Michigan plant with their Herrin plant.

They are in a depressed area, but even though it is not December they are not looking for Santa Claus.

Therefore I would like to approach this matter rather hard-heartedly and realistically. I do not mind if my distinguished colleague from Illinois puts on it the Eisenhower tag. It was an Eisenhower bill.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Certainly.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I do not care that he puts the Dirksen tag on it. It was my bill.

Mr. DOUGLAS. That is correct.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I introduced it the day after the veto message of last year. Our friends on the other side could not get the original S. 722 out of the Senate except by a majority of 3 votes, and then they could not sustain a veto, because the President pointed out there were other agencies doing comparable work. Here was waste. Here was inequity. Here was duplication. In the comments the President made he was on good ground. So, let them call it the Dirksen bill, or call it the Eisenhower bill. They say, "We have a mandate." It is by 113,000 out of 69 million votes. What a slender mandate it is. That fits into the classical pattern of the Lincoln quotation—"a soup made from the shadow of a hungry crow." That is how thin that majority was.

I believe we have a mandate, too. We propose to present our mandate, because we are talking for half the voters in the country. Let no one make any mistake about it.

Therefore, we are not going to deplete the Federal Treasury. Why not see where we are going on this thing before authorizing nearly $400 million in loans and grants? Once we set our feet on that pathway there will be no coming back. This will proliferate and extend into other areas. Even though these areas shift from depressed to nondepressed areas, as they keep doing, and as the Labor Department statistics show, we will get into this thing so deeply that there will be no coming back. Perhaps they do not want to come back. I do not know. I have some regard for what I think will be feasible and practical and what will work, and what is consonant with the budget and the solvency of our country.

Mr. LAUSCHE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. LAUSCHE. Yesterday the Senator from Ohio submitted an amendment, which is pending, and which, if adopted, will eliminate the grant provision of the bill sponsored by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS]. Will the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] tell me whether his bill deals with grants?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Only a few million dollars for vocational education and technical assistance. However, the $75 million over and above the loan money for community facilities is loan money, not grant money.

Mr. LAUSCHE. There is no giveaway money?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Exactly.

Mr. LAUSCHE. Except for the provision of technical aid for retraining?

Mr. DIRKSEN. There is a partial retraining provision, insofar as it can be called that, in vocational education.

Mr. LAUSCHE. What is the amount?

Mr. DIRKSEN. For community facilities, as expanded, $100 million. In addition to that, $75 million. Then about $5 million for grant money for technical assistance, vocational education, and so forth.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the editorial and article be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the editorial and article were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Marion Daily Republican, Mar. 3, 1961]

ANOTHER REPORT FROM SENATOR DOUGLAS' DEPRESSED AREA

Since January 1, 1961, Marion and Williamson County, which are included in the areas that Senator DOUGLAS has described as depressed have been busy—and still are busy—and are not asking for more Federal Santa Claus visits.

Wednesday, the Central Illinois Public Service Co. announced that they planned to spend $1,700,000 on projects in the southern division, headquarters of which are in Marion. Much of it will be in Williamson County.

Previously the General Telephone Co. had announced plans for spending $4,876,000 in southern Illinois, a large portion to be in Marion and Williamson County.

Work has started on the new Federal prison to cost $10 million.

Herrin recently voted 2 to 1 to spend $130,000 for additional sewers.

Marion is building a $60,000 waterline to serve the industrial area in the northwest part of the city.

Allen Industries at Herrin is consolidating a Michigan plant with their Herrin plant.

The Government plans to call for bids within a few days for the new $200,000 armory in Marion.

Marion Memorial Hospital has completed reroofing their building at a cost of $19,237.

Bank of Egypt has doubled the size of its building and added a walkup window and the Bank of Marion and the Bank of Egypt has spent over $20,000 for new banking machines to handle their growing business.

Sales of U.S. Government savings bonds reached $215,368 last January of which $95,150 were sold in Marion alone.

Work is progressing on the new $400,000 Bracy warehouse; Thurmond Monument Co. have built a new factory and office building north of the city; a $35,000 Burger Chef has been built on South Court Street.

Limerick Finance Co. has remodeled and moved to new quarters on the public square and the Marion Finance Co. has opened on North Market Street; Mrs. Mary Dungey is building an office in the north part of the city; Roberts Insurance have moved to new quarters on East Union; Arthur Melvin is tearing down the old Bracy home, west of his new office on West Main Street.

The Marion Presbyterian Church is to meet Sunday to consider plans for their new church building; Coles Asphalt Co. have constructed a new office building north of the city; a new filling station is to be built at West Main and Carbon Streets; Bargain Center has an attractive new awning.

Postal service has been expanded to several streets; bank deposits of individuals have increased over a half million dollars since January 1; and this is not all the progressive items about Marion, which continue to prove that Senator DOUGLAS is wrong when he says we live in a depressed area. We think the figures are much stronger evidence than hearsay, or occasional television pictures of care given the needy, or the mouthings of the Democratic Senator from Illinois.

[From the Belleville News Democrat, Mar. 1, 1961]

PINCKNEYVILLE SEEKING FACTORY

PINCKNEYVILLE, Ill.—(AP)—A drive to bring a $700,000 factory employing 200 men has started in Pinckneyville and the chamber of commerce says $30,000 in contributions is needed to buy a plant site.

Deadline for collection of the money and raising an additional $210,000 in loans is March 6. The loans would be at 4 percent interest over 20 years.

Name of the prospective firm was not disclosed but it reportedly is a metal fabricating manufacturer.

If the drive is successful, the firm would be the third industry to locate in the Pinckneyville area in 8 years as a result of chamber of commerce drives.

Penick and Ford, makers of pudding products, built a plant in 1953. Decca Records, Inc., has rented a plant from the chamber since 1956.

The new plant would be located at the east city limits and would contain 150,000 square feet of floor space.

In basketball-minded Pinckneyville, that's big enough for 37 basketball courts.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the distinguished Senator from Vermont.

Mr. AIKEN. I have been trying to get some specific information on one provision of the bill. If a State has a per capita income of $3,500, but there is no town or county in that State which can qualify as a depressed area, under the criteria set up in the bill we are considering, will the State get Federal assistance, or will it be necessary to take into consideration the income of the whole State?

Mr. DIRKSEN. We do not take into consideration the per capita income.

Mr. AIKEN. My State has a low per capita income, but no community could possibly qualify for any assistance under the bill which we are now considering. Other States probably have twice the per capita income of my State, but may have a community from which business has moved out.

Does that community and does that State still qualify for assistance regardless of the overall income of the whole State?

Mr. DIRKSEN. All it is necessary to establish under my amendment, or under Senate bill 1—and this is covered in section 102(a) of my amendment—are the criteria. The conditions must fit the criteria set forth in the bill and determined by the Administrator and the Secretary of Labor. When that certification is made—6 percent unemployment in the area, and an average annual rate of unemployment in the area of at least 50 percent above the national average for 3 of the preceding 4 years; 75 percent above the national average for 2 of the preceding 3 years; or 100 percent above the national average for one of the preceding 2 calendar years—then the area may qualify.

Mr. AIKEN. Then the community would be entitled to Federal aid, regardless of the ability of the State to take care of its own depressed areas?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes. Of course, there is only one illusion here, and that is the approval of the State; but that does not involve the per capita income of the people of the State.

Mr. AIKEN. In a colloquy with the distinguished senior Senator from New York [Mr. JAVITS] this morning, I pointed out the situation in Plattsburg, N.Y., which evidently qualifies for assistance under the bill we are considering. Plattsburg is a mighty fine town of about 17,000 population. The number of employables is given as about 21,000. I assume that includes some of the surrounding area. The Federal Government maintains an airbase there at a cost of, probably, $30 million a year, which goes into that community. The Federal Government now is constructing a $50 million series of missile sites in the same community. Will the fact that the Federal Government is spending, let us say, between $50 and $100 million be taken into consideration before deciding whether to give aid to the city of Plattsburg?

Mr. DIRKSEN. The per capita income of the State is not a condition for assistance. The assistance goes to a depressed area, which is so denominated, if it falls within the formula set forth in the bill: so much unemployment over a given period, or so much above the national average of unemployment. That is all that has to be shown. From there on, it is simply a question whether the community and the State, conjointly with the Federal Government, can work out all the details which will justify the making of a loan or grant. That is the simplest way in which I can express the purpose.

Mr. AIKEN. All of which adds up to the fact that some of the wealthier States in the Union would be entitled to Federal assistance and low-cost loans under the bill, while some of the States having the lowest per capita income could never qualify for any assistance whatsoever.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I would call Pennsylvania a rather well-heeled State. I understand that 25 percent of all the areas which are designated "depressed" are in the great Keystone State of Pennsylvania. I think that answers the Senator's question.

Mr. AIKEN. But northern New England—Vermont and New Hampshire, for instance—does not qualify, and undoubtedly never can qualify, for assistance under the bill. If a State or a community has, we will say, full employment for 3 months of the year, and then a high percentage of unemployment during the other 9 months of the year, it does not qualify.

Mr. DIRKSEN. No.

Mr. AIKEN. It never will; it never can. I thank the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, apropos the remarks of the distinguished Senator from Vermont. I think he might be interested in section 5(d), on page 45 of the bill itself. The Administrator has very wide authority in determining what is a redevelopment area. He has to take into account certain criteria which are listed under section 5(a); and also under section 5(b) there are certain considerations with respect to the so-called rural development section of the bill.

However, under section 5(d) we see the wide authority which is given him in the following language:

As used in this Act, the term "redevelopment area" refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Administrator as a redevelopment area and may include one or more States, one or more counties, or one or more municipalities, or a part of a county or municipality.

So, to answer the Senator's question, I believe any community in the Senators' State—the city of Montpelier, for instance, which is not much of an industrial city, but is a very thriving city—if it should fall upon hard times could have the Administrator designate it as a redevelopment area within the State of Vermont without designating the whole State of Vermont as a redevelopment area.

Mr. AIKEN. If the Senator from Connecticut is willing to rely on the whim of the Administrator to determine what areas would be eligible for benefits, then why does he not agree to strike out the criteria completely, and leave it all to the whim of the Administrator?

Is it not true that under the bill, any manufacturing company in Vermont could locate a branch plant in the Ansonia, Bristol, or Danielson areas of Connecticut and receive low-cost money for the construction of a plant? And is it not also true that no manufacturing company in Connecticut could locate a branch plant in Vermont and receive any low-cost money? In other words, is it not a one-way proposition? Any Vermont company could get an inducement to go to Connecticut or Rhode Island, let us say; but no company from those States would be permitted to go into Vermont or New Hampshire and get any of the benefits of the bill. That is the way the bill reads.

Mr. DIRKSEN. For clarification, the Douglas bill, S. 1, contains a provision that the Administrator can take into account the per capita income, so far as public facility loans are concerned.

Mr. AIKEN. I have just been reading something about public facilities. As I understand, if a plant moves into a rural area and locates within a mile of the REA, on one side, and within a mile of a private utility, on the other side, the REA would not be able to furnish light and power for that plant. The plant would have to use the facilities of the private utility, even though it might be more advantageous for the plant to go the other way.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BUSH. I yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. I should like to make an observation as a result of the colloquy between the able Senator from Vermont and the able Senator from Connecticut. After the Administrator has decided that the region or the area is entitled to some help—I am talking now about the industrial or business end of the situation—what kind of help does the Senator think he can get? Only 65 percent of the valuation of the land or 65 percent of the cost of putting up a new factory without any machinery or electrical equipment of any kind. The way the bill is written, that provision is now in it, but we are talking about taking it out. Despite all that is written in the newspapers and that is being said all over the United States, and after the Administrator decides that an area is a so-called depressed area, all he can do under the act is provide 65 percent.

Mr. AIKEN. It appears to me that the Senator from Indiana believes the bill will not work anyway.

Mr. CAPEHART. No, it will not work. I sometimes wonder if it is intended that it shall work. The reason I say that is that we already have the Small Business Administration, which can do everything it is intended the bill shall do, and more, so far as business is concerned.

We have the Facilities Division of the Federal Government, which is doing exactly what the bill calls for, and which grants loans for the building of water systems.

Then, on top of those agencies, we have the Department of Agriculture and the Federal Farm Administration, which are doing practically all that the bill calls for in respect to the rural sections of the United States.

The only thing which is provided in the bill, which we do not have in other places—and I do not think the Department of Commerce should be the agency to handle it—is the provision for teaching vocational training to certain people in certain sections of the country. In my opinion, that program should be handled by the schools or by an educational agency, rather than by the Department of Commerce.

Mr. AIKEN. I will accept the explanation of the Senator from Indiana that the bill probably will not work anyway. But if it should work, I believe it would be detrimental to my State.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, how much time have I remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut has no time remaining.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I shall support the Dirksen amendment in the nature of a substitute. I was a sponsor of the Dirksen substitute last year, when it was sent down, after the President vetoed the bill; and I was a sponsor of the amendment in the nature of a substitute this year, when the Senator introduced it—the reason being that I believe it provides a more modest approach to an untried situation.

As I have said repeatedly during the debate and in committee, the entire proposition of Federal assistance to redevelopment areas is an experiment; it is a pilot adventure. Therefore, I think it should be done on a more modest basis than that called for by the Douglas bill.

I have tried, along with other Senators, to modify or amend the Douglas bill, so as to make it more acceptable and, I think, more practical. But I much prefer to see a more modest approach taken—as I did last year, in supporting what was then the Eisenhower recommendation and the Dirksen bill.

So I say to my friend, the junior Senator from Illinois, that I am glad that he has resubmitted his measure as an amendment in the nature of a substitute for Senate bill No. 1; and I shall support the substitute.

Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of the time available to me.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, let me say the issue is very clear: Senators who believe in the Eisenhower-Republican plan should vote "yea" on this question; Senators who believe in the Kennedy-Democratic plan should vote "nay."

I yield back the remainder of the time available to me; and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. LAUSCHE. First, Mr. President, may I have a little time?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Certainly; I withhold my suggestion of the absence of a quorum.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Ohio.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. LAUSCHE. Mr. President, yesterday, I submitted an amendment contemplating the elimination from the pending bill of the section which provides for giveaways. My attitude on that matter was declared on yesterday: I do not subscribe to the thought that the Federal Government should expand its gift programs.

I shall support a provision which will make loans available. But I will not support the ever-growing habit of the Federal Government in saying that "With the gift of money we shall be able to achieve what you have not been able to achieve otherwise."

I have observed that giving away the taxpayers' money is too frequently used for the purpose of buying votes, rather than for the purpose of promoting the welfare of the country.

Therefore, I shall vote for the Dirksen amendment, or substitute, because it eliminates the giveaway program. Unless we stop soon the concept of giving away, we shall rue the day when we began it. The piper will have to be paid, and he will have to be paid far sooner than we realize.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do both Senators who have control of the time yield back the remaining time available to them?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I do, Mr. President.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I do, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All remaining time for debate has been yielded back.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] in the nature of a substitute for the committee amendment, as amended.

On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered; and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I announce that the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr.

PROXMIRE] are absent on official business.

I also announce that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. McCARTHY] are absent because of illness.

I further announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. BLAKLEY] is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. McCARTHY], the Senator from Texas [Mr. BLAKLEY], and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. PROXMIRE] would each vote "nay."

Mr. KUCHEL. I announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ALLOTT] is absent because of death in his family.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROUTY] is absent by leave of the Senate because of illness.

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 66, as follows:

So Mr. DIRKSEN's amendment in the nature of a substitute was rejected.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the substitute was defeated.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I move to table the motion of the Senator from Minnesota.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to amendment.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, designated "3-8-61-A," and ask unanimous consent to have it stated by title only and printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The amendment offered by the Senator from Indiana will be stated by title.

4, to strike out all through line 10, on page 43, and insert certain language.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 42, beginning with line 4, strike out all through line 10, on page 43, and insert the following:

"SEC. 5. (a) (1) The Secretary of Labor shall from time to time, or upon the request of the Administrator, certify to the Administrator the location of any labor market area within the United States which he finds (on the basis of available labor force data or such special studies as he deems necessary) is sufficiently limited in the size of its labor force and in the character of its economy so as to be dependent on a single industry for its employment opportunities. For the purposes of this subsection, a labor market area shall be deemed dependent on a single industry for its employment opportunities if (A) the area has a labor force of less than fifteen thousand and at least 25 per centum of that labor force has been employed in one industry during any one of the preceding ten calendar years, or (B) the area has a labor force of fifteen thousand or more and at least 20 per centum of that labor force has been employed in one industry during any one of the preceding ten calendar years.

"(2) The Administrator shall designate as a 'redevelopment area' any labor market area, with respect to which a certification is made under paragraph (1) of this subsection, which he determines is an area—

"(A) where the rate of unemployment, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in subparagraph (B) below; and

"(B) where the annual average rate of unemployment has been at least—

"(i) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years; or

"(ii) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years; or

"(iii) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years; and

"(C) where there exists no reasonable probability of substantial improvement in employment opportunities in the foreseeable future without assistance of the type provided in this Act."

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I should like to propound a question to the majority leader with respect to H.R. 4806, which I understand was reported by the Finance Committee. That is the temporary unemployment compensation bill. I understand there is no objection to the consideration of that bill tomorrow if we complete action on the pending bill today.

Then I make a further inquiry about a session on Friday, in view of the fact that there will be a rather generally diffused celebration of the anniversary of the great patron saint of Ireland.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, does the Senator wish an answer?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. MANSFIELD. It is our hope to complete action on the pending bill tonight, and to have as the unfinished business tomorrow the measure reported by the Senate Finance Committee today, having to do with the extension of unemployment compensation benefits.

Shortly after that bill is acted on, it is the intention to consider the extension of unemployment compensation benefits for railroad workers, which of course operates not under Social Security but under the Railway Labor Act.

It is hoped we can then consider the two treaties relating to the OECD and the Columbia River Basin.

None of those measures should require much time. I hope the Senate will act expeditiously.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Indiana, who has an amendment pending, if he would be amenable, despite the unanimous-consent agreement with regard to limitation of time on amendments and on the bill, to a 20-minute limitation on his amendment, with 10 minutes for the proponents and 10 minutes in opposition. The proposal relates to the one amendment.

Mr. CAPEHART. I have no objection.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, it was my hope I might be recognized following the Senator from Indiana. So far as I am concerned, I should be glad to agree to a similar limitation with respect to my amendment—perhaps 15 minutes to a side.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. LAUSCHE. Mr. President, I am obliged to say to the Senator from Pennsylvania that I had asked the Presiding Officer, while the last amendment was under consideration, for recognition, since I intended to offer my amendment. Agreement to the request of the Senator from Pennsylvania would mean he and I would be in conflict.

Mr. SCOTT. If the Senator from Ohio made an earlier request, of course I shall be glad to defer to the Senator from Ohio. I hope we can have some indication as to how long the Senator from Ohio expects to require, so that I can guide myself.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, in view of the seemingly near unanimity and good fellowship, I wonder if the Senate will consider a unanimous-consent request to limit debate to 30 minutes on each amendment from now on to be divided equally, 15 minutes to a side?

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield.

Mr. BUSH. This would leave considerable time on the bill?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Yes; there is time remaining on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Montana?

Mr. LAUSCHE. Yes, Mr. President, I object, so far as my amendment is concerned.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I withdraw my request, and I ask unanimous consent that the time limitation of 20 minutes apply to the amendment offered by the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. CAPEHART. Let us make it 30 minutes, 15 minutes for each side.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a time limitation of 30 minutes on the Capehart amendment, to be divided 15 minutes on each side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Montana? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, the proposal I am now going to discuss with respect to the bill, in my opinion concerns the very heart of the bill and may mean the difference between success and failure of the program.

My amendment would not apply to the rural sections of the bill. It would not touch the public facilities section of the bill. It would apply only to the so-called business section of the bill, or that portion of the bill which attempts to create employment.

I am in favor, as I think every other Senator is, of seeing the Federal Government, the States, and the counties help towns or communities in the United States which have 100 percent chronic unemployment.

What do I mean when I say "chronic unemployment"? I refer to the town with one industry, or, let us say, a mining town in which the mines are depleted and closed. Let us assume that in a one-industry town the factory has closed; there is absolutely no possibility of anybody getting a new job in that town or community unless someone brings in a new facility.

My amendment would be very helpful to the State of West Virginia. It would be helpful to western Pennsylvania, where the coal mines have been depleted.

Unless the Senate agrees to this amendment or to the kind of formula suggested for arriving at help for the areas which have chronic unemployment in the United States, we shall face an almost impossible situation. In the first place, only $290 million are to be provided under the bill to help communities all over the United States.

If my amendment or some other criterion or formula is not agreed to, we will face the situation, for example, that the city of Detroit at the moment, as well as many, many other cities, falls within the formula described in the bill.

Thirty days from now those cities may not come under the formula. Sufficient manufacturing facilities or job opportunities will be available in Detroit, let us say, when the existing factories and businesses put the men back to work. Then there will not be unemployment in Detroit. Detroit is not a city with chronic unemployment. The unemployment in Detroit is a result of operations of the automobile industry.

If the Federal Government attempts to finance temporary unemployment wherever it shows its head all over the United States, in every town and every community, we shall have the greatest confusion and chaos.

Under the formula in S. 1 a city could be entitled to help today and 30 days from now not be entitled to help, or vice versa. Today the city may not qualify, and 30 days from today it may.

We do not have enough money, under the terms of the bill, to do the entire job. By the time the Secretary started helping Detroit the money would be gone. How could Detroit, which has two and a half million people, be helped? What could be done? All that could be done under the bill with respect to unemployment, about which we talk so much, is to make loans—65 percent of the cost of a building or a factory, 65 percent of the cost to rehabilitate a factory, or 65 percent of the cost to buy land. That is all the bill provides. The provisions are ridiculous and afford too little.

We should confine the assistance to the towns in the United States—how many there are I do not know—in which there is never going to be another job unless some private enterpriser or someone builds a factory or a facility such as a processing plant.

Then we can do some good.

In addition, there is not enough money provided. There is only $290 million under the terms of the bill. How far will $290 million go toward building factories? We could not build the south end of the Ford factory in Detroit, or a General Motors factory in Detroit, for $290 million.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. I am happy to yield to the Senator in the Senator's own time.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Does the Senator from Indiana wish to offer an amendment to double the sum of money available under the bill, since he thinks the sum is not adequate in amount?

Mr. CAPEHART. I should be happy to double the amount provided in the bill if the Senator would accept my amendment.

Mr. DOUGLAS. No. If the Senator will double the amount, then we can do more for the areas for which his heart is bleeding.

Mr. CAPEHART. If the Senator from Illinois will confine the effort with respect to the communities having 100 percent chronic unemployment, with regard to which either private enterprise or Government operation in connection with private enterprise is necessary, with assistance from States and counties, in order to start new businesses, then I will go along as to doubling the amount of money, because I am in favor of helping those areas in the United States.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I do not think the Senator would have help from many of his colleagues on his side.

Mr. CAPEHART. Perhaps not, but I speak only for myself. Therefore I say that if we wish to help the chronically unemployed sections of the United States, then we should confine the activities set forth in the bill to the chronically unemployed. We should amend the bill to permit the Administrator to lend working capital as well as money to rehabilitate a factory. There is already in the bill a provision for machinery and equipment. That provision remains. I think we could accomplish some good, then, with the proposed legislation.

Unless action as proposed by my amendment is taken, we shall have a small amount of money scattered all over the United States, and we shall never know whether or not a town is included within the provisions of the bill. In my opinion the bill will accomplish nothing, and many thousands of unemployed will be disappointed.

I have said a thousand times that if there is one man in the United States who is unemployed and is able to work and is willing to work, that is too many. I am perfectly willing to help solve the problem, as I always have been. I think I know how to create jobs. I think I know what it takes to create jobs. But we are not going to accomplish our object unless we confine the provisions of the bill to the chronically unemployed.

Originally that was our object. I honestly believe that practically every Senator thinks that is what the bill would do. I believe Senators thought they were accomplishing that object under the bill. I say that such purpose will not be accomplished unless my amendment or some similar amendment is agreed to.

Temporary unemployment and permanent unemployment are being confused in our discussion of the bill. Dealing with both at one time will not work. Let us take care of the permanently unemployed by helping those who are permanently unemployed. If it is necessary to take care of those affected by a recession or those temporarily unemployed, let us do so under some other bill, because temporary unemployment moves up and down. One day we have plenty of employment, and the next day we do not.

I have nothing further to add. I tried to have my amendment agreed to in the committee. I tried to have it agreed to on the floor. I shall vote for the bill if the amendment is agreed to. If it is not, I shall not support the bill, because to do so without the amendment in my opinion would be pulling a hoax on the unemployed in the United States.

I ask unanimous consent to have the statement I have prepared included in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR CAPEHART

I have risen in a last effort to try to convince Members of the Senate that, in my humble opinion, the adoption of S. 1 without a proper definition of what is a "depressed area" or what is "chronic unemployment" may well lead to a bureaucratic fiasco.

I have offered a criteria, in the form of an amendment to S. 1, which I believe to be a proper description of a community which can never again partake of the benefits of a growing economy unless some help reaches that community in the form of new employment.

This criteria was not accepted by the majority of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

Maybe it was because my explanation of the proposal was as faulty and as loose as the bill is.

If that be true, I will try now to improve my effort.

Perhaps the amendment was not accepted in committee because some of the Senators have a different idea of what is "chronic unemployment" and what constitutes a "depressed area."

Obviously, the criteria which is now in the bill does not describe my type of "chronic unemployment" or what I think of as a "depressed area" because under the existing criteria so-called depressed areas go on and off the eligible list as if they weren't sure whether they wanted to be "depressed" or not.

My type of "depressed area" would be eligible period until such time as our legislation would do something about it.

I think of a community like Beckley, W. Va., as fitting the true description of an area of persistent unemployment that is due to a chronic cause.

Chronic means "consistent" and "continuous."

How in the world can we have a "chronic" area which is eligible one month and not eligible another month if "chronic" means "consistent" and "continuous"?

Now, before somebody takes issue with my use of the term "chronic" as not fully describing the intent and purpose of the bill, I should like to admit the terms have been changed through the course of months.

Why were they changed?

I would have to turn to the architects of the bill for that answer.

I realize as well as any Member of the Senate that the principal author of the bill did say at one point in the hearings on the bill in January that he no longer referred to the eligible areas as "depressed areas"; they were being called "areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment."

From this point on the bill "just grew" like Topsy.

But we can take the language in the declaration of purpose of S. 1 and raise a question as to the appropriateness of the criteria in S. 1.

There the authors use the word "persistent."

"Persistent" means "existing continuously, enduring" and, appropriately, "tenacious."

Again I say if that is the type of condition this bill is to combat then the existing criteria will never do the job.

Turning just once more to the declaration of purpose of the bill, I want to consider for a moment the use of the words "substantial unemployment."

The declaration observes that some of our communities are suffering "substantial" unemployment.

This is where the bill bursts wide open and no longer is it a bill to help the Beckleys of our country.

It becomes a hybrid bill. They have grafted a depressed areas bill with an anti-recession bill and brought forth upon this Senate Chamber a two-headed beast and not enough food for either head.

Are we going to try to help the Beckleys in our Nation with $390 million which is little enough, or are we going to help the Detroit, the Pittsburghs or any other metropolis where we find "substantial unemployment"?

If we are to use this bill to solve all the problems of "substantial unemployment" which breeds on temporary causes for the most part, then, we need to get out pencil and paper and start figuring the financial section all over again.

We all know what "substantial" means. It means "not imaginary" not illusive; real; true; having substance; strong; stout; solid; firm; possessed of goods; moderately wealthy; responsible; something substantial."

Sure, it is very simple. All the Administrator of this program has to do is find that a good stout unemployment condition exists anywhere and a-way we go!

Since this bill also includes a considerable rural program, we might well find a super-PWA being operated on a miniature budget.

If this bill means what it says, the Beckleys are going to come to Washington with the plea: "Mister, can you spare a dime?"

I am going to explain my amendment in what I hope will be a word-picture of communities like Beckley, W. Va.; the kind of communities this bill was originally intended to assist and communities which I sincerely believe need the assistance of this bill.

First of all, there must be two sizes of such communities so we divide them by using a labor market force of 15,000 as the dividing point.

Those areas having more than 15,000 are the large areas, of course, and those below are the small. I am not attempting to insult the intelligence of the Senate; I am just trying to be careful in my explanation so that the amendment will be duly understood.

The cause of "chronic" or "persistent" economic conditions in such communities is consistently dominant-industry employment. The community basks in the glory of boom times when the dominant industry blossoms, but its plight becomes desperate when the dominant industry collapses for any reason.

We can think quickly of mining towns, railroad centers, and textile mill locations. We think of the Beckleys.

So, to distinguish such communities from others with different economic problems, my amendment would classify industry-dominated large communities when 20 percent of the labor market force has in one of the past 10 years, been employed in a given industry.

By the same method, the amendment classifies a small industry-dominated community, but the employment of 25 percent of the labor market force in a given industry in one of the last 10 years is required.

Now we have a big Beckley and a small Beckley.

Next, of course, we must measure the unemployment in such a community to determine whether it is of such magnitude as to fit the picture of our Beckley.

So the amendment uses the same unemployment criteria now contained in S. 1, but the criteria now has a new meaning because it is only one of three factors which constitute the word picture of our community.

There has to be a third factor and a most important one.

The amendment then requires that the Administrator must find that there exists in this community no reasonable probability of substantial improvement in employment opportunities in the foreseeable future without assistance of the type we are trying to provide in this legislation.

This is not a crystal-ball amendment because I am certain that any Member of this Senate can walk into one of the communities described in my amendment and determine in a matter of a few hours whether industry in that community can ever again absorb the unemployed without the creation of new jobs.

I have tried my level best to show the difference between this bill and what it long ago was intended for.

Unless this Senate can be presented with a bill which will do what we promised to do for the Beckley, West Virginian's in our land, then I guess I will have to vote against the bill because I do not want to be a party to telling the people in a community one day that "you are going to get help from this bill" and telling them the next day that "you are not entitled to any help from this bill."

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment of the Senator from Indiana.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is to restrict the assistance under S. 1 to one industry labor market areas in which there is substantial and persistent unemployment. In effect this amendment says that assistance will be extended only to those areas which have a chronic unemployment problem and which have been a one industry town or area.

I am sure that in practice the loans will be made primarily to localities where unemployment has existed for a long period of time. Such areas are shown on the chart in the rear of the Chamber. The length of the bars indicates the periods during which there has been substantial unemployment. The test is both substantial and persistent unemployment. The fact that a locality can meet the minimum test laid down in the bill does not mean that the loans must be made in that area. The Administrator, though he has discretion, will undoubtedly concentrate the loans in the areas where unemployment has been not only high but has persisted over a long period of time.

To be sure there are many one-industry towns or areas among those areas which have been suffering from persistent underemployment or unemployment. However, depending on a single industry is only one of many causes for these areas in distress. There are a great number of factors responsible for the present condition of these underdeveloped areas. The reasons for their present distress are both numerous and complex. They may differ from region to region in the United States.

Out of the many years of hearings a number of primary causes for distress in these areas have been identified. Among them are technological change, migration of industry, shifts of demand and depletion of resource base.

The purpose of S. 1 is to assist those areas suffering from chronic and persistent unemployment, whatever the cause for their persistent predicament might have been. It would seem arbitrary and capricious to merely tie assistance under section 5(a) of this act to so-called one-industry towns where there is chronic and persistent unemployment problems. All areas of persistent and chronic unemployment should receive equal treatment and should have equal opportunity to apply for assistance under this act.

I hope the amendment of the Senator from Indiana will be rejected by an overwhelming vote.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). All time having been yielded back, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Indiana to the committee amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I announce that the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT], the Senator from Oregon [Mrs. NEUBERGER], and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT], are absent on official business.

I also announce that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. MCCARTHY] are absent because of illness.

I further announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. BLAKLEY] is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Oregon [Mrs. NEUBERGER], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. MCCARTHY], and the Senator from Texas [Mr. BLAKLEY] would each vote "nay."

On this vote, the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT] is paired with the Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPPEL]. If present and voting, the Senator from Alaska would vote "nay" and the Senator from Kansas would vote "yea."

Mr. KUCHEL. I announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ALLOTT] is absent because of death in his family.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROUTY] is absent by leave of the Senate because of illness.

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], and the Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPPEL] are detained on official business.

On this vote the Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPPEL] is paired with the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT]. If present and voting, the Senator from Kansas would vote "yea," and the Senator from Alaska would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 19, nays 71, as follows:

So Mr. CAPEHART's amendment to the committee amendment was rejected.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I move that the Senate reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. LAUSCHE. Mr. President, I call up my amendment designated "3-14-61—C" and ask that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 53, beginning with line 10, it is proposed to strike out all through line 12 on page 56.

Renumber succeeding sections accordingly.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator from Ohio yield?

Mr. LAUSCHE. I yield.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Would the Senator be agreeable to a unanimous-consent agreement to limit the time on his amendment?

Mr. LAUSCHE. No. I will try to present the issue involved in my amendment quickly. I do not wish to incur a hazard by limiting myself to a specified time.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Very well.

Mr. LAUSCHE. I shall, however, try to present the amendment to the Senate as rapidly as I can.

My amendment contemplates striking section 8 from the bill. Section 8 provides for the making of grants as distinguished from loans. The grants may be made when certain conditions are met by the Administrator, and the grants may be made to—

Any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or public or private nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area, or part thereof.

I am reading from page 54 of the bill, paragraph (b).

The grants can be used—

For land acquisition or development for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities within a redevelopment area.

In this section, as is indicated in paragraph (e), on page 56 of the bill, there is—

Authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $75 million for the purpose of making grants under this section.

Mr. President, although one could rather well argue that the making of loans is not a hazardous indulgence by the Federal Government, under the other sections of the bill, as I wish to point out, when grants are made, they are gifts to the particular agencies which receive the funds. This is an innovation in the provision of aid to develop small business, to develop community facilities, or to aid in the development of rural areas.

It has already been pointed out that we have approximately three specific methods of trying to give aid. The first is by means of the loan provisions in the Agricultural Acts; and those acts contain, in addition, provisions for the training of men, the giving of advice in regard to how to run farms, and so forth.

The second method of giving help is embodied in the provisions of the Small Business Administration Act. The provisions of that act are exceedingly broad. They allow the making of loans to individuals for the purchase of land, the construction of shops, and the purchase of equipment. However, when such a loan is made, interest must be paid, and later on the loan has to be repaid.

The third method is by means of the Community Facilities Act, in connection with the functions of the Federal Housing Administration. The Community Facilities Act allows the making of loans for the construction of sewers, sidewalks, generating plants, gas lines, and so forth. Likewise, it involves the payment of interest at a certain rate, although the rate is favorable to the borrower.

Past experience indicates that we already have available the farmers redevelopment program and the means of making loans to small business concerns for the functions set forth in this bill; and we have allowed loans to be made for the development of public service facilities.

Mr. President, in the pending bill, we again provide for the making of loans. One might ask why provision is being made for the making of loans, by means of the pending bill, when loans are already covered by the Small Business Administration Act and by the Federal Housing Act?

The pending bill allows the making of loans on extremely liberal bases; what I have called secondary or tertiary security can be taken when the loan is made. A first mortgage or a first bonded indenture is not required in order to make such a loan; there can be a second-class or a third-class or even a fourth-class security.

I submit to my colleagues that when we have gone that far, we have gone practically the full length of justification.

But the proponents of the bill are not satisfied with the provision that 65 percent of the cost of purchasing land or constructing a building or purchasing machinery can be loaned and the Federal Government is to take, as security a second mortgage or a third mortgage or a fourth mortgage. The proponents of the bill say we must go one step further. Mr. President, what is that step? It is to give the money away. But I cannot agree to that.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Ohio yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CANNON in the chair). Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. LAUSCHE. I yield.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Is there not another question, in addition to that of the actual money to be appropriated for such a grant? It is that this bill is an experiment; and if we remove initiative and the effort of those in the localities to build up new businesses or to build up a new public utility, if we remove such initiative by giving them the funds needed, we shall take away very much of what we are trying to accomplish in order to have new industries and more employment in the towns developed. In that case, shall not we be making every city and every town attempt to come under the grant provision, rather than under the loan provision? But if we make grants available under those conditions, we shall have destroyed local initiative.

Mr. LAUSCHE. Mr. President, I think the very statement the Senator from Massachusetts has made of the proposition establishes its strength and its truth.

Are we to say, "Do not exert yourself in your community. Do not solicit the chamber of commerce to provide the needed funds. Do not go to your local bank, to see whether you can persuade it to provide the money you need. Instead, wait; the Federal Government will give the money to you." That is the essence of the whole matter.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Ohio yield again to me?

Mr. LAUSCHE. I yield.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Is not that completely different from making grants—which this bill would do—in smaller amounts, for reeducation or for subsistence during reeducation? That is a proper form of grant.

But to provide the facilities themselves will take away all the zeal with which an individual or a locality would work.

Mr. LAUSCHE. I have no objection to provisions for retraining and for aid in that respect.

My objection goes to the program of giving away.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, let me ask whether the Senator from Ohio has asked that the yeas and nays be ordered on the question of agreeing to his amendment.

Mr. LAUSCHE. I have not.

Mr. President, I make that request now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. LAUSCHE. Later, Mr. President, when there is a larger attendance, I shall renew my request.

Mr. President, we began by providing for the making of loans through the Small Business Administration, which asks for security. We continued, by providing for the making of loans for community facilities.

Now it is proposed that we provide for the making of loans for the construction of factories.

But some Senators are not content with even that; and they say that in addition to the loans, there must be grants.

Mr. President, I submit to my colleagues that we can go only one step further; and that step is that when those who are offered the grants refuse to accept them, the Federal Government can say to them, "We will give you a premium if you will take our money." [Laughter.]

That is the only step that lies beyond, Mr. President; beyond that there is ne plus ultra, as it is said; when that step is taken, nothing else remains; we shall then have gone the whole way.

Obviously, great inspection has been made. But how much further can we go?

Furthermore, Mr. President, I ask for the adoption of my amendment on the basis of the constantly growing tendency on the part of the U.S. Congress to subsidize. As matters now stand, we are told that the lead and the zinc industries cannot survive unless money is given to them; we are told that the merchant marine is about to collapse unless money is given to it, as a subsidy; we are told that the airlines cannot succeed unless we subsidize them; and there is talk about the ceramics industry begging for money, as a subsidy. All up and down the line we hear the argument, "We cannot survive unless money is given to us out of the Federal Treasury."

Why am I opposed to this constant giving away of money? If we continue it, we are robbing the person who bought U.S. Government bonds; we are stealing from the person who was thrifty and tried to put away money to take care of himself in his old age; we are taking away a part of the pensions and the annuities and the retirement payments that people have anticipated to sustain them in their older years.

If Senators ask me, "How are we doing it?" my answer is, "By 24 out of 30 years of deficit operations." The dollar that bought 100 cents' worth of material in 1941 now purchases 46 cents' worth of material.

We had a debt of $255 billion after the war. It is now $290 billion. Our gold reserves are flowing out of the country. Short term foreign creditors are declaring that they do not want our paper; they want our gold.

Keep giving away, keep pushing the Federal Government into programs that historically have belonged to local and State governments, and, instead of ending the problem, we are going to make it worse.

It might be said that $75 million is not much; and I suppose it is not to those who have never had fiscal responsibility. I think it means much to a man who was once a Governor, to a man who knows what it means to impose taxes and to have revenues commensurate with expenditures. But $75 million is merely the beginning. Three years from now it will be $150 million, and then $250 million; and, when it is projected into future years, the cost goes far beyond our imagination.

I can go along with the lending phases of the bill, although they are weak. They are weak because they provide that second, third, and fourth class securities can be accepted.

Yesterday we had a very interesting discussion on the floor of the Senate. It was pointed out that we have reached such a stage that when, in some instances the Department of Defense finds it ought to move from a section because the section is uneconomical to operate, new conditions may have arisen which seemingly make it mandatory for the Department of Defense to stay in the community. These were the facts offered in support of such a decision: There is a housing project near an Army base. The Federal Government has money loaned on that housing project. If the Army base moves, the loan of the Federal Government will become lost or greatly impaired.

Therefore, the operation should not be discontinued. It should be continued so that the loan which the Federal Government made will be protected.

If that argument is sound, how many communities shall we go into which have been unacceptable for businesses to settle in? Once we go in, with a $500,000 plant or a $1 million plant, how shall we ever get out? We shall have to feed good money into it to save bad money. We shall never get out. There will be a perpetuation of bad conditions. And, I say to the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], who is sitting near me, I foresee the arrival of that day, in view of the many actions we are taking.

Mr. President, I suppose the easy course would be to say to my citizens back in Ohio, "I have succeeded in getting $75 million for you as a gift. Is that not wonderful? The Federal Government is going to dip into its Treasury and provide $75 million for you, and it will cost you nothing." How wonderful that would be. But cold realism labels that statement as untrue, and I shall not subscribe to it.

Only one more thought, and I shall close. In 10 years, as Governor of Ohio, I fought intensely to bring business to Ohio, and I brought it into my State from Pennsylvania, Michigan, and other States. Though it may sound vain, the business was brought there because we tried to maintain law and order and make sure that preferential treatment was given to no one.

When troubles were rampant, not only in my State, but in adjoining States, I had calls to get me to throw my governmental strength on the side of one party in a controversy, and to throw that support on the basis of abandoning my sense of morality. I did not do it.

Mr. President, where does business settle? When an attempt is made to attract business to a State, the prospects will ask, "Are you close to the consuming market? Are you close to raw materials? Do you have a supply of manpower? What highway, railway, and waterway transportation do you have? Do you have electricity and water supply? What type of government do you run? Is Government in the hands of the people, or is it in the hands of those who want to exploit?"

If I were a businessman, I would say, "All I ask is, give me the protection of law and order, and do not punish me when I come into your State with a business."

With money there can be provided buildings, land, sidewalks, sewer and gas lines, but, my colleagues, law and order cannot be provided by a congressional declaration or congressional provision of money. Nor can we put a community close to the consuming public or raw materials.

By this bill we are contemplating arrogating to the U.S. Congress the proposition that, by a magic wand, the spending of $375 million will do that which nature itself shows does not exist.

In one of the legislative sessions early in the 1950's there was in progress a very bitter debate in the Legislature of Ohio. A group of breeders of what is known as the Ohio Improved Chester White hog wanted that breed made a separate breed by legislative declaration. They had had difficulty with the breeders of the Chester White hog. The Chester White hog breeders said that the Ohio improved Chester White hog was simply an offspring of the Chester White hog. Not being able to get the Ohio Improved Chester White hog into the county fairs and State fairs, the breeders went to the legislature and had a bill introduced to declare this to be a special breed. The legislature passed the bill. The bill came to my desk.

A farmer wrote to me and he said:

I object to the signing and the passage of the bill.

He went on to say:

Commonsense from time immemorial indicates clearly that new breeds are always created by new biological combinations and never by legislative declaration.

That, in my opinion, applies to the bill before the Senate. By legislative declaration the Senate is trying to change a condition which cannot be changed.

I have seen the maps. I have seen the Ohio areas which have been delineated. I know them. The provisions of the bill before the Senate will not aid in the solution of the problems.

On that basis I ask my colleagues to strike from the bill section 8, which provides for grants to be used in the building of and in the remodeling of buildings and in the buying of land, and so forth.

That is my case.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I regret that I am not such an authority on the breeding of hogs as my good friend from Ohio. However, while the amendment is directed ostensibly against the $75 million of grants provided for public facilities, his speech was, in effect, a broadside against the bill as a whole.

Mr. LAUSCHE. I will vote for the bill if the grant provision is eliminated.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I regard the grant provision as essential to the bill. As the Senator from Ohio has said, industrial concerns, for one thing, weigh the presence or absence of sufficient supplies of water as one of the major considerations in determining whether they will locate in a community. There are many areas in the country with high unemployment which have abundant rainfall, but capital is lacking for the construction of dams to hold back the water and to create the industrial lakes which are needed to provide large quantities of industrial water to attract industry. This would be one of the major purposes for which loans and grants could be made.

There are many localities which have been bled white for such a long period of unemployment that they lack the tax resources from their own taxable property to finance the purchase of land for such a lake and for the construction of a dam.

If we were merely to provide loans, even at the interest rate set forth in the bill, many communities would not be able to take advantage of the loan provision, and hence would be ruled out. Consequently, the communities would not be able to attract industry and would not be able to reduce unemployment in the area.

The grant is intended to be a supplement to the loans, to help out. The loans are intended to be made only if loans are not available from private lenders or from other Federal agencies on reasonable terms.

As I have tried to point out time and time again today, and as I tried to point out yesterday, the loans for commercial facilities as well as for the industrial and rural areas will only be made if loans cannot be obtained from private lenders or other Federal agencies. The loans are intended to back up, not to replace, loans from private banks or from the Community Facilities Division of the Housing and Home Finance Corporation, the Small Business Administration, and so on.

I hope the amendment of the Senator from Ohio, which would certainly cripple the efforts of localities in West Virginia, eastern Kentucky, southern Illinois, northern Wisconsin, northern Michigan, northern Minnesota, southwestern Pennsylvania, east Tennessee, and many of the areas of the Appalachian Highlands, both north and south, will be defeated by a voice vote.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Ohio yield to me so that I may ask for the yeas and nays?

Mr. LAUSCHE. I yield.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment of the Senator from Ohio.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. BUSH. The time can be taken for the call of the roll from the time on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator control the time?

Mr. LAUSCHE. Mr. President, I make the request.

Mr. BUSH. It can be done either way. The majority leader asked me to yield time if he were away from the Chamber. He is not in the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I hope the amendment will be rejected. I had hoped we could expedite passage of the bill by having a voice vote, but since the Senator from Connecticut is so insistent that we should have a yeas-and-nays vote, I am ready to have a trial of strength. I yield back the remainder of my time, and ask that we immediately have the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second to the request?

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I thank the able Senator for his consideration. We are trying to save time, but we consider the amendment to be very important, and therefore a yeas-and-nays vote appears to be in order. I thank the Senator for his consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the time yielded back?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. LAUSCHE. Mr. President, I yield back my remaining time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time on the amendment has been yielded back.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio to the committee amendment. On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I announce that the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT] and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT], are absent on official business.

I also announce that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. MCCARTHY], are absent because of illness.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROUTY] is absent by leave of the Senate because of illness.

The Senators from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL and Mr. CARLSON] are detained on official business. If present and voting the senior Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL] would vote "yea."

So Mr. LAUSCHE's amendment to the committee amendment was rejected.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. CARROLL. Mr. President, I have followed closely the shaping of S. 1 during the past several months. I have corresponded with the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS], who has labored so long and hard over this bill. A few weeks ago I proposed an amendment to S. 1 which would include, in the criteria for eligibility, the factor of distance traveled to and from work. This was designed to permit the administrator of the program to take into account the areas where raw unemployment statistics do not fully tell the story; in my own State of Colorado, and in others, there are areas where a large percentage of those able to find employment must commute 40 or 50 miles a day from their homes to their place of work and home again. There just are not enough jobs near their homes.

The committee did not see fit to adopt my proposed amendment. I do not quarrel with the committee's judgment. Its problem is a difficult one and the funds are limited. However, I am happy to be able to say that as I read the bill, the criteria adopted by the committee unquestionably will help at least one depressed area in Colorado; and likely two.

I am referring to the once-thriving coal mining areas in south central Colorado, centered around the cities of Walsenburg and Trinidad. With the replacement of coal by natural gas for domestic and industrial fuel, these regions have been suffering chronic unemployment for decades. Their plight has been made worse by the inescapable advance of automation in those mines that remain in operation. And in recent months, their woes have multiplied because of layoffs in the steel mills at Pueblo, which have further curtailed the demand for coal.

Both these cities are amply endowed with fine climate, scenery, recreational advantages, water, power, natural resources and alert aggressive citizenry. All they need is a bit of help to get started in full swing.

There is not the slightest doubt in my mind that Walsenburg and surrounding Huerfano County will benefit under S. 1. Section 5(a) of the bill states that the administrator shall designate as redevelopment areas those areas where unemployment is currently 6 percent or more; and where the annual rate of unemployment has been at least 50 percent above the national average for 3 of the preceding 4 calendar years.

In Walsenburg, unemployment has been over 6 percent for the last 5 years, 1956 through 1960; and in Walsenburg, unemployment has been more than 50 percent above the national average in 1957, in 1959 and in 1960. The following table shows this in specific detail:

Year	National average (percentage)	National average plus 50 percent	Walsenburg unemployment
1957	4.3	6.4	6.9
1958	6.8	10.2	8.3
1959	5.5	8.2	9.2
1960	5.6	8.4	9.8

Under a reasonable application of these criteria, the city of Trinidad, and neighboring portions of Las Animas County, most probably will qualify under S. 1. Unemployment there has been above the national average and above 6 percent for 3 of the last 4 years; but it has not been 50 percent above the national average for 3 of the last 4 years.

However, the report of the Committee on Banking and Currency on page 15 says this:

The Administrator may also, at his discretion, designate other areas as eligible for assistance where substantial and persistent unemployment has existed and which have unemployment conditions generally comparable to those of the areas of mandatory designation.

For example, this is intended to give the Administrator the necessary discretion to designate as a redevelopment area * * * an area which has suffered from a sudden, severe or catastrophic loss of employment opportunity and which might not otherwise become eligible for assistance until at least a year had passed.

This language, Mr. President, is based on the wording of lines 6 and 7 on page 42 of the bill: " * * * on the basis of standards generally comparable."

There has been a sudden and catastrophic loss of employment opportunity in and around Trinidad. The Frederick mine closed down tight just before Christmas, 1960, and the Allen mine has undergone a drastic reduction in force. Last May, these 2 mines were hiring 1,000 men. They now hire only about 200 men. Does this layoff sound small? Only if we fail to remember that the entire work force in the Trinidad area consists of 5,780 people. I submit that this loss of employment, Mr. President, is as sudden and catastrophic as anything short of an earthquake, tidal wave or major conflagration can be. I want to say now that I will take this up with the Administrator of this new program as soon as he is able to function. I am confident that a fairminded Administrator will agree wholeheartedly with me.

In this connection, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD at this point a letter from Senator DOUGLAS which bears directly on the subject under discussion.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY,
January 30, 1961.

HON. JOHN A. CARROLL,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR JOHN: During the current hearings on S. 1, it has become increasingly evident that some provision ought to be made for areas, such as those you refer to in Colorado, which although they do not now qualify as areas of persistent labor surplus, the prospects for employment are not very good. Several witnesses have pointed out that we ought to recognize areas in which it is just a matter of time before they would qualify for assistance under S. 1.

I am inclined to agree that under special circumstances—Trinidad and Walsenburg appear to be areas where these circumstances exist—the area redevelopment program should be flexible enough to include them.

Faithfully yours,

PAUL.

Mr. CARROLL. Mr. President, the people of a third area bordering these two in south central Colorado have been undergoing great economic hardship over the years. This is predominantly rural Costilla County, whose economy depends chiefly on ranching, irrigated farming and—sad to say—State welfare department assistance.

Under section 5(b) of S. 1, the Administrator may designate as redevelopment areas those areas which have a large percentage of low-income farm families, relative to the Nation as a whole. Among the seven criteria are current and prospective employment opportunities; the extent of migration out of the area; and the proportion of the population receiving public assistance.

As I read the section I think it entirely possible that Costilla County can qualify.

Migration out of this historic and scenic area, where Kit Carson once commanded old Fort Garland, has been appalling. It is a direct result of lack of job opportunities. During the decade 1950–60, the population of the State of Colorado rose by 32.4 percent; but Costilla County population dropped by 30.5 percent. In the preceding decade, while Colorado population was rising by 18 percent, Costilla County population fell off by 19.5 percent.

The proportion of persons receiving public assistance is very high. An average of 570 persons per month received public assistance in fiscal 1960. That is 13.5 percent of the county population.

Unemployment is high but can only be estimated. There is no State employment department office in Costilla County. But the county figures are included in the report from the Alamosa office, which is currently 10.1 percent—far above the national average.

The most recent definitive report on Costilla County's income per capita is several years old, but conditions have not improved materially. Per capita income in Costilla County in 1956 was $576 compared with a Colorado average of $1,853 and a national average of $1,944. Thus, Costilla County income was only 31 percent of the State income per capita and only 29 percent of the national per capita income.

Farm income figures are more recent. In 1959, only 24 percent of all Colorado commercial farms showed gross sales of less than $5,000—but in Costilla County, 51 percent of all commercial farms grossed less than $5,000.

The value of farm land and buildings for Costilla County at last tabulation was only half of the statewide average. A "level of living index" compiled by the U.S. Department of Agriculture midway through the last decade put Costilla County among the lowest one-third of all counties in the Nation in such conveniences as running water, telephones and electricity. This was years ago, and while the rest of the Nation generally has raised itself since then, Costilla County has not kept pace.

Nor can these conditions be attributed to a few bad crop years or to exhausted soils or to a ne'er-do-well attitude. The soil produces wonderfully when it has water. The original settlers of Costilla County held land grants from the Kings of Spain; they were the first people of European origin to form a permanent settlement in what is now Colorado, and their first water decree dates back to 1852. Augmenting these pioneers have been hardworking farmers, ranchers, and townspeople of both Anglo-American and Japanese-American ancestry. But the people of this county for too long have had to watch some of their most promising children migrate elsewhere. They need and deserve help, and I think S. 1 holds out hope of assistance to them.

Mr. SCOTT obtained the floor.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCOTT. I am glad to yield to the majority leader.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I wonder if it would be possible to obtain both a time limitation and the ordering of the yeas and nays on the amendment to be proposed by the Senator from Pennsylvania? I ask unanimous consent that the time may be limited to 40 minutes, with 20 minutes on each side.

Mr. SCOTT. That is acceptable to me.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I promise that our side will not take more than 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none and it is so ordered.

Mr. SCOTT. I now demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I call up my amendment, in the nature of a substitute, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be not read but printed in the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That this Act be cited as the 'Area Redevelopment Act'.

"DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

"SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best interests of the United States, but that some of our communities are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment which causes hardship to many individuals and their families and detracts from the national welfare by wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the Federal Government in cooperation with the States, should help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment to take effective steps in planning and financing their economic development; that Federal assistance should enable communities to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diversified local economies; and that new employment opportunities should be created rather than merely transferred from one community to another.

"AREA ECONOMIC REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 3. To assist areas in the United States designated hereinafter as redevelopment areas, the Secretary of Commerce is authorized to take such action as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act. To assist the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the 'Secretary'), there is hereby established within the Department of Commerce an Area Economic Redevelopment Administration which shall be headed by an Administrator who shall be appointed by the Secretary and who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that received by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Administrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act as the Secretary may assign.

"ADVISORY BOARD

"SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is authorized to be created an Area Economic Redevelopment Advisory Board (hereinafter referred to as the 'Board'), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: The Secretary, as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Labor; and Treasury; the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and of the Small Business Administration. The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

"(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and which shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under this Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year.

"(c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call together and confer with representatives of the various parties in interest from any industry in which employment has dropped substantially over an extended period of years and which in consequence has been a primary source of high levels of unemployment in several areas designated by the Secretary as redevelopment areas. Conferences convened under authority of this subsection shall consider with and recommend to the Secretary plans and programs with special reference to any such industry to carry out the purposes of this Act.

"REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

"SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as 'industrial redevelopment areas' those industrial areas within the United States in which he determines that there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. There shall be included among the areas so designated any industrial area—

"(1) where the rate of unemployment, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and less averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in (2) below; and

"(2) where the annual average rate of unemployment has been at least—

"(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

"(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years.

"(b) The Secretary shall also designate as 'rural redevelopment areas' those rural areas within the United States in which he determines that there exist the largest number and percentage of low-income families, and a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are to the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, and the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment.

"(c) In making the determinations provided for in this section, the Secretary shall be guided, but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies made, and information and data collected or compiled, by (1) departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, (2) State and local governments, (3) universities and land-grant colleges, and (4) private organizations.

"(d) Upon the request of the Secretary, the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Director of the Bureau of the Census are respectively authorized to conduct such special studies, obtain such information and compile and furnish to the Secretary such data as the Secretary may deem necessary or proper to enable him to make the determinations provided for in this section. The Secretary shall reimburse, out of any funds appropriated to carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers for any expenditures incurred by them under this section.

"(e) As used in this Act, the term 'redevelopment area' refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Secretary as an industrial redevelopment area or a rural redevelopment area, and may include one or more counties, or one or more municipalities, or a part of a county or municipality.

"LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS

"SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (including immediate participations therein) to aid in financing any project for the purchase or development of land and facilities for industrial usage, for the construction of new factory buildings, for rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied factory buildings, or for the alteration, conversion, or enlargement of any existing buildings for industrial use. Such financial assistance shall not be extended for working capital, for purchases of machinery or equipment, or to assist establishments relocating from one area to another when such assistance will result in substantial detriment to the area of original location by increasing unemployment.

"(b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, subject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

"(1) The total amount of loans and loan participations (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding at any one time under this section (A) with respect to projects in industrial redevelopment areas shall not exceed $100,000,000, and (B) with respect to projects in rural redevelopment areas shall not exceed $50,000,000;

"(2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants, both private and public, approved by the State (or any agency or instrumentality thereof concerned with problems of economic development) in which the project to be financed shall be located;

"(3) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms;

"(4) No loan shall be made unless it is determined that an immediate participation is not available;

"(5) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there is a reasonable assurance of repayment;

"(6) Subject to section 11(5) of this Act, no loan, including renewals or extension thereof may be made hereunder for a period exceeding thirty years and no evidences of indebtedness maturing more than thirty years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor, or if extension or renewal for additional periods, not to exceed, however, a total of ten years, will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loan or of such evidence of indebtedness;

"(7) Such assistance shall not exceed 50 per centum of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or developing land and facilities, and of constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building or buildings of the particular project and shall among others, be on the following conditions:

"(A) That other funds are available in an amount which, together with the assistance provided hereunder, shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

"(B) That not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by a community or area organization, as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the financial assistance hereunder has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing the financial assistance hereunder; and

"(C) That in making any loan under this section with respect to an industrial redevelopment area, the Secretary shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made shall be supplied by nongovernmental sources.

"(8) No such assistance shall be extended unless there shall be submitted and approved by the Secretary an overall program for the economic development of the area, and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the State or local political subdivision in which the project would be located.

"(c) Of the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 8 of this Act, not more than $100,000,000 shall be deposited in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of making loans under this section with respect to projects in industrial redevelopment areas, and not more than $50,000,000 shall be deposited in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of making loans under this section with respect to projects in rural redevelopment areas.

"LOANS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

"SEC. 7. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, or private or public organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase or development of land for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, improvement of public facilities within any redevelopment area, if he finds that—

"(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in the redevelopment area wherein such project is, or will be, located, and will tend to improve the opportunities in such area for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities;

"(2) the funds requested for such project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms;

"(3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of other available funds for such projects are adequate to insure the completion thereof; and

"(4) there is a reasonable expectation of repayment.

"(b) No loan under this section shall be for an amount in excess of 50 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made. Subject to section 11 (5), the maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than thirty years after the date such loan is made.

"(c) In making any loan under this section, the Secretary shall require that not less than 10 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made shall be supplied by the State (including any political subdivision thereof) within which such project is to be located as equity capital, or as a loan repayable only after the financial assistance provided under this section has been repaid in full, and, if such loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate to the lien or liens securing the financial assistance provided under this section. In determining the amount of participation required under this subsection with respect to any particular project, the Secretary shall give consideration to the financial condition of the State or local government and to the per capita income of the residents of the redevelopment area, within which such project is to be located.

"(d) Of the funds authorized to be appropriated under section 8 of this Act not more than $50,000,000 shall be deposited in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of making loans under this section.

"APPROPRIATION FOR LOANS

"SEC. 8. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $200,000,000 to provide funds for loans under this Act.

"INFORMATION

"SEC. 9. The Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas. The Secretary shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

"TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 10. In carrying out his duties under this Act, the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under this Act. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs of, and development potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secretary through members of his staff or through the employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations, or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such purpose. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purposes of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,000,000 annually.

"POWERS OF SECRETARY

"SEC. 11. In performing his duties under this Act, the Secretary is authorized to—

"(1) adopt, alter, and use a seal, which shall be judicially noticed; and subject to the civil service and classification laws, select, employ, appoint, and fix the compensation of such officers, employees, attorneys, and agents as shall be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act, and define their authority and duties, provide bonds for them in such amounts as the Secretary shall determine, and pay the costs of qualification of certain of them as notaries public;

"(2) hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, and take such testimony, as he may deem advisable;

"(3) request directly from any executive department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, independent establishment, or instrumentality information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics needed to carry out the purposes of this Act; and each department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, establishment, or instrumentality is authorized to furnish such information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics directly to the Secretary;

"(4) under regulations prescribed by him, assign or sell at public or private sale, or otherwise dispose of for cash or credit, in his discretion and upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any evidence of debt, contract, claim, personal property, or security assigned to or held by him in connection with the payment of loans made under this Act, and collect or compromise all obligations assigned to or held by him in connection with the payment of such loans until such time as such obligations may be referred to the Attorney General for suit or collection;

"(5) further extend the maturity of or renew any loan made under this Act, beyond the periods stated in such loan or in this Act, for additional periods not to exceed ten years, if such extension or renewal will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loan;

"(6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, modernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any real or personal property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by him in connection with the payment of loans made under this Act;

"(7) pursue to final collection, by way of compromise or other administrative action, prior to reference to the Attorney General, all claims against third parties assigned to him in connection with loans made under this Act. This shall include authority to obtain deficiency judgments or otherwise as in the case of mortgages assigned to the Secretary. Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (41 U.S.C. 5), shall not apply to any contract of hazard insurance or to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on account of property obtained by the Secretary as a result of loans made under this Act if the premium therefor or the amount thereof does not exceed $1,000. The power to convey and to execute in the name of the Secretary deeds of conveyance, deed of release, assignments and satisfactions of mortgages, and any other written instrument relating to real or personal property or any interest therein acquired by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of this Act may be exercised by the Secretary or by any officer or agent appointed by him for that purpose without the execution of any express delegation of power or power of attorney;

"(8) acquire, in any lawful manner, any property (real, personal, or mixed, tangible or intangible), whenever deemed necessary or appropriate to the conduct of the activities authorized in sections 6 and 7 of this Act;

"(9) in addition to any powers, functions, privileges, and immunities otherwise vested in him, take any and all actions, including the procurement of the services of attorneys by contract, determined by him to be necessary or desirable in making, servicing, compromising, modifying, liquidating, or otherwise administratively dealing with or realizing on loans made under this Act;

"(10) to such an extent as he finds necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act, procure the temporary (not in excess of six months) service of experts or consultants or organizations thereof, including stenographic reporting services, by contract or appointment, and in such cases such service shall be without regard to the civil service and classifications law, and, except in the case of stenographic reporting services by organizations, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5); any individual so employed may be compensated at a rate not in excess of $75 per diem, and, while such individual is away from his home or regular place of business, he may be allowed transportation and not to exceed $15 per diem in lieu of subsistence and other expenses; and

"(11) establish such rules, regulations, and procedures as he may deem appropriate in carrying out the provisions of this Act.

"TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 12. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall be granted under this Act with respect to such area and, for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secretary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment area. The Secretary shall keep the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

"PROCUREMENT BY GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

"SEC. 13. Each department, agency, or other instrumentality of the Federal Government engaged in the procurement of any supplies or services for use by or on behalf of the United States shall—

"(1) use its best efforts to award negotiated procurement contracts to contractors located within redevelopment areas to the extent procurement objectives will permit;

"(2) where deemed appropriate, set aside portions of procurements for negotiation exclusively with firms located in redevelopment areas, if a substantial proportion of production on such negotiated contracts will be performed within redevelopment areas and if such firms will contract for such portions of the procurement at prices no higher than those paid on the balance of such procurements;

"(3) where deemed appropriate and consistent with procurement objectives, after the expiration of the period during which bids for any procurement are permitted to be submitted and if the lowest of such bids was submitted by a firm in an area other than a redevelopment area, negotiate with firms in redevelopment areas with a view to ascertaining whether any such firm will furnish the services or supplies with respect to which bids were theretofore submitted for an amount equal to, or less than, the amount of the lowest bid theretofore submitted for the furnishing of such services or supplies, and if such firm can be found, award the contract for the furnishing of such services or supplies to such firm;

"(4) assure that firms in redevelopment areas which are on appropriate bidders' lists will be given the opportunity to submit bids or proposals on all procurements for which they are qualified and on which small business joint determinations have not been made, but whenever the number of firms on a bidders' list is exclusive, there shall be included a representative number of firms from redevelopment areas;

"(5) in the event of tie bids on offers on any procurement, award the contract to the firm located in a redevelopment area, other things being equal;

"(6) encourage prime contractors to award subcontracts to firms in redevelopment areas; and

"(7) cooperate with other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government in achieving the objectives set out in this subsection.

"URBAN RENEWAL

"SEC. 14. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"INDUSTRIAL REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA ECONOMIC REDEVELOPMENT ACT

"SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Housing and Home Finance Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (in this section referred to as a "municipality") is situated in an area designated under section 5(a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as an industrial redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economic development, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

"(b) The Housing and Home Finance Administrator may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirements or limitations of section 110(c) that the project area be clearly predominantly residential in character or that it be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses; but no such assistance shall be provided in any area if such Administrator determines that it will assist in relocating business operations from one area to another when such assistance will result in substantial detriment to the area of original location by increasing unemployment.

"(c) Financial assistance under this section may be provided for any project involving a project area including primarily industrial or commercial structure suitable for rehabilitation under the urban renewal plan for the area.

"(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, a contract for financial assistance under this section may include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the project area designated under the urban renewal plan for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or nonprofit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land under this section shall be made at not less than its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And provided further, That the purchasers from or lessees of such public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obligations imposed under section 105(b).

"(e) Following the execution of any contract for financial assistance under this section with respect to any project, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him under this section for the completion of such project, notwithstanding any determination made after the execution of such contract that the area in which the project is located may no longer be an industrial redevelopment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

"(f) Not more than 10 per centum of the funds authorized for loans under section 102 or for capital grants under section 103 shall be available to provide financial assistance under this section."

"URBAN PLANNING GRANTS

"Sec. 15. Paragraph (3) of section 701(a) of the Housing Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after 'counties which' the following: '(A) are situated in areas designated by the Secretary of Commerce under section 5(a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as industrial redevelopment areas, or (B)'.

"VOCATIONAL TRAINING

"Sec. 16. (a) The Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the Secretary of Commerce, shall determine the vocational training or retraining needs of unemployed individuals residing in redevelopment areas and shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and with existing State and local agencies and officials in charge of existing programs relating to vocational training and retraining for the purpose of assuring that the facilities and services of such agencies are made fully available to such individuals.

"(b) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that additional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet the vocational training or retraining needs of such individuals, he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, through the Commissioner of Education, shall provide assistance, including financial assistance when necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational agency in the provision of such additional facilities or services. If the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare finds that the State vocational educational agency is unable to provide the facilities and services needed, he may, after consultation with such agency, provide for the same by agreement or contract with public or private educational institutions: Provided, That the Secretary of Labor shall arrange to provide any necessary technical assistance for setting up apprenticeship, journeyman, and other job training needed in the locality.

"RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

"Sec. 17. (a) The Secretary of Labor in consultation with the Secretary of Commerce shall, on behalf of the United States, enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment areas are located, under which the Secretary of Labor shall make payments to such States for the purpose of enabling such States, as agents of the United States, to make weekly retraining payments to unemployed individuals residing within such redevelopment areas who are not entitled to unemployment compensation (either because their unemployment compensation benefits have been exhausted or because they were not insured for such compensation) and who have been certified by the Secretary of Labor to be undergoing vocational training or retraining under section 16 of this Act. Such payments shall be made only during the period the individual is receiving vocational training or retraining under section 16 of this Act, but not in any event to exceed sixteen weeks, and the amounts of such payments shall be equal to the amount of the average weekly unemployment compensation payment payable in the State making such payments.

"(b) The Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Commerce shall jointly prescribe such rules and regulations as they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(c) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $10,000,000, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"PREVAILING RATE OF WAGE AND FORTY-HOUR WEEK

"Sec. 18. The Secretary shall take such action as may be necessary to insure that all laborers and mechanics employed by contractors or subcontractors on projects undertaken by public applicants assisted under this Act (1) shall be paid wages at rates no less than those prevailing on the same type of work on similar construction in the immediate locality as determined by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Act of August 30, 1935 (Davis-Bacon Act), and (2) shall be employed not more than forty hours in any one week unless the employee receives wages for his employment in excess of the hours specified above at a rate not less than one and one-half times the regular rate at which he is employed.

"PENALTIES

"Sec. 19. (a) Whoever makes any statement knowing it to be false, or whoever willfully overvalues any security, for the purpose of obtaining for himself or for any applicant any loan, or extension thereof by renewal, deferment of action, or otherwise, or the acceptance, release, or substitution of security thereof, or for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of the Secretary, or for the purpose of obtaining money, property, or anything of value, under this title, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than five years, or both.

"(b) The Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States, or any of their duly authorized representatives, shall have access for the purpose of audit and examination to any books, documents, papers, and records of the recipient that are pertinent to assistance received under section 6 or 7 of this Act."

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, my amendment was introduced originally in the form of a bill. Its purpose is to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically depressed areas. My bill is similar to the administration bill, referred to as the Douglas bill, in its criteria and in a number of other features.

It differs in several features which I shall mention. I shall address myself first to the fact that my bill, originally introduced as S. 6, on the first day of the session, shortly after the introduction of S. 1, contained the provision that this program should be administered under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce.

While there has been much discussion since then with respect to separate agencies, with an administrator whose nomination would be confirmed by the Senate, and so forth, I am very happy that S. 1, the pending bill, now contains a provision which was originally suggested by me on the first day of the session, for administration under the Secretary of Commerce. The bill varies in several particulars. I shall mention the major ones now.

The private projects authorized in the bill as loans are the same in amount, although there is no limitation in my amendment as to the amount to be used in the first year. The private projects for rural areas under S. 1 are $100 million; under my bill, one-half of that. For public facilities, under S. 1, $100 million; under my bill, one-half of that. Grants for public facilities, $4 million, as distinguished from $10 million in the first year and a $75 million total in S. 1.

Technical assistance, $10 million. Retraining and subsistence payments, $10 million.

The loans for public facilities under S. 1 are $100 million on the first year's limitation; under my bill, the amount would be $50 million.

The maximum Federal participation under S. 1, 65 percent subordinate to other loans; under my bill, 50 percent.

The minimum State and local participation is the same in both bills—10 percent.

The maximum period of loan is 40 years, or 50 years, if extended, under S. 1; 30 years, or 40 years, if extended, under my bill.

There is very little difference in the amount of technical assistance. S. 1 provides $4,500,000 annually; my bill provides $4 million.

The provision for financing in my bill is by direct appropriations rather than through Treasury financing or so-called backdoor financing.

I believe that substantially states the major differences. My thought in introducing my bill in these amounts and in these terms is that it is more adequate than the bill proposed by the former administration. On that bill, as is well known, I voted to override the veto of the then President. I believe the amount contained in that bill was and is inadequate.

I believe, furthermore, that the approach contained in my bill presents a middle approach; namely, that the amount involved should be reasonable as to each item. It is an amount which might reasonably be expected to be used. It is an amount which has been calculated after much consultation with persons or representatives of agencies located in areas of chronic unemployment. Such areas exist in my State, particularly in the anthracite and bituminous regions, as well as in other areas, such as Erie and including parts of southeastern and southwestern Pennsylvania.

It will be recalled that the bill passed by the other body in the last session was in the amount of $253 million, and that amount, approximately, was, I believe, accepted by this body. That is the bill which was sent to the President and vetoed by him, and the veto was not overridden. That amount is considerably closer to the amount proposed by my amendment than the amount represented in S. 1.

I submit the reasonable possibility that the other body is much more likely to come within shooting distance of my proposal than it is of the full amount requested under S. 1.

In any event, aid to areas of chronic labor distress is greatly needed. It is important to put people back to work. It is important to get a bill to help communities which have tried for so long and with such difficulty to lift themselves by their own bootstraps; which have raised money out of the pockets of individuals still working; out of their employers; and from civic bodies which have provided, and are continuing to provide, as much as they can through individual and group initiative. These communities have received some help from the State, even though the State has not complied with all the promises made by the present and previous State administrations as to what would be done by them.

In some communities in Pennsylvania, the actual rate of unemployment is deceptive because a high percentage of women are working in the small clothing factories and in small business enterprises, while the percentage of unemployment among the men of those communities is at times well over 50 percent. The result is that we see in those communities men standing around in the village squares, disconsolate, or doing the shopping or babysitting, while the women support the families as the sole breadwinners. This is shameful and shocking to the dignity and pride of our people. It is something which contributes greatly to the difficulties with which these communities are faced. Among other considerations, it is something which tends to discourage industry from locating in those communities.

Mr. President, it is my honest belief that the passage of the proposed legislation will greatly help to alleviate such conditions. If my own amendment shall not be agreed to, I intend to support S. 1, although I believe my amendment is a better approach to solving the problem.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. SCOTT. I yield.

Mr. BUSH. Would the Senator consider modifying his amendment to include therein the section at the end of the bill, which was adopted on S. 1, and which was my amendment providing for the termination of the proposed legislation as of June 30, 1965?

Mr. SCOTT. I will accept such an amendment.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my amendment may be considered as being modified in that manner.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BUSH. Second, I ask the Senator from Pennsylvania if he will accept the so-called antipirating amendment which appears in S. 1 at the top of page 46, lines 1 through 8. This is an amendment which is also adopted on S. 1 and has been generally agreed to by almost all Senators who have considered it.

Mr. SCOTT. We in the affected areas do not want to take bread out of the mouths of any employee or any family in the United States. We do not want to transfer employment merely to create unemployment. We want to create new jobs and to keep them filled. Therefore, I will accept the amendment.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment referred to by the Senator from Connecticut may be incorporated as a part of my amendment offered in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Reserving the right to object, I should like the Senator from Connecticut to know that I am according him a privilege which he accorded me after considerable deliberation on yesterday, but I ask that I be given unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. BUSH. I appreciate the Senator's courtesy very much, indeed. I was glad to accord him that courtesy yesterday. I appreciate his reciprocal interest in that respect.

Mr. President, I was about to say that the language of the antipirating amendment should appear in the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania on page 7, after line 11. I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I accept the suggestion, and I ask unanimous consent that the modification may so appear in my amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I now yield 5 minutes to the distinguished senior Senator from New York.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I intend to support the Scott amendment in the nature of a substitute because I think it does everything that S. 1 does, and I think it has one additional strength which commends itself to me very much: It cuts the provision for the so-called rural areas from $100 million to $50 million. I had intended to offer such an amendment, but I think it is just as well incorporated in, and it is in essence, the Scott substitute. So I think that by supporting the Scott amendment in the nature of a substitute, that purpose is adequately served by laying it before the Senate.

The reason why I say that the agricultural or rural area appropriation is twice as great as it really ought to be is that a rural development program is now working in the Department of Agriculture. The most intelligent thing to do would be simply to extend and continue that; that is, to secure more money, if we wish, by appropriation and to let it go on. It is doing very well. Perhaps its only "curse" is that it was developed under the preceding administration. That commends it to me, and I think would commend it to many Senators on this side of the aisle. We have heard about Senators, including myself, being parochial in the course of debate. That is understandable; it is not received invariably at all.

However, I do not believe anyone else ought to be parochial either, with respect to continuing a good program. This program will be continued in effect because we are allowing the Secretary of Commerce, under the bill, to delegate any part of it to the Secretary of Agriculture. He has already testified that he will delegate this particular aspect of the program to the Department of Agriculture. But what is not cured in S. 1 is the fact that rural areas which are found to be eligible because of their low income have $100 million allocated to them to participate in the program.

But, in addition, if they qualify under other sections of the bill with relation to a continuous period of unemployment, they may qualify under those, as well.

In short, under Senate bill 1, the rural areas, unlike the urban areas, can qualify not only for their own $100 million, but also for the $100 million—which is little enough—allocated to the urban areas. Mr. President, I do not think that is right.

It is for that reason that I discussed the matter in the committee—although I did not see any point in offering the amendment there, because it was obvious what its fate there would be; and it is likewise for that reason that I now support the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SCOTT], because on that point his amendment is eminently sound.

Much has been said about rural development. Thirty States now have such projects. The authority for the program exists under the Agricultural Service Extension Act of 1955. In addition, the Small Business Administration, in its report, demonstrates that it, too, has helped very materially—having made $95 million of loans, itself, in furtherance of this program, also.

It has been widely hailed as an effective and successful program; and I believe that a sum of $50 million is adequate, considering the fact that these areas can qualify not only as rural areas of low income, but also as areas with persistent underemployment.

Therefore, I hope very much that the Scott substitute, which puts this matter before us in a consolidated way, as a comprehensive plan, will be adopted. I think it does precisely what Senate bill 1 does, in its practical thrust in this area; and it has the advantage of reducing the size of this rural area fund, which I believe is twice as large as it should be.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. President, will my colleague yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Moss in the chair). Does the Senator from New York yield to his colleague?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield.

Mr. KEATING. I wish to join in the remarks my distinguished colleague has made in regard to preferring the Scott substitute to Senate bill 1, as it now is before us.

I was a cosponsor, with the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania, of this bill, originally. But I believe he has devised a much sounder program, and I shall certainly support his amendment.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of the time available to me.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I thank both of the distinguished Senators from New York for their support.

I shall reserve the remainder of the time available to me until I address a question to the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS]: Does he expect to use any time at this point?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I should like to yield my 5 minutes to the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLARK].

Mr. SCOTT. Before doing so, then, let me say—and then I shall defer to the Senator from Illinois—that I desire to point out that my bill or rather, my amendment in the nature of a substitute, contains one provision which it did not contain in the previous session of Congress; namely, there is now in the bill a provision for retaining subsistence payments—a provision which I believe improves the bill, which I have offered as an amendment.

Mr. President, for the moment I reserve the remainder of the time available to me.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The senior Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I oppose, with regret, the amendment of my colleague from Pennsylvania. So does the Governor of Pennsylvania. So do the officials of our State government who are charged with administration of the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Association program and with the handling of the problem of unemployment relief in our Commonwealth.

The pending amendment is a watered-down version of the Douglas bill which we are presently engaged in considering. The pending amendment is a stepped-up version of the Dirksen substitute which the Senate rejected, earlier this afternoon, by a very large vote.

The difficulty with my colleague's amendment is that it is not only too little, but it also comes too late. It comes at a time when I am confident that a majority of the Members of the Senate have determined that they will support the committee bill.

I think it quite unfair to cut in half the loans for rural areas. My State is largely an industrial State, so it will not benefit from the rural area provision. Nevertheless, I believe we should take a national view of this problem; and any one who has studied the record made before the committee must conclude that the need of the rural areas is as great as the need of the urban areas.

The amendment calls for financing by appropriations—a proposal which on yesterday was rejected by the Senate by a vote of 49 to 45; and I do not believe we should now include a provision which the Senate rejected on yesterday.

This amendment would eliminate all grants for public facilities, and would drastically reduce the amount of loans for public utilities.

I wonder what my colleague thinks the effect of his amendment would be on a community such as Barren Hill, Pa., a community with a population of 1,000, a community where all those who formerly had jobs are now on relief. Does my colleague think those persons, now unemployed and on relief, will be able to finance loans in an amount sufficient to bring in the kind of industry which would be able to take those unemployed coal miners out of their misery and return them to payrolls?

I could talk at length in pointing out the inadequacies of the proposed substitute. One can say it is substantially better than the Eisenhower bill. However, certainly it is substantially worse than the administration bill.

Thus, Mr. President, I hope the amendment will be rejected by the Senate.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I have no further request for time.

I shall conclude by observing that perhaps the very moderation of the approach I propose is evidenced by the fact that my colleague, the senior Senator from Pennsylvania, feels that it is at the same time both stepped-up and watered down.

Incidentally, Mr. President, such a remark provides a very good test of whether such an amendment, proposed in a spirit of moderation, is needed. On the other hand, being a realist, and realizing that those of us on this side of the aisle are outnumbered 2 to 1, and in view of the fact that we already have had an indication of what is likely to be the vote on what I regard as a very sagacious solution of the problem, I shall await the vote here in the Senate.

As for Barren Hill, which my senior colleague has said has a population of 1,000, all unemployed, that community has actually experienced worsening conditions under two successive administrations in Pennsylvania, both of which firmly promised the people of Pennsylvania that they would solve the distressed area problem. Both those administrations assured those who were unemployed that something would be done. However, the lives and the fortunes of the people of Barren Hill have become more barren with the passing of each year of unfulfilled promises by two State administrations; and I do not quite understand how either bill would automatically provide much employment to Barren Hill, unless industry goes there.

I have some question as to the ultimate, overall effectiveness of this entire approach. I support it because I believe we must try our best to provide the aid which is needed in these communities, which are so badly stricken.

But we shall better be able to judge the success of this program about a year after it has been in operation; and then I hope my caveat will be noted; namely, that perhaps not all of the things that have been promised by Senators on both sides of the aisle who are in support of the various bills and amendments will then have been achieved, perhaps because they are not possible of achievement, perhaps because they are not well administered, perhaps because industry cannot successfully be lured into these areas.

I sincerely hope that is not correct. I sincerely hope the bill will work effectively. I hope the Administrator who is appointed will be a person experienced in problems of distressed areas and chronic unemployment. I hope such an Administrator will not be plucked from the nightclubs of New York City or from the gay white lights of Broadway, but that the Administrator to be selected will be one who, by reason of his experience, his wisdom, his compassion, and his determination to accomplish the job, will satisfy the people of my Commonwealth and of the other communities that the appointment is indeed in the hands of a man who plans to get things done, to get the unemployed back to work, to relieve chronic unemployment. I certainly wish success to the measure which will ultimately go to the President.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I have listened with interest to the characteristic speech of the Senator from Pennsylvania in which he demonstrates that, with less money, he will give more relief. And since the Senator from Pennsylvania has been characterizing himself as a moderate, I hope he will forgive me if I say he is a "split the difference" Senator. I have proposed the inadequate sum of $394 million. The administration has proposed $75 million. Then the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SCOTT] proposes $214 million—splitting the difference between the two.

In other words, this is a "split the difference" proposal. If the bill cannot be defeated entirely, appropriate only $75 million. If the $75 million proposal is defeated, then cut the amount down to $214 million.

The $394 million proposed is in itself inadequate. Let us not cut it by a single cent, and let us vote down the amendment by an overwhelming vote.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Yes, on the Senator's time.

Mr. SCOTT. Since the Senator has characterized me—

Mr. DOUGLAS. As a "split the difference" Senator.

Mr. SCOTT. I heard the Senator quite accurately the first time. I would much rather be a "split-the-difference" Senator than a "split the hair" Senator or a "split the Treasury" Senator.

The Senator from Illinois knows quite well that I favor this type of legislation. I am trying to secure the best legislation I can. And if the Senator from Illinois thinks a Senator is in error in trying to save the people of this country a little money, I suggest to the Senator from Illinois that it is an error which the Senator from Illinois has carefully avoided falling into.

Mr. DOUGLAS. The Senator reminds me of what Mr. Dooley said of Theodore Roosevelt's attack on the trusts:

I am against the trusts; I will smash them; but, on the other hand, not so fast.

[Laughter.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield back his remaining time?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield back my remaining time, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has been yielded back.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SCOTT] in the nature of a substitute. On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I announce that the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT], and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON], are absent on official business.

I also announce that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. MCCARTHY], are absent because of illness.

I further announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. BLAKLEY], is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. MCCARTHY], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT], and the Senator from Texas [Mr. BLAKLEY] would each vote "nay."

Mr. KUCHEL. I announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ALLOTT] is absent because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROUTY] is absent by leave of the Senate because of illness.

The Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG] are detained on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 31, nays 57, as follows:

So Mr. SCOTT's amendment in the nature of a substitute for the committee amendment was rejected.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I move that the vote by which the amendment was rejected be reconsidered.

Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, I move that that motion be laid on the table.

The motion to lay on the table the motion to reconsider was agreed to.

Mr. BENNETT obtained the floor.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield?

Mr. BENNETT. I yield.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I believe this is a good time to ask for the yeas and nays on final passage of the bill.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield to me 2 minutes in order that I may present two amendments?

Mr. BENNETT. The Senator from Utah is happy to accommodate the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk, and I ask that the acting majority leader give his attention as it is read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PELL in the chair). The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 44, line 4, in the committee amendment, after the comma it is proposed to insert the following: "the extent to which rural development projects have previously been located in any such area under programs administered by the Department of Agriculture."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut to the committee amendment.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I am very happy to accept the amendment.

Mr. BUSH. With that assurance, may the amendment be put to a vote?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do all Senators yield back their time?

Mr. BUSH. I yield back my time.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield back my time.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 44, line 16, in the committee amendment, before the period it is proposed to insert a colon and the following:

Provided, That not more than one such project shall be located in any one State unless the Secretary has considered such applications for assistance under this Act as may have come from the several States which apply for such assistance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, the amendment is in much better form than its progenitor, which was proposed in the committee, and which was then what I called the "Rhode Island red" amendment, because it provided aid to the farming industry of the State of Rhode Island. It did not seem to me there were many farms in Rhode Island which required such care. As I said on a previous occasion, when the present Presiding Officer was in the chair, I do not think there are many "reds" in Rhode Island anyway, and, in the second place, I do not think they need aid. But in its present form I believe the amendment is innocuous and therefore I accept it.

Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BENNETT. I yield.

Mr. PASTORE. I merely wish to make the observation that if the amendment is such a boon to the State of Rhode Island, I congratulate the manager of the bill for accepting it.

Mr. BUSH. I hope the Senator will not exclude me, the offerer of the amendment in behalf of his State, in his congratulations.

Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. BENNETT. I yield.

Mr. PASTORE. If such was the intent and motive of the distinguished Senator from Connecticut, I congratulate him also.

Mr. BUSH. I shall also accept the applause of the distinguished Senator from Illinois for the improvement of the amendment.

Mr. DOUGLAS. When the amendment was originally proposed, in a form that assured there must be one for every State, no matter whether it needed aid or not, I referred to the amendment as the "pass the biscuits pappy" amendment. In view of the changes that have been made I withdraw the statement, and if it was uttered, it was uttered in the Pickwickian sense.

Mr. BUSH. I am sure the Senator from Illinois is full of that kind of sense, and I thank him for accepting the amendments.

I yield back my time.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield back my time.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I call up my amendment 3-13-61, which I ask the clerk to state.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 43, line 1, beginning with the word "Any" it is proposed to strike out all through line 10.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Utah.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I have called up the amendment, and I wish to discuss it briefly. I shall not ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment. The record on amendments has not been too good in the past few days. However, I do have a 30-minute statement in opposition to the bill, and it seems to me I would probably save time if I attempted to cover both points while I am on my feet. So it is my intention to talk about 30 minutes on the bill itself and if my colleagues need to return to their offices in order to sign their mail, shave, or obtain some other service, I shall try to see that the vote on final passage is delayed for at least 30 minutes.

Before I begin my formal statement I should like to take a minute to comment on my personal vote on the Dirksen amendment and the Scott amendment. I voted "nay" on both amendments. I think each of them proposed an improvement in the present bill, but I think each of them contains the seeds of the faults to which, in my forthcoming statement, I will ascribe to the bill itself. So in order to be consistent, I had to vote against both proposed amendments because in effect they were simply variations of the bill.

I oppose S. 1, as I opposed S. 722 last year, and welcome the opportunity to explain why.

I do not oppose the objective of the bill, which is to solve the problem of chronic unemployment. I do not deny that the problem exists—and cries out for a solution.

I differ with the bill's supporters in a way that I think is significant. With tears and charts, they seek to prove the existence of the problem, and then take it for granted that this bill will solve it. I admit the existence of the problem, and having put this bill to the test of reason and experience, have come to the conclusion that the bill will not solve it. Because of this difference, they say I am heartless, but in return I may say they are cruel, because they raise false hopes.

Because it is easier to be emotional than to face facts, I am sure the bill will pass, but I am equally sure that it will fail, and I want the record to show why I believe this.

The problem of chronic and persistent unemployment is one of our most serious national problems, not only in terms of its bad economic effects, but particularly in terms of human suffering, and the deterioration of human values and resources. Therefore, my chief objection to the bill is that it will not produce the results its advocates anticipate, and that having passed it under the illusion that it will, we will not look further for the real answer.

The main programs in the bill will require more than a year to bring forth even the most meager results that might follow under even the most hopeful circumstances. And this delay will add frustration to the existing misery. The Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS], acknowledging that the bill's effects will be small, likes to quote the Chinese philosopher, Lao-tse, to the effect that a journey of a thousand miles begins with one step, and says this bill is that step. I am neither Chinese nor a philosopher, but I know that if that first step starts out in the wrong direction, we must travel more than the original thousand miles to reach our goal—if we ever do.

I think the step this bill takes is leading us in the wrong direction. Here are some of my reasons:

First, it fails to implement its basic objective, which in itself is inadequate, being merely to alleviate conditions of chronic and persistent unemployment and underemployment of certain economically depressed areas.

What should our basic objective be? We are not interested in alleviating unemployment. Rather, we should seek to discover the range of situations and conditions that have contributed to this chronic unemployment in order that we can develop cooperative efforts to cure them. If that is our goal, we must look at the specific problems of each community. If we do this, we may find many broad, common problems that run through the whole pattern, but in each community there will probably be a different mix and each will require a different program for a cure.

If the cure is our objective, we ought to start at the community level and reach out from there for cooperative assistance from community leaders, entrepreneurs, investors, labor leaders, educators, State and local governments, and finally, perhaps, specific existing services of the Federal Government.

But the pending bill starts with the Federal Government and reaches down. It assumes that all unemployment is alike, and can be cured with a general Federal program, regardless of the local situation or the specific cause of the distress.

It prescribes a painkiller—like aspirin—without being concerned whether the pain is caused by an incurable cancer or a hangover. And finally, the programs it offers, the painkillers it prescribes, are for the most part already available and have already been used for years. Instead of offering a great new program, we are in fact injecting Federal power and Federal taxpayers' money into programs that have been available for a long time—either from private sources or through local units of Government. And, since the problem of chronic and persistent unemployment continues, there is no reason to believe that the pending bill, which really takes no new step, will solve them now.

In fact—and this is the second proof of the wrong direction—rather than helping the situation, Federal intervention will interject new problems. What are some of these?

First, it sets up new forms of discrimination. It will increase the burden on all Federal taxpayers for the benefit of a few communities. The bill itself authorizes an expenditure of approximately $400 million, but its administrative cost under the Department of Commerce, so far as I know, has never been estimated.

Furthermore, the benefits available to depressed industrial areas under the definitions of the bill will be limited to a few States. The remaining States must contribute without sharing, and my State of Utah is one of these.

Since the criteria for rural development are not clearly spelled out, no one knows how this money will be divided.

The bill will discriminate among the unemployed themselves. This I have discussed in detail on page 57 of the committee report. Here I shall just summarize by saying that of 648,000 unemployed in the depressed areas which qualify under the bill, only about 38,500, or 1 out of 17, could get a job if this bill were completely successful. Of course, there is the further obvious discrimination that even these potential beneficiaries represent only 1 out of 136 unemployed persons in the United States.

This bill threatens our free enterprise system. It runs counter to the precepts of what is still essentially a private market mechanism, operating within a dynamic and growing economy.

The strength of the United States to a great degree is attributable to the fluidity of its resources among areas that can use them most efficiently. This has always been an essential strength of our political system—that it permitted these adjustments. And the pending bill would threaten to destroy that adjustment mechanism.

Our economy has grown strong because throughout our history the location of industrial establishments has been related to the basic economic considerations involved—good markets, availability of transportation, the labor supply, the accessibility to raw materials in the area, and the existence of a healthy business climate, and so forth. To substitute an artificially created, Government-sponsored program to induce industries to locate in areas which are intrinsically unsuited for them, purely on the ground that these areas are unable to compete on purely economic grounds, is to throw a monkey wrench into the economic machine.

Once Congress establishes the principle that the Federal Government should direct industrial expansion into selected areas, there will be powerful political pressures to fulfill the commitment to these areas.

If initial plant-location inducements do not prove adequate to carry out the commitment, greater inducements will undoubtedly be proposed to Congress. And political pressures to provide them may well be irresistible.

The bill is unnecessary because all the services it provides are already available through private sources, local governments, or existing Federal agencies in ways which are equally effective or can be made so by slight modifications.

The bill sets up four major programs:

First. Commercial and industrial loans for buildings in urban depressed areas.

Second. Commercial and industrial loans for rural areas.

Third. Public facility loans and grants.

Fourth. Vocational training and retraining.

In each case, either the program is essentially a duplication of an existing program, or it will not solve the problem which created the unemployment in the first place.

Sections 5 and 6 of the bill describe the so-called "redevelopment areas" and set forth a program under which the Federal Government will lend up to 65 percent of the capital needed to build buildings and "in case of demonstrated need" purchase machinery to aid in providing employment opportunities in the areas.

Looking at the specific provisions of the bill, I should like to comment on some of its obvious weaknesses in these programs.

1. THE CRITERIA

Criteria under the bill are set up statistically and while the bill says they must exclude "unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors," they do not do so, because they are based on a sampling statistical technique and make no attempt to analyze the kind or duration of unemployment involved. This failure is made obvious by the monthly fluctuations of the numbers, as a result of which some cities near the breaking point move in and out of eligibility.

After setting up the criteria, the bill in section 5(b) gives the Administrator the right to ignore them on a very general finding of need—which might turn out to be a political need. Section 5(b) is generally considered to be the section relating to rural areas. We do not find the word "rural" until we reach the bottom of page 43. However, section 5(b) begins:

The Administrator shall also designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas (including Indian reservations) within the United States which do not meet the requirements set forth in subsection (a) but which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment.

In my opinion, this opens the door wide to the Administrator to ignore the criteria contained in section 5(a), and permits him to include in the program almost any area.

There is another subsection of section 5 which affects this situation, and I shall comment on that a little later.

Now I should like to talk about the program.

2. THE PROGRAM

The program which the bill creates by these sections is in fact a financial subsidy or inducement to business to locate in an eligible community. The extent of this subsidy, when it is boiled down, is the possible difference between the interest rate on loans, under this bill, roughly $4\frac{3}{8}$ percent, and the cost of money through other means. On this phase of the program I have these comments:

(a) It will not create jobs. If merely building buildings would do so, we need never have any unemployment. Rather the reverse is true. Job-generating new ideas, new products, new services, and new markets come first and then the factory buildings will be built, or empty ones filled, or full ones expanded. But it is necessary, first, to have the jobs before the buildings.

(b) The program is not necessary. There was no positive testimony in the hearings to the effect that money is not available in depressed areas to finance the location of good prospects; indeed, there was much evidence to the contrary.

(c) As an economic incentive, this proposal is very weak. Money can be and has been raised by the sale of tax-free community revenue bonds at interest rates equal to or lower than those available under this bill, and there is a ready market for these bonds which can now be issued in 15 States; and, by changes in State laws, could be available everywhere. Even if we look to other private sources without the tax-exempt advantages of revenue bonds, this subsidy would be worth considerably less than 1 percent of the cost of production in manufacturing, since you are only reducing building financing cost by only one-third and these represent only 2 percent of the costs of production in manufacturing.

(d) There are between 10,000 and 15,000 private and local public agencies already working to persuade business to locate in their communities, and in 1957 they spent an estimated $30 million just on sales efforts alone.

To show how widespread this practice is, I have some samples of the literature which is now being produced to try to persuade businessmen to move into specific States or communities. So far as I know, the bill would not provide a single dollar which could be used for this purpose.

I have before me a Massachusetts book, a Pennsylvania book, and an Illinois book.

Another example is a very beautiful book prepared by the State of Kentucky, which has distressed areas.

Another magnificent book is entitled "The Immutable Images of Oklahoma." This is the kind of material which is now being prepared and distributed at a cost, including the sales effort to support it, of some $30 million a year. Yet such promotional methods have not been successful in locating industries in depressed areas in many of the States which are now spending that money.

I listened to the senior Senator from Pennsylvania argue with his junior colleague. Pennsylvania has a very excellent program, probably as good as any in the United States. The man in charge of that program testified that it was possible to persuade only 28 percent of the prospects to go into depressed areas; the other 72 percent preferred to go into areas where there was no problem of great unemployment.

The bill provides no funds for sales promotion of communities, unless the funds set up for technical assistance under section 22 can be so used. But these funds total only $4½ million for all technical assistance of all types, including sales promotion, if such does qualify. The bill is not clear on this. This is a far cry from the $30 million spent by existing development groups exclusively for this function.

(e) The $200 million for industrial loans in urban and rural areas set up by the bill is a drop in the bucket compared with what private business spends for plant and equipment without such a bill. In the recession year of 1958, this was $9 billion in manufacturing industries, and $29 billion in all industries—145 times greater than the bill proposes. Six billion dollars of this went for buildings alone in 1958, 30 times the amount proposed by the bill for this restricted purpose.

(f) But even if the $200 million were spent, it would probably be ineffectual for two reasons:

First. Several States are already offering greater inducements than this bill could create, including local tax and other concessions.

Second. Those people who work professionally in the field of selling communities as locations to industry generally agree that there are other values which are much more persuasive than subsidized rent. I obtained specific lists from 47 of the 50 States, and they are summarized on page 55 of the committee report. With respect to the cost of rent, only one placed it as high as fourth. Nearly all of the replies placed it at or near the bottom of the list and added the comment that rent was of relatively minor importance.

Yet all the bill would do would be to provide subsidized loans equal to approximately 1 percent of the total cost of manufacturing.

(g) The bill fails as an immediate program to alleviate unemployment because it takes from 9 to 18 months to locate and persuade a prospect, in addition to the time to construct the building. Many persons are hoping that as soon as the bill is passed, jobs will begin to spring up in the depressed areas. A year, perhaps 2 years, under the most favorable circumstances, will have passed before the meager effects of the bill can be felt.

(h) Because of the other programs now operating, interjection of this Federal program may have three undesirable effects:

First. It may attract only the less-desirable and more risky enterprises which have a low survival rate and create only temporary jobs. Some such mortality has happened in many depressed communities already.

Second. Since the program cannot create new jobs or increase the number of prospects, it will simply replace money which would have come from other sources without having changed a single management decision or location, and thus, taxpayers' money will be down the drain, so to speak. I feel certain that much of the support from the people in the States which already have active programs for this purpose is that they hope Federal money will come in and enable them to save some of the money which is now being spent at the State level.

But, Mr. President, even more serious than that, this measure is a first, faint step into Federalized manufacturing facilities.

Third. Since the bill sets up a new bureaucracy, the cost per job located will be very high.

(i) Section 20 of the bill requires the revelation to the public of certain basic facts about a company which applies for a loan under this bill—including the amount of the loan, its purpose, and the security offered. In the case of private loans, made from private sources, this information is kept in confidence. Few businesses with good credit would want to make their program public, just to save a fraction of the interest cost.

Turning now to the application of this proposed law to rural redevelopment areas, as found in subsection 5(b), all of the above objections apply, plus these additional criticisms.

The criteria under subsection 5(b) are so loose as to invite political pressures. Every rural community in the United States that dreams of becoming an industrial center can apply; and this is particularly true for low-income, low-cost-of-living areas in the South and in the Southwest.

Except for the loan feature, which, as I have indicated, is not very significant, the provisions of this section are closely related to the rural development program started under the Eisenhower administration in the Department of Agriculture. If that program needs beefing up, why not do so? If we have both, Gresham's law will operate, and one will be ignored.

The Senator from New York [Mr. JAVITS] has made the point that if we have two programs, one for general redevelopment areas meeting certain specified unemployment ratios, and another specifically for rural communities, the rural communities can probably claim under both, and thus have an advantage over the larger cities. This is worth considering as another weakness of this subsection.

Now we come to the third phase of the bill. Section 7 provides for $100 million in loans for public facilities for commercial and industrial purposes, and section 8 for $75 million of Federal grants for the same purposes.

The reasons why the public facility loan provisions are not necessary are, to me, obvious:

First. Most communities can issue tax-exempt bonds, general or revenue, at lower interest rates.

Second. Those who wish to do so can use the existing law under which such loans are available through the Housing and Home Finance Agency, which already has a staff set up to provide this service.

Third. If it is agreed that loans under this section would be turned over to the Housing and Home Finance Agency to administer, I would observe that if an agency has two loan programs of different values, then the most advantageous and the cheapest one will be used, and the other will be neglected. Therefore, Mr. President, why not have only one, in the first place?

Fourth. If it is argued that the bill would authorize a type of loan that the Housing and Home Finance Agency cannot now provide, then certainly it would be simpler to amend the Housing and Home Finance Agency law, rather than to make a new one.

Section 8 provides for grants for public facility projects. This breaks through into a new area of Federal handouts. Under the present law, grants are available for planning community facilities. This proposed law would make them available for actual construction of such projects, on the weak and general criterion that "there is little probability that such a project can be undertaken without the grant." Can one think of any community which could not develop a real case, under this rule—in short, that without this grant, it could not provide the service? If we ever begin on grants for public facilities, who will apply for loans? This is another serious breach in the wall that separates Washington from the local community.

This brings us to the fourth general phase, represented by sections 16 and 17. These sections involve training and retraining for new jobs, either after an industry relocates, or before. This is one area on which I think Federal leadership and participation can be helpful. But I think this program is of such great importance that it requires a bill of its own. This is an area in which the Banking and Currency Committee lacks jurisdiction. The problem of developing a program of vocational education for unemployed adults belongs to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare. It needs very serious study, in which not only the congressional committees, but also the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, the U.S. Office of Education, and the several States should participate. Some interesting pilot programs have been operating in West Virginia and Kentucky; and some excellent ideas that have grown out of that experience are contained in a brochure, written by David L. Francis, mayor of Huntington, W. Va., entitled "Solving a Critical Human Problem." I recommend its reading to every Senator, and ask that a certain section which I have marked be printed at this point in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PELL in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The excerpts from the article are as follows:

STEPS NECESSARY TO IMPLEMENT PROPOSALS FOR VOCATIONAL TRAINING IN REPORT ENTITLED "SOLVING A CRITICAL HUMAN PROBLEM"

The programs outlined by legislation now pending—bringing new industry and jobs into distressed areas—may take many months or years to reach down to the level of the man who is now actually unemployed. Therefore, outmigration on a carefully planned basis is a necessary part of this program to give immediate relief. The following four steps are necessary to fulfill such a program.

1. Counseling by employer or termination of employee's job and reference by employer to the counseling service of the U.S. Employment Service office. If the unemployed person has been without work for an extended period, the U.S. Employment Service counselor should provide aptitude tests and guidance as needed.

2. The U.S. Employment Service counselor should review the applicant's aptitude tests, determine where he is qualified to work, and then review with him the jobs available locally or elsewhere. If employment can be found locally, the problem is solved at that point. If not, the counselor should determine the financial ability of the applicant to travel to an area offering potential employment to him.

3. If the applicant cannot find a job locally or is not qualified for employment outside the area, the counselor should determine whether vocational training will properly retrain him for a job locally or to relocate in another area. If the applicant has sufficient finances to attend training school on his own, the counselor should so recommend. If not, the counselor should work out the financial assistance necessary (new legislation will be required to give this assistance), and the applicant should be encouraged to avail himself to such retraining.

4. On completion of the retraining course, counselor should again consult with applicant and provide detailed assistance in securing employment within the area or without. This may require a loan to the applicant to enable him to travel to an area of potential employment and ultimately relocate his family there.

It is recognized that capital expenditures will be required either to expand existing vocational schools or construct new ones. The pattern for such schools has already been developed in both Kentucky and West Virginia.

Such a program, handled primarily on the evening shift in vocational schools, could process several thousand unemployed workers in West Virginia and eastern Kentucky and, over a 3-year period, could eliminate at least 50 percent of the labor surplus in those States. It is doubtful that the program now in the legislative hopper could give the same results in a 6-year period, if ever.

A secondary aspect of this training program is the fact that neither West Virginia nor Kentucky is currently providing sufficient vocational training to high school students, particularly those who do not plan to attend college. As a result, these young people are graduating from high school without proper training to seek gainful employment. Thus such a program as outlined herein, when it has completed its primary objective, could be merged into an expanded training program for high school students which would better prepare them for gainful employment upon graduation from high school.

CITY OF HUNTINGTON,

Huntington, W. Va., February 9, 1961.

To Interested Parties:

Herewith is final draft of my report "Solving a Critical Human Problem," the previous draft of which was mailed to some 600 educators, legislators, businessmen, and members of the press and communications media. Many favorable editorial comments have been made on this draft, and a number of constructive suggestions received have been incorporated in this final draft.

Vocational training as a solution to unemployment is not a new idea, but has never been used in sufficient volume to more than prove it can be done. The distressed area problem has increased to the extent that corrective measures of equal size are needed.

No mention has been made as to sources of revenue to finance this program, except in one instance, because it is generally beyond the province of this study. The decision as to where financing should originate should be made within the State legislatures as well as in Washington.

If this report is to be of any use, it must be seriously considered and acted upon by both our National and State legislators. Your active support toward that end is respectfully requested.

Sincerely yours,

DAVID L. FRANCIS.

SOLVING A CRITICAL HUMAN PROBLEM—A PROPOSAL TO IMPROVE JOB OPPORTUNITIES FOR DEPRESSED AREA UNEMPLOYED IN WEST VIRGINIA AND IN EASTERN KENTUCKY

(By David L. Francis, mayor, city of Huntington, W. Va.)

INTRODUCTION

The magnitude of the West Virginia-eastern Kentucky unemployment problem is critically large and therefore requires corrective action of equal size.

Number of unemployed

	January 1961	January 1960	Increase since January 1960
West Virginia.....	85,000	60,000	25,000
Eastern Kentucky.....	45,000	40,000	5,000

Number receiving unemployment compensation, January 1961

Eastern Kentucky.....	13,000

It is to be noted that not included above are several thousand persons who have exhausted the unemployment benefits or who are on direct public assistance. The number of people receiving surplus food on a regular basis totals 300,000 in West Virginia and 175,000 in eastern Kentucky.

Out of a population of 1,860,000 West Virginia's 523,000 work force (excluding agriculture workers) has 16.5 percent unemployed (85,000). Eastern Kentucky, with a 120,000 nonagriculture workforce, has 45,000 unemployed (37 percent) out of a total population of 668,000.

There is no one single solution to the distressed area problem in our mountain States and unfortunately, most of the solutions suggested by fact-finding committees and legislators are of a pump-priming nature—such as road or other public works programs, extension of unemployment compensation, and improvement of food distribution. All of these are temporary stimulants which when turned off allow the area to drop back to its original distressed condition. Nor do they always reach down to the person who is unemployed and really needs the help. A second form of solution is the effort to bring new industries into a distressed area by such aids as special subsidies, moratoriums on depreciation rates and taxes. At best, this has proved to be slow and an uncertain process. Now conditions are so critical that it is time for a new type program to be effected.

The only really broad solution that the writer has found to provide both an immediate and long-range cure for the unemployment problem in our distressed areas is through a crash program of vocational training which would annually teach in West Virginia 15,000 and in Eastern Kentucky 10,000 unemployed workers a basic vocation that will enable them to accept jobs either within their local community or in other parts of the country. These unemployed must be made vocationally mobile so that they can properly seek employment in areas where job opportunities are available.

Such training programs are already successfully in effect in West Virginia and in Eastern Kentucky and, if expanded, they can provide a solution. These programs are not now of sufficient size or capacity to meet the problem. To date these schools have only proved that they can be a solution to the unemployment problem. Later, this report will go into detail as to what has been accomplished, and how vocational schools can be developed into a crash program to care for a large portion of our unemployed.

In summary, the vocational training program proposed herein involves four major steps, as follows:

1. In West Virginia, establish a series of major vocational training schools, such as the Huntington East High Training School, which can adequately process 1,600 unemployed students per year. We now have such schools in Parkersburg, Wheeling, Huntington, Charleston, and Welch. But additional schools or expansion of existing schools are needed in Bluefield, Beckley, Weirton, Fairmont, Martinsburg, Keyser, and Elkins.

West Virginia now has 25 satellite vocational training schools surrounding these large schools. These need expanding and still more are needed to operate in conjunction with the local high schools. These schools, because of their size, would not have the facilities and equipment of the central schools, but they would provide the high school student with his first-year familiarization courses and the unemployed with orientation and with the courses not requiring specialized equipment.

In eastern Kentucky, the plan now in operation at the Mayo State Vocational School at Paintsville would be stepped up and this central school plant expanded to process 2,000 unemployed students annually. At the same time the program for development of 10 new vocational training extension centers in strategic counties in eastern Kentucky would be accelerated. The parent schools in Hazard, Harlan, Somerset, and Ashland would, like Paintsville's, be enlarged.

Thus, to get this plan in full bloom, capital expenditures for land, buildings, and equipment would have to be appropriated immediately. The plans for this program have already been developed by the two States. This, in effect, would be a public works program of lasting value by its leaving permanent facilities to carry on this very important training.

2. Provide sufficient funds for teachers' salaries and the operation and maintenance of this crash program.

3. Arrange the curriculum of the schools so that sessions are double-shifted. During the first shift high school students would be trained as they are at present. On the evening shift, as a general practice, the older men and women would be rehabilitated and trained in a vocation. It has been proved that students are more rapidly and easily trained if they are grouped within their own age bracket. Currently the East Huntington High Trades School is training some 350 high school students on the day shift and an equal number of men and women, age 45 or over, on the evening shift.

Over a period of years records show that these vocationally trained groups have a high rate of employment. Their services are usually sought to the extent that placement bureau services are seldom needed. Even now many of these graduates are being absorbed by the labor market.

4. In the case of both the high school and unemployed adult student who cannot afford to attend school because of economic reasons, a system of scholarships, grants, and loans should be established to provide school costs and subsistence while in school. Upon graduation, if it is necessary for the student to leave the area, sufficient funds should be provided for moving and at least 1 month's subsistence in the new area where the student relocates.

THE FREE FLOW OF POPULATION

The gross loss in population for the 1950 decade far exceeds the net losses shown by the 1960 census for West Virginia and eastern Kentucky. When the natural increases are added to the totals, population actually declined 459,000 in West Virginia and 265,000 in eastern Kentucky. If large numbers of people had not been able to relocate themselves in other areas, the distressed situation would have been greatly compounded.

The citizens of these two areas have been solving their own problems by having the initiative to move to another area. Many of these workers saw the evidence of job decline or they found better job opportunities in booming areas. Many were young people who had to move because of lack of opportunities. But now jobs in other areas are more difficult to secure unless one has special qualifications. This movement of population from one area to another is as old as history and is constantly in progress.

Several observers believe that the speeding up of this outmigration from the distressed areas is the only rapid solution to labor surpluses.

A careful but rapidly expanded vocational program for both high school students and retrainable unemployed will make larger segments of our population in these areas more mobile in their job seeking and will also have the important effect of making them better trained citizens who can more easily adapt themselves into the living pattern of a new location.

WHAT THE TWO STATES ARE ACCOMPLISHING

West Virginia is currently graduating from vocational schools some 10,000 high school students, 6,000 employed students who are upgrading themselves, and about 1,500 unemployed students per year.

Eastern Kentucky is graduating from vocational schools some 3,000 high school students, 2,000 employed students who are upgrading themselves, and about 800 unemployed students per year.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS EXPECTED FROM CRASH PROGRAM

Educators in West Virginia estimate that if the vocational education expansion program as outlined below is carried out, 15,000 unemployed can be trained annually. In eastern Kentucky, if a similar program is carried out in expansion of vocational schools, 10,000 unemployed can be retrained annually for useful jobs in industry. See appendix C.

Analysis by educators reveals that nearly 50 percent of our unemployed are retrainable in vocational schools. The remainder are not eligible or interested because of such factors as a lack of basic education, physical handicaps, health, or a lack of desire for self-improvement. Existing programs in West Virginia and in eastern Kentucky for the rehabilitation of physically handicapped persons are excellent, but do need larger support to serve the number who need this help. Rehabilitation of these people, however, is not a part of this report.

On the premise of nearly 50 percent of the unemployed there are 35,000 fairly good training prospects in West Virginia and 20,000 in eastern Kentucky to be planned for. Assuming that unemployment does not increase in either State, most of this group within 3 years could be retrained and qualified for relocation, if necessary, in other areas as useful citizens gainfully employed.

An immediate start can be made with the program through the use of existing facilities. By scheduling multiple shifts, present buildings, equipment and classrooms can serve until new and expanded facilities are constructed.

The school facilities that would be constructed to care for this expanded program would continue to be used when unemployment surpluses are eliminated. Normal growth in the number of high school students taking vocational education would easily take up the expanded facilities.

FUNDS REQUIRED TO IMPLEMENT PROGRAM

Inasmuch as West Virginia has more available present facilities than does eastern Kentucky to absorb additional student load, the capital costs are slightly more for eastern Kentucky.

Purpose	West Virginia	Eastern Kentucky
Land and buildings.....	$2,200,000	$2,800,000
Equipment for new shops.....	2,750,000	3,500,000
Total capital cost.....	4,950,000	6,300,000
Annual operating costs.....	8,250,000	5,500,000

These funds are over and above that already appropriated for normal growth requirements.

West Virginia has had no recent capital funds from State money for building construction. Some growth needs and new facilities have been paid for by the counties. Equipment has been provided by diverting a small percentage of operating funds. Kentucky has a program for the next 2 years to erect new buildings throughout the State at a cost of 4 to 5 million dollars of State funds plus another half million dollars of county funds to be added to the program. The State will spend $2 million to equip these buildings. These expenditures are for normal growth requirements and do not provide in promptness or size the facilities which would be required to service large additional groups of unemployed now.

THE FINANCING OF THE UNEMPLOYED AND NEEDY HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS THROUGH VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS

Experience has proved in the past year in West Virginia that no large quantity of unemployed will take advantage of present vocational facilities unless adequate financing is provided for subsistence. It has also been brought to light that many high school students do not have sufficient funds to complete their educational program, whether vocational or high school, and these young people also require careful consideration. A procedure to provide for both of these groups is outlined below.

The area offices of Employment Security should expand their excellent counseling, aptitude testing and referral procedures to assure that all retrainable unemployed are directed to vocations that are needed and that are within the applicant's ability. The counselor would advise the unemployed of the nearest location of vocational schools and the courses available; then work out with him his financial situation. If the person is newly unemployed, a sufficient grant over and above the unemployment insurance would be provided for the duration of the course. He would also be advised of the source of surplus foods. In the case of those unemployed who are no longer drawing compensation, or who have not been eligible for compensation, a larger grant by necessity would have to be made.

There is a need to provide enough additional subsistence to assure that an unemployed family man can be able to begin and complete a course in vocational training. The unemployment benefit is not quite enough to meet this need. The pattern of the original education plan for World War II veterans appears to be applicable. School costs are paid direct to the institution and the student receives a subsistence allowance. A maximum period of 22 weeks of training is sufficient for the adult unemployed.

A maximum of $50 per week subsistence (including unemployment pay benefits) will better enable a student to complete his training. Unemployment weekly maximum payments are $30 and $37, respectively, in West Virginia and Kentucky.

The annual number of 15,000 West Virginia unemployed prospects for training, visualized in this report, would receive maximum supplemental subsistence funds as follows:

Unemployment benefit pay now averages $22 per week in West Virginia.

If all 15,000 trainees received an additional $28 per week for 22 weeks, a total of $9.2 million would be required.

For eastern Kentucky the maximum supplemental payments for 10,000 trainees would be $4.8 million annually.

In the case of the student of high school age who is without means to continue on with vocational training, a counseling service within the school system itself should be established and funds up to $550 per student provided for these people to continue with their education.

Upon graduation from the vocational training school, counseling service both within the school system and the Office of Economic Security should be available to advise the graduates of the availability of jobs in various parts of our country. If prospects of jobs can be located, loans up to $600 should be made where needed to those who do not have adequate finances for them to go and secure the job, and to transport their families to the new location. At least 1 month's subsistence should be made available in a loan form to these people so that they may become settled in the new area.

Almost every analysis of the Appalachian region's unemployed includes a statement of need for elevating the average level of education. Such an improvement, says the consensus, would upgrade an important evaluation point used by prospective industry in making a site selection and would improve the chances of the region's people to obtain employment.

Typical is the comment of Harvey S. Perloff in his article "Lagging Sectors and Regions of the American Economy." "I would put at the top of the list an intensive effort to improve education in the depressed areas, to prepare young persons for a lifetime of skilled, productive work. Compared to other governmental measures that have been proposed, public investment in education promises the greatest relative returns."

None of the previous studies, however, have come to grips with the specifics of this distressed area unemployment. Detailed plans for correction and statements of cost of what would be entailed to train these unemployed have not heretofore been presented. We submit that the current situation is sufficiently critical to demand detailed planning by legislators and action that can effectively bring this unemployment down to a minimum number. It is with this intent that the foregoing is respectfully proposed.

APPENDIX C

The specific vocational courses that would be offered unemployed adults for retraining would be determined through a collaborative plan, functioning between the Department of Vocational Education and the Office of Economic Security.

Initial screening of qualified applicants is done by Economic Security. This Office also states to the vocational educators the type of jobs that offer the best employment prospects at home or elsewhere.

Job skill demands change often. For adults, however, the educators believe that the vocations of automobile mechanics, automobile body repair, electrical repair, building trades, building custodian, stenographic work, and practical nursing offer more regular opportunity. When changes occur in the market demand for job skills, almost any combination of the following courses could be offered by the schools: automobile mechanics; automobile body repair; mine machinery repair; machine tool operator; refrigeration mechanics; power sewing machine operator; carpentry; machine shop; electrical repair; welding; upholstery; building trades; building custodian, janitorial service; shorthand, typing, bookkeeping; practical nursing.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, both this bill and Mayor Francis, in his brochure, raise the question of payments of unemployment compensation during vocational training. This proposed change in the unemployment compensation pattern would affect the laws of all the States, and in itself is in the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee, which today spent most of the time working on a bill in this area.

To summarize my point of view on these training sections, I believe they contain the only really worthwhile ideas in the bill. They deserve and require greater study, in which the States have every right to participate. I think the vocational training proposals in this bill, while worthy in objective, are premature, inadequately conceived, and beyond the jurisdiction of the Banking and Currency Committee. If the bill is passed, I hope implementations of these sections can be held up, pending completion of a full study, full consultation with the States, and the introduction of new bills which can be handled by the appropriate committees.

Mr. President, as the final part of this statement against the bill I wish to comment on several miscellaneous proposals it contains.

The bill provides for direct Treasury borrowing up to $300 million.

We have already been over that road. I join Senator ROBERTSON in believing it is unsound in principle. I am sorry that Senator ROBERTSON's amendment was not adopted.

Second. Mr. President, in my opinion the criteria are too general and the power of the administrator too great to avoid political pressures and inevitable political favoritism.

Third. Subsection 5(d) is so general that, under it, the whole United States could be designated as a redevelopment area. I know that is unlikely; but the discussion in the hearings gave evidence that the proponents of the bill were thinking in terms of vast multi-State regions which contain many prosperous communities which could become, by definition, redevelopment areas. This section is simply an amplified restatement of subsection 5(b), which virtually gives the administration even greater right to open the door wide.

Fourth. By including the words "or commercial" on line 22 of subsection 6(a), we abandoned any practical limitation on the use to which the money available under the bill might be put.

Fifth. Mr. President, with a bow to my friend the Senator from Connecticut, I state that in my opinion the anti-pirating language is better than in the original version, but there are no specific penalties that apply here, and it is still unenforceable.

Sixth. The position of the Federal Government as a creditor, as set forth in subsection 6(b) 9(D), is better than it was before the Banking Committee wrestled with it, but it is still very weak, as the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. McCLELLAN] pointed out earlier this afternoon. Uncle Sam may well end up owning a lot of secondhand empty buildings in so-called distressed areas.

Sections 14 and 15, dealing with urban renewal and urban planning grants, make this bill a strange hybrid. I do not think any member of the committee will claim to understand these sections thoroughly. To me, these sections seem to be an attempt to use the benefits under this bill to augment those available under the urban renewal program, and provide funds to those who acquire property for private commercial or industrial development under that program. This is even a greater privilege than is available in the commercial and industrial factory loan programs, where money can only be used for buildings and machinery. So far as I know, there was no testimony on these sections in the hearings and I hope they will be taken out of this bill and considered when we discuss the urban renewal program in connection with housing legislation.

I realize that is not going to be done, but I think this section of the bill should have been handled in that way.

Section 21 puts in the traditional Davis-Bacon feature, which will make it impractical, if not impossible, to use the local unemployed to help build the buildings that are supposed later to bring jobs into the community. The great "untouchable" factor in this whole problem of chronic and persistent unemployment is the role of the policies of organized labor in creating and maintaining this sad condition. I hope the new Secretary of Labor will face up to this realistically in his work with the new advisory committee on unemployment.

To summarize, to me, this is a bad bill—bad because it raises hopes that cannot be realized; bad because it ignores the real causes of trouble at the local level; bad because most of its proposed solutions duplicate existing programs; and bad because it injects the Federal Government into competition with the States, the communities, and with private citizens. The only feature of the bill which does not produce competition or overlapping is the training feature. This feature offers real hope, and I support it, but it needs more careful development through cooperation with State and Federal agencies and with committees of Congress having appropriate jurisdiction. I think this should be handled in a separate bill.

I recognize that the bill has a lot of steam behind it developed by both official administrative policy and by surcharged emotion. But the only jobs we can really count on this bill to create are in the new agency it sets up in the Department of Commerce.

In conclusion, I should like to read a brief editorial from the Wall Street Journal of March 7, 1961, which illustrates the underlying fallacy of this type of legislation:

The Census Bureau has reported that Peacock, Tex., and Eureka and Ophir, Colo., all have one thing in common: A population of zero.

These villages were turned into ghost towns when the local economic mainstay—either mine or mill—was closed down. There was no more work so everybody just packed up and left.

Well, here would seem to be a perfect case for Federal aid to depressed areas. What, after all, could be more depressed than a town without people? One might say that in such a place the standard of living had hit an all-time low.

But it needn't have turned out this way. If the former residents of these hard-hit communities had been resourceful enough to call for help from Washington instead of seeking their own new frontiers, they might still be living in Peacock, Eureka, and Ophir.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point my individual views from pages 50 through 59 of the committee report. This material backs up the statements I have made.

There being no objection, the views were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

INDIVIDUAL VIEWS OF MR. BENNETT

I do not deny the existence of serious chronic unemployment in certain areas, but I am opposed to S. 1. I have taken this position after a careful study of the hearings and of other materials relating to this problem. I am convinced that this bill is fundamentally wrong in its approach. Briefly, I am opposed to this bill because—

(1) Nothing in this bill will create new jobs. It can only hope to influence the decision to locate jobs in a particular community.

(2) The problem can be met more effectively under existing programs.

(3) This program, if adopted, will not be successful.

A. The economic inducement is too small.
B. Other factors are more appealing.

(4) This program is discriminatory and impractical.

(5) This bill threatens our free enterprise system.

1. THIS BILL WILL NOT CREATE NEW JOBS

Empty buildings will not create job opportunities. If so, why are there often both unemployed workers and empty buildings existing together in the same depressed communities? For example, the Massachusetts Department of Commerce reports the following manufacturing space available for sale or lease in areas now listed by the Labor Department as depressed:

	Square feet
Fall River.....	2, 124, 035
Lowell.....	2, 066, 483
New Bedford.....	1, 370, 056
North Adams.....	286, 029

Though it is true that empty building space is an evidence of depressed conditions, it cannot by the same token be argued that providing buildings will create jobs. The empty buildings in these Massachusetts communities are not creating jobs.

Proponents of this legislation might argue that it is new buildings businessmen want, not old buildings. Yet even available new buildings may not attract business. For example, in the following surplus labor communities in Kentucky, relatively new buildings are presently available:

	Square feet
Paducah (built in 1957).....	100, 000
Paintsville (built in 1950).....	23, 000

The following Pennsylvania surplus labor markets have available recently constructed shell buildings, built on speculation:

	Square feet
Erie.....	20, 000
Scranton.....	100, 000
Altoona.....	50, 000
Wilkes-Barre.....	50, 000
Hazleton.....	60, 000

The essence of the major provision of this bill is to provide buildings for commercial and industrial enterprises at subsidized Federal financing rates. The view that this will automatically create jobs is either naive, dishonest, or both. Job opportunities are created by the ingenuity of men and the natural growth in our economy.

The late Joseph Schumpeter, in recent years one of Harvard's most famous economists, discussed in his famous book, "The Theory of Economic Developments," that the underlying cause of broad economic growth in a society and with it job creation, is the ability to bring about innovation and technological change in products, services, and methods of production. Schumpeter took a broad view of our society, but his ideas also have specific application to the concept of job creation.

Regardless of the availability of plant sites, additional people will not be employed unless there are new ideas, new products, new markets, and entrepreneurs who are willing to risk their own personal capital and time and reputation, and that of others, in order to capitalize on these new ideas. Only then will men be hired to apply these new developments. The other alternative to new private job creation comes through normal growth in our population and from the opening up of new markets either at home or abroad.

Assuming that the basic essential conditions are present to create new jobs (and this bill will not provide these), the subsequent prerequisite to make this bill work is to encourage entrepreneurs to locate their operations in particular depressed communities. Can the bill accomplish even this task? In my opinion it cannot, and the reasons for this opinion will become clear in the material that follows.

2. THE PROBLEM CAN BE MET MORE EFFECTIVELY UNDER EXISTING PROGRAMS

Local area development already a vigorous activity: There are currently more than 14,000 State and local, public and private agencies and committees engaged in the business of attracting industry to specific localities. In addition, 111 Federal programs render services to aid local economic development. In the hearings on S. 1, I inserted in the record material developed by the Committee for Economic Development in a publication entitled "Developing the 'Little' Economies," which represented a survey of these area development programs now in operation in the United States. I will not burden the report with all of these, but, as examples, included in the list are the following:

	Number of development organizations
Publicly financed programs:
State planning and development agencies	54
State-supported industrial financing authorities	4
Municipal and county development agencies	299
University bureaus of business research, etc., that have worked in economic development	212
Privately financed programs:
Railroads conducting area development activities	83
Electric and gas utilities conducting area development activities	330
Banks conducting area development activities	144
Local chambers of commerce and boards of trade	4,842
Local industrial development groups	867
Community development corporations	1,952
State chambers of commerce	35
Area development associations	135
Private consulting firms and research organizations that have worked on subnational economic development problems	299
All others	4,980
Total, excluding Federal Government	14,125
Federal Government: U.S. Government programs affecting local economic development	111

In 1957, a total of $220 million was spent for area development efforts by the above-listed groups. Of this amount, 59 percent, or $130 million went specifically for industrial development. The objective of these expenditures was to attract new industry to individual communities.

The operations represented by these development groups are intended to get at the heart of the problem by attracting job-making business to a locality. These groups understand the strengths and weaknesses of their communities. They know how to capitalize on these strengths and at the same time are best equipped to solve their weaknesses. The Federal Government can certainly not improve, through the provisions of S. 1, on the good work of these development agencies.

Federal programs now operating to aid local industrial development effort: As already noted, there are presently 111 Federal programs which offer services to aid local development. For example, in the 85th Congress we passed the Small Business Investment Act, which provides for loans based upon private judgment with a minimum of interference from the Small Business Administration. Section 502 of that act authorizes the SBA to make loans to State and local development companies for use in assisting and attracting new business. These loans may be made for plant construction, conversion, or expansion and the construction of commercial establishments. It is true these loans are made to small business concerns throughout the Nation without regard to whether they are located in depressed areas. But by the same token such areas are not denied these funds.

With respect to the loan programs for rural areas, outlined in section 5(b) of S. 1, in the Department of Agriculture (in cooperation with other Government departments and agencies) the rural development program is designed to promote and encourage the economic development of low-income counties. The program operates through the coordinated efforts of the Department of Agriculture and other departments and agencies in the Government. The activities of the program are directed toward providing leadership and guidance to the local communities in solving their own individual problems. The Executive order setting up this program stated that the end in view is "to provide maximum State, local, and private participation and initiative in identifying and meeting local needs."

It is true that this program does not provide for Federal loans. But if lack of money is a problem, there are several existing possible sources for making financial arrangements.

Private capital for industrial or commercial building facilities can be drawn from many sources. The hearings failed to show that any community could not raise necessary capital when it had a real prospect. I am particularly impressed with what can be done with revenue bonds issued to finance industrial or commercial buildings to be leased to industry. At present, 15 States have laws permitting such issues. I have reliable information that in-

Also I would like to emphasize that each community has a different problem, and a general Federal lending program aimed at a specific type of inducement cannot have equal application in each area. Lack of money is often not the chief difficulty faced by localities. Instead, each community must be analyzed individually for its strengths and weaknesses and needs.

Section 7 of the bill provides for loans for community facilities such as sewer projects, water treatment, and other public needs. There is absolutely no need for this provision of the bill because these exact same types of loans are made by the existing Community Facilities Administration within the HHFA. There is nothing new in the context of this bill which cannot be done by the present community facility program.

The bill does state that such community facilities loans and grants shall be designed to "improve the opportunities in such areas for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities." But there is nothing under the present program which prohibits community facility loans or grants for exactly this same purpose. Even without the enactment of S. 1, every unit mentioned therein, with the exception of a private organization, can obtain a loan for the construction of public facilities under 42 U.S.C. 1492 through the Community Facilities Administration. The proposed program, therefore, would be a direct duplication of a current Government program.

Section 8 of S. 1 provides for grants for financing community facility projects. This may not duplicate the current law which limits grants for urban planning and for advanced planning of public works, rather than for financing actual construction of the project. But again, loans are available under section 7 of S. 1 for this purpose.

Private capital is available: Based on a brief analysis that I have made I can discover no inability to raise money by bonding for public facilities in depressed areas; nor has any real shortage of private capital to finance buildings, or to encourage industries to locate in depressed areas, been demonstrated by any testimony at the hearings.

I am listing below a sampling of a few public facility bond issues which have been made within the last 3 months in depressed areas, all of which were below the 4½-percent rate at which Federal money would be made available under the bill for these same programs. There are undoubtedly many other issues which have been made in depressed areas in recent months. This represents only a quick survey:

Insurance companies are anxious to invest in these revenue bonds. These issues can be made at rates comparable to what the Federal Government would charge under this bill, and these issues have the advantage of being tax exempt.

3. THIS PROGRAM, IF ADOPTED, WILL NOT BE SUCCESSFUL

This bill seeks to entice industry to locate in depressed communities by offering

Federal financing for buildings at subsidized rates to private companies or development groups. This is its chief inducement: reduced rent. Just how important is this inducement?

A. The economic inducement is too small

The cost of building occupancy for manufacturing concerns averages about 3 percent of the total cost of production. This includes direct rental payments, depreciation on buildings which are owned, taxes on the building, interest payments on debt, and repair and maintenance expenditures. These estimates were developed from corporation income tax returns for fiscal years 1958 and 1959 as summarized by the Treasury Department in its Statistics of Income.

Since this bill would offer no aid for taxes or routine maintenance and repairs, we can eliminate these items, and consider only the total annual cost of a manufacturing building which, taken alone, averages no more than 2 percent of the total cost of production. From another point of view, we may consider that the benefit of this bill is in the financing of such buildings and not in the actual cost of the building itself. How important is this?

The Federal money provided by the bill would be available at rates currently in effect on long-term Government bonds at the equivalent maturity plus one-half of 1 percent. This would be about 4½ percent. Private money can be borrowed at least at the rate of 6½ percent. This means that the Federal loans would be at rates one-third less than private rates.

Even if we assume that financing costs over the life of an industrial mortgage equal 100 percent of the original building cost, the inducement is still extremely small. Take the 2-percent figure, which represents the actual building costs and assume this to be the financing cost. Now we divide that by three, to represent a one-third reduction in financing costs, and we arrive at the final inducement under the bill. We find that the inducement is a net reduction in the costs of production of less than 1 percent, or, to be precise, 0.67 percent.

B. Other factors are more appealing

If we now compare the value of this financial inducement with the appeal of other factors which attract industry to an area, the weakness of this small ratio becomes even more obvious.

In the course of the hearings on S. 1, I asked every State development agency, or equivalent group, organized to attract industry in the respective States, to list in the general order of importance the factors which they consider are effective in attracting business to their State.

I received 47 replies. Of the 47, 4 placed the cost of rent or building occupancy in the middle of the list. Only one placed it as high as fourth. The remaining 42 replies placed cost of rent or building occupancy at or near the bottom of the list and added the comment that this was of lesser importance in comparison with other more vital factors.

It is obvious that the order of the list of factors would vary from business to business and from area to area. But, in general, the following are the factors which command the greatest attention, graded roughly according to priorities given to them by the State development agencies:

1. Markets.
2. Trained and adequate labor force.
3. Availability of raw materials.
4. Good transportation facilities and connections.
5. Low-cost fuel and power.
6. Adequate water.
7. Favorable business "climate" including both Government regulation and worker attitudes.
8. Fair tax structure.

9. Available buildings or good building sites.

10. Adequate financial sources.

The last item—availability of capital—does not necessarily mean at subsidized rates.

Most of the money provided by the bill would go for "windfall" payments: Even the staunchest advocates of this bill admit that the interest advantage for plant construction is not going to be the major factor in determining where a plant is located. Therefore, one fact is readily apparent—of the new plants which go into a depressed area, even if the bill does what it is supposed to do, only a few of those plants will go there because of the Federal interest subsidy. The rest would have gone there anyway—because of the advantages the area has for their industry.

What the percentage would be is anybody's guess. I would think that even assuming a most optimistic claim, only 1 out of every 10 could be said to have located because of the subsidy. But the other nine would qualify for the subsidy, even though it did not influence their decision.

Thus, in perhaps 90 percent of all cases, the Federal money would be nothing but a pure windfall to companies which were going to locate in those areas anyway. In these cases, the taxpayer—and the depressed area—get absolutely no return for this money. Thus, the effective amount of money we have to work with is not $200 million of Federal money for the urban and rural industrial and commercial programs but one-tenth of that, or $20 million. The rest is down the drain.

No matter how much financial inducement the Federal Government offers—even if the Federal Government offered not only to aid the financing of a building, but actually to pay the entire cost of a building and offered it to a company free—I am convinced that the other factors which I have listed would still loom more important in the businessman's eye. Only if all the others of the above factors were equal would his choice of location be significantly influenced by a Federal financial subsidy for building rent.

Even the Federal Government tends to be choosy in locating its operations. The question might be raised as to why the Federal Government did not establish a defense installation at Beckley, W. Va., or Altoona, Pa., both distressed areas. Could it be that there are more important factors to influence such locations than the fact that there is an available surplus labor force in these areas?

If the Federal Government gets into this industrial location business, it will find itself in competition with States and localities offering not only reduced rent, but tax advantages and other special inducements. Without going into the merits of such inducements, it would seem that these far outweigh any financing inducement this bill could offer. In fact, the question might simply be raised, Can the Federal Government under this bill do as much to attract industry as State governments, local governments, and local chambers of commerce and development agencies are already doing?

To the extent the bill seeks to provide commercial and industrial buildings for rural areas, as outlined in sections 5(b) and 6 of S. 1, the same criticisms apply.

4. THE LEGISLATION IS DISCRIMINATORY AND IMPRACTICAL

Just how far will the Federal money go under this legislation? Is there not a serious discrimination in favor of a few unemployed?

Testimony was given in the hearings that it requires an investment of approximately $15,000, on the average, to support one job in manufacturing. This is an average of all industries. I am aware that many jobs can be supported on a relatively small investment, but there are others that take huge investments and I have taken the average.

If we take just the urban depressed areas, of which there are 20 major areas and 83 minor areas currently qualifying under the bill, and a total unemployment of approximately 648,000, we can see just how small a part this legislation would play in reemploying these people, even, if all other arguments were laid aside and we assumed that this bill would put people back to work.

The bill provides $100 million for urban depressed areas. In manufacturing, the actual investment in buildings is 25 percent, on an average, of the total investment. (This is separate and apart from the cost of production, discussed above.) The latter includes labor costs, the cost of raw materials, etc. This bill will aid only in the investment in buildings. Thus, 25 percent of $15,000 required to support one job is a little less than $4,000. If we call it $4,000, and observe that the Federal Government will provide 65 percent of this amount, or $2,600, and divide this into $100 million, this bill would create a job potential of 38,500 workers in the urban depressed areas.

Assuming all other factors were favorable, and assuming that State and local groups would furnish the remaining 35 percent of the $4,000 necessary for investment in buildings, and also assuming that the businessman loan applicant would be willing to take care of the other three-fourths of the investment needs for machinery, equipment, inventories, and miscellaneous investment items, and also would be willing to assume the risks of the business, how much aid would this bill give?

Relating 38,500 workers to approximately 650,000 unemployed in depressed cities, we discover that only 1 out of every 17 unemployed persons in these areas could expect to be benefited by this bill. Thus, we are discriminating against 16 out of every 17 unemployed in these areas.

But this is not all of the discrimination. The approximately 650,000 unemployed in depressed areas represent only 1 out of 8 of our total unemployed in the Nation. Thus, the bill holds out hopes for only 1 out of every 136 unemployed persons in the United States, assuming all other factors were completely favorable. We can now begin to see the false hopes which will result from this bill.

If we were to cast aside all of these practical considerations and attempt to overcome this discrimination argument by spending enough Federal money to put all of the unemployed back to work (again assuming that merely building plant facilities would do the job, and assuming we make no allowance for frictional unemployment) it would cost on the basis of $15,000 per job, a total of $10 billion, of which the Federal Government would be responsible for $6.5 billion to put only the 650,000 workers in urban depressed areas back to work, and a total of $81 billion, for which Federal responsibility would be $53 billion, to put all of our 5.4 million unemployed back to work, assuming that were our ultimate goal. Of course, it is foolish to even think that our Federal budget could stand such a strain.

Besides, when we relate what this bill proposes to do with what private capital is already doing, we can again categorize this approach as being a little "drop in the bucket." For example, in 1958, the last year for which a full survey was taken, manufacturing concerns spent $9 billion in new plants and equipment, and all nonagricultural business spent $29 billion in new plants and equipment. Of this, $6 billion represented new plant investment. If we take the Federal cost of the urban and rural loan programs, totaling $200 million, and relate this to what private business spent in the recession year of 1958 for new plants, we find that private investors spent 30 times as much in 1 recession year for new buildings as this bill proposes to spend over a 2- or 3-year period. If we include private expenditures for machinery and equipment, as well as for buildings, private expenditures during the 1 year, 1958, exceed the proposal of this bill by 145 times.

To examine these private expenditures in the light of the maximum apportionment of funds which certain depressed area States might expect under this bill is to cast further doubts as to the practicality of this approach. If we relate total unemployment in the major and minor urban areas of each State qualifying for aid under this bill to the U.S. total of 648,400 unemployed in all such areas, and distribute funds on that basis, some of the more severely hit States could expect to receive amounts shown in the following tabulation. Also shown are private expenditures for manufacturing plant and equipment and estimated expenditures for all plant and equipment in the recession year 1958:

[In millions]

5. THE BILL THREATENS OUR FREE ENTERPRISE SYSTEM

Finally, assuming that a need could be proven, and assuming this approach were practical, which has not been demonstrated, the approach under this bill would still be undesirable in our free competitive society.

A basic defect of the approach of this bill is that it runs counter to the precepts of what is still essentially a private market mechanism, operating within a dynamic and growing economy.

The strength of the United States to a great degree is attributable to the fluidity of its resources among areas that can use them most efficiently. Unlike the economies of other continents, the economy of the United States has been able to distribute its resources into their most efficient uses without regard to State boundaries or regional areas. This has always been an essential strength of our political system—that it permitted these adjustments. And this bill would threaten to destroy that adjustment mechanism within our system.

Our economy has grown strong because throughout our history the location of industrial establishments has been related to the basic economic considerations involved—good markets, availability of transportation, the labor supply, the accessibility to raw materials in the area, and the existence of a healthy business climate, etc. To substitute an artificially created, Government-sponsored program to induce industries to locate in areas which are intrinsically unsuited for them, and when these areas are unable to compete on purely economic grounds, is to throw a monkey wrench into the economic machine.

Once Congress establishes the principle that the Federal Government should direct industrial expansion into selected areas, there will be powerful political pressures to fulfill the commitment to these areas.

If initial plant-location inducements do not prove adequate to carry out the commitment, greater inducements will undoubtedly be proposed to Congress. And political pressures to provide them may well be irresistible.

The time to stop a surge of Federal intervention in the field of plant location is before the principle of Federal intervention is established—not after it is established.

SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS

In summary, S. 1 will not do the jobs its authors intended.

1. Nothing in this bill will create new jobs. It can only hope to influence the decision to locate jobs in a particular community.

2. The problem can be met more effectively under existing programs.

3. This program, if adopted, will not be successful because (a) the economic inducement is too small and (b) other factors are more appealing.

4. This program is discriminatory and impractical.

5. This bill threatens our free enterprise system.

The problem in each community is individual and different and grows out of a variety of factors which businessmen will consider in deciding whether or not to locate in a specific area. The businessman is interested in the factors I have already listed. Simply to concentrate on the availability of buildings or the financing of those buildings, or on community facilities (aid for which is available in other programs) is to strain at a gnat. There are many more important factors to consider. A Federal subsidy to finance a new building or a community facility, which can very likely be provided through local efforts, is a very unimportant contribution, and will not solve the problem.

It is more important to look at the specific problems of the industry whose failure created the depressed area. And this would call for an individual analysis which can be very adequately handled by local and State organizations or the Office of Area Development of the Department of Commerce, or in the case of rural areas, by the rural development program sponsored by the Department of Agriculture. These Government groups, and those engaged in local area development, can give better hope of finding tailored solutions to the particular problems that created unemployment in the first place. This, in the final analysis, is what will give rise to new employment opportunities in depressed areas.

S. 1 will not solve our problems, and I urge the Congress to reject this legislation.

WALLACE F. BENNETT.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I should like to return now to the amendment whose introduction gave me this right to the floor. On page 43, line 1, are these words:

Any area in which a substantial part of the employment is or most recently was in an industry adversely affected by the reduction of trade barriers under section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, with respect to which the President has reported to the Congress under section 4(a) or 7(c) of the Trade Agreements Extension Act of 1951, as amended, and meeting the standards of unemployment set forth in this section shall be entitled on application to special consideration by the Administrator for designation as a redevelopment area.

My reasons for suggesting that this language be removed from the bill include three points of view.

First, many of the industries that have been adversely affected through reduction of trade barriers under the act are very much afraid that now they are going to be told, "we are not going to worry about your trade problems any more; you are going to get special consideration under the depressed areas bill." They are afraid their real problems will be swept under the rug, and that this provision will be offered as a sop, instead of a solution, which could, in fact, increase, rather than decrease, their problems.

They are also afraid that, if the bill becomes law, the Tariff Commission will be in a position to say, "Well, in a borderline case, or a case where the decision is close, let us not worry about them. They can get help under the Area Redevelopment Act."

My next objection to the language is that it establishes another program of discrimination. It provides, for instance, that areas in West Virginia which have problems concerning the coal industry are going to take second place to areas somewhere else because the latter areas have problems created by the lead-zinc trade, as is the case in my State, which problems were created by our tariff and trade policies.

Mr. President, as I said earlier, I shall not ask for a ye-and-nay vote on the amendment. I shall be satisfied with a voice vote.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks a letter from the National Wool Growers Association directed to me, dated February 27, 1961.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL WOOL GROWERS ASSOCIATION,
Salt Lake City, Utah,
February 27, 1961.

DEAR WALLACE: I am writing to you with regard to section 5(a) of the area redevelopment bill (S. 1). This section provides special consideration in area redevelopment assistance to those areas in which employment is adversely affected through closing of industries by import competition caused by reductions in our tariffs.

We are deeply concerned with the philosophy set forth in this section. It is a surrender to the idea that tariffs should be cut regardless of whether they put domestic industries out of business so long as the people thrown out of work by such liquidation are rehabilitated and trained to do some other kind of work.

Our particular concern is for our domestic woolen mills. Imports of woolen fabrics from low-wage countries such as Japan and Italy, as you know, are flooding our markets. In fact, the annual volume of wool fabric imports is over 10 times what it was prior to tariff reductions in 1948 and the volume continues to grow. Many of our woolen mills have gone out of business largely because of imports. If the remainder are liquidated, there will be no customers left for wool grown by our domestic producers. We have no other market.

The Trade Agreements Act contains provisions under the escape clause for protection of domestic industries from the devastating effects of foreign competition caused by tariff reductions. The apparent intent of this section of the bill is to replace the positive protective measure of the Trade Agreements Act with Government assistance to areas adversely affected by unrestricted imports. We are unalterably opposed to this principle and would appreciate your assistance in having it deleted from the bill.

Yours sincerely,
EDWIN E. MARSH, Executive Secretary.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, unless there are questions, I am happy to yield the floor.

Mr. WILLIAMS of New Jersey. Mr. President, before the Senator yields the floor, will he yield for a question?

Mr. BENNETT. Yes.

Mr. WILLIAMS of New Jersey. I wonder if the Senator will agree that there are areas in our country where industries have been adversely affected by international trade policies.

Mr. BENNETT. There are many in my State, and I am sure there are many in the State of New Jersey, from which the Senator comes.

Mr. WILLIAMS of New Jersey. Will the Senator agree, in view of the fact that the adverse effect is the direct result of a national policy, our Federal Government should show an interest and a concern and try to find ways to relieve the distress?

Mr. BENNETT. But the proposal furnishes only an alleviation.

Mr. WILLIAMS of New Jersey. I am not referring specifically to this measure, but is such an effort on the part of the Federal Government proper?

Mr. BENNETT. The Senator from Utah has introduced more bills than he can remember to try to relieve problems of distressed industries in his State which have been adversely affected by trade policies, and I am sure the Senator from New Jersey has introduced bills relating to such problems in his own State.

Mr. WILLIAMS of New Jersey. I should like to offer one statement to the proposal to delete this section of the bill, as one of the authors. This part of the bill would not be, according to my thinking, the final answer to trade impacted areas. It is not a final answer, and we know it. Those of us who have been working to find relief for our impacted industrial areas are not going to pause a bit if this section is maintained in the bill, but will find other ways, independent of this means alone, to try to bring relief to trade impacted areas.

Mr. BENNETT. I am sure the Senator will be working to that end, but I am not quite sure other Senators who have no such problems in their States will be impressed. I am sure some of them would say, "Let them take care of their problems under the distressed areas bill."

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BENNETT. I yield.

Mr. CURTIS. I wish to commend the distinguished Senator for his analysis of the bill. I agree with him, and I expect to vote for the amendment. I voted for a number of substitutes, not because I accepted them as sound solutions, or even suitable solutions, but because they were the lesser of the evils before us. The distinguished Senator is to be commended for the position he has taken.

Mr. BENNETT. I appreciate the kind remarks of the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. President, I am happy to yield the floor.

Mr. BUSH and Mr. JAVITS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. JAVITS. I was about to make a statement with reference to the amendment.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, may I yield for that purpose, without losing the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I merely wished to follow up what my colleague from New Jersey has said about the particular amendment to which the distinguished Senator from Utah referred. To me, the amendment would represent a real loss in the bill and a great deprivation in terms of effectiveness in trying to reach a solution of a problem which is of grave moment to the country and to our international policy.

I hope very much that the Senate will reject the amendment, notwithstanding my affection and regard for my colleague from Utah.

The national interest demands an expanding trade policy. On the other hand, local interests demand some concern about what imports we must allow if we are to have an expanding trade policy. To various sections of the country this is an overriding consideration in terms of the Nation, which entitles people who are hurt by a national policy to be given help from the Nation. It so directly involves the distressed area concept that I feel strongly that such a provision belongs in the bill.

I wished to make my position clear, and I thank my colleague. I hope the Senate will reject the amendment.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, is time controlled?

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, may we have a vote on my amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time is controlled.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield me 5 minutes?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am happy to yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BUSH. I shall be happy to yield the floor, so that the Senate may vote on the amendment, and then make my remarks. Would the acting majority leader prefer to have me do so?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I should appreciate that very much.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I yield the floor with the understanding that I shall make my remarks after the vote.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I hope very much that the amendment of the Senator from Utah will be rejected.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, to keep the record straight, I ask unanimous consent that after the vote is taken on the Bennett amendment to the committee amendment the distinguished Senator from Connecticut may be recognized for 5 minutes, and I will accord him that time from the time on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Do Senators yield back the remainder of their time?

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I am happy to yield back my remaining time.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I yield back my remaining time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has been yielded back. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. BENNETT] to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I shall vote for S. 1 with some misgivings and in the hope that it can be further improved before it completes the legislative process in the Congress.

As stated in my individual views filed with the committee report, I have grave reservations about the ability of S. 1 to do the things expected of it by the unemployed and by others who have the misfortune to live in the so-called depressed areas of the Nation.

Despite my misgivings, I am willing to try out this program for a limited time on an experimental basis because of my concern for the families who have not shared in the general prosperity enjoyed by the great majority of the people of the United States, and who find themselves destitute as a result of prolonged unemployment.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my individual views may be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the individual views were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

INDIVIDUAL VIEWS OF SENATOR BUSH

S. 1, as amended by the Committee on Banking and Currency, has been substantially improved from its original version and from previous bills of this kind which have been considered in former years.

THE "INDUSTRY PIRATING" PROBLEM

A major defect has been eliminated by the inclusion of strong, effective language to meet the problem of "industry pirating." Amendments drafted by myself and the junior Senator from Maine, Mr. MUSKIE, and accepted unanimously by the committee, flatly prohibit, without qualification, the use of Federal funds to assist the relocation of a business enterprise from one area to another. They permit such assistance to businesses for purposes of expansion, or for the establishment of a new branch plant, affiliate, or subsidiary only if such assistance will not adversely affect employment in the area of original location. The committee report clearly states an intent to have the Bush-Muskie "antipirating" amendments strictly construed, and cautions the Administrator to guard against any attempts at evasion of their purpose.

GOOD FEATURES OF THE BILL

There are good features which I favor in S. 1. The special provisions for redevelopment areas in the urban renewal section of the bill are commendable. The sections providing for occupational training and retraining, and for retraining subsistence payments, may ultimately prove to be the most valuable aids made available to those who have the misfortune to live in areas of chronic, high unemployment. The loan funds—$200 million for industrial and commercial projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5 (a) and (b), and $100 million for public facility loans in such areas—have been established with welcome recognition of the general rule that the United States should not lend money at less than it costs the Treasury to borrow it.

S. 1 is in need of further corrective amendments.

RURAL AREAS

Perhaps the most glaring need is in the definition of so-called rural areas eligible for designation as "redevelopment areas" under section 5(b). As introduced, the criteria for designation virtually guaranteed an overconcentration of such areas in one section of the country. The committee adopted an amendment, offered by the junior Senator from Wisconsin, Mr. PROXMIER, which was intended to meet this problem, but fails to fully do so. The Proxmire amendment would require the Administrator to "endeavor to distribute the [redevelopment] projects widely among the several States, so far as is feasible and proper * * *." Under this broad language, no Senator can be assured that at least one such project will be located in a depressed rural area of his own State.

The committee has ignored the fact that even in highly industrialized States there may be depressed rural areas in need of the assistance contemplated by this bill. Such areas may be overlooked because their populations are included in "labor market areas," designated by the Department of Labor, which are ineligible for assistance under either section 5(a) or section 5(b). Yet the farm population of such areas may be in real need of assistance.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT—RURAL AREAS

I have prepared amendments intended to remedy these deficiencies. They would provide that at least one project shall be located in every State in which the Governor thereof certifies to the Administrator a need for such project. Additionally, they would require consideration of the extent to which demonstration "rural development" projects have previously been located in various areas of the United States by the Department of Agriculture, in the formulation of standards for designation of "redevelopment areas" under this subsection.

OTHER NEEDED AMENDMENTS

I share the concern expressed by the senior Senator from New York, Mr. JAVITS, about the wisdom of making machinery and equipment eligible for loans under the bill, and the concern of the senior Senator from Utah, Mr. BENNETT, because of what appears to be an intent to substitute a foot-in-the-door trade adjustment palliative for the peril point and escape clause provisions of the Trade Agreements Act. I will support corrective amendments which I understand they intend to propose.

Additionally, I shall support the recommendations of President Kennedy that administration of the proposed program be placed under the Secretary of Commerce, and that it be financed by appropriations rather than by direct borrowings from the Treasury. Why the New Frontiersmen of our committee have so summarily rejected the counsel of their Chief is beyond my comprehension.

CONCLUSION

Finally, I express grave reservations about the ability of the program contemplated in S. 1 to do the things expected of it by the unemployed and others who live in so-called depressed areas of the Nation. The widespread publicity given S. 1 and its predecessor bills and extravagant statements made by some of the backers of these bills, have aroused false hopes in these unfortunate people that a miracle is about to come to pass. Once S. 1 is enacted, they believe prosperity for their areas is ensured, and their troubles are over. A day of disillusionment is bound to come. It will take months to get the program underway. A relatively few among all the areas which expect it will receive assistance under the bill, and what assistance is given may well prove ineffective in many areas.

This is an experimental program, and should be regarded as such. It must be carefully watched by the Congress, and terminated promptly if the experiment fails. For this reason, I favor a limitation of the authority granted under the bill to a 2-year experimental period, and intend to offer such an amendment on the floor.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, S. 1 has been substantially improved by amendments adopted in committee and on the floor of the Senate.

We have included an effective anti-pirating provision which was essential to protect the jobs of workers in Connecticut and in other highly industrialized States against the use of Federal funds to relocate to other States the factories which give them employment.

We have given administration of the proposed program to the Secretary of Commerce, instead of expanding the bureaucracy by creation of a new, independent agency.

We have placed a definite termination date in the bill, insuring a close congressional review after a reasonable period in which the experimental program can prove whether it is a success or failure.

We have made it clear that the Senate desires that demonstration rural development projects be distributed widely among the several States rather than being concentrated in limited areas.

The bill remains in need of further amendment, but it has been sufficiently improved to warrant my vote in support of sending it to the other body. I hope the remaining defects in the bill can then be removed, and that we will be able to go forward on a sound basis with the limited, experimental program for assistance to distressed areas it will provide.

I yield the floor.

Mr. MUSKIE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois yield some time to me from the time on the bill?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Maine [Mr. MUSKIE].

Mr. MUSKIE. I thank the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. President, I rise in support of the pending bill.

Six years ago I took office as Governor of the State of Maine. Maine was at that time suffering from a recession. Our textile mills had been in trouble, and some had closed. Unemployment dogged other areas of the State. The major task of my first administration as Governor was to mobilize the resources of State Government to help communities help themselves. We reorganized our Department of Economic Development and made a determined effort to attract new industry to our State. We gave assistance to communities endeavoring to rebuild themselves to provide an attractive climate for economic growth. Later we established the Maine Industrial Building Authority to provide capital for the construction of new plants and facilities.

Much of this work has been successful. We have been rewarded by new industries and new jobs. But in spite of this, Maine is still in trouble in unemployment and underemployment. Unless we use the additional resources of the Federal Government, acting for the Nation, we will condemn these communities to painful years of readjustment. There may be those who consider such hardship good for the character of those who struggle against adversity. I disagree. There is nothing to strengthen the character in hungry children, fathers without jobs, plants without tenants, communities without adequate tax revenues. There is nothing of the American dream in areas where the investment of a lifetime of work is swept away by conditions beyond the control of those involved while others stand by in comfortable apathy.

Consider the plight of cities like Lewiston and Auburn, Maine, once buzzing centers of textile manufacturing. Today over 7 percent of the labor force in these twin cities is unemployed—this in an area where one of the most aggressive economic development efforts has been carried out. These efforts have paid off in terms of 1,300 new jobs during the last 5 years. But at the same time, 2,800 jobs have been lost—1,900 of them in textiles. There has been a net loss of 1,500 jobs in half a decade.

The State of Maine has serious economic problems, despite its great natural resources, the skill of its workers, and the efforts of its citizens. At the end of the year our rate of unemployment was 10.3 percent, the ninth highest in the country. As a seasoned observer wrote me recently:

The economic situation in this area has been dubbed with many fancy names, but from where I sit it has all the earmarks of a full fledged recession.

At the present time we have three areas qualifying for assistance under the provisions of the Area Redevelopment Bill: Lewiston-Auburn, as I have mentioned, has an unemployment rate of 7.6 percent; Biddeford-Saco-Sanford's rate of unemployment is 8.8 percent; Calais-Eastport, our most distressed area, has an unemployment rate of 25.4 percent. Within the last 3 years it has ranged as high as 38 percent. In addition, the Portland area, which includes our largest city, has an unemployment rate of 6.2 percent.

Obviously, these communities need help. The area redevelopment bill would provide the tools and the resources of the country to aid these distressed areas.

Some of my colleagues have raised objections to this proposed legislation. I am sure the remarks of the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Production and Stabilization has answered most of the questions. I wish to make several observations on specific points.

The bill provides no magic answers. It contains no panaceas. It guarantees nothing by way of results in any specific community or area. Its purpose is to provide tools for the use of local people, local initiative, and local ingenuity in redeveloping the economic resources of their communities. There is no suggestion that prosperity can be created by law, or that jobs can be brought into existence by a stroke of the legislative pen.

We who support the bill fully realize that economic activity and employment are generated by private enterprise. We realize that a community which will not help itself cannot be helped. We realize that, unless a community or area contains useful economic resources, it cannot be made a job-producing, wealth-creating section of the country.

There are, undoubtedly, once-prosperous areas in the country whose economic resources have been completely exhausted beyond any hope of restoration.

On the other hand, there are areas which have been by-passed by rising economic tides; or, whose industrial bases have been undercut by technological changes; or, whose production of industrial agricultural, or fisheries products has been bypassed by changing consumer tastes or new products; and which still contain elements of economic strength and vitality worth saving and using.

It is the assumption of the bill that such opportunities can be developed by human will and ingenuity. The bill recognizes, however, that in too many instances such an effort may fail because local resources do not include the necessary capital, the technical know-how, the industrial skills.

Community facilities may not be such as to attract new industry. Community resources may be inadequate because of a deteriorated tax base and chronic low income of its citizenry.

And so, the bill would provide:

First. A revolving fund from which businessmen could borrow part of the funds needed for expansion or for new enterprises.

Second. Loans and grants for community facilities.

Third. Occupational training and re-training.

Fourth. Subsistence payments to unemployed workers undergoing training.

Fifth. Technical assistance.

Do these tools duplicate others already in existence? To a certain extent, yes; but this fact, rather than constituting a source of criticism, suggests a very desirable flexibility. Moreover, the bill would provide an integrated approach toward this problem which is not now possible.

Are there other tools which would be useful? Probably; and there is nothing to prevent our adding them whenever experience under the program demonstrates their need.

We have an opportunity, through the proposed legislation, to build on our experience in other programs. We have the urban renewal program, the Small Business Administration, and the Small Business Investment Act at the Federal level. In our States, we have development agencies, planning agencies and credit facilities which have developed techniques of redevelopment, in urban and rural areas. What we seek to do is to apply these techniques, with the resources of the Nation, to situations in which local resources cannot do the job alone.

We have heard complaints that the rural development sections of the bill are oriented toward the South. There is no evidence in the bill that this is so. If there are more rural areas in any section of the country which qualify for assistance under objective criteria, I fail to see the logic of opposing aid to such sections simply because they are not in our own backyard. If there is a need, then we should meet it, and not let our vision be narrowed by selfish and short-sighted consideration. This proposed legislation should not serve as an excuse for regional bickering.

Another objection I have heard has been directed at the alleged reduction in initiative which will stem from passage of the bill. On this point, I suggest that the critics examine the bill and note the requirements for local planning, contributions and participation.

We are not taking anything away from anybody. We are saying to the depressed areas, "We are aware of your troubles. We know that industrial or agricultural losses have drained away your resources. Here are the tools to help you do the job. We are willing to work with you as you rebuild your communities. We have confidence in your ability and we are willing to invest in your future."

In conclusion, I wish to take note of complaints on possible pirating under the bill. As originally written, the bill prohibited the use of Federal funds for relocation of industries when such would result in substantial damage to the area of original employment. Some felt this language was not strong enough. I was pleased to work out language on this point and to submit it to the committee in cooperation with the senior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Bush]. Page 35 of the committee report contains an explanation of this provision.

I point out, in addition, that under the Small Business Investment Act we have a precedent for preventing the pirating of industry through the use of Federal funds. The act prohibits such use of funds, the Small Business Administration regulations under the act spell out these prohibitions, and the contract forms used under the program effectively prevent evasion of the act and regulations and provide penalties for noncompliance. I see no reasonable cause for fear on this question.

Mr. President, my experience as Governor, my service on the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, and the continued conditions of economic distress in many areas of our country convince me that this proposed legislation is needed, and needed now. I urge passage of S. 1, as reported by the committee.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, I have an amendment at the desk, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 56, beginning in the committee amendment, with line 22, it is proposed to strike out all through line 2 on page 57 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

Secretary of the Treasury. Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds for loans under section 6 shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, but such rate shall not be greater than the current average yields on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturities as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of such notes or other obligations. Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds for loans under section 7 shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury which shall be not more than the higher of (1) 2½ per centum per annum, or (2) the average annual interest rate on all interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt as computed at the end of the fiscal year next preceding the issuance by the Secretary and adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum. The Secretary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, the proposed amendment would simply change the interest rate formula to make it comply with the rate that is now available on college housing loans so far as public facility projects are concerned in redevelopment areas.

S. 1, as reported by the Banking and Currency Committee, would provide that all funds borrowed from the Treasury with which to carry out the loan programs provided by the bill, that is, loans for qualified public facilities projects in redevelopment areas, and loans for private industrial and commercial redevelopment in nonrural and rural areas, would be obtained from the Treasury under the same interest rate formula.

The formula in the bill at present provides that—

The rate paid to the Treasury for such loans shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, but such rate shall not be greater than the current average yields on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturities as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of such notes or other obligations.

This formula would produce a rate for Treasury borrowing of roughly 3½ per cent. Thus, the lending rate to the qualified borrower at one-quarter of 1 per cent higher as provided by the bill would be approximately 4½ percent at the present time.

My amendment would change the formula in order to provide a lower interest rate for loans to States and their political subdivisions for qualified public facilities projects in redevelopment areas. My amendment would not disturb the formula as it applies to borrowings with which to make loans for private industrial and commercial projects in redevelopment areas.

The formula in my amendment proposes that the rate to the Treasury for loans under section 7 of the bill "shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury which shall not be more than the higher of, first, 2½ percent per annum; or second, the average annual interest rate on all interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt as computed at the end of the fiscal year not preceding the issuance by the Secretary of Commerce and adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1 percent."

Under my amendment, the formula would produce a rate for Treasury borrowings of $3\frac{1}{4}$ percent. Thus the lending rate to the States and their political subdivisions making a loan for qualified public facility projects at one-quarter percent higher as provided by my amendment would be $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent at the present time.

It seems to me rather obvious that loans to communities for development of their public facilities should be on more reasonable terms than loans made for development of private industrial and commercial purposes. My amendment would accomplish this purpose.

I earnestly hope that the Senator from Illinois, who has so well managed the bill, will accept the amendment.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I accept the amendment. As I understand, the amendment would merely provide that the same rates of interest shall apply on loans of public facilities as now apply in the case of college housing.

Mr. SPARKMAN. The Senator is correct, and it is a compensatory rate, so far as the Government is concerned.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I am very glad to accept the amendment.

Mr. SPARKMAN. I thank the Senator.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BIBLE. Mr. President, I am proud to have joined the distinguished senior Senator from Illinois as a cosponsor of this legislation. At the outset I would like to pay tribute to the persistence of my colleague in pressing for congressional action to alleviate unemployment in distressed areas of our Nation.

The able Senator from Illinois has described S. 1 as "an old and cherished friend," as well he might. On three occasions in recent years the Senate has passed area redevelopment legislation sponsored by our esteemed colleague. On one occasion the measure died in the House Rules Committee, and in the next two instances the legislation failed because of the Presidential veto.

This year, with the problem even greater and with a President who has called for vigorous and positive action, I am hopeful that this bill will be enacted into law.

The time has come when we must face up to the economic realities, grim as they may be. By establishing a program to assist currently depressed areas and simultaneously develop a warning system on threatened unemployment, we will be waging a frontal attack on one of our country's major problems.

As I pointed out earlier this year before a subcommittee of the Banking and Currency Committee holding hearings on this bill, my State of Nevada is not listed as a distressed area. Encouraging as that may sound, however, the hard fact remains that there are areas in my State that are now, and have been, suffering from the effects of a depressed economy.

In Lincoln County, for example, the rate of insured unemployment has risen from six-tenths of 1 percent in 1957 to the alarming high of 23.9 percent last January. This once flourishing section has been doubly hit because of the depressed metals market and the fact that railroad operations have greatly declined.

In the city of Babbitt, site of a naval ammunition depot, continual cutbacks in personnel have reduced the working force from a total of 1,462 in 1957 to a total of 925 today—a drop of more than 36 percent. And in the nearby city of Hawthorne, insured unemployment has increased from 1.2 percent in 1957 to 8.6 percent for last January.

These are constant problems, and they will not go away by ignoring them. The time for action is overdue. In my opinion, this legislation offers an opportunity for these distressed areas to help themselves to regain their rightful place in a free and sound economy.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I thank the Senator from Nevada not only for his succinct and able statement, but for the constant support which he has given to the bill throughout its progress through the Senate. We are deeply indebted to him.

As a boy I used to follow the prize fights. I can remember the historic prize fights which took place in Tonopah and Goldfield, Nev. I thought such fights were permanently established. I am now told that in spite of the efforts of the late Tex Rickard, those towns are ghost towns.

Mr. BIBLE. Goldfield certainly is; Tonopah is in a slightly better condition. However, we consider them depressed areas, and the bill would assist them.

Mr. DOUGLAS. In a year or a few years from now they may be in a state of depression.

Mr. BIBLE. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DOUGLAS. The Senator from Nevada realizes that prosperity is not merely for a day. It is tenuous, and we should guard against the future. I wish to thank the Senator from Nevada. I also express my personal obligations to him for his unfailing courtesy and gentlemanly conduct, so that even when upon occasion he votes against us, we love him. When he votes with us, we love him even more.

Mr. BIBLE. In view of the statement of the Senator from Illinois, I might even be privileged to vote favorably on final passage of the bill.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I am glad to yield now to the able junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SMITH], who I believe is making his first address to the Senate, but whose quiet and effective influence has already been felt for the good in this body.

Mr. SMITH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I would like to ask my fellow Members of the Senate today to give their whole-hearted support to the area redevelopment bill.

In my own State of Massachusetts, the jobless total hit the highest February total for 10 years. One hundred and fifty-nine thousand workers, or 7.3 percent of the working force, were unemployed last month.

Many of these workers were in industries such as apparel, electrical machinery, services, food, and paper that are normally not affected by the seasons of the year. Unless there is a general upturn for all these industries, the economy of the State will remain distressed.

Some Massachusetts workers have joined the ranks of the jobless for the first time this winter. But for many others, unemployment is a long, sad story. Some of our areas, such as Fall River and New Bedford, have had severe unemployment for almost 10 years while three others have had steady jobless quotas of over 6 percent for between 3 and 4 years. Nine employment areas in the State are distressed enough to be eligible for help under this bill.

Thus, unemployment is not a new problem for the State of Massachusetts. It is a problem that has been with us in a serious form for many years. And it has left its mark throughout the economic fabric of the entire State—in substandard housing, inadequate education for those blue-collar workers who need it the most, and rundown cities and towns.

A large number of the State's municipalities have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on private or public plans of their own designed to attract new industry. Individual manufacturers have done a great deal to diversify and strengthen their industries so that a severe decline in one such as textiles would not undermine the economy of an entire sector of the State.

But these communities have pretty well exhausted their resources in the fight to attain a level of economic well-being. Those that have been hit the hardest have watched their assets deteriorate over a long period of time and have little left now with which to continue the fight for economic survival.

The bill will provide those industrial communities that have suffered the most with the loans they need to attract new industry through land acquisition, plant buildings, and the construction of community facilities such as parks, and sewage treatment plants.

They will also receive badly needed funds for retraining workers in the skills needed for working in new industries.

I have discussed the area redevelopment bill in terms of my own State, but I know well that it is a truly national piece of legislation. There are few parts of this country that have not felt the pinch of this recession and the 103 areas which will be immediately eligible for its benefits can be found in every part of the Nation. Rural and industrial communities alike will gain through its provisions.

Some critics say that the bill will encourage some areas to pirate industry from others. I am strongly against any reshuffling of industries of this kind as it can do little more than create more economic problems and regional distress than it raises. The antipirating amendment in the committee bill has my full support.

Some critics have also said that money invested in long-term depressed areas is money poorly spent: that these areas are the victims of a changing technology and that to try and help them would be to invest in obsolescence.

I say that there has not been an industry yet that could do without the assets that a community brings with it—the people, the schools, the churches, the parks and the local government. Actual dollars estimates have been quoted during debate on the bill on the costs of creating communities around a new industry. It is not cheap.

Yet, there are many communities in my State and across the country which, for a modest investment in plant and vocational retraining will provide a new industry with all the real and intangible assets of a long-established town.

Finally, there are those who label this another spending measure designed to take initiative from the local communities and to give it to the Federal Government. I say that this money is an investment, a blue-chip investment for the world's wealthiest country in its own economic well-being.

The bill provides a badly needed answer to long-term economic problems confronting far too many communities in this country. I hope my distinguished colleagues here will see fit to give it favorable consideration.

Mr. LONG of Missouri. Mr. President, the fact that the Area Redevelopment Act, as introduced by Senator DOUGLAS bears the title S. 1, is enough to show me that there is a sense of urgency about this bill that makes it mandatory for us to move as quickly as possible for its passage.

Senator DOUGLAS headed up the Task Force on Area Redevelopment and probably knows more about the chronic unemployment problem from firsthand information than any of us here in this Chamber. I considered it a privilege to join with him as cosponsor of S. 1.

Furthermore, the fact that the Area Redevelopment Act has passed the Congress twice is evidence in itself that our people want action. For years, as this measure has been under debate either in the legislative or the executive branch, conditions have become steadily worse.

Department of Labor statistics show total unemployment exceeded 5.7 million in February. There are approximately 100 areas of substantial and persistent unemployment, where there are at least 15 million people and over 600,000 unemployed.

Conditions in Missouri are bad enough to warrant the passage of this bill, but from what I can learn, some States are even worse off than we are. As the senior Senator from my State pointed out yesterday, Missouri has 180 community development organizations already in existence—the second highest number in the Nation.

It must be emphasized that the passage of the Area Redevelopment Act is not an open invitation for local communities and private groups to dip their fingers in the Federal Treasury and come up with a handout. Of the approximate $390 million provided under the bill, $300 million is earmarked for loans—loans that must be repaid.

Local communities and private groups must take the initiative in area redevelopment to alleviate chronic unemployment. Our President has promised a faster rate of national growth and committed himself to a goal of 82 million jobs. If we can achieve that goal, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch says that America's standard of living will rise 25 percent in a decade. To cross the first obstacle that prevents us from reaching this higher standard of living, Mr. President, I urge Senate passage of the Area Redevelopment Act.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I wish to join the distinguished Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS], who has so ably managed the pending bill, to express my thanks to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. BIBLE] for his statement and for his effective cooperation.

The junior Senator from Massachusetts has made a splendid statement on the bill. I am sure that Senators are aware of the fact that the junior Senator from Massachusetts has presided over the Senate a great many times during these debates. It is only fitting and proper that we should express our appreciation to him. I wish to commend the Senator from Massachusetts on his excellent statement. I am sure that he will have the privilege this time not only of voting right, as he always does, but of voting on the winning side. I compliment the Senator.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. President, I call up my amendment, which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 79, between lines 13 and 14, insert a new section as follows:

MILITARY INSTALLATIONS IN REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

SEC. 27. Whenever economy, as distinguished from obsolescence, changing defense requirements, and other essentially military considerations, has been or is hereafter given by the Department of Defense as the principal reason for the deactivation of a permanent military installation and such installation was or is situated in an area determined under this Act to be a redevelopment area, the Secretary of Commerce shall, upon the request of a local governing body in the area, institute a study to determine the economic effects of the action which has been or is to be taken: Provided, That nothing herein shall apply to any military installation which was deactivated prior to 1954. In determining the economic effects of any such action, the Secretary of Commerce shall, among other relevant matters, consider and make findings with respect to the approximate amount of money which has been, or may reasonably be expected to be, saved by any department or agency of the Government as a result of such action, compared with—

(1) the approximate costs or losses which have been, or may reasonably be expected to be, incurred by other departments or agencies of the Government, or by State and local governmental units, as a result of such action;

(2) the approximate losses which have been, or may reasonably be expected to be, incurred by private interests as a result of such action in connection with any facilities which they have provided to serve the needs of any such installation and which would otherwise have to be provided in whole or in part by the Government;

(3) the approximate cost to the Government of relocating any such installation in the event that such installation has been, or will be, relocated; and

(4) the approximate cost to the Government of reactivating, in a national emergency or other contingency, any such installation with respect to which any such action has been, or is proposed to be, taken.

Any such study shall be conducted as expeditiously as practicable, and the findings resulting therefrom shall be transmitted by the Secretary of Commerce to the Secretary of Defense and to the Congress. The Secretary of Defense shall consider these findings in making his decision as to whether the installations should be deactivated, or, if the installation has been deactivated, as to whether it should be reactivated.

Renumber succeeding sections accordingly.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. President, how much time do I have available?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 1 hour.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I do not plan to use the whole hour. I wish to explain the amendment and shall use only as much time as is necessary to do so, unless it runs into considerable opposition.

After offering an amendment yesterday, which went further than the proposal I am now offering, and seeking to profit by the words of wisdom uttered by those in opposition to the amendment, as well as by those who supported it, I am offering the pending amendment because I believe it may be of some value to areas where permanent military installations have been closed or will be closed.

I make the point that the amendment applies only when a permanent military installation is closed for reasons of economy. The amendment spells out the fact that if an installation is closed because of changing military requirements, or because of obsolescence, or because the installation should be moved to another area for the defense of that latter area, because of an international agreement, for instance, or because of a rearrangement of our defense plans to make them more realistic in the light of modern day problems, the amendment would not apply.

All that the amendment requires is that a study be made. A study would take place when requested by the local authorities in the community affected, and such community would have to be a distressed area.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I yield.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. The Senator and I have discussed the amendment. I have called several points to his attention, and I believe he felt there was some merit to what I said. I suggested that, instead of having the amendment specify a local governing body in an area, because an area may not have more than a thousand people in it, that the authority should be the Governor of the State. In other words, in Louisiana, if it was felt necessary to close a permanent military installation for reasons of economy, the Governor could make the request of the Secretary of Commerce.

I have another suggestion, which I have also discussed with the Senator. I would suggest that, instead of making the year 1954, which is 7 years back, and in that time a permanent military installation may pretty well have gone to pieces, it would be better to bring the date up, and in that connection I made the suggestion that the year be made 1957, instead of 1954.

I have one other suggestion.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I would be willing to so modify my amendment, unless there is objection elsewhere to the changes, if it would make the amendment more attractive to the senior Senator from Massachusetts, who is the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Defense Appropriations and the distinguished former chairman of that subcommittee. I hope that if the amendment is so modified the Senator from Massachusetts will find he can support the amendment I am offering.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. While I am not fully aware of what the effect of the amendment would be, I understand that it would apply where economy is the criterion, as opposed to any other consideration, such as obsolescence, a change in defense requirements, or other essential military consideration. In other words economy would be the only consideration, and the amendment would apply only in the case of economy. Furthermore, as I understand, it would apply only to a permanent military installation, such as, in Massachusetts, Fort Devens, or the Otis Air Base, or any other permanent installation.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. May I dispose of that point first? So far as I am concerned, as the sponsor of the amendment, I have no objection whatever to the modification the Senator from Massachusetts is suggesting. As a matter of fact, I have no doubt whatever that where a State is concerned, the Governor of the State should certainly make the request, if the local citizens have substantial support in asking that the study be made.

So I should be glad to modify the amendment by using the word "Governor," and I do so.

The year 1954 is placed in the amendment only because that was the first year after the Korean war. It was the year in which there were cutbacks in military strength, and large-scale reductions in force began to occur as a result of the closing of installations. I am not certain that a single permanent installation was closed in 1954, although I do not have those facts fully before me, because, as the Senator knows, the policy of the services in most cases is to close the temporary facilities before they undertake to close the permanent installations. The permanent installations are, in most instances, those about which a service went to a local town or a local citizenry and required it to make major commitments, in some cases costing tens of millions of dollars, or to spend large amounts of money to provide schools and various other facilities. In some cases, the communities were required to provide drainage. Sometimes the service even required the community to provide the land on which the bases were situated. In many instances, tremendous investments were made by the community which constituted a saving to the military, the assumption being that it was a permanent asset to the community and would not be taken away.

The service owes those people some consideration in return.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I think the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana has considerable merit, but I suggest this thought—whether the thought is practical, I do not know—if the amendment is taken to conference. I think it ought to be very clear that it ought to be the Governor of a State, and not a local body, who must make the request.

Also, I should like to see the date made 1957, because both the Senator from Louisiana and I know that many buildings which have been left vacant for several years are in bad shape. I should like to see the date made 1960, but if the Senator says 1957, so far as I am concerned, as one Senator, that is all right.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. President, I am willing to accept that modification, and I do accept it.

I point out to the Senator from Massachusetts that the amendment does not affect Louisiana, so far as I know. It might affect some other States. If the State of some other Senator is affected, I believe he can speak now or forever hold his peace, as the saying is.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield? He said something about Senators holding their peace.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Does the Senator's comment relate to the amendment?

Mr. JAVITS. It relates precisely to the Senator's amendment and precisely to the Senator's point.

It is evident that the Senator has now developed an idea, and I thoroughly agree with him. My colleague from New York [Mr. KEATING] will speak for himself. However, in our State, we have a problem on exactly this point.

The Senator's proposal would give some economic appraisal apart from the strictly defense appraisal, which is what the Senator is seeking. We have talked about this problem in advance. I think the proposal is sound.

The Senator from Louisiana has accepted some suggestions from the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL]. I do not believe any Senator would doubt the preeminent skill of the Senator from Massachusetts in the field of military affairs. However, we have not had the opportunity to ascertain whether the proposal would or would not adversely affect our installations, and we may have a real equity.

I should like to make this suggestion, therefore, because the Senator ought to have his amendment in the best shape possible. I hope that in conference we may have an opportunity, if it should develop that there is some particular factual equity which is not met by the amendment which the Senator has suggested, to lay the problem before the conference, in the hope that what we are accepting here now is an idea, and that if the specifics turn out to be unfair, we can do something about them.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I think there is no question about that. That is an idea which appeals to me, and in its present form it appeals to me much more than it did before.

I should like to call one other possible suggestion to the attention of the Senator from Louisiana. On line 6, the language would be, as the amendment is now written:

The Secretary of Commerce shall, upon the request of the Governor of a State, institute a study.

That means that the Secretary of Commerce must make the inquiry if the Governor of a State asks him to do so.

What I propose is to let the word "shall" remain, rather than the word "may," but I call the Senator's attention to page 40 of the bill, under the heading "Advisory Policy Board." The Advisory Policy Board consists of the Secretary of Commerce, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Labor, and the Secretary of the Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration, or whomever they may designate.

Would the Senator consider an amendment which would allow the word "shall" to remain but provide that the Secretary of Commerce shall, upon the approval of the Advisory Policy Board, enter into this investigation? In other words, that would leave the top Federal officers having the responsibility to order the Secretary of Commerce, if this clause should be adopted, to make the inquiry for economy reasons with respect to a permanent military installation. If that Board agrees and says that the Secretary of Commerce shall do it, then I think the amendment has even more merit.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I am reluctant to accept the amendment because it is something more than I might be willing to agree with.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. The Senator from Louisiana objected to the word "may." I can see why. That might eliminate the whole program. But if we allowed the word "shall" to remain and then provided that the top officials of the Federal Government having responsibility for the Department of Defense, should say whether the inquiry should be made, and approve it upon the request of a Governor, I should think the amendment would be very much stronger.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. If the Senator from Massachusetts would start from the other end, I would be willing to go with him, for it would achieve the same purpose. If the Senator would say that the Secretary shall conduct the study unless he is requested by the Board not to do so, I would be willing to accept that amendment.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. In order to get the bill to conference, and if the Senator from Illinois will accept such a proposal, I, as one Senator, would agree to it.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I thank the Senator from Massachusetts. I think this is a very constructive amendment. It is even better in its present form. I congratulate the Senator from Louisiana. I assure him that we will not only take the amendment to conference; we will fight for it in conference.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I regret that at this moment I do not have the precise language developed by the Senator from Massachusetts and me relating to the proposal that the Secretary shall take this action unless he is requested by the Advisory Policy Board not to do so. If the Senator from Massachusetts will offer his proposed language at the proper place, I shall be glad to accept the amendment.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. On line 6, I would say:

The Secretary of Commerce shall, upon the request of the Governor of the State, and unless the Advisory Policy Board of the Area Redevelopment Administration shall find otherwise, institute a study.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. President, I so modify my amendment.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I yield.

Mr. KEATING. As has been pointed out by my distinguished colleague from New York [Mr. JAVITS], there are installations in the State of New York which might be affected by this proposal. For example, we know that the Utica-Rome area has been classified as an area of substantial labor surplus since 1958—longer than any other area of New York State. Yet there the Department of the Air Force has underway plans to transfer an important procurement facility away from Rome. That facility, if transferred, would eliminate 6,240 civilian jobs, more than all the existing industrial jobs in Rome.

The payroll loss, including losses from payrolls of firms which are 100 percent dependent on the procurement activities now going on in Rome, N.Y., would be about $100 million, or nearly one-third of the money proposed to be expended on the program of economic development; and such a situation would make Rome, N.Y., not only a distressed area, but actually a disaster area. The plan under consideration is simply to remove a substantial facility from the Rome Air Force Base.

Therefore, I ask the Senator from Louisiana whether he would be willing to accept a modification in line 4, after the words "permanent military installation" by inserting the words "or any substantial part thereof"; and in the next line, after the word "installation," insert the words "or part"; and further down in the amendment—without now going into any detail—insert other language to carry out that purpose, so the amendment would cover the removal of a substantial facility from an installation, as well as the removal of the entire installation itself.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. President, I had an opportunity to discuss with him both my proposed amendment and, subsequently, the modification suggested by the Senator from New York.

I would be willing to modify my amendment so as to make it broad enough to cover the situation at Rome, N.Y., which I understand is already a depressed area.

Mr. KEATING. We do not like to use the term "depressed." It is a distressed area. The people there are not depressed.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Well, it is an area with a high degree of unemployment.

Mr. KEATING. Yes.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. And it is an area of the type which we seek to aid; and I believe it should be entitled to a study of the type the Senator has referred to, and which I seek, by means of this amendment, to have conducted.

But I do not want to make the language so broad that almost any shift of a facility at a military installation could, upon the request of someone, be made the subject of such a study.

Rather than include the word "substantial," would the Senator from New York be willing to use the word "major"—"or a major part thereof"? I think that would be broad enough to cover such a situation.

Mr. KEATING. I think this particular situation certainly would be covered by the words "or a major part thereof." It consists of approximately 6,200-odd civilian jobs, out of 12,000 or 13,000.

Mr. JAVITS. Would the Senator accept the word "unit"—"a major unit"?

Mr. KEATING. With this legislative history established, I believe the language would take care of that situation; and I would be glad to have the amendment modified in that regard. I would like to ask unanimous consent—because if this proposed modification is accepted, it will require several changes later on in the measure—

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Yes, changes of a technical nature.

Mr. KEATING. So I would ask unanimous consent a little later to send them to the desk, for consideration.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I would not object to the proposed modification, with the understanding that the legislative history reflects that what we have in mind by the use of the word "major" is a large unit which is a dominant part of the overall installation; and I believe that the legislative history makes it clear that it is anticipated that the amendment would be broad enough to cover a situation of the kind the Senator from New York has described, in the State of New York.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield briefly to me?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I yield.

Mr. JAVITS. I suggested to my colleague the inclusion of the word "unit," because we are dealing with an entity. That does not mean it is a major part of the entire installation; but it means that in and of itself it is a major unit which is a part of the installation. That language certainly would cover the installation at Rome, N.Y., and would be fair, because some of the installations are so extensive that, as has properly been stated, if 7,000 jobs were dropped out at the installation at Rome—because of the dropping of a unit which is a major one in that connection—it might not be a major part of the installation, taken as a whole. So the legislative history should show that by using the word "unit," we mean a functional organization of a major character.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I believe the Senator will find that such a distinction is not necessary. The situation I have heard described is one in which approximately 6,200 or 6,800 jobs are involved, out of approximately 18,000. So what we are talking about is both a major unit and a major part of the whole. With that understanding, I would be willing to accept that modification of the amendment.

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield to me?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I yield.

Mr. CARLSON. As I have listened to the debate, it has seemed to be built around the situation in the city of Rome, N.Y. I wish to be sure that the amendment is general in application, when it comes to dealing with units within a unit. For example, I have in mind the naval air installation at Olathe, Kans.; and I want to be sure that the amendment will be general in application, and will not be confined to one city.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. This amendment applies only to permanent military installations. But as among permanent installations, the amendment applies generally. It relates only to a situation in which a principal reason for the closing is economy. Many times the economy has been dictated by a decision to reduce the overall strength in terms of the numbers in the service; and when the numbers are considered, it is said, "Economy now requires the closing of the installation." But such a closing may result in the creation of depressed areas.

Mr. CARLSON. I think the Senator from Louisiana has a very worthwhile amendment; and I think that with this addition, so that the amendment will be applicable generally, it is a very good one.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. There occurs to me the thought that it would be well if we could get some action taken by the military, so that in making the decisions in regard to what to close and what to keep open, the military would consider that in the case of one area, if the installation were closed, the result would be that the land there would quickly be subdivided into lots for the construction of private residences, whereas in another case, if the installation were closed, the facilities already in existence there would soon become a ghost town, and the people who had invested in those properties would lose their investments.

I hope such a study will be made; and I hope that on the basis of the study we shall be able to obtain action based on much more consideration by those in the Defense Department of the persons who have made such enormous investments—with the result that they will not hesitate to make such investments in areas which are subject to the jurisdiction of the Defense Department, knowing that the installations will not later be closed.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I yield.

Mr. JAVITS. I think the Senator from Louisiana has served all of us and also the entire country well in providing by this means opportunity for an economic review, which is as greatly needed in connection with other cases about which there is great economic complaint as it is needed in connection with the situation at Rome, N.Y.

Let me ask whether unanimous consent was obtained to make the changes suggested by my colleague, which the Senator from Louisiana has agreed to accept?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. President, I now send to the desk certain technical modifications. For the most part they relate to the words "a part", which I would change to the words "a unit", so as to make the entire amendment conform to the modifications suggested by the Senator from New York.

The amendment as modified is as follows:

On page 79, between lines 13 and 14, insert a new section as follows:

"MILITARY INSTALLATIONS IN REDEVELOPMENT AREAS"

"SEC. 27. Whenever economy, as distinguished from obsolescence, changing defense requirements, and other essentially military considerations, has been or is hereafter given by the Department of Defense as the principal reason for the deactivation of a permanent military installation or major unit thereof and such installation or unit was or is situated in an area determined under this Act to be a redevelopment area, the Secretary of Commerce shall, upon the request of the Governor or Governors of the State or States in which the area is located unless there is a request by the Board heretofore referred to in Sec. 4(a) hereof to the contrary, institute a study to determine the economic effects of the action which has been or is to be taken: Provided, that nothing herein shall apply to any military installation or major unit thereof which was deactivated prior to 1957. In determining the economic effects of any such action, the Secretary of Commerce shall, among other relevant matters, consider and make findings with respect to the approximate amount of money which has been, or may reasonably be expected to be, saved by any department or agency of the Government as a result of such action, compared with—

"(1) the approximate costs or losses which have been, or may reasonably be expected to be, incurred by other departments or agencies of the Government, or by State and local governmental units, as a result of such action;

"(2) the approximate losses which have been, or may reasonably be expected to be, incurred by private interests as a result of such action in connection with any facilities which they have provided to serve the needs of any such installation and which would otherwise have to be provided in whole or in part by the Government;

"(3) the approximate cost to the Government of relocating any such installation or unit in the event that such installation or unit has been, or will be, relocated; and

"(4) the approximate cost to the Government of reactivating, in a national emergency or other contingency, any such installation or unit with respect to which any such action has been, or is proposed to be, taken.

Any such study shall be conducted as expeditiously as practicable, and the findings resulting therefrom shall be transmitted by the Secretary of Commerce to the Secretary of Defense and to the Congress. The Secretary of Defense shall consider these findings in making his decision as to whether any such installation or unit should be deactivated, or, if such installation or unit has been deactivated, as to whether it should be reactivated."

Renumber succeeding sections accordingly.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield to me?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I yield.

Mr. MILLER. I am concerned a little about the timing of all this. For example, in reference to the words "whenever economy" is hereafter given by the Department of Defense as the reason, let me ask, To whom is it to be given?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. That is something the Department of Defense itself can judge. In most instances it is given to the local people or to the State government or to the local government, when they are notified that the Department of Defense is about to close a base, and the Department explains the reasons for doing so.

Mr. MILLER. That is just the point. My problem is that the local people who make this request to the Governor will probably—unless something is done about the timing, in line 3—take such action after the decision has been made.

Furthermore, in the third line from the bottom, mention is made of how he will have to consider the findings arrived at in the study, before he makes the decision.

It seems that some provision should be made, in order to make clear that whenever there is a proposed deactivation, notification must be made prior to the decision to close it—for example, must be made to the Governor of the State; and, in turn, that would then generate the taking of the action which I think the Senator is requesting. But without that provision, it seems to me that much room would be left open to the Secretary of Defense as to how he would notify, and whom he would notify, and when he would notify.

Does the Senator from Louisiana agree with me about that point?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I believe I understand what the Senator from Iowa is striving to achieve. I am not at all out of sympathy with what he has in mind. If he will prepare an amendment which will seek to reach that objective, I shall be glad to have him do so.

Mr. MILLER. I shall be happy to do so. If some other Senator wishes to address the Senate for a moment on this point, I shall proceed to prepare the necessary amendment.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that, if my amendment is agreed to, it may remain subject to an amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, what is the question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is whether an amendment by the Senator from Iowa can be offered.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I have no objection, but—

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. The suggestion is that the Senator from Iowa would like to offer an amendment to my amendment. He does not have the amendment prepared. I asked unanimous consent that, in the event my amendment is agreed to, the Senator from Iowa may, nevertheless, have the opportunity of offering the amendment.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I have no objection. Mr. President, what is pending? Has there been a disposition of the amendment or the request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], as modified.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Is that the business pending before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President—

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, if the Senator from South Carolina has the floor, and if he will yield, I should like to say I am opposed to the amendment—

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I have not yielded the floor.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am sorry.

Mr. THURMOND. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator, but I merely wanted to ask the Senator from Louisiana a question or two. Then I shall be glad to hear what the Senator has to say about it.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Very well.

Mr. THURMOND. We have in our State an airbase that has been scheduled for deactivation. Local people are bringing great pressure to retain it. It is a fine airbase. We think possibly another one could have been closed in an area where the weather is not as good as it is in our State. Nevertheless, the plan is to close it. It is not in a depressed area, and that area probably never will be a depressed area.

I ask the Senator from Louisiana, under his amendment would that kind of military installation go by the board, and yet one in a depressed area, which may not have as many advantages as bases such as this one, be retained?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. If the closing of the installation would result in a depressed area, and if it were a permanent installation, then, of course, it would be subject to a study as provided by the amendment.

Mr. THURMOND. Under the Senator's amendment, does the Defense Department have the clear-cut right to make the decision as to whether a military installation should be retained or should be closed?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Yes; the decision remains unfettered in the Defense Department. The only way in which the amendment would affect it would be that the Department would have to consider the fact that the situation was such that, if the installation was closed, it would result in a depressed area; or, if it were closing an installation in a depressed area, that the area would be further depressed and would result in a serious economic condition in the area. The Department would have to consider the fact that the State and the Federal Government had spent much money to support the activity.

The Department would have to consider the private investment without which the Federal Government would have been required to spend as much money, or almost as much. The Department would be required to consider what the cost would be of relocating the installation or reopening it, in the event there was a probability it would be reopened sooner or later.

Mr. THURMOND. Is the proposal intended to apply to installations which might be closed and then reopened or to bases which are to be permanently deactivated?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Either way.

Mr. THURMOND. The Senator would not, of course, offer an amendment which would attempt to keep a military installation open if it would be economical to close it and to the advantage of the taxpayers to close it, I am sure, even in his own State.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. No; but the amendment certainly gets at the kind of situation where the Army goes into a certain area and calls upon the local people to build housing, on which the Government is guaranteeing mortgages. Local investors build $100 million worth of housing, and then the Department comes to the conclusion that it is going to save $2 million a year or $5 million a year by closing the installation, and puts blinders on its eyes and is not able to see that $100 million is going to be lost in the way of guarantees on mortgages for the housing the servicemen occupy.

The amendment would make the Department take a look at the situation, and also what other agencies of the Government, such as the Small Business Administration, had expended, and the cost of hospitals and schools, and the fact that a lot of money would be lost for unnecessary schools and other facilities. The Department would also have to consider the fact that taxes are being paid to the State and local governments, and that the Federal Government would not be gaining anything by increasing the tax for the State government. The Department would have to consider whether, in the name of economy, if one service, whether it be the Navy, Army, or Air Corps, were to save money, the Federal Government might lose much more through other agencies, or lose the State money by completely disturbing the economy and the investment made, which would have to be reproduced elsewhere. It might then reach the conclusion that there was no real economy being arrived at, and that, rather than save money, the Government would lose money.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. I yield.

Mr. MANSFIELD. As I read the amendment, it calls for a study. The decision is to be made by the Secretary of Defense. The study is to be sent to the Governor of the State where the installation is located. Is that correct?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Yes.

Mr. MANSFIELD. It is permissive. It permits a study to be made, but the Defense Department will make the decision, after the report is received.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Yes. Some persons do not seem to recognize that when local citizens have been told that the base is to be permanent and is going to be there forever, they invest $50 million or $150 million of their money to support the military installation, on the assumption that it will remain until the end of time. Then, within a year or 2, the installation closes, and a depressed area results, with half the people in the area out of work.

Otherwise the Department may open another installation where it is not needed any more badly, where no one has made any sacrifice to support the installation, because in that area people would have bought the land, subdivided it into lots, and made good use of it, anyway.

Mr. THURMOND. No one wishes to see a military installation closed unless it is necessary. We are now moving from airplanes to missiles. Certain airbases may not be needed, or they may have to be transformed into missile bases. The airbase may or may not be suitable for that purpose.

Suppose that the Defense Department decided it could close a large number of airbases and save the taxpayers millions of dollars in the support of those bases because they were not needed. Under those conditions what effect would the Senator's amendment have, and would the Defense Department be handicapped in making a decision that it did not need those bases?

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Let me read the first two lines of the amendment:

Whenever economy, as distinguished from obsolescence, changing defense requirements, and other essentially military considerations, has been or is hereafter given by the Department of Defense as the principal reason for the deactivation of a permanent military installation or major unit thereof.

In other words, if an airbase was to be closed because the Air Force is to change from airplanes to missiles, that would be the end of the discussion. The people would not be entitled to a study even if they had invested $50 million to support the activity on the assumption that it would be permanent.

However, if an airbase were to be closed on the theory that the Federal Government might save some money, and that were the main reason for the closing, the people would be entitled to a study. First it should be determined whether the closing would represent an economy. Such a study cannot be made within the Department of the Army, or the Navy, or the Air Force. Someone must determine how much money the local citizens have invested.

Recently I had a discussion with the representatives of one of the services in regard to an installation. The local people had undertaken to show the tens of millions of dollars they had invested to meet service requirements on the theory there was to be a permanent military installation. The service did not have the information, even though it required the people to spend hundreds of millions of dollars. I assume that many billions of dollars have been spent by local governments and local people for these purposes.

An inquiry should be made. The services have made the local people do these things. At least the service should take a look at the problem, to see what they have made the people do, before the word is broken and the military installation is closed down.

That is all the amendment would require. It would be necessary to take a look at the proposal, and there would be limited circumstances. The installation would have to be permanent. The closing would have to be for the principal reason of economy.

A mere study is the least the people should have. I would hope that a study could be obtained without the amendment in the law, but that is the least the people have a right to expect, after they have made such great sacrifices.

Mr. THURMOND. Then I understand that the purpose of the Senator's amendment is not to prevent the Department of Defense from acting if it deems it advisable to act in the interest of the country and of national defense.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. No; it is not.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I shall not detain the Senate. I regret now that we did not kill the amendment last night. To be sure, the amendment has been radically changed. It is supposed to call for a study.

There is not a shred of military opinion before the Senate tonight, yet the amendment would affect the Defense Establishment of the country.

It is argued that these are permanent installations and that they are a part of our defense. What the amendment would provide is that the local people, who do not wish to lose a military installation—which might be closed for various reasons, including economy—could go to the Governor. How could a Governor resist a group from a town, the board of trustees or the city council? He would make a request to the Secretary of Commerce. What would the Secretary do? With the consent of the Advisory Council, the Secretary would cause a study to be made.

What would the study be? It would be the result of a monumental amount of work to determine the facts as to transfers, as to a change from one installation to another, and everything which goes with it. The study would include all aspects of the problem of whether the move would save money or lose money, and how the Government agencies would be affected.

What a burden would be put upon the Military Establishment of the country. There is not a shred of testimony before the Senate in this regard.

I am not going to ask for a yea-and-nay vote. I am sorry we did not kill the amendment last night, but I could not get a commitment from the Senator from Louisiana.

I know, of course, when there is a permanent establishment in a State, what will happen. The people will go to the Governor. The Governor will telephone to Luther Hodges and ask Mr. Hodges to submit the problem to the Advisory Council. We will burden the Secretary of Commerce with no end of detail and studies, and then ride herd on him to make sure it is expeditiously done, because it is provided that the study shall be conducted as expeditiously as practicable.

There are questions of obsolescence, of economy, of changes in posture, of changes in defense conditions. The sky is the limit as to the amount of work to be done.

We should not kid ourselves. Even though the amendment has been transformed into nothing more than a request for a study, it is a great compulsive weapon we are asked to put into the hands of people, and it could have an impact upon the defense structure of the country.

I am ready to vote, and I ask for a division on the amendment.

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. President, I shall take only 1 or 2 minutes to respond to the distinguished minority leader.

I make no apologies for offering an amendment yesterday nor for fighting for my people. I would hope that a study would be made with regard to one community in my State which I believe is nearly as depressed as any we seek to aid. The people understood the Army was to pay $50 million a year to obtain a maneuver area. The people said, "We will get it for you for nothing." The people did so, on the assumption that the installation would be a permanent military installation.

The people were told a few years later that the Army intended to close the installation. Vast investments had been made by the people.

I hope other Senators have had the experience I have. I hope any Senator who votes against the amendment will have the experience, because he will learn to understand what I am talking about now.

Tens of millions of dollars have been invested. Half of the stores on the main street of the town are closed. One can hardly even talk to the service about it. The decision has been made. When the homefolks come to Washington, it is impossible to explain to them why they should go broke and be put out of business. The people bonded themselves head over heels into debt, and the service has broken its word to them, yet the service will not even consider all of the obligations which have been made, and did not even know what the people invested when the decision was made.

I know how the services make these decisions. The services know there will be a protest. There are specialists in the Department of Defense who listen to people, who smile, who give a kind word—and that is the end of it. The decision is made, and it will not be changed.

I am saying that the people are entitled at least to some study, to consider all of the things which are involved, when an area is to be made a depressed area.

Mr. President, there would be no burden imposed on the Secretary of Defense. He would not be required to do anything other than to consider the report when it reached him.

Great investments have been made by the people, and the people are entitled to some consideration, at least. The facts should be made known, and they are not being made known now, although people are losing their investments.

I think these things should be considered in such circumstances.

Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the modified amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG] to the committee amendment.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time. I ask for a division on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], as modified.

On a division, the modified amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The committee amendment, as amended, is open to further amendment.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, let us vote on the committee amendment. Let us pass the bill with a large majority, to show that we are behind the program of the President of the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment, in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The committee amendment, as amended, being in the nature of a substitute, is not open to further amendment.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I yield back my remaining time on the bill.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I yield back my remaining time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has been yielded back.

The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass? On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT]. If he were present, he would vote "yea." If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "nay"; I therefore withhold my vote.

The rollcall was concluded.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I announce that the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT], and the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], are absent on official business.

I also announce that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. MCCARTHY], are absent because of illness.

I further announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. BLAKLEY], is necessarily absent.

On this vote, the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT] is paired with the Senator from Arizona [Mr. GOLDWATER]. If present and voting, the Senator from Alaska would vote "yea" and the Senator from Arizona would vote "nay."

On this vote, the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. MCCARTHY] is paired with the Senator from Texas [Mr. BLAKLEY]. If present and voting, the Senator from Minnesota would vote "yea" and the Senator from Texas would vote "nay."

Mr. KUCHEL. I announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ALLOTT] is absent because of death in his family.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROUTY] is absent by leave of the Senate because of illness.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. GOLDWATER] is necessarily absent, and is paired with the Senator from Alaska [Mr. BARTLETT]. If present and voting, the Senator from Arizona would vote "nay" and the Senator from Alaska would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 63, nays 27, as follows:

So the bill (S. 1) was passed, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Area Redevelopment Act".

DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best interests of the United States, but that some of our communities are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment; that such unemployment and underemployment cause hardship to many individuals and their families and detract from the national welfare by wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, should help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment to take effective steps in planning and financing their economic redevelopment; that Federal assistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals in areas needing redevelopment should enable such areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diversified local economies and improved local living conditions; and that under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources rather than merely transferring jobs from one community to another.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that received by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Administrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") may assign.

ADVISORY POLICY BOARD

SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is authorized to be created an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board (hereinafter referred to as the "Board"), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration.

The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under this Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year.

(c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call together and confer with any persons, including representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and government, who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment or underemployment in the several areas designated by the Secretary as redevelopment areas.

REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas within the United States in which he determines, upon the basis of standards generally comparable with those set forth in subparagraphs (1) and (2) below, that there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. There shall be included among the areas so designated any area—

(1) where the rate of unemployment, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in subparagraph (2) below; and

(2) where the annual average rate of unemployment has been at least—

(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two years.

The Secretary of Labor shall find the facts and provide the data to be used by the Secretary in making the determinations required by this subsection. Any area in which a substantial part of the employment is or most recently was in an industry adversely affected by the reduction of trade barriers under section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, with respect to which the President has reported to the Congress under section 4(a) or 7(c) of the Trade Agreements Extension Act of 1951, as amended, and meeting the standards of unemployment set forth in this section shall be entitled on application to special consideration by the Secretary for designation as a redevelopment area.

(b) The Secretary shall also designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas (including Indian reservations) within the United States which do not meet the requirements set forth in subsection (a) but which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection and before making any loans as the result of designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall, by regulation, prescribe detailed standards upon which the designations under this subsection shall be based. In the formulation of such standards the Secretary shall consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are to the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States, the extent to which "rural development" projects have previously been located in any such area under programs administered by the Department of Agriculture, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent of migration out of the area, and the proportion of the population of each area which has been receiving public assistance from the Federal Government and/or from the State or States in which such area is located or from any municipality therein. In making the designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall endeavor to distribute the projects widely among the several States, so far as is feasible and proper, in order that actual experience with this program may be had in as many States and in as many areas and under as many different circumstances as possible: Provided, That not more than one such project shall be located in any one State unless the Secretary has considered such applications for assistance under this Act as may have come from the several States which apply for such assistance. In making these determinations, the Secretary shall be guided, but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies made, and information and data collected or compiled, by (1) departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, (2) State and local governments, (3) universities and land-grant colleges, and (4) private organizations.

(c) Upon the request of the Secretary, the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Interior, and such other heads of agencies as may be appropriate, are authorized to conduct such special studies, obtain such information, and compile and furnish to the Secretary such data as the Secretary may deem necessary or proper to enable him to make the determinations provided for in subsection (b) of this section. The Secretary shall reimburse when appropriate, out of any funds appropriated to carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers for any expenditures incurred by them under this section.

(d) As used in this Act, the term "redevelopment area" refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area and may include one or more States, one or more counties, or one or more municipalities, or a part of a county or municipality.

LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS

SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (including participations therein) to aid in financing any project within a redevelopment area for the purchase or development of land and facilities (including machinery and equipment in cases of demonstrated need) for industrial or commercial usage, including the construction of new buildings, the rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied buildings, and the alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings. Such financial assistance shall not be extended (1) for working capital, or (2) to assist establishments relocating from one area to another. The limitation set forth in clause (2) above shall not be construed to prohibit assistance for the expansion of an existing business operation from its original location or for the establishment of a new branch affiliate, or subsidiary: Provided, That such assistance will not substantially decrease employment in the area of original location.

(b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, subject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

(1) The total amount of loans and loan participations (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding at any one time under this section (A) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(a) shall not exceed $100,000,000 and (B) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(b) shall not exceed $100,000,000;

(2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants, both private and public (including Indian tribes), which have been approved for such assistance by an agency or instrumentality of the State or political subdivision thereof in which the project to be financed is located, and which agency or instrumentality is directly concerned with problems of economic development in such State or subdivision;

(3) The project for which financial assistance is sought is reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located;

(4) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms;

(5) The Secretary shall not make any loan without a participation unless he determines that the loan cannot be made on a participation basis;

(6) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there is a reasonable assurance of repayment;

(7) Subject to section 12(5) of this Act, no loan, including renewals or extension thereof, may be made hereunder for a period exceeding twenty-five years and no evidences of indebtedness maturing more than twenty-five years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor;

(8) Such loans shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9 of this Act, plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum to cover administrative expenses and to provide for losses on loans under this section;

(9) Such assistance shall not exceed 65 per centum of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or developing land and facilities (including, in cases of demonstrated need, machinery and equipment), and of constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building or buildings of the particular project and shall, among others, be on the following conditions:

(A) That other funds are available in an amount which, together with the assistance provided hereunder, shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

(B) That not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by an Indian tribe or a community or area organization which is nongovernmental in character, as equity capital or as a loan;

(C) That in extending financial assistance under this section with respect to a redevelopment area, the Secretary shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made shall be supplied by nongovernmental sources; and

(D) That to the extent the Secretary finds such action necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular project by other lenders and investors any Federal financial assistance extended under this section may be repayable only after other loans made in connection with such project and in accordance with this section have been repaid in full, and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other loans made in connection with the same project;

(10) No such assistance shall be extended unless there shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an overall program for the economic development of the area and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the State or local political subdivision in which the project would be located.

(c) Of the funds authorized to be raised under section 9 of this Act, not more than $100,000,000 shall be deposited in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of making loans under this section with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(a), and not more than $100,000,000 shall be deposited in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of making loans under this section with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(b).

PUBLIC FACILITY LOANS FOR INDUSTRIAL OR COMMERCIAL PURPOSES

SEC. 7. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or public or private nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase or development of land for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities within any redevelopment area, if he finds that such facilities will serve primarily industrial or commercial needs and that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in the redevelopment area wherein such project is, or will be, located, and will tend to improve the opportunities in such area for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities;

(2) the funds requested for such project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms;

(3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of other available funds for such projects are adequate to insure the completion thereof;

(4) there is a reasonable expectation of repayment; and

(5) such area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10) and the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program.

(b) No loan under this section shall be for an amount in excess of 65 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made. Subject to section 12(5), the maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than forty years after the date such loan is made. Any such loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9 of this Act, plus one-quarter of 1 per centum per annum.

(c) In making any loan under this section, the Secretary shall require that not less than 10 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made shall be supplied by the State (including any political subdivision thereof) within which such project is located or by the Indian tribe on whose reservation such project is located as equity capital or as a loan. In determining the amount of participation required under this subsection with respect to any particular project, the Secretary shall give consideration to the financial condition of the State or local government, and to the per capita income of the residents of the redevelopment area, within which such project is to be located.

(d) To the extent the Secretary finds such action necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular project by other lenders and investors, any Federal financial assistance extended under this section may be repayable only after other loans made in connection with such project and in accordance with this section have been repaid in full, and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other loans made in connection with the same project.

(e) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it agrees to undertake.

(f) Of the funds authorized to be raised under section 9 of this Act, not more than $100,000,000 shall be deposited in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of making loans under this section.

PUBLIC FACILITY GRANTS FOR INDUSTRIAL OR COMMERCIAL PURPOSES

SEC. 8. (a) The Secretary may conduct studies of needs in the various redevelopment areas throughout the United States for, and the probable cost of, land acquisition or development for public facility usage in serving industrial or commercial needs, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of useful public facilities to serve such needs within such areas, and may receive proposals from any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or public or private nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area, or part thereof, relating to land acquisition or development for such public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of such public facilities within any such area. Any such proposal shall contain plans showing the project proposed to be undertaken, the cost thereof, and the contributions proposed to be made to such cost by the entity making the proposal. The Secretary, in consultation with such entity, is authorized to modify all or any part of such proposal.

(b) The Secretary, pursuant to a proposal received by him under this section, may make grants to any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or public or private nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area, or part thereof, for land acquisition or development for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities within a redevelopment area, if he finds that such facilities will serve primarily industrial or commercial needs and that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in the redevelopment area wherein such project is, or will be, located, and will tend to improve the opportunities in such area for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities;

(2) the entity requesting the grant proposes to contribute to the cost of the project for which such grant is requested in proportion to its ability so to contribute;

(3) the project for which a grant is requested will fulfill a pressing need of the area, or part thereof, in which it is, or will be, located, and there is little probability that such project can be undertaken without the assistance of a grant under this section; and

(4) the area for which a project is to be undertaken has an approved economic development program as provided in section

6(b) (10) and such project is consistent with such program.

The amount of any grant under this section for any such project shall not exceed the difference between the funds which can be practicably obtained from other sources (including a loan under section 7 of this Act) for such project, and the amount which is necessary to insure the completion thereof.

(c) The Secretary shall by regulation provide for the supervision of projects with respect to which grants are made under this section so as to insure that Federal funds are not wasted or dissipated.

(d) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it agrees to undertake.

(e) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $75,000,000 for the purpose of making grants under this section.

FUNDS FOR LOANS

SEC. 9. (a) To obtain funds for loans under this Act, the Secretary may, with the approval of the President, issue and have outstanding at any one time notes and obligations for purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury in an amount not to exceed \$300,000,000. Such notes or other obligations shall be in such forms and denominations, have such maturities, and be subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds for loans under section 6 shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, but such rate shall not be greater than the current average yields on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturities as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of such notes or other obligations. Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds for loans under section 7 shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury which shall be not more than the higher of (1) $2\frac{1}{2}$ per centum per annum, or (2) the average annual interest rate on all interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt as computed at the end of the fiscal year next preceding the issuance by the Secretary and adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase any notes and other obligations issued under this section and for such purpose is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as amended, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under such Act are extended to include any purchase of such notes and other obligations. The Secretary of the Treasury may at any time sell any of the notes or other obligations acquired by him under this section. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such notes or other obligations shall be treated in every respect as public debt transactions of the United States.

(b) In the performance of and with respect to the functions, powers, and duties vested in him by sections 6 and 7 of this Act, the Secretary shall—

(1) prepare annually and submit a budget program in accordance with the provisions of sections 102, 103, and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended; and

(2) determine the character of and the necessity for obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to provisions of law specifically applicable to Government corporations.

INFORMATION

SEC. 10. Subject to section 24, the Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas. The Secretary shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

SEC. 11. Subject to section 24, in carrying out his duties under this Act the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment (1) to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under this Act, and (2) to other areas which he finds have substantial need for such assistance. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secretary through members of his staff or through the employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations, or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such purposes. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purposes of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000 annually.

POWERS OF SECRETARY

SEC. 12. In performing his duties under this Act, the Secretary is authorized to—

(1) adopt, alter, and use a seal, which shall be judicially noticed; and subject to the civil service and classification laws, select, employ, appoint, and fix the compensation of such officers, employees, attorneys, and agents as shall be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act, and define their authority and duties, provide bonds for them in such amounts as the Secretary shall determine, and pay the costs of qualifications of certain of them as notaries public;

(4) under regulations prescribed by him, assign or sell at public or private sale, or otherwise dispose of for cash or credit, in his discretion and upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any evidence of debt, contract, claim, personal property, or security assigned to or held by him in connection with the payment of loans made under this Act, and collect or compromise all obligations assigned to or held by him in connection with the payment of such loans until such time as such obligations may be referred to the Attorney General for suit or collection;

(5) further extend the maturity of or renew any loan made under this Act, beyond the periods stated in such loan or in this Act, for additional periods not to exceed ten years, if such extension or renewal will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loan;

(6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, modernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any real or personal property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by, him in connection with the payment of loans made under this Act;

(7) pursue to final collection, by way of compromise or other administrative action, prior to reference to the Attorney General, all claims against third parties assigned to him in connection with loans made under this Act. The power to convey and to execute, in the name of the Secretary, deeds of conveyance, deeds of release, assignments and satisfactions of mortgages, and any other written instrument relating to real or personal property or any interest therein acquired by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of this Act may be exercised by the Secretary or by any officer or agent appointed by him for that purpose without the execution of any express delegation of power or power of attorney;

(8) acquire, in any lawful manner, any property (real, personal, or mixed, tangible or intangible), whenever deemed necessary or appropriate to the conduct of the activities authorized in sections 6 and 7 of this Act;

(9) in addition to any powers, functions, privileges, and immunities otherwise vested in him, take any and all actions, including the procurement of the services of attorneys by contract, determined by him to be necessary or desirable in making, servicing, compromising, modifying, liquidating, or otherwise administratively dealing with or realizing on loans made under this Act;

(10) to such an extent as he finds necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act, procure the temporary (not in excess of six months) service of experts or consultants or organizations thereof, including stenographic reporting services, by contract or appointment, and in such cases such service shall be without regard to the civil service and classification laws, and, except in the case of stenographic reporting services by organizations, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5); any individual so employed may be compensated at a rate not in excess of $75 per diem, and, while such individual is away from his home or regular place of business, he may be allowed transportation and not to exceed $15 per diem in lieu of subsistence and other expenses;

(11) sue and be sued in any court of record of a State having general jurisdiction or in any United States district court, and jurisdiction is conferred upon such district court to determine such controversies without regard to the amount in controversy; but no attachment, injunction, garnishment, or other similar process, mesne or final, shall be issued against the Secretary or his property. Nothing herein shall be construed to except the activities under this Act from the application of sections 507(b) and 2679 of title 28, United States Code, and of section 367 of the Revised Statutes (5 U.S.C. 316); and

(12) establish such rules, regulations, and procedures as he may deem appropriate in carrying out the provisions of this Act.

TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

SEC. 13. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall be granted under this Act with respect to such area and, for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secretary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment area. The Secretary shall keep the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

URBAN RENEWAL

SEC. 14. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

"SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (in this section referred to as a 'municipality') is situated in an area designated under section 5 of the Area Redevelopment Act as a redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economy, the Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

"(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e) of this section, the Secretary may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirement or limitations of section 110(c) that the project area be predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses under the urban renewal plan, and without regard to any of the limitations of that section on the undertaking of projects for predominantly non-residential uses.

"(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, a contract for financial assistance under this section may include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the project area designated under the urban renewal plan for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or non-profit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to such public agency or corporation under this section shall be made at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And provided further, That only the purchasers from or lessees of such public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obligations relating to the commencement of improvements imposed under section 105(b) hereof.

"(d) Following the execution of any contract for financial assistance under this section with respect to any project, the Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him under this section as well as other provisions of this title for the completion of such projects, notwithstanding any determination made after the execution of such contract that the area in which the project is located is no longer a redevelopment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

"(e) The aggregate amount of capital grants which may be contracted for under this title with respect to projects for the redevelopment of urban renewal areas for predominantly nonresidential uses, under the second proviso of the fifth sentence of section 110(c), may be increased by an amount not to exceed 10 per centum of the aggregate amount of new grant contract authority provided after September 23, 1959, whenever the Administrator determines (1) that an increase in such amount is necessary in order to provide financial assistance under this section, and (2) that such assistance is not otherwise available because of the limitation contained in such proviso."

SEC. 15. (a) Paragraph (3) of section 701(a) of the Housing Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after "counties which" the following: "(A) are situated in areas designated by the Secretary of Commerce under section 5(a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as redevelopment areas or (B)".

(b) Section 701(b) of such Act is amended by adding before the period at the end of the first sentence a colon and the following: "Provided, That a grant may be made under clause (A) of paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this section for not more than 75 per centum of such estimated cost".

OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING

SEC. 16. (a) The Secretary of Labor is authorized, upon request and whenever he determines such studies are needed, to undertake, or to provide assistance to others for studies of the size, characteristics, skills, adaptability, occupational potentialities, and related aspects of the labor force of any redevelopment area.

(b) When a redevelopment area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10), the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the Secretary, shall determine the occupational training or retraining needs of unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in the redevelopment area. The Secretary of Labor shall notify the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare of the occupational training or retraining requirements of the area, and shall provide for the orderly selection and referral of those unemployed or underemployed individuals residing in the area who can reasonably be expected to obtain employment as a result of the skill they will acquire in the training which is to be available, and shall make appropriate provision for such supervision by the appropriate agency as is necessary to the successful operation of any training program established under this section. The Secretary of Labor shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and with existing State and local agencies and officials in charge of existing programs relating to vocational training and retraining for the purpose of assuring that the facilities and services of such agencies are made fully available to such individuals.

(c) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that additional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet the occupational training or retraining needs of such individuals, he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall provide assistance, including financial assistance when necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational agency in the provision of such additional facilities or services. If the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare finds that the State vocational educational agency is unable to provide the facilities and services needed, he may, after consultation with such agency, provide for the same by agreement or contract with public or private educational institutions.

(d) The Secretary of Labor shall arrange to provide any necessary technical assistance for setting up apprenticeships, and to promote journeyman and other on-the-job training.

(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $4,600,000 annually, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

SEC. 17. (a) The Secretary of Labor in consultation with the Secretary may, on behalf of the United States, enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment areas are located, under which the Secretary of Labor shall make payments to such States either in advance or by way of reimbursement for the purpose of enabling such States, as agents of the United States, to make weekly retraining payments to unemployed or underemployed individuals residing within such redevelopment areas who are certified by the Secretary of Labor to be undergoing occupational training or retraining under section 16 of this Act. Such payments shall be made only for the period the individual is receiving occupational training or retraining under section 16 of this Act, but not in any event to exceed sixteen weeks, and the amounts of such payments shall be equal to the amount of the average weekly unemployment compensation payment payable in the State making such payments.

(b) No weekly retraining payment shall be made to any person otherwise eligible who, with respect to the week for which such payment would be made, has received or is seeking unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or any other Federal or any State unemployment compensation law, but if the appropriate State or Federal agency finally determines that a person denied weekly training benefits because of this paragraph is not entitled to unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or such Federal or State law, this paragraph shall not apply.

(c) Any agreement under this section may contain provisions (including, so far as may be appropriate, provisions authorized or made applicable with respect to agreements concluded by the Secretary of Labor pursuant to title XV of the Social Security Act) as will promote effective administration, protect the United States against loss, and insure the proper application of payments made to the State under such agreement. Except as may be provided in such agreements, or in the rules and regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, determinations by any duly designated officer or agency as to the eligibility of individuals for weekly retraining payments under this section shall be final and conclusive for any purposes and not subject to review by any court or any other officer.

(d) The Secretary of Labor and the Secretary shall jointly prescribe such rules and regulations as they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $10,000,000 annually, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I wish to take this occasion to express my congratulations to the distinguished Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] for the masterful way in which he has handled the complicated piece of legislation which we have passed. All of us have learned a great deal from the debate. No Member of the Senate is more enlightening and at the same time more exciting and more interesting in his discussion of a complicated issue than is the distinguished senior Senator from Illinois.

I am sure that I speak for all our colleagues on both sides of the aisle when I say that this has been a job well done, and that no Senator is more deserving of the honors and plaudits of the administration for bringing this bill before the Senate and then having it passed by the Senate than is the distinguished senior Senator from Illinois.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, I wish to join the Senator from Minnesota in what he has said. Let us remember that this is the third time the distinguished senior Senator from Illinois has steered this legislation through the Senate. Of course, we know that it fell by the wayside heretofore, because of Presidential vetoes. However, I feel confident that this time the bill will become law and will be a beneficial program for the country. I join in congratulating the distinguished senior Senator from Illinois for the tremendous job he has done.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I join my distinguished colleagues the Senator from Minnesota and the Senator from Alabama in what they have had to say about the distinguished senior Senator from Illinois, who has once again steered a depressed areas bill through the Senate. He has worked on the site in some of these areas at the direction of the President of the United States. He has introduced other bills and has had other bills passed by the Senate. I am certain that the bill we have passed will not meet the fate which similar bills have met on two previous occasions. I extend my congratulations to him for a job well done.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I merely wish to point out that once again the Senator from Illinois has demonstrated his statesmanship in the Senate. It does not surprise me, but it does please me. I thank him.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I believe the Senator from Illinois is deserving of the medal of New Frontiersman No. 1.

Mr. LAUSCHE. Mr. President, while I did not see eye to eye with the Senator from Illinois, I wish to commend him for his persistence and valiance in presenting the cause intelligently, so that it was understood by all Senators.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues. I know that their praise is undeserved. The credit for the bill goes in large part to the staff, and also to the devoted members of the Committee on Banking and Currency, whose crucial votes enabled us to bring the bill to the floor, and to the Members of the Senate who supported it on the floor.

No one claims that the bill, if enacted into law, will cure unemployment. It will not cure all the unemployment in the depressed areas. We do not wish to give an exaggerated idea of its importance. We simply say that it will be of help; that is all.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, it is quite refreshing to see the mutual admiration society in operation again, as it has been so often.

THE INTERSTATE HIGHWAY SYSTEM—COMMUNICATION FROM THE PRESIDENT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. PELL in the chair). The Chair lays before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, relating to the Interstate Highway System.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the communication be printed in the RECORD, and, with the accompanying document, be referred to the Committee on Public Works, and the Committee on Finance, to consider the matters under their respective jurisdictions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The communication from the President is as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,

Washington, March 14, 1961.

Hon. LYNDON B. JOHNSON,
President of the U.S. Senate,
Washington, D.C.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I am transmitting herewith the draft of a bill which will make it possible to complete our Interstate Highway System by 1972. The program will be financed on a pay-as-you-go basis.

I am convinced that either stretching out or cutting back our highway program would be unwise. It would be particularly unfortunate today, when our economy needs the growth, our people need the safety, and our national defense needs the security that this program helps provide. Unless this legislation is enacted promptly, apportionments to the States will have to be reduced substantially below desired levels.

This is a sound method for resolving the difficulties the program now faces and for meeting our responsibilities to the future.

I am also enclosing a letter from the Secretary of Commerce dealing with the measure.

Sincerely,

JOHN F. KENNEDY.

AMENDMENT OF BACON-DAVIS ACT

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, on behalf of myself and the Senator from California [Mr. KUCHEL], I earlier today introduced a bill to amend the so-called Davis-Bacon Act—relating to the payment of prevailing wages on Federal construction work. This law was first enacted in 1931 and was considerably revised in 1935 to represent what was then a comparatively effective instrument for preventing the purchasing power of the Federal Government from undermining existing labor conditions in the construction industry.

Since 1935, however, experience has revealed many drawbacks in the framework for administering the Davis-Bacon Act. In fact, changing conditions in the construction industry have required a new look at the way the act operates today. That is the purpose of this bill—namely, to provide a basis for taking a new and more realistic look at the Davis-Bacon Act.

Since 1935 the Secretary of Labor has confined himself to determine the basic hourly wage rate as the only prevailing rate required by the act. Nowadays, however, this basic hourly wage rate falls far short of reflecting the actual hourly labor costs on construction jobs. Collective agreements throughout the industry now cover many additional payments for the welfare of workers—payments which did not exist in 1935. For example, most agreements in many areas of the country now provide for payments, on an hourly, or payroll basis, to so-called health and welfare funds, so as to provide much needed sick and hospital and medical benefits to construction workers and their families. Payments are also frequently required to be made to pension funds and to supplementary unemployment benefit funds. Many agreements also require payments to various training funds of direct benefit to journeymen and apprentices whose skills are the lifeblood of the construction industry and the mainstay of those who depend upon this great industry for their livelihood.

Recent surveys have shown that the payments to these funds are not only a substitute for direct wage increases which workers would otherwise have received as a part of their basic hourly wage rate but, in addition, that these payments now are a very large part of

1ST SESSION

S. 1

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MARCH 16, 1961

Referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency

AN ACT

To establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas.

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,
3 That this Act may be cited as the "Area Redevelopment
4 Act".

6 SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of 7 the national economy at a high level is vital to the best in-
8 terests of the United States, but that some of our communi-
9 ties are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment
10 and underemployment; that such unemployment and under-

1 employment cause hardship to many individuals and their
2 families and detract from the national welfare by wasting
3 vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the
4 Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, should
5 help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and
6 underemployment to take effective steps in planning and
7 financing their economic redevelopment; that Federal as-
8 sistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and indi-
9 viduals in areas needing redevelopment should enable such
10 areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the do-
11 mestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diver-
12 sified local economies and improved local living conditions;
13 and that under the provisions of this Act new employment
14 opportunities should be created by developing and expanding
15 new and existing facilities and resources rather than merely 16 transferring jobs from one community to another.

17 AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATOR

18 SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by 19 and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Re-
20 development Administrator in the Department of Commerce
21 who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that re-
22 ceived by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Admin-
23 istrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act
24 as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the 25 "Secretary") may assign.

ADVISORY POLICY BOARD

SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is authorized to be created an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board (hereinafter referred to as the "Board"), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration.

The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of

1 his duties under this Act. Such Committee shall hold not
2 less than two meetings during each calendar year.

3 (c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call
4 together and confer with any persons, including representa-
5 tives of labor, management, agriculture, and government,
6 who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment
7 or underemployment in the several areas designated by the 8 Secretary as redevelopment areas.

9 REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

10 SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as "rede-
11 velopment areas" those areas within the United States in 12 which he determines, upon the basis of standards generally
13 comparable with those set forth in subparagraphs (1) and 14 (2) below, that there has existed substantial and persistent
15 unemployment for an extended period of time. There shall 16 be included among the areas so designated any area—

17 (1) where the rate of unemployment, excluding un-
18 employment due primarily to temporary or seasonal 19 factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has 20 averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time
21 periods specified in subparagraph (2) below; and

22 (2) where the annual average rate of unemploy-
23 ment has been at least—

24 (A) 50 per centum above the national average
25 for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two years.

The Secretary of Labor shall find the facts and provide the data to be used by the Secretary in making the determinations required by this subsection. Any area in which a substantial part of the employment is or most recently was in an industry adversely affected by the reduction of trade barriers under section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, with respect to which the President has reported to the Congress under section 4 (a) or 7 (c) of the Trade Agreements Extension Act of 1951, as amended, and meeting the standards of unemployment set forth in this section shall be entitled on application to special consideration by the Secretary for designation as a redevelopment area.

(b) The Secretary shall also designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas (including Indian reservations) within the United States which do not meet the requirements set forth in subsection (a) but which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection and before making any loans as the result of design-

1 nations under this subsection, the Secretary shall, by
2 regulation, prescribe detailed standards upon which the desig-
3 nations under this subsection shall be based. In the formula-
4 tion of such standards the Secretary shall consider,
5 among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm
6 families in the various rural areas of the United States, the 7 proportion that such low-income families are to the total farm
8 families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income
9 levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of 10 income in the United States, the extent to which "rural de-
11 velopment" projects have previously been located in any
12 such area under programs administered by the Department
13 of Agriculture, the current and prospective employment
14 opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower
15 in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent
16 of migration out of the area, and the proportion of the popu-
17 lation of each such area which has been receiving public
18 assistance from the Federal Government and/or from the 19 State or States in which such area is located or from any 20 municipality therein. In making the designations under this 21 subsection, the Secretary shall endeavor to distribute the
22 projects widely among the several States, so far as is feasible
23 and proper, in order that actual experience with this pro-
24 gram may be had in as many States and in as many areas and 25 under as many different circumstances as possible: Provided,

1 That not more than one such project shall be located in any
2 one State unless the Secretary has considered such applica-
3 tions for assistance under this Act as may have come from
4 the several States which apply for such assistance. In mak-
5 ing these determinations, the Secretary shall be guided,
6 but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies made, and
7 information and data collected or compiled, by (1) depart-
8 ments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Govern-
9 ment, (2) State and local governments, (3) universities and 10 land-grant colleges, and (4) private organizations.

11 (c) Upon the request of the Secretary, the Secre-
12 tary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary
13 of the Interior, and such other heads of agencies as may be
14 appropriate, are authorized to conduct such special studies,
15 obtain such information, and compile and furnish to the Sec-
16 retary such data as the Secretary may deem necessary or 17 proper to enable him to make the determinations provided
18 for in subsection (b) of this section. The Secretary shall 19 reimburse when appropriate, out of any funds appropriated
20 to carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers
21 for any expenditures incurred by them under this section.

22 (d) As used in this Act, the term "redevelopment area"
23 refers to any area within the United States which has
24 been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area
25 and may include one or more States, one or more counties,

1 or one or more municipalities, or a part of a county or
2 municipality.

3 LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS

4 SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase
5 evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (including
6 participations therein) to aid in financing any project within 7 a redevelopment area for the purchase or development of
8 land and facilities (including machinery and equipment in 9 cases of demonstrated need) for industrial or commercial
10 usage, including the construction of new buildings, the re-
11 habilitation of abandoned or unoccupied buildings, and the 12 alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings.
13 Such financial assistance shall not be extended (1) for work-
14 ing capital, or (2) to assist establishments relocating from 15 one area to another. The limitation set forth in clause (2)
16 above shall not be construed to prohibit assistance for the ex-
17 pansion of an existing business operation from its original
18 location or for the establishment of a new branch affiliate, or 19 subsidiary: Provided, That such assistance will not sub-
20 stantially decrease employment in the area of original
21 location.

22 (b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on 23 such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, sub-
24 ject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

25 (1) The total amount of loans and loan participations

1 (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding
2 at any one time under this section (A) with respect to
3 projects in redevelopment areas designated under section
4 5 (a) shall not exceed $100,000,000 and (B) with respect
5 to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section
6 5 (b) shall not exceed $100,000,000;

7 (2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants,
8 both private and public (including Indian tribes), which 9 have been approved for such assistance by an agency or
10 instrumentality of the State or political subdivision thereof
11 in which the project to be financed is located, and which 12 agency or instrumentality is directly concerned with problems
13 of economic development in such State or subdivision;

14 (3) The project for which financial assistance is sought
15 is reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary
16 alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the 17 redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located;

18 (4) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder
19 unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise
20 available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on 21 reasonable terms;

22 (5) The Secretary shall not make any loan without 23 a participation unless he determines that the loan cannot be
24 made on a participation basis;

1 (6) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased
2 and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there
3 is a reasonable assurance of repayment;

4 (7) Subject to section 12 (5) of this Act, no loan,
5 including renewals or extension thereof, may be made
6 hereunder for a period exceeding twenty-five years and no
7 evidences of indebtedness maturing more than twenty-five
8 years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder:
9 Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities
10 shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the 11 Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable re-
12 organization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant
13 upon insolvency of the obligor;

14 (8) Such loans shall bear interest at a rate equal to the 15 rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained
16 from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9
17 of this Act, plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum to 18 cover administrative expenses and to provide for losses on 19 loans under this section;

20 (9) Such assistance shall not exceed 65 per centum of 21 the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Fed-
22 eral aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or 23 developing land and facilities (including, in cases of demon-
24 strated need, machinery and equipment), and of constructing,
25 altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building

1 or buildings of the particular project and shall, among others,
2 be on the following conditions:

3 (A) That other funds are available in an amount which,
4 together with the assistance provided hereunder, shall be
5 sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

6 (B) That not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate
7 cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality,
8 or political subdivision thereof, or by an Indian tribe or a
9 community or area organization which is nongovernmental
10 in character, as equity capital or as a loan;

11 (C) That in extending financial assistance under this
12 section with respect to a redevelopment area, the Secretary
13 shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate
14 cost of the project for which such loan is made shall be 15 supplied by nongovernmental sources; and

16 (D) That to the extent the Secretary finds such action
17 necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular
18 project by other lenders and investors any Federal financial 19 assistance extended under this section may be repayable only 20 after other loans made in connection with such project and 21 in accordance with this section have been repaid in full,
22 and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance
23 may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing
24 other loans made in connection with the same project;

25 (10) No such assistance shall be extended unless there

1 shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an
2 overall program for the economic development of the area
3 and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality,
4 or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for
5 which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such
6 program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize 7 financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the 8 State or local political subdivision in which the project would 9 be located.

10 (c) Of the funds authorized to be raised under section
11 9 of this Act, not more than $100,000,000 shall be deposited
12 in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of 13 making loans under this section with respect to projects in 14 redevelopment areas designated under section 5 (a), and 15 not more than $100,000,000 shall be deposited in a revolving 16 fund which shall be used for the purpose of making
17 loans under this section with respect to projects in redevelopment
18 areas designated under section 5 (b).

20

21 SEC. 7. (a) Upon the application of any State, or 22 political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or public or 23 private nonprofit organization or association representing 24 any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is 25 authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase

1 or development of land for public facility usage, and the
2 construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or im-
3 provement of public facilities within any redevelopment area,
4 if he finds that such facilities will serve primarily industrial
5 or commercial needs and that—

6 (1) the project for which financial assistance is
7 sought will provide more than a temporary alleviation
8 of unemployment or underemployment in the redevelop-
9 ment area wherein such project is, or will be, located,
10 and will tend to improve the opportunities in such area
11 for the successful establishment or expansion of indus-
12 trial or commercial plants or facilities;

13 (2) the funds requested for such project are not
14 otherwise available on reasonable terms;

15 (3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of 16 other available funds for such projects are adequate to 17 insure the completion thereof;

18 (4) there is a reasonable expectation of repayment;
19 and

20 (5) such area has an approved economic develop-
21 ment program as provided in section 6(b)(10) and 22 the project for which financial assistance is sought is 23 consistent with such program.

24 (b) No loan under this section shall be for an amount
25 in excess of 65 per centum of the aggregate cost of the proj-

1 ect for which such loan is made. Subject to section 12 (5),
2 the maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than
3 forty years after the date such loan is made. Any such
4 loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest
5 paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secre-
6 tary of the Treasury as provided in section 9 of this Act, plus
7 one-quarter of 1 per centum per annum.

8 (c) In making any loan under this section, the Secre-
9 tary shall require that not less than 10 per centum
10 of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is 11 made shall be supplied by the State (including any political 12 subdivision thereof) within which such project is located or 13 by the Indian tribe on whose reservation such project is 14 located as equity capital or as a loan. In determining the 15 amount of participation required under this subsection with 16 respect to any particular project, the Secretary shall give 17 consideration to the financial condition of the State or local 18 government, and to the per capita income of the residents of 19 the redevelopment area, within which such project is to be 20 located.

21 (d) To the extent the Secretary finds such action
22 necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular
23 project by other lenders and investors, any Federal financial 24 assistance extended under this section may be repayable only
25 after other loans made in connection with such project and in

1 accordance with this section have been repaid in full, and the
2 security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be
3 subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other
4 loans made in connection with the same project.

5 (e) No financial assistance shall be extended under this
6 section with respect to any public facility which would com-
7 pete with an existing privately owned public utility render-
8 ing a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regu-
9 lation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory
10 body determines that in the area to be served by the public
11 facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended
12 there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into 13 consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the 14 existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing 15 facilities or through an expansion which it agrees to under-
16 take.

17 (f) Of the funds authorized to be raised under section
18 9 of this Act, not more than $100,000,000 shall be deposited
19 in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of 20 making loans under this section.

21 PUBLIC FACILITY GRANTS FOR INDUSTRIAL OR COMMER-
22 CIAL PURPOSES

23 SEC. 8. (a) The Secretary may conduct studies of 24 needs in the various redevelopment areas throughout the 25 United States for, and the probable cost of, land acquisition

1 or development for public facility usage in serving industrial
2 or commercial needs, and the construction, rehabilitation,
3 alteration, expansion, or improvement of useful public
4 facilities to serve such needs within such areas, and
5 may receive proposals from any State, or political sub-
6 division thereof, Indian tribe, or public or private
7 nonprofit organization or association representing any re-
8 development area, or part thereof, relating to land acquisition
9 or development for such public facility usage, and the con-
10 struction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improve-
11 ment of such public facilities within any such area. Any 12 such proposal shall contain plans showing the project pro-
13 posed to be undertaken, the cost thereof, and the contribu-
14 tions proposed to be made to such cost by the entity making
15 the proposal. The Secretary, in consultation with such 16 entity, is authorized to modify all or any part of such 17 proposal.

18 (b) The Secretary, pursuant to a proposal received
19 by him under this section, may make grants to any State, or 20 political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or public or private
21 nonprofit organization or association representing any re-
22 development area, or part thereof, for land acquisition or de-
23 velopment for public facility usage, and the construction, re-
24 habilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public
25 facilities within a redevelopment area, if he finds that such

1 facilities will serve primarily industrial or commercial needs
2 and that—

3 (1) the project for which financial assistance is
4 sought will provide more than a temporary alleviation
5 of unemployment or underemployment in the redevelop-
6 ment area wherein such project is, or will be, located,
7 and will tend to improve the opportunities in such area
8 for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial
9 or commercial plants or facilities;

10 (2) the entity requesting the grant proposes to 11 contribute to the cost of the project for which such grant
12 is requested in proportion to its ability so to contribute;

13 (3) the project for which a grant is requested will 14 fulfill a pressing need of the area, or part thereof, in 15 which it is, or will be, located, and there is little proba-
16 bility that such project can be undertaken without the 17 assistance of a grant under this section; and

18 (4) the area for which a project is to be undertaken
19 has an approved economic development program as pro-
20 vided in section 6 (b) (10) and such project is consistent
21 with such program.

22 The amount of any grant under this section for any such 23 project shall not exceed the difference between the funds
24 which can be practicably obtained from other sources (in-

1 eluding a loan under section 7 of this Act) for such project,
2 and the amount which is necessary to insure the completion
3 thereof.

4 (c) The Secretary shall by regulation provide for the 5 supervision of projects with respect to which grants are
6 made under this section so as to insure that Federal funds
7 are not wasted or dissipated.

8 (d) No financial assistance shall be extended under 9 this section with respect to any public facility which would
10 compete with an existing privately owned public utility
11 rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject
12 to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State
13 regulatory body determines that in the area to be served
14 by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to 15 be extended there is a need for an increase in such service
16 (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future
17 needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet
18 through its existing facilities or through an expansion which 19 it agrees to undertake.

20 (e) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated
21 not to exceed $75,000,000 for the purpose of making grants
22 under this section.

23 FUNDS FOR LOANS

24 SEC. 9. (a) To obtain funds for loans under this Act, the 25 Secretary may, with the approval of the President, issue

1 and have outstanding at any one time notes and obligations
2 for purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury in an amount
3 not to exceed $300,000,000. Such notes or other obliga-
4 tions shall be in such forms and denominations, have such
5 maturities, and be subject to such terms and conditions as
6 may be prescribed by the Secretary with the approval of the 7 Secretary of the Treasury. Any such notes or other ob-
8 ligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds
9 for loans under section 6 shall bear interest at a rate de-
10 termined by the Secretary of the Treasury, but such rate
11 shall not be greater than the current average yields on 12 outstanding marketable obligations of the United States
13 of comparable maturities as of the last day of the month
14 preceding the issuance of such notes or other obligations.
15 Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the 16 Secretary to raise funds for loans under section 7 shall 17 bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the 18 Treasury which shall be not more than the higher of (1)
19 $2\frac{1}{2}$ per centum per annum, or (2) the average annual in-20 terest rate on all interest-bearing obligations of the United 21 States then forming a part of the public debt as computed 22 at the end of the fiscal year next preceding the issuance by 23 the Secretary and adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1
24 per centum. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized
25 and directed to purchase any notes and other obligations

1 issued under this section and for such purpose is authorized
2 to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale
3 of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond
4 Act, as amended, and the purposes for which securities may
5 be issued under such Act are extended to include any pur-
6 chase of such notes and other obligations. The Secretary
7 of the Treasury may at any time sell any of the notes or 8 other obligations acquired by him under this section. All
9 redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the 10 Treasury of such notes or other obligations shall be treated 11 in every respect as public debt transactions of the United 12 States.

13 (b) In the performance of and with respect to the func-
14 tions, powers, and duties vested in him by sections 6 and 7 of 15 this Act, the Secretary shall—

16 (1) prepare annually and submit a budget program
17 in accordance with the provisions of sections 102, 103,
18 and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as 19 amended; and

20 (2) determine the character of and the necessity for 21 obligations and expenditures and the manner in which
22 they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to pro-
23 visions of law specifically applicable to Government
24 corporations.

2 SEC. 10. Subject to section 24, the Secretary shall aid
3 redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to inter-
4 ested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises
5 within such areas any assistance, technical information, mar-
6 ket research, or other forms of assistance, information, or
7 advice which are obtainable from the various departments,
8 agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government
9 and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing con-
10 ditions of excessive unemployment or underemploy-
11 ment within such areas. The Secretary shall fur-
12 nish the procurement divisions of the various departments,
13 agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Govern-
14 ment with a list containing the names and addresses of busi-15 ness firms which are located in redevelopment areas and 16 which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for 17 the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the 18 supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

20 SEC. 11. Subject to section 24, in carrying out his duties
21 under this Act the Secretary is authorized to provide 22 technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or 23 preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or under-

1 employment (1) to areas which he has designated as rede-
2 velopment areas under this Act, and (2) to other areas
3 which he finds have substantial need for such assistance.
4 Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs
5 of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of
6 such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secre-
7 tary through members of his staff or through the employ-
8 ment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations,
9 or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such
10 purposes. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the pur-
11 poses of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000
12 annually.

14 SEC. 12. In performing his duties under this Act, the 15 Secretary is authorized to—

17 judicially noticed; and subject to the civil service and 18 classification laws, select, employ, appoint, and fix the 16 determine to be reasonable, any evidence of debt, con-17 tract, claim, personal property, or security assigned to 18 or held by him in connection with the payment of loans

19 made under this Act, and collect or compromise all
20 obligations assigned to or held by him in connection 21 with the payment of such loans until such time as such 22 obligations may be referred to the Attorney General
23 for suit or collection;

24 (5) further extend the maturity of or renew any 25 loan made under this Act, beyond the periods stated in

1 such loan or in this Act, for additional periods not to 3 in the orderly liquidation of such loan;

4 (6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, mod-
5 ernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such
6 terms and conditions and for such consideration as he 7 shall determine to be reasonable, any real or personal
8 property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by, him
9 in connection with the payment of loans made under 10 this Act;

11 (7) pursue to final collection, by way of compro-
12 mise or other administrative action, prior to reference

16 ficiency judgments or otherwise in the case of mort-17 gages assigned to the Secretary. Section 3709 of 18 the Revised Statutes, as amended (41 U.S.C. 5), shall 19 not apply to any contract of hazard insurance or 20 to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on 21 account of property obtained by the Secretary as a 22 result of loans made under this Act if the premium there-
23 for or the amount thereof does not exceed $1,000.
24 The power to convey and to execute, in the name of the 25 Secretary, deeds of conveyance, deeds of release,

1 assignments and satisfactions of mortgages, and any
2 other written instrument relating to real or personal
3 property or any interest therein acquired by the Sec-
4 retary pursuant to the provisions of this Act may be
5 exercised by the Secretary or by any officer or agent
6 appointed by him for that purpose without the execution
7 of any express delegation of power or power of attorney;

8 (8) acquire, in any lawful manner, any property
9 (real, personal, or mixed, tangible or intangible), when-10 ever deemed necessary or appropriate to the conduct of 11 the activities authorized in sections 6 and 7 of this Act;

12 (9) in addition to any powers, functions, privileges, 13 and immunities otherwise vested in him, take any and 14 all actions, including the procurement of the services of 15 attorneys by contract, determined by him to be necessary
16 or desirable in making, servicing, compromising, modify-17 ing, liquidating, or otherwise administratively dealing 18 with or realizing on loans made under this Act;

19 (10) to such an extent as he finds necessary to 20 carry out the provisions of this Act, procure the tem-

23 graphic reporting services, by contract or appointment, 24 and in such cases such service shall be without regard to

1 the civil service and classification laws, and, except in
2 the case of stenographic reporting services by organiza-
3 tions, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised
4 Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5) ; any individual so employed
5 may be compensated at a rate not in excess of $75 per 6 diem, and, while such individual is away from his home
7 or regular place of business, he may be allowed trans-

23 cedures as he may deem appropriate in carrying out the 24 provisions of this Act.

1 TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

2 SEC. 13. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that
3 employment conditions within any area previously desig-
4 nated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such
5 an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such desig-
6 nation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall
7 be granted under this Act with respect to such area and,
8 for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered
9 a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained
10 herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being 11 designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this Act
12 if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such 13 section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or under-14 takings with respect to such area which were entered into
15 pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secre-
16 tary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevel-
17 opment area. The Secretary shall keep the departments
18 and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested
19 State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes 20 made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

21 URBAN RENEWAL

22 SEC. 14. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as 23 amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the 24 following new section:

1 “REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA

2 REDEVELOPMENT ACT

3 “SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce
4 certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city,
5 or other municipality (in this section referred to as a ‘mu-
6 nicipality’) is situated in an area designated under section
7 5 of the Area Redevelopment Act as a redevelopment area,
8 and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with 9 assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings
10 the area will be able to achieve more than temporary im-
11 provement in its economy, the Administrator is authorized
12 to provide financial assistance to a local public agency
13 in any such municipality under this title and the provisions
14 of this section.

15 “(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e) of this 16 section, the Administrator may provide such financial 17 assistance under this section without regard to the require-18 ment or limitations of section 110 (c) that the project area be 19 predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for 20 predominantly residential uses under the urban renewal plan,
21 and without regard to any of the limitations of that section
22 on the undertaking of projects for predominantly nonresi-
23 dential uses.

24 “(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title,
25 a contract for financial assistance under this section may

1 include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in
2 the project area designated under the urban renewal plan
3 for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or
4 nonprofit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly
5 as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the 6 redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban re-
7 newal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to 8 such public agency or corporation under this section shall be 9 made at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban
10 renewal plan: And provided further, That only the pur-
11 chasers from or lessees of such public agency or corporation,
12 and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obliga-
13 tions relating to the commencement of improvements im-
14 posed under section 105 (b) hereof.

15 “(d) Following the execution of any contract for finan-
16 cial assistance under this section with respect to any project,
17 the Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him
18 under this section as well as other provisions of this title for 19 the completion of such projects, notwithstanding any deter-
20 mination made after the execution of such contract that the 21 area in which the project is located is no longer a redevel-
22 opment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

23 “(e) The aggregate amount of capital grants which may 24 be contracted for under this title with respect to projects for 25 the redevelopment of urban renewal areas for predominantly

1 nonresidential uses, under the second proviso of the fifth
2 sentence of section 110 (c), may be increased by an amount
3 not to exceed 10 per centum of the aggregate amount of new 4 grant contract authority provided after September 23, 1959,
5 whenever the Administrator determines (1) that an increase
6 in such amount is necessary in order to provide financial 7 assistance under this section, and (2) that such assistance
8 is not otherwise available because of the limitation contained 9 in such proviso.”

10 URBAN PLANNING GRANTS

11 SEC. 15. (a) Paragraph (3) of section 701 (a) of the 12 Housing Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after “counties
13 which” the following: “(A) are situated in areas designated 14 by the Secretary of Commerce under section 5 (a) of the 15 Area Redevelopment Act as redevelopment areas or (B)”.

16 (b) Section 701 (b) of such Act is amended by adding 17 before the period at the end of the first sentence a colon and 18 the following: “Provided, That a grant may be made under 19 clause (A) of paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this sec-
20 tion for not more than 75 per centum of such estimated cost”.

21 OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING

22 SEC. 16. (a) The Secretary of Labor is authorized, 23 upon request and whenever he determines such studies are 24 needed, to undertake, or to provide assistance to others for 25 studies of the size, characteristics, skills, adaptability, occu-

1 pational potentialities, and related aspects of the labor force
2 of any redevelopment area.

3 (b) When a redevelopment area has an approved eco-
4 nomic development program as provided in section 6 (b)
5 (10), the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the Secre-
6 tary, shall determine the occupational training or retrain-
7 ing needs of unemployed and underemployed individuals
8 residing in the redevelopment area. The Secretary of Labor
9 shall notify the Secretary of Health, Education, and Wel-
10 fare of the occupational training or retraining requirements
11 of the area, and shall provide for the orderly selection and re-
12 ferral of those unemployed or underemployed individuals
13 residing in the area who can reasonably be expected to obtain 14 employment as a result of the skill they will acquire in the 15 training which is to be made available, and shall make appro-
16 priate provision for such supervision by the appropriate
17 agency as is necessary to the successful operation of any train-
18 ing program established under this section. The Secretary
19 of Labor shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Edu-
20 cation, and Welfare and with existing State and local agen-
21 cies and officials in charge of existing programs relating to 22 vocational training and retraining for the purpose of assuring 23 that the facilities and services of such agencies are made fully 24 available to such individuals.

25 (c) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that addi-

1 tional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet the 2 occupational training or retraining needs of such individuals,
3 he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and 4 Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare
5 shall provide assistance, including financial assistance when 6 necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational 7 agency in the provision of such additional facilities or serv-
8 ices. If the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare
9 finds that the State vocational educational agency is unable to 10 provide the facilities and services needed, he may, after 11 consultation with such agency, provide for the same by agree-
12 ment or contract with public or private educational insti-
13 tutions.

14 (d) The Secretary of Labor shall arrange to provide 15 any necessary technical assistance for setting up apprentice-
16 ships, and to promote journeyman and other on-the-job
17 training.

18 (e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such 19 sums, not in excess of $4,500,000 annually, as may be neces-
20 sary to carry out the provisions of this section.

21 RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

22 SEC. 17. (a) The Secretary of Labor in consultation
23 with the Secretary may, on behalf of the United States,
24 enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment
25 areas are located, under which the Secretary of Labor shall

1 make payments to such States either in advance or by way of 2 reimbursement for the purpose of enabling such States, as 3 agents of the United States, to make weekly retraining pay-
4 ments to unemployed or underemployed individuals residing 5 within such redevelopment areas who are certified by the 6 Secretary of Labor to be undergoing occupational training
7 or retraining under section 16 of this Act. Such payments
8 shall be made only for the period the individual is receiving 9 occupational training or retraining under section 16 of this 10 Act, but not in any event to exceed sixteen weeks, and the 11 amounts of such payments shall be equal to the amount of 12 the average weekly unemployment compensation payment
13 payable in the State making such payments.

14 (b) No weekly retraining payment shall be made to any 15 person otherwise eligible who, with respect to the week for 16 which such payment would be made, has received or is seek-17 ing unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social 18 Security Act or any other Federal or any State unemploy-
19 ment compensation law, but if the appropriate State or Fed-
20 eral agency finally determines that a person denied weekly 21 training benefits because of this paragraph is not entitled to 22 unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social 23 Security Act or such Federal or State law, this paragraph 24 shall not apply.

25 (c) Any agreement under this section may contain provisions (including, so far as may be appropriate, provisions authorized or made applicable with respect to agreements concluded by the Secretary of Labor pursuant to title XV of the Social Security Act) as will promote effective administration, protect the United States against loss, and insure the proper application of payments made to the State under such agreement. Except as may be provided in such agreements, or in the rules and regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, determinations by any duly designated officer or agency as to the eligibility of individuals for weekly retraining payments under this section shall be final and conclusive for any purposes and not subject to review by any court or any other officer.

(d) The Secretary of Labor and the Secretary shall jointly prescribe such rules and regulations as they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Banking and Currency may have until midnight tonight to file a report on the bill, S. 1.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

CONSENT CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. This is the day for the call of the Consent Calendar. The Clerk will call the first bill on the Consent Calendar.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF CERTAIN STATUTORY AWARDS

The Clerk called the bill (H.R. 861) to provide that no application shall be required for the payment of statutory awards for certain conditions which, prior to August 1, 1952, have been determined by the Veterans' Administration to be service connected.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs whether or not the opposition to this legislation by the Veterans' Administration is a new letter or is one of the previous administration.

Mr. TEAGUE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I would say to the gentleman from Michigan that it is a letter from the new administration. I do not believe it is correct to say that it is an objection. It is a partial objection, one which could possibly set a precedent.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

U.S. MERCHANT VESSEL AND WATERFRONT SECURITY ACT OF 1960

The Clerk called the bill (H.R. 4469) to amend the Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950 so as to provide that no individual who willfully fails or refuses to answer, or falsely answers, certain questions relating to subversive activities, when summoned to appear before certain Federal agencies, shall be employed on any merchant vessel of the United States or within certain waterfront facilities in the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LINDSAY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the author of the bill, the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on Un-American Activities, if he has had a chance to consider the suggestion I made the last time I objected to the bill, that the subject matter was of sufficient importance as well as the constitutional questions that are raised by it, so that the matter really ought to be subjected to the scrutiny of full floor debate.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, were it not for the fact that the Supreme Court of the United States passed on the constitutional questions the gentleman is talking about, I would agree with him. But the statute of the State of California which we followed exactly in drafting the bill under consideration went to the Supreme Court and the Supreme Court held that it was constitutional. I see no need to debate the question. I would be very glad to answer any questions the gentleman may ask, but as to constitutionality of the statute, that has already been passed on by the Supreme Court.

Mr. LINDSAY. As I read the cases in the courts, including the Supreme Court case of Green against McElroy, and the Ninth Circuit case of Parker against Lester, questions are raised by this bill that have not been passed on by the Supreme Court, to my satisfaction, at least. I should like the opportunity to examine the bill and debate it on the floor. I would be disposed to vote against this as it now stands. For that reason, and with all due deference to the distinguished chairman of the committee, Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. It requires three objectors. Is their further objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. RYAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to say that I agree with the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. LINDSAY]. I think there are serious constitutional questions involved here which should be debated fully. Calling this bill on the Consent Calendar prevents thorough and deliberate consideration. Therefore, I also object.

The SPEAKER. Is there further objection?

There being no further objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "United States Merchant Vessel and Waterfront Security Act of 1960".

SEC. 2. The Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950 (64 Stat. 987) is amended by inserting, immediately preceding section 4 thereof, the following new section:

"EMPLOYMENT OF CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS AT WATERFRONT FACILITIES AND ABOARD MERCHANT VESSELS OF UNITED STATES

"SEC. 3B. (a) No individual who willfully fails or refuses to appear before any Federal agency, when subpoenaed or ordered to appear, or to answer under oath before such Federal agency any question concerning—

"(1) the membership of such individual, or any other individual, in the Communist Party, Fascist Party, or other subversive party.

"(2) the activities of such individual, or any other individual, as a member of the Communist Party, Fascist Party, or other subversive party, or

"(3) the participation of such individual, or any other individual, in activities conducted by or under the direction of the Communist Party, Fascist Party, or other subversive party, or any member thereof, shall be employed in any capacity aboard any merchant vessel of the United States or within any waterfront facility in the United States, nor shall any such individual be entitled to hold, or to be issued, any certificate, license, or other document (including any endorsement thereon) identifying him as an individual eligible to be employed in any capacity aboard any such merchant vessel or within any such waterfront facility. The prohibition against employment, and against the possession and issuance of any certificate, license, or other document (including any endorsement thereon), contained in the first sentence of this subsection shall also apply with respect to any individual who commits perjury in answering any question referred to in such first sentence.

"(b) The President of the United States shall institute such measures and issue such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this section and, for such purpose, he may utilize such departments, agencies, officers, and instrumentalities of the United States as he may deem appropriate. For the purpose of any investigation which, in the opinion of the department, agency, officer, or instrumentality utilized by the President to carry out the provisions of this section, is necessary and proper in carrying out the provisions of this section, such department, agency, officer, or instrumentality is empowered to subpoena witnesses, administer oaths and affirmations, take evidence, and require the production of any books, papers, or other documents which are relevant or material to the matter under investigation. Such attendance of witnesses and the production of such books, papers, or other documents may be required from any place in the United States or any district, Commonwealth, or possession thereof, at any designated place of hearing. Witnesses summoned under authority of this subsection shall be paid the same fees and mileage that are paid witnesses in the courts of the United States. Upon failure of any person to obey a subpoena issued under the subsection, the United States district court for the judicial district wherein such person resides or carries on business may, upon the petition of the department, agency, officer, or instrumentality of the United States utilized by the President to carry out the provisions of this section, issue an order requiring such person to appear and to produce books, papers, or other documents, if so ordered, or to give testimony touching the matter under investigation or in question. Any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof. Any process in any such case may be served in the judicial district wherein such person resides or wherever he may be found.

"(c) As used in this section—

"(1) the term 'waterfront facility' means all piers, wharves, docks, and similar structures to which vessels may be secured, buildings on such structures or contiguous to such structures, and equipment and materials on such structures or in such buildings;

"(2) the term 'United States', when used in a territorial sense, includes all places and waters, continental or insular, subject to the jurisdiction of the United States;

"(3) the term 'Communist Party' means the Communist Party of the United States, or any successors of such party regardless of the assumed name, whose object or purpose is to overthrow the Government of the United States, or the government of any State, district, Commonwealth, or possession thereof, or the government of any political subdivision therein by force and violence, and includes subsidiary organizations of such party;

"(4) the phrase 'Fascist Party, or other subversive party' means any party, other than the Communist Party, regardless of the assumed name, whose object or purpose is to overthrow the Government of the United States, or the government of any State, district, Commonwealth, or possession thereof, or the government of any political subdivision therein by force and violence, and includes subsidiary organizations of such party; and

"(5) the term 'Federal agency' means any department, independent establishment, or other agency or instrumentality of the executive branch of the Government of the United States, and any congressional committee or subcommittee."

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WALTER of Pennsylvania: On page 1, line 4, after "Act of" strike out "1960" and insert "1961".

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

OUTDOOR RECREATION RESOURCES REVIEW COMMISSION

The Clerk called the bill (H.R. 2204) to extend the time in which the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission shall submit its final report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WEAVER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ASPINALL] how much money was originally budgeted for this item and what the financial status is of this commission?

Mr. ASPINALL. As I recall, it was authorized an appropriation of $2,500,000. The money has not been completely used. No other money has been requested in this legislation. All this bill now under discussion does is permit the extension by a few months of the time in which to file a report. That is all that is involved.

Mr. WEAVER. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that an identical Senate bill, S. 449, be considered in lieu of the House bill.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the first sentence of section 6(c) of the Act entitled "An Act for the establishment of a National Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission to study the outdoor recreation resources of the public lands and other land and water areas of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 28, 1958 (72 Stat. 238), is amended to read as follows: "The Commission shall present not later than January 31, 1962, a report of its review, a compilation of its data, and its recommendations on a State by State, region by region, and national basis to the President and to the Congress, and shall cease to exist not later than September 1, 1962."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H.R. 2204) was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL INSECTICIDE ACT

The Clerk called the bill (H.R. 4662) to amend the transitional provisions of the act approved August 7, 1959, entitled "Nematocide, Plant Regulator, Defoliant, Desiccant Amendment of 1959."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a similar Senate bill, S. 1028, be considered in lieu of the House bill.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That paragraph (a) of section 3 of the Nematocide, Plant Regulator, Defoliant, and Desiccant Amendment of 1959 (Public Law 86-139, 73 Stat. 286, 287) is amended by deleting the comma and the word "or" appearing at the end of clause (1) and adding at the end of such clause a colon and the following: "Provided, That with respect to any nematocide, plant regulator, defoliant, or desiccant whose use results in residue remaining in or on a food at the time of introduction into interstate commerce and which use had commercial application prior to January 1, 1958, the Secretary may prescribe a date beyond March 5, 1961, on the basis of a determination that such action will not be unduly detrimental to the public interest and is necessary to avoid hardships: Provided further, That such date shall not be extended beyond (1) the date on which an order with respect to the use of such product under section 408 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 346a) becomes effective or (2) the date on which any extension granted under paragraph (b) of this section is terminated, or".

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H.R. 4662) was laid on the table.

MUSTERING-OUT PAYMENTS

The Clerk called the bill (H.R. 859) to repeal chapter 43 of title 38, United States Code.

Mr. PELLY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

equipment and other items; technical assistance; skilled manpower from the Peace Corps; development grants; transitional, sustaining or emergency grants; development loans repayable in local currency; and development loans repayable in dollars, with special terms of repayment that will meet the needs of the recipient country. These tools will be coordinated with the activities of the Export-Import Bank, and with loan and investment guarantees to private enterprise. ***

"I recommend, therefore, an authorization for the new aid agency of not less than 5 years, with borrowing authority also for 5 years to commit and make dollar repayable loans within the limits spelled out below. ***

"Consequently, while the funds requested by my predecessor will be sharply shifted in terms of their use and purpose, I am asking the Congress for a total foreign aid budget of new obligational authority no greater than that requested in the rockbottom budget previously submitted ($4 billion) despite the fact that the number of new nations needing assistance is constantly increasing; and, though increasing such authority for non-military aid while reducing military assistance, this budget provides for a level of actual expenditures on nonmilitary aid no greater than reflected in the previous budget -- $1.9 billion. These figures do not, of course, reflect Public Law 480 operations."

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

MARCH 22, 1961.—Committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union and ordered to be printed

Mr. SPENCE, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, submitted the following

R E P O R T

[To accompany S. 1]

The Committee on Banking and Currency, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1), to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with an amendment and recommend that the bill as amended do pass.

The amendment is as follows: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the matter which appears in italic in the bill herewith reported to the House.

WHAT THE BILL WOULD DO

S. 1, as reported to the House, would provide a coordinated attack on the basic economic problems confronting those areas with persistent and substantial unemployment. While it would rely on local initiative and the efforts of private enterprise it would enable the Federal Government to play its proper role and meet its responsibilities in this field. Technical assistance and guidance would be made available along with financial aid, primarily in the form of loans to implement local economic programs. The committee amendment contains seven major provisions.

First, the bill would place the responsibility for area redevelopment in the Secretary of Commerce to insure that the program will be dealt with at the Cabinet level. At the same time, an Area Redevelopment Administrator would be established in the Department to perform such functions as the Secretary may assign to him under the bill.

Second, the bill would authorize the designation of areas of chronic unemployment and underemployment. Such designation would be mandatory for some communities under criteria set forth in the amendment but the Secretary would designate other areas including rural places according to guidelines set forth.

Third, the Secretary would be authorized to make loans for industrial projects in the designated areas. Two funds of $100 million each would be established by appropriation.

Fourth, loans would be available on liberal terms for local public facilities to encourage economic expansion. The amount of $100 million would be authorized for appropriation for these loans.

Fifth, partial grants could be made to communities for local public facilities if these are necessary for the financing of the project. The amount of $75 million is authorized for appropriation for these grants.

Sixth, the bill contains two sections which would vest additional authority in the HHFA Administrator in order to assist redevelopment areas. Grants and loans for urban renewal could be made without regard to the "predominantly residential" requirement which must be met in most cases. Urban planning grants authorized by the Housing Act of 1954 would be made available to redevelopment areas without regard to the population limit otherwise applicable.

Seventh, upon a finding by the Secretary of Labor that training is needed, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare could provide information and financial assistance in connection with occupational retraining programs. The Secretary of Labor would be authorized to enter into agreements with the States to pay subsistence payments up to 16 weeks for persons receiving such occupational training.

The bill contains specific limits on appropriations for the new programs, totaling $394 million, of which $300 million is for loans repayable with interest. The dollar authorizations are as follows:

	Millions
Plant loans (sec. 5(a) areas)-----	$100. 0
Plant loans (sec. 5(b) areas)-----	100. 0
Public facility loans-----	100. 0
Public facility grants-----	75. 0
Retraining subsistence grants (annually)-----	10. 0
Occupational retraining aid (annually)-----	4. 5
Technical assistance (annually)-----	4. 5

BACKGROUND OF THE BILL

Proposals for area redevelopment legislation have been before the Congress for more than a decade. In the 84th Congress, 2d session, a bill was reported out by this committee but never reached the floor of the House. A similar bill passed the Senate later in that session, but was not acted upon by the House. In the 85th Congress, area redevelopment legislation passed both Houses of the Congress but was pocket vetoed by the President on September 6, 1958. In the 86th Congress, another bill, S. 722, was passed by both Houses but was also vetoed by the President on May 13, 1960.

In spite of these delays, it should be noted that the principle of Federal action to relieve unemployment in areas of persistent and substantial labor surplus has been endorsed in the platforms of both parties. It has also received wide support from labor, industry, municipal and private citizen groups. Shortly after his election last November, President-elect Kennedy appointed a special task force to consider the problem and recommend a program. President Kennedy has made it clear that he feels that action in this field deserves the highest priority and should be acted upon promptly.

Area redevelopment legislation was the first bill introduced in the Senate in the current session and was passed by that body on March 15 by a vote of 63 to 27. Meanwhile, a bill, H.R. 4569, was submitted to the Congress by President Kennedy and introduced by Hon. Brent Spence, chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency. Two full weeks of hearings on this legislation were held before Subcommittee No. 2 (Hon. Wright Patman, chairman). This bill, as perfected by the committee, was ordered reported as an amendment to S. 1 on March 21 by a vote of 20 to 6.

SAFEGUARDS IN THE BILL

The committee amendment contains a number of safeguards to insure both that the assistance will produce a real measure of relief to the areas in need and that it will do this without detriment to any other community. Naturally, wise administration is essential and your committee believes this is best cared for by placing responsibility for the program in a Cabinet-rank officer and at the same time establishing a high-level Government official in the Department of Commerce to perform such functions as the Secretary may assign to him in carrying out the program. To conserve the funds for their most urgent uses the bill provides that no loan may be made unless funds are not otherwise available from other sources on reasonable terms. The committee amendment also makes the use of loan and grant funds for assistance in financing industrial projects and public facilities contingent upon the development of a comprehensive economic plan for the area which meets the approval of the Secretary. To make certain that the assistance given under this program will not result in dislocations in other areas, the committee amendment carries a flat prohibition against the use of any funds for the transfer of business establishments from one area to another.

Local economic development program

The requirement for a local economic development program is one of the key features of this legislation, and one of the most constructive for long-term recovery. Loans for commercial and industrial facilities and public facility loans and grants are all contingent upon such a program, and any projects proposed must be demonstrated to contribute to that program. In a similar manner, assistance in providing occupational training and retraining subsistence payments hinges upon an approved economic development program.

The requirement for such a program will assure that the community has reviewed carefully the various economic solutions open to it, before any request is made for such assistance; that the projects submitted are in their proper priority with respect to the community's program; that the community is embarking on a program which is within the available financial, manpower, and technical resources; and that the program contributes toward a permanent solution of local problems.

This requirement for careful studies and advance planning should assure, first, a real knowledge of the economic potentials of the area—whether they lie in the commercial or industrial field. It should point out the strong and weak points of the area, in both the skills of its manpower and its resources in materials, location, and facilities. Such planning should take into account all the potentials of the area. They may be in recreation or tourism, not heavy industry; they may lie in the promotion of parks and the restoration of forests, with the construction of necessary access roads; they may be in research or in light industry employing large numbers of clerical or scientifically trained workers.

It is, moreover, essential that each program be appraised realistically, and approved by the Secretary, in order to make the wisest use of limited public funds and to give maximum help to the area. This is "seed money," to help give impetus to a broad program which, if the unemployed are to be reemployed, will call for private and local public efforts many times the size of this Federal program.

If each economic development program is appraised in a broad way, for the long future, and suitable retraining of local workers is undertaken, the benefits of this legislation will be far greater than can be measured by the financial loans or grants.

Moreover, the act provides for technical assistance in preparing economic development programs, not merely for redevelopment areas but for other areas which in the judgment of the Secretary have substantial need for such assistance. This "early warning" aid is designed to help to avert trouble.

In many small industrial areas and rural areas that are primarily agricultural, economic programs of the kind envisioned here simply do not exist. Assistance in analyzing their problems in a factual way is an essential first step. Without it, much valuable time and effort could be wasted in haphazard attempts at industrialization.

While economic planning carries no guarantee of success, this provision insures that careful attention will be given to the problems of the area and to the steps that need to be taken to restore prosperity. It will be a reasonable guarantee that redevelopment of the area is feasible and that the project for which assistance is sought will make a real contribution to the long-term expansion of industry and employment.

Prohibition against relocation of industry

Concern has been expressed that the assistance provided under this program would be used to transfer industry and employment from their present locations to redevelopment areas. Your committee wishes to assure those who share this concern that the bill will not have such a result. The purpose of this legislation has always been to make a net expansion of job opportunities and not to "pirate" industries from other locations. In an economy such as ours, which includes a tremendous amount of new investment even in lean years, it should not be difficult to achieve growth of employment opportunities in all areas. William L. Batt, secretary of industry and labor for the State of Pennsylvania, testified that spending for new plant and equipment averages approximately $30 billion a year of which fully $7 billion is for facilities—and job opportunities—in new locations.

Your committee further believes that the experience of local redevelopment groups clearly shows that depressed areas can create new jobs without taking them from other areas. For example, Mr. Willis W. Jones, executive vice president of the Scranton Chamber of Commerce, testified that only 2 of 38 plants established in Scranton-

Lackawanna County from 1945 to 1960 were relocations, and even in those two cases there was "no detriment suffered by the area of original location."

Mr. Jones testified as follows:

I would like to point out to you, and I have in the brief that has been presented to you, an exhibit showing why the 32 community plants that I spoke of moved to Scranton, why they moved into our area. From actual count 38 percent of them moved there to expand and to serve a distant market.

For instance, the Trane Co. is as big today in La Crosse, Wis., in fact, it is much bigger after having established its eastern division plant in Scranton, Pa.

In fact, what helps Scranton, helps La Crosse, and vice versa. That is the type of expansion that is natural; it is good for the economy of America. Sixteen of the plants were new plants for a brand new product where a company had decided to start manufacturing a new product in a brand new plant and chose our area.

Twenty percent were expansions of local industry where an industry decided to expand in our own area. We have a company, Consolidated Molded Products Co., with 600 employees in 1 plant and we built another plant for them that employed about another 200 some distance away, making a new type of product, an expansion from within.

Twenty percent of the plants that came into our area came in to serve the military, such as Daystrom Corp., which opened a brand new division when they manufactured the Mark 54, I believe, which was done for the military as a radar-finding device. Only 6 percent or two plants were relocations from other areas, because they could not serve their market in the area in which they were located and moved to a new area.

Nevertheless your committee is determined to prevent use of the bill to finance "runaway" industries, and adopted an amendment to clarify this point.

This amendment expressly states that under the act "new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources." Furthermore, it provides that loans shall not be made under section 6 "to assist establishments relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another."

In an expanding economy ample opportunity should be found to develop areas of chronic unemployment or underemployment without injury to other areas of the country. Under the bill as amended these opportunities will take the form of assistance to businesses already located in the redevelopment area and expanding to provide new jobs; or to businesses starting out in the redevelopment areas; or to businesses already established in other areas which are expanding by establishing a new branch, subsidiary, or affiliate in the redevelopment area while continuing operations in the area of original location. In prohibiting assistance to establishments "totally or partially" relocating, the committee intends to prohibit assistance to a company for the establishment of a branch either (1) where the Secretary has reason to believe that the branch is being established in order ultimately to close down a plant operated by the same company in another area, or (2) unless the Secretary has obtained reasonable assurance that the establishment of the branch will not result in any increase in unemployment in any other area in which the company is located. Your committee has sincerely tried to provide the strictest kind of controls against use of section 6 loans to "pirate" industry and expects that the Secretary will exercise vigilance in administering the act to prevent any evasions of the spirit as well as the letter of these provisions.

NEED FOR THIS LEGISLATION

The need for prompt action to combat localized chronic unemployment problems is supported by abundant evidence and is now generally accepted. The facts of the case have been spelled out in Government statistics and in thousands of pages of congressional testimony. In fact, most observers agree that the delays which have prevented the enactment of area redevelopment legislation in past years have cost us dearly. While the greatest cost has been borne in those areas directly affected by basic economic problems, there has also been a heavy cost to the entire Nation both in terms of additional Government outlays for unemployment compensation and relief payments, and in terms of lost production and idle resources. These are costs which our Nation cannot afford at any time but particularly not in the present international situation when we are engaged in a critical economic struggle.

The effects of localized unemployment are felt throughout the economic system. In our closely interrelated economy, no community is self-sufficient. Each area depends on other areas for markets for the goods and services it produces. Depressed conditions in one community are reflected in reduced demand in others which in turn results in fewer jobs. If allowed to continue, unemployment and economic stagnation may very well spread to other areas. If, on the other hand, the areas which are now suffering from heavy chronic unemployment can be restored to prosperous conditions, the entire Nation will benefit through the increase in total demand and business activity.

The need for Federal assistance in this field has been conclusively demonstrated. Communities with long-term economic problems have taken heroic measures to improve their circumstances and have shown determination and imagination in seeking to restore their own prosperity. However, the basic fact remains that it is illogical to expect a community hit by the loss of basic industry and bearing the burden of high unemployment to lift itself by its own bootstraps. One of the inevitable results of persistent and substantial unemployment is an erosion of community assets and public revenues. The Federal responsibility is clear and well-established. In the Full Employment Act of 1946 the economic welfare of all our citizens was clearly recognized as a national responsibility. While local initiative will continue to play its full role, the Federal Government should provide technical and financial assistance to these efforts.

Your committee rejects the view that nothing should be done to aid communities and areas with basic economic problems. It disagrees completely with those who feel that the Government should sit by and let unemployment force people in these hard-hit places to abandon their homes and move elsewhere in search of jobs. Not only is this a callous attitude which ignores the feelings of the people involved but it is a shortsighted attitude. Tremendous sums are invested in homes, schools, and other facilities in these areas, as well as in factory and commercial structures, and it would be wasteful indeed to simply abandon them. Our growing Nation needs all its productive facilities and every effort must be made to put them usefully to work.

The migration of workers from distressed areas is not an adequate answer to the problem. Families are often reluctant to leave their homes and social ties while businessmen find it difficult or impossible to transfer their investment in plant and equipment from one place to another. Moreover, such migration often entails considerable hardship. For example, it frequently happens that a worker will move to another city in search of employment. Often he moves by himself since he cannot afford to take his family with him. He may find a job at first but often the job is not satisfactory because he lacks the appropriate skills, and he runs the further risk of lacking seniority or security in his new job. In a time of general economic contraction this worker may find himself quickly unemployed and forced to return home. In effect, that community must bear some of the unemployment problems of other cities.

These communities are always hardest hit during a recession. While they generally show wider fluctuation over time in the rate of unemployment, they have consistently been far worse off than the country as a whole. As the table below shows, unemployment nationally has ranged from 4 percent of the labor force to 7.7 percent since 1954 for the dates shown. The 17 major areas of substantial and persistent labor surplus have consistently exceeded this rate by a substantial margin. This margin has ranged from 45 percent above the national rate to more than double that rate in May 1958 when the Nation was just past the worst part of a recession. The latest figures (January 1961) show that the 17 major distressed areas are suffering an unemployment rate three-fifths higher than the national average. Although present economic conditions will make the task of relieving the plight of depressed areas somewhat more difficult, they also emphasize the need for prompt action to get a program under way which will relieve the intolerable level of unemployment in these places.

THE COST OF DOING NOTHING

The persistence of high unemployment in certain areas is not merely a matter of local concern, but of national concern as well. It means, first of all, a loss of opportunity and often genuine privation for the unemployed workers and their families. It means a loss of human dignity which accompanies long idleness for men and women who want jobs, not relief.

It also means failure to utilize people, a loss of valuable man-hours of productive work, a loss of potential production of goods and services for the Nation's use. It constitutes an economic burden in a very real sense, in higher unemployment compensation payments, in relief payments, in lost revenues from taxation, and in production and income foregone.

Even in good times, such as 1956-57, unemployment in chronically distressed areas accounted for at least one-fifth of total unemployment. If the rate of unemployment in these areas could have been reduced to the national average, the jobless total would have been roughly a quarter of a million lower in 1956-57.

If, in November 1960, the rate of unemployment in these areas had been as low as the national average of 5.7 percent—a very high figure—the jobless total would have been roughly 280,000 lower.

It is difficult to estimate the amount of reduction in unemployment compensation which would occur in such areas if the unemployment were reduced only to the average for the Nation as a whole, because a higher percentage of the unemployed in areas of chronic unemployment have, by definition, exhausted their benefit rights. A rough calculation indicates that unemployment compensation payments would have been reduced in these areas by somewhere between $100 million and $200 million, depending upon what proportion of people had exhausted their rights in 1960. This assumes the national average benefit payment of about $33 per week and an average duration of payments of 22 weeks, for persons exhausting benefits in the autumn of 1960. If all 280,000 had been in a position to receive this full amount, the reduction would have been $200 million. However, studies of earlier years have indicated that around half of the unemployed in chronically depressed areas were no longer eligible to receive unemployment compensation.

In addition to unemployment compensation, relief payments also mount. Unfortunately, there are no comprehensive figures on overall cost. However, it is clear that the total would run into hundreds of millions of dollars. For example, it was brought out in the hearings that in the single year 1960, unemployment compensation paid in the 16 areas of chronic unemployment in the State of Pennsylvania alone totaled over $82 million while public assistance benefits added another $48 million. It was estimated that if the unemployment in these 16 areas had been brought down to 3 percent of the labor force, there would have been a saving in these two benefits of nearly $90 million in that one year in that one State.

New job opportunities in these areas will mean increased income and production which will lead to reductions in the costs of many types of public assistance expenditures as well as increased personal and business tax collections of all types at all levels of government. To the extent that an area redevelopment program is successful, there would be reductions in many types of Government expenditures and increases in the income of the Government.

CAUSES OF LOCALIZED CHRONIC UNEMPLOYMENT

The causes of local economic problems have been exhaustively explored in congressional hearings on area redevelopment legislation, special congressional investigations and other Government and private studies. In view of this, your committee feels that it is unnecessary to go into detail at this time on the causes of localized economic distress. However, it is useful to describe the general categories of problems which have brought about the need for this legislation.

In general, localized chronic unemployment has arisen because of excessive reliance on a single industry or occupation. This is not to say that the problem concerns only "one industry" towns, for many of them still include thriving but smaller employment opportunities.

Technological advances have wrought dramatic changes in the American economy. In fact, more of our overall economic growth is due to increasing productivity than to expansion of the labor force. These advantages have made our Nation the greatest economic power in the world and the American standard of living the highest in the world. Such changes will continue and should be given every encouragement. However such gains in efficiency are not without problems. Many communities have seen the level of employment in a basic industry drop sharply even though overall production may increase. A striking example of this is the soft coal mining industry. Testimony by the Secretary of Labor pointed out that over the past two decades total output of bituminous coal changed very little, and in 1951 it was only 8 percent less than in 1937—but the number of workers in the industry fell by 63 percent.

Along with technological changes have come important shifts in demand. For example, oil has, to an important extent, challenged both anthracite and bituminous coal and has preempted significant markets. Our Nation's railroads, once operated entirely by coal, have now switched almost entirely to oil-burning diesel engines. This has affected not only the market for coal but has had a special impact on communities, such as Altoona, Pa., which were highly dependent on repair shops for steam locomotives. Similarly, synthetic fibers have made tremendous inroads on silk and wool, and the former has been practically eliminated except for specialized uses.

Migration of industry has also resulted in serious local problems. A major case of this has been the shift of the textile industry from North to South which has been going on since the 1920's. More recently southern communities have themselves been affected by mill closings. The apparel industry has been subject to violent shifts in location since the beginning of the century. The movement out of the large cities to new markets has been frequently recorded. The electronics-parts industry, originally located in the large cities, has been standardized so that production units could be dispersed to other areas. Such migration has taken place at an impressive rate during the last decade. The automobile industry has been highly decentralized as assembly-and-parts plants have been placed nearer the consumer markets. As growth of the industry has been slowed, the older areas have witnessed many plant closings.

Depletion of natural resources is another important cause of local economic problems. The depletion or exhaustion of high-grade and easily accessible seams of coal have contributed to chronic unemployment in the coal-mining areas which have been classified as surplus labor areas for a good part of the time in recent years. Similarly, the exhaustion of accessible and high-grade deposits of zinc, lead, and iron ore have produced substantial unemployment in a few areas. Timberlands which have been cut over within easy range of mills have led to mill closings and reduction of employment in a number of lumber centers in such places as the Pacific Northwest, the northern peninsula in Michigan, and certain areas of the South.

A further special problem is that of rural areas which suffer from chronic unemployment and underemployment. Often these areas show a high dependence on a single crop and frequently individual farms are uneconomically small and the owners lack the capital or credit resources to provide the equipment necessary to maximum efficiency. This problem is one of major magnitude. The Secretary of Agriculture has testified that the underemployment among farm-workers is equivalent to the full unemployment of 1,400,000 workers.

MAJOR PROVISIONS OF THE BILL

Administration of the program

The committee amendment places responsibility for the area redevelopment program in the Secretary of Commerce. This will insure that the problem will receive attention at the highest levels of Government. At the same time an Area Redevelopment Administrator, appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, will be created in the Department of Commerce. The Administrator will have such authority as may be delegated by the Secretary.

It is recognized that many Government departments can contribute to overcoming these problems and that it will be necessary for the Secretary and his Administrator to work closely with other Government agencies. Therefore, an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board will be established consisting of the heads of related departments and agencies. Also, to take advantage of the ideas and recommendations of interested private groups a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment will be established. This will consist of 25 members appointed by the Secretary and representative of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general. The Secretary may also call together representatives of any groups who can contribute to the solution of these problems.

Redevelopment areas

The Secretary is authorized to designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas in which he determines that there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. The bill provides for the mandatory designation of a community which has currently 6 percent or more unemployment (excluding seasonal unemployment) and which has had a rate of unemployment:

(A) 50 percent above the national average for 3 of the preceding 4 calendar years, or

(B) 75 percent above the national average for 2 of the preceding 3 calendar years, or

The national average unemployment rates utilized in 1961 for making these determinations are as follows:

National average unemployment rates

Year:	Rate	Year—Continued	Rate
1957-----	4.3	1959-----	5.5
1958-----	6.8	1960-----	5.6

These criteria clearly limit the program to those places with severe and protracted employment problems. (For a list of those labor market areas which would automatically be designated as industrial redevelopment areas, see appendix A, p. 18.)

Your committee rejected an amendment which would have confined designations under section 5(a) strictly to areas which meet the formula for mandatory designation, but it adopted an amendment requiring the Secretary in the exercise of his discretion to designate additional areas to do so on the basis of standards generally comparable with those set forth in the formula. Your committee is convinced that some flexibility is needed to cover cases which may not come within the strict confines of a rigid formula. The bill limits the use of this discretion to cases where substantial and persistent unemployment has existed in an area for an extended period of time and the area has unemployment conditions generally comparable to those of the areas which qualify for mandatory designation. This would permit the Secretary to take into account such situations as those in Rhode Island. The Providence-Pawtucket labor market area now qualifies for mandatory designation but it may not qualify under the formula in 1962. The area has had unemployment ranging from a low of 7.6 percent to a high of 12.9 percent over the last 5 years, but because the national average unemployment figure was so high in 1960 the area may not qualify under the mandatory designation formula. The Secretary should have discretion to designate areas such as this where unemployment has persisted for years at an extremely high rate.

A further need for providing the Secretary with discretionary authority arises from the fact that there are some communities which have long and unbroken histories of severe unemployment but which in recession years have not exceeded the national average by a full 50 percent. Terre Haute, Ind., and Lawrence, Mass., are examples of communities which might very well warrant such designation.

In addition, the Secretary shall designate as redevelopment areas rural areas in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. No exact statistical measure or mandatory designations are set forth for this determination but the Secretary is directed to take into consideration the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are of the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent of migration out of the area, and the proportion of the population of each such area which has been receiving public assistance. (For a discussion of these criteria, see appendix B, p. 91.)

Loans for industrial projects

Many areas of chronic unemployment are well supplied with skilled labor or have a surplus of labor which can be trained for industrial skills. Often they have existing idle plant capacity though this is frequently in need of rehabilitation or remodeling to adapt it to other uses. Many of the areas are well situated near important markets, present or potential, for the goods they could produce. One ingredient is commonly lacking, however, and that is adequate capital resources. The very fact of an economic slump in an area generally absorbs local capital and outside lenders are frequently reluctant to enter the area. Your committee greatly admires the energetic and imaginative efforts of some communities to raise capital through local economic development organizations but the testimony given in hearings clearly indicates that there is a limit to what can be accomplished by these efforts.

The need for financial assistance to encourage the growth of industry is as great in areas now predominantly rural as in urban communities. The problem of unemployment is often partly disguised in rural places in the form of underemployment but the result—poverty and waste of resources—is the same. This problem is alleviated in farm regions dotted by manufacturing or other nonfarm business centers. These serve to strengthen the economic base of an area by diversifying the sources of income. This protects them from the dangers of one-crop and one-industry dependence, by enabling those who live on farms to supplement their incomes. This may take the form of part-time work in the town or seasonal employment, or in many cases one or more of the members of a farm family may work at an industrial job while others operate the farm. Unfortunately, some regions such as the Southeastern States are less favored in existing industrial plant facilities than others. However, many of these presently underdeveloped areas have important advantages to offer industrial firms such as relatively low land costs and an abundant supply of fresh water. Therefore, with only a modest amount of outside financial assistance, there is every reason to believe that a substantial improvement could be accomplished in these areas.

In view of this clear need for additional capital, an essential part of any meaningful Federal program of assistance for areas of chronic unemployment is a provision for loans on reasonable terms. Such assistance will enable these communities to help themselves. It is not a giveaway or a subsidy since these are loans to be repaid with interest. To meet this need the committee amendment authorizes loans for industrial and commercial projects in designated areas. These projects may include the construction of new plants, rehabilitation and improvement of existing buildings and, in exceptional cases, the purchase of machinery and equipment. The loans may be for a period of up to 25 years and cover up to 65 percent of the cost of the project. At least 10 percent of the cost must be met by funds supplied by the State or community or a nonprofit local organization. At least 5 percent must be provided by private lending facilities. The interest rate would be based on the average current yield of outstanding Treasury bonds of comparable maturity, plus one-half of 1 percent to cover overhead costs. Currently this formula produces an interest rate of 4½ percent for a 20-year loan.

These loans can only be made to applicants, both public and private, which are approved by an agency of the State in which the project is to be located. It must be determined that the project will provide more than just a temporary alleviation of unemployment and that the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms. In addition, the community in which the project is to be located must have prepared a general economic redevelopment program which meets the approval of the Secretary and it must be determined that the project fits in with that program.

The committee amendment authorizes the appropriation of $100 million for each of two funds, one to be used for loans to urban redevelopment areas and the other for loans for rural redevelopment areas.

Loans and grants for local public facilities

A prime need for the expansion of industry in many places is the improvement of local public facilities, particularly water and sewer systems, including disposal plants. The erosion of local tax bases often makes it difficult for a community to maintain existing facilities and frequently makes it impossible to finance the needed expansion. Thus the community is caught in a vicious circle—improved public facilities are a prerequisite of industrial growth, while industrial growth is necessary to enable local authorities to finance the improvement. Therefore the committee amendment authorizes liberal loans and, where necessary, partial grants to local public authorities and nonprofit local development corporations for the purchase or development of lands for public facility usage and the construction, rehabilitation, expansion or improvement of public facilities within a redevelopment area.

Before any loan or grant can be made, it must be determined that the project will tend to improve the opportunities for the successful establishment or expansion of industry that will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment. The community in which the project is to be located must be covered by an approved economic development program, and the project for which assistance is sought must conform to the program.

The loans may be for a 40-year period and in an amount up to the full cost of the project. The interest rate will be based on the average interest rate paid on the outstanding Treasury debt plus one-fourth of 1 percent for overhead. This will be computed once a year and currently produces a rate of 3½ percent. Before making such a loan, it must be determined that the funds required for the project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms. The committee amendment authorizes an appropriation of $100 million to establish a revolving fund for these loans.

In some areas it will be found that a community's needs are so great or its financial resources so limited that it is not practicable to improve or expand its public facilities entirely on the basis of borrowed funds. For these areas the bill provides limited Federal grants. Such grants may equal up to 65 percent of the difference between the amount borrowed from any source for the project and the full development cost. Such grants may be made only if the local authority requesting it will contribute to the cost of the project in proportion to its ability to do so and only if the project to be aided by the grant could not be undertaken without this assistance. The committee amendment authorizes $75 million for appropriation for these grants.

Technical assistance

The bill authorizes the Secretary to provide technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas and to other areas which he finds have substantial need for such assistance. Such assistance would include studies evaluating the needs of and developing potentials for economic growth for such areas and could be conducted either by the Secretary's staff or by employing individuals, firms, or institutions. For example, State universities and land-grant colleges might be in a position to make a substantial contribution to the development of areas by this means. Appropriations up to $4.5 million annually are authorized for this program.

The sound redevelopment of a depressed area should be based on careful study. Early in the program, a technological audit should be made to determine the types of economic activity which would contribute to sound and lasting growth.

A well-planned and carefully executed technological audit should show how the resources of an area could be put to their optimum use. The audit would not be limited to natural resources, although the best use of these should be carefully explored. Recent experiments in the use of coal as a raw material for the chemical industry and in the development of synthetic fuels hold much promise for a revival of the coal industry in some areas currently depressed. Instead of mining coal to be shipped to industrial centers as fuel, however, various types of chemical plants could be attracted to the coalfields since there would be substantial weight loss in the extraction of synthetic gases and chemicals from coal. Experimental work along these lines is now in progress. It could be hastened, however, by financial and technical assistance to labor surplus areas.

Some depressed areas are poorly endowed with natural resources, however, and in other basic resources have been largely depleted. Here the problem would be to discover the locational advantages of these communities for various types of processing, fabricating, and research activities. Specialists in industrial location could help determine the advantages which such locations have to offer to expanding industries. Their analysis would be based on long-term fundamental advantages, and not short-term inducements often artificially created.

Businesses now operating in depressed areas could be encouraged to expand. Many types of specialists could assist in this. Industrial engineers, cost accountants, marketing specialists and others could assist small firms to increase their efficiency and to develop new products and services.

Urban renewal and planning aid

The committee amendment makes it possible for redevelopment areas to participate more fully in the Federal urban renewal program. Under existing law, this program is available to localities which have undertaken a program to clear and redevelop slums and to rehabilitate blighted areas. Upon compliance with the policies and procedures of the Housing and Home Finance Administrator, a locality may obtain Federal financial assistance in the form of advances, loans and grants for the planning and undertaking of urban renewal projects. Federal advances are used to defray planning and other initial expenses. Temporary loans are used as working capital, largely to acquire land and to pay administrative overhead, and both loans and advances are repaid from the proceeds of land and the Federal grant. Federal grants may not exceed two-thirds of the aggregate net project costs.

While the primary purpose of the urban renewal program is the elimination of residential slums, there is a growing recognition of the importance of nonresidential slum clearance projects. Sound city planning often requires that rundown business districts be rehabilitated or cleared and redeveloped if the city is to fulfill its proper functions. Such redevelopment provides new opportunities for employment and business expansion. Moreover, experience has shown that public revenues can be increased manyfold by eliminating blight and returning land to its highest and best use. By so increasing tax revenues, such projects enable the local government to meet its many other responsibilities toward its citizens.

Not more than 10 percent of future funds made available for capital grants under the urban renewal program can be used for projects assisted under the bill. Funds so used will not be charged to the existing 20 percent authorization for nonresidential projects.

The bill also amends section 701 of the Housing Act of 1954 to permit an urban planning grant to be made directly to cities, other municipalities, and counties in a redevelopment area. As a general matter under present law, only cities, other municipalities, and counties having a population of less than 50,000 are eligible for an urban planning grant, and then only through a State planning agency. Larger cities and counties can generally receive the assistance of such grants only through the work of metropolitan or regional planning agencies.

This provision will encourage small cities and counties in a redevelopment area to take full advantage of the urban planning grant assistance program without the time-consuming delays that would be necessary if they had to comply with existing law and make their applications through a State planning agency. It will also permit cities and counties with a population of 50,000 or more that are situated in a redevelopment area to share in the benefits of this program.

Occupational retraining and subsistence payments

The unemployed in areas of substantial and persistent unemployment face problems which are not shared by those unemployed solely by reason of the current recession in other parts of the country. The testimony before your committee indicates that the basic unemployment problem in these areas is long-term unemployment associated with secular declines in occupations, industries, and areas which reflect the development of new products, changing tastes, and technological change. This is often referred to as structural unemployment. The hearings held by your committee have made clear that many of the unemployed in these areas can obtain new jobs only after they have acquired new skills.

There are two aspects to the problem of obsolescence of their skills. First, a comprehensive analysis of the skills and aptitudes of the area's work force is necessary to determine the types of new industries which can effectively be manned there. It is pointless in these areas to seek new plants which will not be able to ultimately make use of their unemployed. Second, once an approved economic development program for these areas is in existence, and it is generally known what skills will be needed, a program designed to equip the existing labor force with the additional skills it will need must be put in operation. Some means must be provided to sustain the unemployed workers while they are being retrained. All too often they have exhausted their rights to unemployment compensation. Even where this is not the case, in 45 States unemployed persons are denied unemployment compensation while they are in training because they are not "available for work," the test for continued benefit payments. While a more general remedy for this unfortunate situation may need to be found, the bill provides an immediate solution for depressed areas by authorizing subsistence payments, at the average State unemployment compensation rate, for unemployed workers who are taking part in the authorized training programs.

There are numerous examples of the value of such a program. There are cities which have attracted new plants by proving that they had a labor force with the requisite skills, or with aptitudes to learn these skills. There are examples of individuals who have found jobs in their own or nearby areas, once they had had retraining in a shortage occupation. In the course of the hearings, William L. Cooper, supervisor of trade and industrial education, Department of Public Instruction of the State of Pennsylvania reported that in some of the Pennsylvania training programs placement rates of 98 percent are achieved, and their average placement rate for all their programs is around 89 percent.

States and cities are beginning to realize the importance of training in modern manual skills and in modern factory and office procedures, as evidenced by the establishment of regional vocational schools in North Carolina, Kentucky, and other States, both for the relief of unemployment and for better use of manpower in the individuals' and the States' interests.

Accordingly, the Secretary of Labor is authorized to make studies of the skills, adaptability, characteristics, and occupational potentialities of the labor force in any redevelopment area. After an area has an approved economic development program, the Secretary of Labor will determine its occupational training or retraining needs. In areas where educational facilities are needed, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is to provide assistance, including financial assistance where necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational agencies so they may provide the facilities or services needed.

Provision is made for the orderly selection and referral of trainees from among the unemployed who reside in the redevelopment area. To the extent that suitable opportunities for employment and applicants for training can be matched, training of unemployed individuals residing in redevelopment areas for job opportunities in other areas is authorized. Appropriations up to $4.5 million annually are authorized for this program.

In recognition of the fact that the unemployed in need of occupational retraining may also be in need of a minimum level of income until they can be retrained for useful employment, the bill authorizes a program of retraining subsistence payments. The payments will be made by the States in which redevelopment areas are located under agreements entered into by the States and the Secretary of Labor. The States will act as agents of the United States while making these payments with Federal funds. The amount of the retraining subsistence payments will be equal to the average weekly unemployment compensation payment payable in the State making such payments. The payments will be made only for the period a trainee is receiving occupational training or retraining, but no trainee shall receive such payment for more than 16 weeks. An annual appropriation of $10 million is authorized for retraining subsistence payments.

As introduced, H.R. 4569 included a provision authorizing the Secretary of Labor to "make appropriate provision for such supervision by the appropriate agency as is necessary to the successful operation of any training program" established under the bill. The sole purpose of including this provision was to assure, through appropriate reports by training institutions and the like, that retraining subsistence payments under section 17 will be paid only to trainees while attending bona fide training programs to which they have been referred. Since this purpose can readily be accomplished under other provisions of the bill, and since the inclusion of this provision led to misunderstandings as to the possibility of the Secretary of Labor supervising State vocational education agencies, your committee struck the provision out of the bill.

SBA loans to local redevelopment corporations

The Small Business Investment Act of 1958 authorizes the Small Business Administration to make plant loans to State and local development corporations where such loans will assist identifiable small business concerns and are made for a sound business purpose. Such loans are limited to $250,000 for each such identifiable small business concern. The act presently provides that this authority will expire June 30 of this year. Inasmuch as these loans can greatly benefit areas of substantial and persistent labor surplus and will therefore promote the general purposes of the area redevelopment bill, your committee adopted an amendment striking out the June 30 expiration date, thus providing permanent authority for such loans. Through March 17, 1961, loans totaling $10,700,000 had been made to local development corporations under this authority. No losses have been incurred to date.

Fuller use of Government facilities in redevelopment areas

Your committee adopted an amendment which is intended to provide fuller utilization of idle and partially idle military installations, and Government facilities producing munitions and supplies for the Government, which are located in areas designated as redevelopment areas. In recognition of the fact that such use must be consistent with the national defense, economy in government operation, and other government procurement objectives, the bill does not include any mandatory provisions concerning these facilities but rather provides that the Secretary of Commerce shall study the feasibility of establishing procedures to make better use of these establishments. He will be required to submit to the Congress a report of his findings after he has had an opportunity to develop a workable program along these lines.

APPENDIX B

(Secretary of Agriculture)

CRITERIA FOR THE IDENTIFICATION OF RURAL "REDEVELOPMENT AREAS"

The Department of Agriculture is especially concerned that efforts be made to improve economic conditions and employment in depressed rural areas that do not qualify under section 5(a). These are the areas described under section 5(b) as being " * * * among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment."

The Department of Agriculture has general information as to where these areas are and has made studies in a number of them that reveal the existence of serious underemployment and unemployment, low incomes and low levels of living.

The seven criteria suggested by the bill permit designation of the most critical areas, and assignment of priorities among them for participation in area redevelopment. The rural development studies of the Department have used some of these criteria to delineate problem areas. We have found that it is helpful to use more than one criterion because some kinds of problems will be revealed by one criterion and some by another. However, the areas delineated by the different criteria tend to overlap so that the most serious problem areas are characterized by the presence of several problems. In selection of rural development areas we do not think it would be necessary to use all of the criteria suggested in the bill in each area.

The first criterion suggested in the bill is the number of low-income families in each area. Using data now available we believe that it would be unwise to establish a hard-and-fast definition of low income. But in our economy, farm families with net money incomes from all sources under $1,000 certainly have very low incomes. Likewise farm families dependent mainly upon farming who have gross farm product sales under $5,000 are clearly low-income families. We now have data showing the number of commercial farmers in each county in the United States who in 1959 had farm product sales of less than $5,000 and the percent that these are of all commercial farms. (This is the second test proposed in the bill.) These figures give only the income from farming, but by the end of 1961 information will be available from the census that will permit us to identify the areas in which a specified number of rural farm families have net incomes from all sources below specified levels. The ratio of the median incomes of farm families to those of nonfarm families also can be shown. We have made and used analyses of these kinds from the 1950 census. With some simple adjustments we can make year-to-year estimates of these income data to keep them up to date.

The relationship of income levels of families in depressed rural areas to general levels of income in the United States is mentioned as a third test. This is a useful criterion to identify the extent of the income gap between farm and nonfarm families in the areas concerned. Information to identify such areas will be available from the 20 percent sample of the 1960 census.

The fourth criterion refers to current and prospective employment opportunities. Studies have been made by the Department of Agriculture in a few low-income farm areas. These indicate a lack of nearby jobs in nearly all areas studied, but there is inadequate information on labor demands by areas to make a nationwide analysis. However, designation of rural areas for immediate action under a redevelopment program can be done now on the basis of the areas in which labor demand information is available through the Department of Labor and elsewhere.

Availability of manpower for supplemental employment is a fifth criterion proposed in the bill.

Much information is currently available in the Department on number of workers, earnings, employment, and characteristic of the labor force in each of the Nation's counties. The availability of workers in these counties for employment will generally be greatly influenced by the size of their present wages or earnings relative to the wages that would be offered by new industries developing in these areas.

The area studies made by the Department of Agriculture furnish evidence that areas of rural low income usually have a supply of manpower available for fuller employment on the farm or at nonfarm jobs. We have an estimate of the national loss in manpower through underemployment in agriculture. We do not have a similar estimate area by area, but in general, the regional information on income levels gives a good indication of the most serious areas of under used manpower.

The extent of outmigration is an important indicator of areas of low economic growth, and limited employment opportunity. This is the sixth criterion proposed. Rates of outmigration of rural farm people by economic areas was used as an important indicator of need for rural development in the nationwide study made by the Department of Agriculture in 1955. Information on rates of outmigration of rural people and of the population was obtained in the census of 1959 and will be available this year.

The seventh criterion, percent of population receiving some kind of public assistance, might be used as an indicator of extent of distress in local areas but such information would need to be analyzed carefully because of the different standards used among States and localities in the operation of welfare programs. While this criterion would be useful, it would not be necessary to the selection of areas.

Minority View of an ineffective bill

MINORITY VIEWS

INEFFECTIVE BILL

This is not a bill to solve the general unemployment problem. This is not a bill to meet the problems arising from structural unemployment. This is not even a good depressed-areas bill. Only about 1 out of 17 unemployed workers in industrial depressed areas and only about 1 out of 37 underemployed workers in rural areas could get jobs out of this bill.¹ Only about 1 percent of the unemployed workers in both types of areas could get retraining subsistence payments out of the funds provided.² Passage of this bill could only bring bitter disillusionment to most of the unemployed in most of the depressed areas.

To us, all the fight there has been about a new agency to administer this program is ludicrous. The effort might better have been spent in trying to devise a workable bill. The facts are, a far more effective program to achieve the objectives of this bill can be formulated within the existing departments and agencies of government. Here is the way it could be done.

PLANT LOAN FUNDS

The bill would establish a new $200 million Government loan program for the construction of and improvement of industrial and commercial facilities. Presumably half of this amount would be available for urban areas and the other half for rural areas. Actually to meet the indicated need of depressed areas, loan funds of at least $3 billion would be required.

Congress does not need to tap the taxpayer for any such sums as that. In the 1950's, by the simple device of accelerated tax amortization, we achieved a $40 million expansion in the Nation's productive capacity for defense and mobilization purposes. That program expired on December 31, 1959. The figures are impressive. Applications filed totaled $62.3 billion, facilities costing $39.9 billion were certified and accelerated amortization of 59 percent or $23.3 billion was granted. From December 31, 1952, to December 31, 1956, we had an accelerated tax amortization program operating in rural areas. It was designed to stimulate the construction of grain storage facilities. It was spectacularly successful. Promptly the problem of the acute shortage of such facilities was solved.

An accelerated tax amortization program for both industrial and rural depressed areas would leave the business decisions to private enterprise. No worthwhile opportunity for a sound business venture

¹ Based on (a) average plant investment of $4,000 per job with Federal Government providing 65 percent or $2,600 per job; (b) Federal plant loan funds of $100 million for industrial areas and $100 million for rural areas; and (c) unemployment of 648,000 in 103 qualifying industrial areas according to statistics of the Department of Labor, and underemployment equivalent to 1,400,000 unemployed in rural areas according to testimony of the Secretary of Agriculture.

² Based on (a) average payment of $30 per week for 16 weeks or $480 per worker; (b) $10 million retraining subsistence payments; and (c) 2,048,400 unemployed as noted in footnote above.

would be overlooked. It would avoid all the pitfalls a Federal loan program would encounter in federalizing plant location. No new Federal lending bureaucracy would be required. An amendment to the Internal Revenue Code is all that is needed. Two bills that would accomplish this are before the Congress—H.R. 274 and H.R. 5226.

PUBLIC FACILITY LOAN PROGRAM

The bill would set up a new $100 million Federal loan program to finance public facilities in depressed areas. That would needlessly duplicate the existing public facility loan program of the Community Facilities Administration in the HHFA. It presently has a $150 million loan authorization. It operates on a nonsubsidy basis in that loan rates are set at the current cost of money to the Government for comparable maturities plus one-fourth of 1 percent to cover administration and losses. Depressed-area communities as well as all other types of communities are eligible to borrow under the program.

We would support an amendment to the existing law to give that program additional funds and establish a priority for loans in depressed areas. If that was done a startling fact would emerge. Depressed-area communities would make very little use of the authority. The truth of the matter is that most local communities, depressed or otherwise, with the benefit of tax exemption for their securities, can borrow in the private investment market at an interest cost less than the Federal Government can offer on an unsubsidized lending basis. For example, take the case of Johnstown, Pa. It is a bituminous coal mining community. Johnstown has been listed by the Department of Labor as a labor surplus area in every monthly report since May 1953. Under every bill considered by the Congress over the past 5 years, Johnstown qualified as a depressed area. Under this present bill, Johnstown is one of the 20 major areas that would have to be classified as eligible for assistance. As a matter of fact, in November 1960, the 15.3 percent unemployment rate for the Johnstown area was the highest of any of the 20 major qualifying areas and compared with the average unemployment rate for the group as a whole of 9.1 percent. Johnstown is the classic example of a so-called depressed area. But on February 16, 1961, the Johnstown, Pa., Municipal Authority sold in the private investment market a $5 million sewer revenue bond issue with serial maturities from 1963 to 1986 at a net interest cost of 3.9748 percent. That compares with the unsubsidized 4.125 percent rate the Federal Government would have charged under the provisions of this bill as it was introduced.

The favorable private market borrowing experience of Johnstown is by no means unique among the depressed areas. Port Huron, Mich., on October 31, 1960, borrowed at a net interest cost of 2.89 percent; Uniontown, Pa., on November 1, 1960, borrowed at a net interest cost of 3.82 percent; New Bedford, Mass., on November 10, 1960, borrowed at a net interest cost of 2.50 percent; Detroit, Mich., on December 6, 1960, borrowed at a net interest cost of 3.53 percent; Evansville, Ind., on January 24, 1961, borrowed at a net interest cost of 2.9916 percent; Providence, R.I., on February 15, 1961, borrowed at a net interest cost of 3.28 percent; and South Charleston, W. Va., on February 16, 1961, borrowed at a net interest cost of 3.674 percent. Two years ago in our minority views on S. 722 we submitted a table showing that in the preceding year 75 of the then eligible depressed areas actually had borrowed $152 million of funds from the private investment market at favorable rates of interest.

There, of course, is no mystery about this borrowing experience. The cold, calculating private investment market appraises municipal credit from a positive rather than negative point of view. When there is 6 percent unemployment in a community, the private investment market can find value in the 94 percent employment that exists; with 10 percent unemployment, value in the 90 percent employment that exists; and, even as in the case of Johnstown, Pa., with 15 percent unemployment, a very respectable basis of credit in the 85 percent of employment that still remains.

Unfortunately, the nonsubsidized interest rate formula in the bill as it was introduced, has not been preserved. It has been tinkered with and replaced with a Federal subsidy rate formula. Thus Federal funds would be used to replace financing which the private investment market readily provides at reasonable rates of interest. Each year the private investment market absorbs around $7 billion of State and municipal bond issues. In our opinion it would be most unwise and unnecessary to take this step in the direction of federalizing municipal finance.

GRANTS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

This provision of the bill is fantastic. Under it, in effect, you could have a Federal grant school bill, a Federal grant highway bill, a Federal grant hospital bill, a Federal grant airport bill, a Federal grant park bill, and a host of other Federal grant bills as long as the grants related to needed public facilities within a redevelopment area. And you could have all these without the many other problems which seem to arise when such programs are considered on an individual basis. Of course, the $75 million authorized appropriation would be a limiting factor but it would be enough to get a foot in the door and establish the principal of the omnibus Federal grant bill.

It is claimed this section of the bill (sec. 8) is to provide Federal grants to communities, particularly smaller communities, which are in desperate financial condition, to enable them to provide needed public facilities in depressed areas. But that is not what the bill says at all. The very first sentence of the section specifically provides that any State is eligible as an applicant for the grant assistance. And under the broad authority granted by the first sentence of section 5(a) there can be no question but that a whole State could be declared a depressed area or redevelopment area as it is termed in the bill. If it was not intended that this could and would be done, it of course would make no sense to make a State eligible for the grant assistance as section 8 specifically does. Those who think this is supposed to be a bill to aid hard-core depressed areas ought to be very disturbed about the many broad and loose provisions of this bill, particularly when they are considered in conjunction with each other. Aid intended for the truly chronic depressed areas can be dissipated over many other areas of far less urgent need.

Eligible applicants for the public facility Federal grant assistance also include any "private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof." That broad language could include a local chamber of commerce, a local labor union, a church, a PTA, or a local civic association. All of these worthy organizations as well as innumerable others would certainly qualify as organizations "representing" a "part" of a redevelopment area. And there is little doubt they could come up with an almost unlimited number of public facility projects, each one of which would "fulfill a pressing need of the area, or part thereof" and for which there would be "little probability that such project can be undertaken without the assistance of a grant under this section."

We cannot conceive of the Congress establishing any such policies as those contained in this section of the bill. We want no part of any such proposal.

URBAN RENEWAL AMENDMENTS

It doesn't take a depressed-areas bill to amend the Urban Renewal Act. The principal change the provisions of this bill would make in that act would be to permit industrial and commercial property to be developed without meeting any requirement as to demolition or construction of housing in connection with the project. We think there is merit in the proposal but why confine it to just depressed-area projects. A good principle ought to be applicable on a general basis. Of course, proper safeguards should be provided so that owners of dilapidated property can't work a racket out of disposing of their properties at inflated prices under the program. An amendment of this nature belongs in a housing bill, not in this bill.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

At the present time there is an Office of Area Development in the Department of Commerce. It serves as a central point in the Federal Government for providing technical assistance to community and State organizations and delegations seeking economic development assistance under various Federal programs. For instance, the Office advises communities and industries of new products and processes ideas and information which is available from the Patent Office, Bureau of Standards, and Office of Technical Services, in Commerce, as well as the Department of Defense, Department of Agriculture, Small Business Administration, and other parts of the Federal Government. The Office informs private industry of special locational advantages (including Federal procurement set-asides and "Buy American" preferences) of unemployment areas for the location of new production and distribution facilities. This is accomplished through direct counseling of industry and through preparation of "industrial fact sheets" on labor surplus areas which itemize locational assets, and through meetings with business advisory groups. An annual Washington conference is held with State officials so that they may make full use of the various Federal programs in their economic development work. In fiscal year 1952, the Office of Area Development had nine employees with a budget of $60,000. By fiscal year 1961 the Office had expanded to 44 employees with a budget of $427,000. This bill would expand that budget authorization over tenfold to appropriations of $4.5 million annually. The Department of Commerce without this section of the bill, of course, could request an increase in the appropriation for its Office of Area Development just as it has been doing for the past several years.

OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING

We are not opposed to vocational training programs. Throughout the hearings on the bill there was a fair amount of interesting discussion on this phase of the bill but no one seemed to have very definite information as to just what could be accomplished under the program or just now it would operate. Despite the fact the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare would be given the responsibility for making the program work, no witness from that Department testified before the subcommittee. This fact is most regrettable. The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare is most actively engaged in vocational training and retraining programs. Its Office of Education administers Federal grants to land-grant colleges. Under the National Defense Education Act of 1958, the Office provides for Federal participation in a wide variety of educational programs including vocational education. The Office administers the Vocational Education Act (including the Smith-Hughes Vocational Education Act) which provides a program of grants to States for training students and teachers in agriculture, home economics, trades and industry, distributive occupations, practical nursing, and the fishing trades. There are also grants made to support the training of highly skilled technicians. All such grants are allotted among the States according to various formulas and State matching is required. Appropriations for this program run somewhat over $30 million annually. The Department's Office of Vocational Rehabilitation provides Federal grant-in-aid funds matched by State funds in the conduct of vocational rehabilitation programs, including vocational counseling and training, in all 50 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

The provision in this bill would set up a new $4.5 million per year vocational training and retraining program with no guidelines being established or attempt made to correlate it with existing programs. In our opinion that would be very loose legislative procedure.

RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

Under various existing programs, benefit payments are provided for a limited period of time to unemployed persons. Early in March the Congress passed the Temporary Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 1961 which provides for approximately $1 billion of additional unemployment benefits to persons who exhaust their existing benefit rights before March 31, 1962, with a limitation that no more than 13 weeks of temporary benefits could be paid to any person. The temporary extension program will be financed by an additional 0.4 percent tax imposed on all taxable employers for calendar years 1962 and 1963.

This bill (sec. 17) for covered unemployed persons would provide a second extension for an additional 16 weeks in unemployment benefits. These payments, although they could not be made concurrent with, nevertheless could be made before, during, or after the period of time when other unemployment compensation benefits are available. Appropriations of $10 million annually, purely from Federal funds, would be provided to finance this program which would be on a permanent basis. It would also bracket in other unemployed persons not subject to the compensation acts. The condition for these payments would be that the individual reside in a redevelopment area and be engaged in an approved retraining program. The payments are labeled "retraining subsistence payments."

Should not the Congress, before it embarks on this new program, take another look at its existing unemployment compensation programs including the recently enacted temporary extension to see if it cannot work out a program whereby those benefit payments could be utilized as subsistence payments for unemployed workers undergoing retraining? In States where laws require that the recipient be available for a job, an afterhours or evening retraining program could be put in effect. As a matter of fact the most readily available vocational retraining facilities would be those in our educational institutions which probably only could be used on an afterhours basis. Perhaps employers could be encouraged to conduct retraining programs in idle facilities or on an afterhours basis if an incentive was provided in the form of a rebate on the unemployment taxes they are required to pay. We believe that a proposal dealing with unemployment compensation ought to be handled by the committee of Congress charged with the responsibility for legislation in this field, namely, the Ways and Means Committee. It is our understanding that that committee later in the year is to consider legislation dealing with permanent changes in the unemployment compensation system.

CONCLUSION

In our opinion this is an ineffective bill. Under it, disillusionment rather than accomplishment is the fate in store for most of the depressed areas. We believe a far more effective program could be achieved much more quickly by utilizing the device of accelerated tax amortization, as provided for in H.R. 274 and H.R. 5226, to promote plant construction in depressed areas. Forty billion dollars of defense facility construction in the 1950's, achieved under an accelerated tax amortization program without any new Federal lending bureaucracy, attests to the effectiveness of the procedure. Undesirable federalizing of plant location would be avoided. The driving force of competition would be activated for business development in depressed areas. Employment opportunities would be created. A better job of providing jobs for the unemployed in the depressed areas could be achieved by the substitute program.

ADDITIONAL VIEWS OF MRS. DWYER

Although I agree in most respects with the points made in opposition to the present bill by the minority report, I believe certain of these points should be emphasized and others should be added:

(1) Opposition to the committee bill should not be construed to mean that I oppose area redevelopment legislation. On the contrary, I share very strongly the view expressed in the platform adopted by the 1960 Republican National Convention—

To that end we favor discharge by Government of responsibility for those activities which the private sector cannot do or cannot so well do, such as constructive Federal-local action to aid areas of chronic high unemployment * * *.

The committee bill fails to meet the test of "constructive Federal-local action" because it tries to do too much for too many areas—thus the assistance it provides would tend to be dissipated—and because it seeks to create a new Federal program, in large measure, from already available programs which could, instead, be tailored and expanded to meet the present needs of chronic labor-surplus areas.

(2) In view of the many questions which have been raised as to the practical effects of such a comprehensive area redevelopment program as envisaged in the committee bill, it seems to me the Congress would be better advised to concentrate the proposed assistance in a limited number of chronically distressed areas. This would assure maximum effectiveness of the Federal help. It would eliminate the uneconomic and wasteful competition for the assistance between various areas of the country. It would provide a conclusive test or demonstration of the validity of the economic concepts involved in such a program and the effectiveness of the economic tools. And, finally, it would make certain that the aid was directed to those areas which needed it most and which could use the help most constructively.

With respect to this last point, I was struck by Labor Secretary Goldberg's frank response, during subcommittee hearings, to my question about the availability of comprehensive data distinguishing between those areas where the present labor surplus is the result primarily of the present recession and areas where unemployment is caused chiefly by automation or other technological changes, foreign competition, relocation of industry, shifts in market demand, or other so-called structural changes.

Secretary Goldberg replied that no comprehensive data is available—a situation which seems to me to dictate the kind of program I have suggested. Individual areas, as Mr. Goldberg indicated, have been studied from this point of view, and so it would be feasible to select a limited number of those areas where conditions are such that Federal aid could be effectively utilized.

The pilot program announced in January by the new administration for the distribution in selected areas of surplus foods under the food stamp plan might be a useful example of the kind of demonstration program I have in mind in the field of area redevelopment.

(3) Because of the nature of chronic unemployment, the most effective tool we can use, I believe, is a cooperative Federal-State program for the retraining of jobless workers whose skills have become obsolete or unneeded. Such a program, while it would parallel in some respects existing vocational training programs, ought to stress courses designed especially for older workers and heads of families.

My own experience this year in the Sixth Congressional District of New Jersey confirms the importance of this kind of training program. During a tour of employment offices in the area, it became obvious that a high percentage of the unemployed were unskilled or partially skilled workers. At the same time, these local offices were seeking a large number of workers in a variety of occupations that required technical skills or special training. While the Sixth District is by no means a chronically distressed area, the situation I found there is universal and it represents in a striking way the need for an expanded industrial training or retraining program.

(4) In any program of area redevelopment, we must guard relentlessly against the possibility of Federal funds being used to lure industry from an already industrialized area into a labor-surplus area. The antipirating provision in the committee bill is, in my judgment, inadequate. It would not, for instance, prohibit a company from locating a branch in a labor-surplus area, with Federal assistance, and then gradually shifting production of a certain item from the older plant to the newer one. The decision to transfer production is an economic one, and no one can complain too greatly if management makes a move for good economic reasons. We can complain, and mightily, however, when Federal funds are used as an artificial encouragement to make such a move, whether in full or in part. This is economic piracy and taxpaying employees should not be called upon to finance the loss of their own jobs. To the extent that new job opportunities in labor-surplus areas are created from lost opportunities in other areas, we are simply transferring unemployment—a situation we must avoid at all costs.

Any area redevelopment bill adopted by Congress should include provisions, as airtight as possible, protecting established industrial areas from such economic piracy.

(5) It is important to remember that an area redevelopment bill is not supposed to be antirecession legislation. The problems such legislation is designed to attack are fundamentally different from the problems created by relatively short-term business adjustments. As several leading economists have pointed out recently, the volume of residual long-term unemployment has increased after recovery from each of the economic recessions of the past decade. Unemployment at the peak of the 1953 boom was 2.7 percent of the labor force. It measured 4.2 percent at the peak of the 1957 recovery and reached 4.8 percent at the top of the 1960 boom.

Long-term unemployment is an extremely serious problem. It deserves careful thought and thorough action.

ADDITIONAL VIEWS OF MR. HALPERN

I believe it is important that the Nation recognize affirmatively that very real and serious economic problems exist in particular areas of the country. Chronic unemployment, obsolescent factories, migration of plants, depletion of resources, and other factors are turning or have turned once flourishing cities into deteriorating communities. The principle embodied in legislation considered by the committee—the need to initiate a program to provide for the curing of such civic blight—is highly desirable.

However I am concerned that S. 1 as reported, does not contain strong enough language to effectively prevent the raiding of industries in some areas which could cause the economic decline of currently thriving communities, thereby defeating its prime purpose. I am not convinced the bill as reported has sufficient standards and effective protections against the migration, or pirating of industries from established areas into distressed ones. I recognize that it would be exceedingly difficult to write an ironclad provision into the bill preventing such shifts in the location of industries. I feel, however, that the relevant provisions in S. 1 can be tightened, and more definite standards prescribed for its administration.

I believe that the purposes of the bill should be directed toward the objective that new jobs should be created in distressed communities rather than being transferred from another area, and that no Federal assistance would or should be extended for any project involving the removal of a facility from one community to another.

As Mr. H. Christian Sonne, chairman of the board of directors of the National Planning Association, testified last year—and effective depressed areas program must contribute to an increase in total production and total employment, not merely to a shift of production and employment from one area to another. We are seeking a program to help depressed areas participate in national economic growth and well-being, not to distribute the distress more evenly throughout the economy.

The possibility of "distributing the distress more evenly throughout the economy" is precisely what disturbs me about the standards in S. 1 as reported, relating to the runaway shop. I favor a program aimed at creating and encouraging new industry and economic development in distressed areas, not one which permits or even encourages a further degree of deterioration of thriving communities through the migration of plants.

Change is essential in our national growth, and when an industry migrates from one community to another on its own motivation and volition, that is one thing, but when it does so under inducements provided in a Government program, it is an entirely different and in my opinion unconscionable matter.

The preamble of S. 1 as reported, states in part—that under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources.

But nowhere in the preamble is mention made of the 'supposed intent of Congress to guard against the pirating of industry or the runaway shop. There is only this tangential reference to creation of industry as opposed to relocation.

Furthermore, neither section 6(a) which provides for the loans of the program nor the urban renewal section contain specific sanctions upon the "pirating" or "raiding" of industry.

It must constantly be borne in mind, during the deliberation of this legislation that if the proposed transfer of a plant from one area to another will create unemployment in the area it leaves as it absorbs in the area it moves to, nothing has been gained from the point of view of the overall economy of the United States. The use of Federal funds for a transfer of this sort would not be justified. Expansion of existing firms and the creation and development of new businesses or new branches of firms in business elsewhere, without at the same time reducing existing employment opportunities, is the aim of this Federal assistance.

I believe that the following recommendations would clarify the situation and provide the administrators of this law the tools to prevent the raiding of developed and thriving areas.

(1) The preamble should be made stronger by providing that it is not the intent of this bill to merely transfer employment opportunities from one area of the United States to another.

(2) Section 6(a) should prohibit loans if it would result in an increase in unemployment in an area of original location.

(3) The urban renewal provisions should be amended to give the Administrator the power to determine if an increase in unemployment in an original location would result from aid to another area.

Such clarifications would provide clear and specific guidelines to the administrators of the bill; they would emphasize the creation of new opportunities and economic growth; and they would discourage the raiding of developed areas.

In the 86th Congress both the House and Senate saw fit to add almost identical amendments to the depressed area bill. As the one who offered those amendments in the House, I feel that legislative history was established in connection with the measure before Congress at that time. I feel, likewise, that the legislative history of S. 1 should be clearly established during the deliberation on the present bill so that there will be no qualifications or questions as to interpretation of the antipirating provisions.

I hope that this point will be clarified on the floor of the House through the adoption of such amendments as I propose.

SECTION-BY-SECTION SUMMARY OF THE BILL AS REPORTED

Section 1. Short title

This section provides that the bill may be cited as the "Area Redevelopment Act".

Section 2. Declaration of purpose

This section declares it to be the purpose of the bill to provide Federal help for areas needing economic redevelopment so that they can expand their economic activities and alleviate the substantial unemployment and underemployment that prevails within such areas. This would be accomplished by assisting communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals to create new employment opportunities by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources.

Section 3. Area Redevelopment Administrator

This section provides for the appointment by the President (subject to Senate confirmation) of an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce at a rate of compensation equal to that received by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce (presently $20,000 a year). The Administrator would perform such duties under the bill as the Secretary of Commerce may assign.

Section 4. Advisory Policy Board

Subsection (a) creates an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board to advise the Secretary of Commerce in the performance of his functions under the bill. The Board would be composed of the Secretary of Commerce, as Chairman, and seven other department and agency heads whose functions are related to (or could assist in) the improvement of economic conditions in redevelopment areas. Any member of the Board could designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board. The Chairman could invite other interested officials in the executive branch to participate in the functions of the Board.

Subsection (b) directs the Secretary of Commerce to appoint a 25-member National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment, to be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the general public, one of whom would be designated as Chairman by the Secretary. The Committee would be required to meet at least twice a year and would make recommendations to the Secretary from time to time to assist him in carrying out his duties under the bill.

Subsection (c) authorizes the Secretary to call together and confer with any persons, including representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and government, who could assist in meeting the problems of unemployment or underemployment in redevelopment areas.

Section 5. Redevelopment areas

This section provides for the designation by the Secretary of redevelopment areas within the United States. The designation of an area under this section would be necessary before such area could receive assistance under section 6, 7, 8, 14, 15, 16, or 17 of the bill.

Subsection (a) directs the Secretary to designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas within the United States in which he determines (using standards generally comparable to those established by this subsection for mandatory designation) that substantial and persistent unemployment has existed for an extended period of time. The Secretary would be required to include among such areas any area where the rate of unemployment (excluding temporary or seasonal unemployment) is currently 6 percent or more and—

(1) has both averaged 6 percent or more and been 50 percent above the national average during 3 of the preceding 4 calendar years, or

(2) has both averaged 6 percent or more and been 75 percent above the national average during 2 of the preceding 3 calendar years, or

(3) has both averaged 6 percent or more and been 100 percent above the national average during 1 of the preceding 2 calendar years.

The Secretary of Labor would be required to make the findings of fact and provide the data used by the Secretary of Commerce in making the determinations required by this subsection.

Subsection (b) directs the Secretary of Commerce to designate as "redevelopment areas" areas within the United States (including Indian reservations) which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making these designations the Secretary would be required to consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas in the United States, the ratio of low-income families to the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent of migration from such area, and the proportion of the population in each such area which has been receiving public assistance from the Federal, State, or local government. In making these determinations, the Secretary would be guided (but not conclusively governed) by studies made, and information compiled, by Federal agencies, State and local governments, educational institutions, and private organizations.

✓ Subsection (c) directs the Secretaries of Labor, Agriculture, and Interior and heads of other Federal agencies, upon the request of the Secretary of Commerce, to conduct special studies and compile and furnish to the Secretary of Commerce such information as he may deem necessary to enable him to make the determinations required under subsection (b). The Secretary of Commerce would reimburse the foregoing officers when appropriate, from funds appropriated to carry out the provisions of the bill, for expenditures incurred by them under this section.

Subsection (d) defines the term "redevelopment area" to mean any area within the United States which has been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area.

Section 6. Loans and participations

Subsection (a) authorizes the Secretary of Commerce to make loans (and participations in loans) and purchase evidences of indebtedness to assist in financing the purchase and development of land and facilities for industrial and commercial use in redevelopment areas, including the construction of new buildings and the rehabilitation, alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings (and including machinery and equipment in exceptional cases). Such assistance could not be extended for working capital or to assist establishments relocating (totally or partially) from one area to another.

Subsection (b) imposes the following restrictions and limitations on the financial assistance which may be extended under this section:

(1) The total amount of assistance outstanding at any one time with respect to industrial areas (designated under sec. 5(a)) could not exceed $100 million, and with respect to rural areas (designated under sec. 5(b)) could not exceed $100 million.

(2) Assistance could be extended to private or public applicants, but only to those approved therefor by the State (or an economic development agency or instrumentality thereof) in which the project to be financed would be located.

(3) The project must be reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in the area.

(4) No assistance could be extended if it is otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms.

(5) No loan could be made if a participation is available.

(6) Reasonable assurance of repayment would be required.

(7) No assistance could be provided for a period exceeding 25 years (except in cases involving the obligor's bankruptcy or insolvency); but the Secretary could extend or renew a loan (or, in the case of an evidence of indebtedness, take appropriate action to defer repayment) for an additional period not exceeding 10 years where such extension, renewal, or other action would aid in orderly liquidation.

(8) Assistance under this section would bear interest at not more than the average yield on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to loans made by the Secretary under this section (the rate paid by the Secretary for funds obtained from the Treasury under sec. 9(d)(1)), plus one-half of 1 percent (this works out currently at 4½ percent for a 20-year loan).

(9) Such assistance could not exceed 65 percent of the total cost of the project involved, exclusive of other Federal aid, and the following conditions, among others, would be applicable:

(A) The total of funds available from all sources (including assistance under this section) must be sufficient to complete the project.

(B) At least 10 percent of the total cost of the project must be supplied by the State or an agency, instrumentality, or subdivision thereof, or by a community or area organization, as equity capital or as a loan; and any such loan would have to be repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid, with its security (if any) being subordinate to any lien securing the Federal financial assistance extended under this section.

(C) At least 5 percent of the total cost of the project must be supplied by nongovernmental sources as equity capital or as a loan; and any such loan would have to be repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid, with its security (if any) being subordinate to any lien securing the Federal financial assistance extended under this section.

(D) The Secretary could provide, except in the cases noted in (B) and (C) above, that the Federal financial assistance extended under this section would be repayable only after other loans with respect to the same project have been repaid and that any Federal lien would be subordinate to other liens.

(10) No assistance could be extended under this section unless an overall program for the economic development of the area has been submitted to and approved by the Secretary, and the project for which such assistance is sought is consistent with such program and with State and local law.

Section 7. Loans for public facilities

Subsection (a) authorizes the Secretary to make loans to State or local governments, Indian tribes, or private or public nonprofit organizations for the purchase or development of land for public facilities in redevelopment areas, and for the construction, rehabilitation, expansion, or improvement of public facilities in such areas. Such a loan could be made only if (1) the project will tend to improve opportunities for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities; (2) the funds sought are not otherwise available on reasonable terms; (3) the loan plus other available funds will cover the cost of the project; (4) there is reasonable expectation of repayment; and (5) the area has an approved economic development program and the project conforms with such program.

Subsection (b) provides for maximum loan maturities of 40 years (with a possible extension of 10 additional years where it would aid in orderly liquidation); and for a maximum interest rate equal to the higher of $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent or the average rate on all outstanding U.S. obligations computed as of the end of the preceding fiscal year (the rate paid by the Secretary for funds obtained from the Treasury under sec. 9(d)(2)), plus one-fourth of 1 percent (this works out currently at $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent).

Subsection (c) establishes a limit of $100 million on the total amount of such loans which may be outstanding at any one time.

Subsection (d) provides that no loan could be made with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless such State regulatory body determines that there is a need for an increase in such service, in the area to be served by the public facility for which the loan is requested under this section, which such existing public utility is unable to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion it is prepared to undertake.

Section 8. Grants for public facilities

Subsection (a) authorizes the Secretary to make grants to State or local governments, Indian tribes, or private or public nonprofit organizations for the acquisition or development of land for public facilities in redevelopment areas, and for the construction, rehabilitation, expansion, or improvement of public facilities in such areas. Such a grant could be made only if (1) the project will tend to improve opportunities for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities; (2) the entity requesting the grant will contribute to the cost of the project in proportion to its ability to contribute; (3) the project is urgently needed in the area and could not be undertaken without such a grant; and (4) the area has an approved economic development program and the project conforms with such program. No such grant could exceed 65 percent of the difference between the total cost of the project and the amount available for it under other Federal programs or as loans from other sources.

Subsection (b) directs the Secretary to issue regulations to insure that Federal funds granted under this section are not wasted or dissipated.

Subsection (c) contains the same protection for existing public utilities under the grant program as section 7(d) provides for such utilities under the loan program.

Subsection (d) authorizes appropriations not exceeding $75 million for grants under this section.

Section 9. Area redevelopment fund

Subsection (a) establishes in the Treasury an area redevelopment fund, which would be available to the Secretary of Commerce to extend financial assistance under sections 6 and 7, and for the payment of all obligations and expenditures arising therefrom.

Subsection (b) authorizes appropriations of not more than $300 million for the purpose of making advances to the fund when requested by the Secretary.

Subsection (c) provides that receipts from the programs of assistance under sections 6 and 7 would be credited to the fund and any amounts in the fund in excess of current needs would be credited to the appropriation from which advanced and held for future advances to the fund.

Subsection (d) provides that interest be paid (1) on advances made to the fund for plant loans under section 6 at rates based on the current average market yields of outstanding marketable U.S. obligations having maturities comparable to such loans (currently about 3½ percent for 20-year loans), and (2) on advances to the fund for public facility loans under section 7 at the same rates as are applicable to funds obtained from the Treasury under the college housing loan program (currently 3¼ percent). Interest payments made under this subsection would be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

Subsection (e) provides that the contributions to be made from the area redevelopment fund to the civil service retirement and disability fund, with respect to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 and covered by the Civil Service Retirement Act, would be determined by applying to the total basic salaries of such employees the percentage rate determined annually by the Civil Service Commission to be the excess of the total normal cost percentage rate of the civil service retirement system over the employee deduction rate specified in section 4(a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act. There would be paid from the area redevelopment fund into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts the portion of the cost of administration of the civil service retirement and disability fund determined by the Civil Service Commission to be attributable to such employees.

Subsection (f) directs the Secretary, with respect to functions vested in him by sections 6 and 7, to prepare and submit an annual budget program in accordance with the provisions of the Government Corporation Control Act relating to wholly owned Government corporations, and to determine the character of, and the necessity for, obligations and expenditures, and the manner in which they shall be incurred and paid, subject to provisions of law applicable to Government corporations.

Section 10. Information

This section directs the Secretary to aid redevelopment areas by furnishing to individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises in such areas any form of assistance, information, or advice obtainable from Federal agencies which would be useful in alleviating conditions of unemployment or underemployment in such areas, and to provide similar aid to other areas where it would be useful in preventing such conditions. In addition, the Secretary would be required to furnish the procurement divisions of Federal agencies with the names and addresses of business firms (located in redevelopment areas) which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts to furnish supplies or services, and designating the supplies or services such firms are engaged in providing.

Section 11. Technical assistance

This section authorizes the Secretary to provide technical assistance to redevelopment areas and to other areas which he finds have substantial need for such assistance, including studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Appropriations of not more than $4,500,000 annually would be authorized to carry out this section.

Section 12. Powers of Secretary

This section provides the Secretary with the administrative powers needed to carry out the area redevelopment program under the bill. The Secretary would be authorized (among other things) to hold hearings; to secure needed information from other Federal agencies; to engage in such business transactions, and to take such action to acquire, dispose of, and otherwise deal with both real and personal property and to enforce any rights, claims, and obligations, as may be necessary or appropriate in connection with the performance of his duties under the bill; and to establish such rules and regulations as may be appropriate in carrying out the provisions of the bill.

Section 13. Termination of eligibility for further assistance

This section requires the Secretary to terminate eligibility for assistance under the bill in the case of any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area when he finds that the economic conditions within such area no longer warrant such designation. Such area could, however, be redesignated as a redevelopment area whenever the Secretary finds that economic conditions within such area again warrant such designation; and no action by the Secretary in terminating such eligibility would affect the validity of any contract entered into before such termination. The Secretary would be required to keep interested Federal, State, and local agencies advised of any changes with respect to the designation of any area under this section.

Section 14. Urban renewal

This section amends title I of the Housing Act of 1949 by adding at the end thereof a new section 113 which would permit the use of the slum clearance and urban redevelopment provisions of that title (without regard to certain limitations which would otherwise be applicable) to assist in the establishment or improvement of industrial plants and facilities in areas designated as redevelopment areas under section 5 of the bill.

Subsection (a) of the new section 113 would provide that financial assistance under title I for slum clearance and urban redevelopment activities could be extended in accordance with the special provisions of the new section in any area certified by the Secretary to the Housing and Home Finance Administrator as a redevelopment area which is reasonably likely to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economic development with assistance provided under the bill and pursuant to other undertakings.

Subsection (b) of the new section 113 would provide that financial assistance could be furnished under title I in areas so certified without regard to the existing requirement that the project area be predominantly residential in character and that it be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses, subject only to the limitation contained in subsection (e).

Subsection (c) of the new section 113 would provide that such assistance could be furnished without regard to the existing requirement that any land acquired in the project area be disposed of for immediate development; under this subsection such land could be conveyed to any public agency or nonprofit corporation for disposition and development at an indefinite later date (but as promptly as practicable). The bill would provide that the initial conveyance, to the public agency or nonprofit corporation, shall be at fair value.

Subsection (d) of the new section 113 would permit such assistance to be continued until the completion of the project even though the area meanwhile ceases to be a redevelopment area under the bill.

Subsection (e) of the new section 113 would limit the amount available for assistance as provided in that section to 10 percent of the funds authorized after the date of enactment of the bill for capital grants under section 103 of title I. However, this amount would be in addition to the amount available under the present exemptions from the predominantly residential requirement provided by the next to last paragraph of section 110(c) of title I, so that projects receiving assistance under the new section 113 would not be competing with projects seeking assistance under the present exemptions (which permit assistance without regard to the predominantly residential requirement only up to 20 percent of the total amount of capital grants authorized under such title after September 23, 1959).

Section 15. Urban planning grants

This section amends section 701 of the Housing Act of 1954 to make planning grants under that section available directly to counties, cities, and other municipalities which are situated in areas designated as redevelopment areas under section 5(a) of the bill, without regard to their population and without going through a State planning agency.

Section 16. Occupational training

Subsection (a) authorizes the Secretary of Labor to make, or assist in, studies of the labor force in any redevelopment area.

Subsection (b) provides that, if a redevelopment area has an approved economic development program, the Secretary of Labor (in consultation with the Secretary of Commerce and the Secretary of Agriculture) shall determine the occupational training needs for unemployed and underemployed residents of such area. The Secretary of Labor would be required to notify the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare of the occupational training needs of the area and provide for the selection and referral of those residents of the area who could be expected to obtain employment as the result of the training made available. The Secretary of Labor would also be required to cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, and with existing State and local agencies and officials, in order to assure that the facilities and services of such agencies are made available to the residents of such area.

Subsection (c) directs the Secretary of Labor to advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare when additional occupational training facilities or services are needed in a redevelopment area. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would provide assistance, including financial assistance, to the appropriate State agency to provide such additional facilities or services, and if he finds that such State agency is unable to provide the needed facilities and services he would be authorized to provide for such facilities and services by contract with public or private educational institutions, after consultation with the State agency.

Subsection (d) directs the Secretary of Labor to provide any assistance necessary to set up apprenticeships and on-the-job training.

Subsection (e) authorizes appropriations of not more than $4,500,000 annually to carry out the provisions of this section.

Section 17. Retraining subsistence payments

Subsection (a) authorizes the Secretary of Labor (in consultation with the Secretaries of Commerce and Agriculture) to enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment areas are located whereby such States (as agents of the United States) would make weekly retraining payments to unemployed and underemployed residents of such areas who are undergoing training for new jobs under section 16. Such payments could not be made to any individual for more than 16 weeks, and no such payment could exceed the amount of the average weekly unemployment compensation payment (determined in accordance with regulations prescribed under subsection (d)) payable for total unemployment in the State concerned.

Subsection (b) provides that no retraining subsistence payment for which an individual is otherwise eligible shall be made for any week he has received or has filed application for unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or any other Federal or State unemployment compensation law, unless the appropriate State or Federal agency finally determines that such individual was not entitled for such week to unemployment compensation under such Federal or State law or under title XV of the Social Security Act.

Subsection (c) provides that any agreement under this section could contain provisions to promote effective administration, protect the United States against loss, and insure the proper application of payments made to the State under such agreement. Except as provided in such agreement, or in regulations prescribed under subsection (d), determinations by any duly designated officer or agency with respect to the eligibility of individuals for weekly retraining payments would be conclusive and not subject to review by any court or other officer.

Subsection (d) directs the Secretaries of Labor and Commerce to prescribe jointly necessary regulations to carry out the provisions of this section.

Subsection (e) authorizes appropriations of not more than $10 million annually to carry out the provisions of this section.

Section 18. Penalties

Subsection (a) makes it a crime (punishable by a $10,000 fine or 5 years' imprisonment or both) to make a false statement or willfully overvalue a security for the purpose of obtaining financial assistance under section 6, 7, or 8, or of influencing any action of the Secretary, or of obtaining money, property, or anything of value under the bill.

Subsection (b) makes it a crime (punishable by a $10,000 fine or 5 years' imprisonment or both) for any employee or agent of the Secretary to embezzle or misapply any money or securities, or to make false entries, or (with intent to defraud) to issue or assign notes or other documents or participate or share in any loan or contract made by the Secretary, or to give out any unauthorized information about the actions or plans of the Secretary or invest or speculate in the securities of a company receiving assistance from the Secretary.

Section 19. Employment of expeditors and administrative employees

This section provides that the Secretary may not extend financial assistance under section 6, 7, or 8 to a business enterprise unless the names of the attorneys and agents expediting the application and the fees paid to them are certified to the Secretary, and unless an agreement is executed requiring such enterprise to refrain from employing or offering to employ or retaining the professional services of any employee of the Secretary who exercised discretionary power, with respect to the granting of assistance under the bill, at the time such enterprise was granted such assistance or during the preceding year. Such agreement would be binding on such enterprise for a period of 2 years after receiving assistance from the Secretary.

Section 20. Record of applications

This section requires the Secretary to maintain a permanent record of applications approved for financial assistance under sections 6, 7, and 8, and to keep such record available for public inspection. Such record must contain (1) the name of the applicant or (in the case of a corporation) the names of its officers and directors, (2) the amount and duration of the loan or grant applied for, (3) the purposes for which the proceeds of the loan or grant would be used, and (4) a description of the security offered.

Section 21. Prevailing rate of wage and 40-hour week

This section requires the Secretary to insure (as a condition of financial assistance under the bill) that all laborers and mechanics employed by contractors and subcontractors on projects undertaken by public applicants assisted under the bill (1) be paid wages at rates no less than those prevailing for the same type of work on similar construction in the immediate locality, as determined by the Secretary of Labor under the Davis-Bacon Act, and (2) receive time and one-half for hours worked during a week in excess of 40 or for hours in excess of 8 in any workday, as the case may be.

Section 22. Annual report

This section requires the Secretary to submit a comprehensive and detailed annual report to the Congress, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1962. The report would show, among other things, the number and size of Government contracts placed with business enterprises located in redevelopment areas, and the amount and duration of employment resulting from such contracts. The various Federal agencies would be required to furnish the Secretary such information as he may request to enable him to carry out his duties under this section.

Section 23. Appropriation

This section authorizes the appropriation of such sums as may be necessary for administrative expenses to carry out the provisions of the bill.

Section 24. Use of other facilities

Subsection (a) directs the Secretary to use, whenever possible in carrying out the bill, services and facilities available from other Federal agencies (but only with their consent, and on a reimbursable basis) in order to avoid duplication of existing staffs, facilities, and activities in such agencies. The Secretary would also be authorized to delegate to the heads of other Federal agencies any of his functions, powers, and duties, and to authorize the redelegation of such functions, powers, and duties by the heads of such agencies.

Subsection (b) directs other Federal agencies to exercise their powers, duties, and functions in such manner as will assist in carrying out the objectives of the bill, and declares the bill to be supplemental to existing authority and not restrictive of any existing powers, duties, and functions.

Subsection (c) authorizes the transfer of amounts made available to carry out the bill among Federal agencies, with the approval of the Director of the Budget Bureau, so long as the amounts transferred are used for the purposes for which specifically appropriated.

Subsection (d) creates 15 new positions (in grades 16, 17, and 18 of the General Schedule under the Classification Act of 1949) to assist in performing functions under the bill and functions delegated pursuant to subsection (a). Such new positions would be apportioned among the Federal agencies by the Secretary with the approval of the Director of the Budget Bureau.

Section 25. Records and audit

Subsection (a) requires each recipient of financial assistance under the bill to keep such records as the Secretary shall prescribe, including records which disclose the amount and disposition of such assistance, the total cost of the project, the amount and nature of that portion of such cost supplied by other sources, and such other records as would facilitate an effective audit.

Subsection (b) gives the Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States access, for the purpose of audit and examination, to any records of a recipient which are pertinent to assistance received under the bill. The Secretary would be primarily responsible for auditing the books of recipients of assistance under this section, leaving to the General Accounting Office the task of auditing as many recipients each year as determined necessary by the Comptroller General.

Section 26. Loans to State and local development companies

This section amends section 502 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, which establishes the Small Business Administration program of secured loans to State and local development companies for plant construction, conversion, and expansion, so as to make such program permanent by eliminating the provision which presently terminates the Administration's authority to make such loans as of June 30, 1961.

Section 27. Study by Secretary

This section requires the Secretary of Commerce to study and report to the Congress on the feasibility of establishing procedures whereby increased use could be made of those military bases in redevelopment areas, and those Government-owned plants and facilities in such areas manufacturing munitions and other supplies for the Government, which are not being fully utilized, whenever such increased use is consistent with national defense, economy in Government operation, and Government procurement objectives.

Section 28. Application of act

This section defines the terms "State," "States," and "United States" to include the several States of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW

In compliance with clause 3 of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, changes in existing law made by the bill, as passed by the Senate, are shown as follows (new matter is printed in italic, existing law in which no change is proposed is shown in roman):

TITLE I OF THE HOUSING ACT OF 1949, AS AMENDED

TITLE I—SLUM CLEARANCE AND URBAN RENEWAL

URBAN RENEWAL FUND

SEC. 100. The authorizations, funds, and appropriations available pursuant to sections 102 and 103 hereof shall constitute a fund, to be known as the "Urban Renewal Fund", and shall be available for advances, loans, and grants to local public agencies for urban renewal projects in accordance with the provisions of this title, and all contracts, obligations, assets, and liabilities existing under or pursuant to said sections prior to the enactment of the Housing Act of 1954 are hereby transferred to said Fund.

LOCAL RESPONSIBILITIES

SEC. 101. (a) In entering into any contract for advances for surveys, plans, and other preliminary work for projects under this title or for grants pursuant to section 103(d), the Administrator shall give consideration to the extent to which appropriate local public bodies have undertaken positive programs (through the adoption, modernization, administration, and enforcement of housing, zoning, building, and other local laws, codes, and regulations relating to land use and adequate standards of health, sanitation, and safety for buildings, including the use and occupancy of dwellings) for (1) preventing the spread or recurrence in the community of slums and blighted areas, and (2) encouraging housing cost reductions through the use of appropriate new materials, techniques, and methods in land and residential planning, design, and construction, the increase of efficiency in residential construction, and the elimination of restrictive practices which unnecessarily increase housing costs.

(b) In the administration of this title, the Administrator shall encourage the operations of such local public agencies as are established on a State, or regional (within a State), or unified metropolitan basis or as are established on such other basis as permits such agencies to contribute effectively toward the solution of community development or redevelopment problems on a State, or regional (within a State), or unified metropolitan basis. The Administrator shall particularly encourage the utilization of local public agencies established by the States to operate on a statewide basis in behalf of smaller communities within the State which are undertaking or propose to undertake urban renewal programs whenever that arrangement facilitates the undertaking of an urban renewal program by any such community, or provides an effective solution to community development or redevelopment problems in such communities, and is approved by resolution or ordinance of the governing bodies of the affected communities.

(c) No contract shall be entered into for any loan or capital grant under this title, or for annual contributions or capital grants pursuant to the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, for any project or projects not constructed or covered by a contract for annual contributions prior to August 1, 1956, and no mortgage shall be insured, and no commitment to insure a mortgage shall be issued, under section 220 or 221 of the National Housing Act, as amended, unless (1) there is presented to the Administrator by the locality a workable program (which shall include an official plan of action, as it exists from time to time, for effectively dealing with the problem of urban slums and blight within the community and for the establishment and preservation of a well-planned community with well-organized residential neighborhoods of decent homes and suitable living environment for adequate family life) for utilizing appropriate private and public resources to eliminate, and prevent the development or spread of, slums and urban blight, to encourage needed urban rehabilitation, to provide for the redevelopment of blighted, deteriorated, or slum areas, or to undertake such of the aforesaid activities or other feasible community activities as may be suitably employed to achieve the objectives of such a program, and (2) on the basis of his review of such program, the Administrator determines that such program meets the requirements of this subsection and certifies to the constituent agencies affected that the Federal assistance may be made available in such community: Provided, That this sentence shall not apply to the insurance of, or commitment to insure, a mortgage under section 220 of the National Housing Act, as amended, if the mortgaged property is in an area referred to in clause (A)(i) of paragraph (1) of section 220(d), or under section 221 of the National Housing Act, as amended, if the mortgaged property is in an area described in clause (3) of section 221(a) of said Act, or in a community referred to in clause (2)(B) of said section: And provided further, That, notwithstanding any other provisions of law which would authorize such delegation or transfer, there shall not be delegated or transferred to any other official (except an officer or employee of the Housing and Home Finance Agency serving as Acting Administrator during the absence or disability of the Administrator or in the event of a vacancy in that office) the final authority vested in the Administrator (i) to determine whether any such workable program meets the requirements of this subsection, (ii) to make the certification that Federal assistance of the types enumerated in this subsection may be made available in such community, (iii) to make the certifications as to the maximum number of dwelling units needed for the relocation of families to be displaced as a result of governmental action and who would be eligible to rent or purchase dwelling accommodations in properties covered by mortgage insurance under section 221 of the National Housing Act, as amended, or (iv) to determine that the relocation requirements of section 105(c) of this title have been met.

(d) The Administrator is authorized to establish facilities (1) for furnishing to communities, at their request, an urban renewal service to assist them in the preparation of a workable program as referred to in the preceding subsection and to provide them with technical and professional assistance for planning and developing local urban renewal programs, and (2) for the assembly, analysis and reporting of information pertaining to such programs.

LOANS

SEC. 102. (a) To assist local communities in the elimination of slums and blighted or deteriorated or deteriorating areas, in preventing the spread of slums, blight or deterioration, and in providing maximum opportunity for the redevelopment, rehabilitation, and conservation of such areas by private enterprise, the Administrator may make temporary and definitive loans to local public agencies in accordance with the provisions of this title for the undertaking of urban renewal projects. Such loans (outstanding at any one time) shall be in such amounts not exceeding the estimated expenditures to be made by the local public agency for such purposes, bear interest at such rate (not less than the applicable going Federal rate), be secured in such manner, and be repaid within such period (not exceeding, in the case of definitive loans, forty years from the date of the bonds or other obligations evidencing such loans), as may be deemed advisable by the Administrator. In any case where, in connection with its undertaking and carrying out of an urban renewal project, a local public agency is authorized (under the circumstances in which the temporary loan herein provided is requested) to acquire real property in the urban renewal area, the Administrator, in addition to all other authority under this title and notwithstanding any other provisions of this title, regardless of the stage of development of the urban renewal plan and whether before or after the approval thereof, may make a temporary loan or loans to any such local public agency to finance the acquisition of such real property: Provided, That no loan for such purpose shall be made unless (1) the governing body of the locality involved shall have approved by resolution or ordinance the acquisition of real property in the urban renewal area, and (2) either (A) the Administrator shall have determined that such loan is reasonably secured by a first mortgage or other prior lien upon such real property or is otherwise reasonably secured, or (B) the governing body of the locality shall have assumed the responsibility to bear any loss that may arise as the result of such acquisition in the event that the property so acquired is not used for urban renewal purposes because the urban renewal plan for the project is not approved, or is amended to omit any of the acquired property, or is abandoned for any reason: Provided further, That the Administrator may, in his discretion and subject to such conditions as he may impose, permit any structure so acquired to be demolished and removed, and may include in any loan authorized by this section the cost of such demolition and removal if the approval of the local governing body extends to such demolition and removal: And provided further, That the loan contract shall provide that the local public agency shall not dispose of such real property (except in lieu of foreclosure) until the local governing body of the locality involved shall have either approved the urban renewal plan for the project or consented to the disposal of such real property.

(b) In connection with any project on land which is open or predominantly open, the Administrator may make temporary loans to municipalities or other public bodies for the provision of public buildings or facilities necessary to serve or support the new uses of such land in the project area. Such temporary loans shall be in such amounts not exceeding the expenditures to be made for such purpose, bear interest at such rate (not less than the applicable going Federal rate), be secured in such manner, and be repaid within such period (not exceeding ten years from the date of the obligations evidencing such loans), as may be deemed advisable by the Administrator.

(c) Loans made pursuant to subsection (a) or (b) hereof may be made subject to the condition that, if at any time or times or for any period or periods during the life of the loan contract the local public agency can obtain loan funds from sources other than the Federal Government at interest rates lower than provided in the loan contract, it may do so with the consent of the Administrator at such times and for such periods without waiving or surrendering any rights to loan funds under the contract for the remainder of the life of such contract, and, in any such case, the Administrator is authorized to consent to a pledge by the local public agency of the loan contract, and any or all of its rights thereunder, as security for the repayment of the principal of and the interest on the loan funds so obtained from other sources.

(d) The Administrator may make advances of funds to local public agencies for surveys of urban areas to determine whether the undertaking of urban renewal projects therein may be feasible and for surveys and plans for urban renewal projects which may be assisted under this title, including, but not limited to, (i) plans for carrying out a program of voluntary repair and rehabilitation of buildings and improvements, (ii) plans for the enforcement of State and local laws, codes, and regulations relating to the use of land and the use and occupancy of buildings and improvements, and to the compulsory repair, rehabilitation, demolition, or removal of buildings and improvements, and (iii) appraisals, title searches, and other preliminary work necessary to prepare for the acquisition of land in connection with the undertaking of such projects. The contract for any such advance of funds shall be made upon the condition that such advance of funds shall be repaid, with interest at not less than the applicable going Federal rate, out of any moneys which become available to the local public agency for the undertaking of the project involved. No contract for any such advances of funds for surveys and plans for urban renewal projects which may be assisted under this title shall be made unless the governing body of the locality involved has by resolution or ordinance approved the undertaking of such surveys and plans and the submission by the local public agency of an application for such advance of funds. Notwithstanding section 110(h) or the use in any other provision of this title of the term "local public agency" or "local public agencies" the Administrator may make advances of funds under this subsection for surveys and plans for an urban renewal project (including General Neighborhood Renewal Plans as hereinafter defined) to a single local public body which has the authority to undertake and carry out a substantial portion, as determined by the Administrator, of the surveys and plans or the project respecting which such surveys and plans are to be made: Provided, That the application for such advances shows, to the satisfaction of the Administrator, that the filing thereof has been approved by the public body or bodies authorized to undertake the other portions of the surveys and plans or of the project which the applicant is not authorized to undertake.

In order to facilitate proper preliminary planning for the attainment of the urban renewal objectives of this title, the Administrator may also make advances of funds (in addition to those authorized above) to local public agencies for the preparation of General Neighborhood Renewal Plans (as herein defined) for urban renewal areas of such scope that the urban renewal activities therein may have to be carried out in stages, consistent with the capacity and resources of the respective local public agency, over an estimated period of not more than ten years. No contract for advances for the preparation of a General Neighborhood Renewal Plan may be made unless the Administrator has determined that:

(1) in the interest of sound community planning, it is desirable that the urban renewal area be planned for urban renewal purposes in its entirety;

(2) the local public agency proposes to undertake promptly an urban renewal project embracing at least 10 per centum of such area, upon completion of the General Neighborhood Renewal Plan and the preparation of an urban renewal plan for such project; and

(3) the governing body of the locality has by resolution or ordinance (i) approved the undertaking of the General Neighborhood Renewal Plan and the submission of an application for such advance and (ii) represented that such plan will be used to the fullest extent feasible as a guide for the provision of public improvements in such area and that the plan will be considered in formulating codes and other regulatory measures affecting property in the area and in undertaking other local governmental activities pertaining to the development, redevelopment, rehabilitation, and conservation of the area.

The contract for any such advance of funds for a General Neighborhood Renewal Plan shall be made upon the condition that such advance shall be repaid, with interest at not less than the applicable going Federal rate, out of any moneys which become available to the local public agency for the undertaking of the first urban renewal project in such area: Provided, That in the event of the undertaking of any other project or projects in such area an appropriate allocation of the amount of the advance, with interest, may be effected to the end that each such project may bear its proper allocable part, as determined by the Administrator, of the cost of the General Neighborhood Renewal Plan. As used herein, a General Neighborhood Renewal Plan means a preliminary plan (conforming, in the determination of the governing body of the locality, to the general plan of the locality as a whole and to the workable program of the community meeting the requirements of section 101) which outlines the urban renewal activities proposed for the area involved, provides a framework for the preparation of urban renewal plans and indicates generally, to the extent feasible in preliminary planning, the land uses, population density, building coverage, prospective requirements for rehabilitation and improvement of property, and any portions of the area contemplated for clearance and redevelopment.

(e) The total amount of loan contracts outstanding at any one time under this title shall not exceed the aggregate of the estimated expenditures to be made by local public agencies as part of the gross project cost of the projects assisted by such contracts. To obtain funds for advance and loan disbursements under this title, the Administrator may issue and have outstanding at any one time notes and obligations for purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury in an amount which shall not, unless authorized by the President exceed $1,000,000,000. For the purpose of establishing unpaid obligations as of a given date against the authorization contained in the preceding sentence, the Administrator shall estimate the maximum amount to be required to be borrowed from the Treasury and outstanding at any one time with respect to loan commitments in effect on such date.

(f) Notes or other obligations issued by the Administrator under this title shall be in such forms and denominations, have such maturities, and be subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Administrator, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Such notes or other obligations shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of such notes or other obligations. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase any notes and other obligations of the Administrator issued under this title and for such purpose is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as amended, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under such Act, as amended, are extended to include any purchases of such notes and other obligations. The Secretary of the Treasury may at any time sell any of the notes or other obligations acquired by him under this section. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such notes or other obligations shall be treated as public debt transactions of the United States.

(g) Obligations, including interest thereon, issued by local public agencies for projects assisted pursuant to this title, and income derived by such agencies from such projects, shall be exempt from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by the United States.

CAPITAL GRANTS

SEC. 103. (a) The Administrator may make capital grants to local public agencies in accordance with the provisions of this title for urban renewal projects: Provided, That the Administrator shall not make any contract for capital grant with respect to a project which consists of open land. The aggregate of such capital grants with respect to all the projects of a local public agency on which contracts for capital grants have been made under this title, exclusive of projects referred to in the proviso hereto, shall not exceed two-thirds of the aggregate of the net project costs of such nonexcluded projects: Provided, That the aggregate of such capital grants may exceed two-thirds but not three-fourths of the aggregate net project costs of those projects which the Administrator, at the request of a local public agency, may approve on such a three-fourths capital grant basis. A capital grant with respect to any individual project shall not exceed the difference between the net project cost and the local grants-in-aid actually made with respect to the project.

(b) The Administrator, on and after July 1, 1949, may, with the approval of the President, contract to make grants under this title aggregating not to exceed $1,350,000,000, which limit shall be increased by $350,000,000 on the date of enactment of the Housing Act of 1959, and by $300,000,000 on July 1, 1960. The faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment of all grants contracted for under this title, and there are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the amounts necessary to provide for such payments: Provided, That any amounts so appropriated shall also be available for repaying to the Secretary of the Treasury, for application to notes of the Administrator, the principal amounts of any funds advanced to local public agencies under this title which the Administrator determines to be uncollectible because of the termination of activities for which such advances were made, together with the interest paid or accrued to the Secretary (as determined by him) attributable to notes given by the Administrator in connection with such advances, but all such repayments shall constitute a charge against the authorization to make contracts for grants contained in this section: Provided further, That no such determination of the Administrator shall be construed to prejudice the rights of the United States with respect to any such advance.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this or any other Act, if financial assistance authorized by this title to be made available to a locality or local public agency may be made available to any locality or local public agency within the limitations provided in sections 102 (e), 103(b), and 106(e), and the second paragraph following the paragraph numbered (6) of section 110(c), the amount of such financial assistance made available to any locality or local public agency upon submission and processing of proper application therefor shall not otherwise be restricted except on the basis of (1) urgency of need, and (2) feasibility, as determined by the Administrator.

(d) The Administrator may contract to make grants for the preparation or completion of community renewal programs, which may include, without being limited to, (1) the identification of slum areas or blighted, deteriorated, or deteriorating areas in the community, (2) the measurement of the nature and degree of blight and blighting factors within such areas, (3) determination of the financial, relocation, and other resources needed and available to renew such areas, (4) the identification of potential project areas and, where feasible, types of urban renewal action contemplated within such areas, and (5) scheduling or programing of urban renewal activities. Such programs shall conform, in the determination of the governing body of the locality, to the general plan of the locality as a whole. The Administrator may establish reasonable requirements respecting the scope and content of such programs. No contract for a grant pursuant to this subsection shall be made unless the governing body of the locality involved has approved the preparation or completion of the community renewal program and the submission by the local public agency of an application for such a grant. Notwithstanding section 110(h) or the use in any other provision of this title of the term "local public agency" or "local public agencies", the Administrator may make grants pursuant to this subsection for the preparation or completion of a community renewal program to a single local public body authorized to perform the planning work necessary to such preparation or completion. No grant made pursuant to this subsection shall exceed two-thirds of the cost (as such cost is determined or estimated by the Administrator) of the preparation or completion of the community renewal program for which such grant is made.

REQUIREMENTS FOR LOCAL GRANTS-IN-AID

SEC. 104. Every contract for capital grants under this title shall require local grants-in-aid in connection with the project involved. Such local grants-in-aid, together with the local grants-in-aid to be provided in connection with all other projects of the local public agency on which contracts for capital grants have theretofore been made, shall not be required in excess of one-third of the aggregate net project costs of all projects of the local public agency on which contracts for capital grants have been made on the two-thirds basis, or in excess of one-fourth of the aggregate net project costs of all projects of the local public agency on which contracts for capital grants have been made on the three-fourths basis.

LOCAL DETERMINATIONS

SEC. 105. Contracts for loans or capital grants shall be made only with a duly authorized local public agency and shall require that—

(a) The urban renewal plan for the urban renewal area be approved by the governing body of the locality in which the project is situated, and that such approval include findings by the governing body that (i) the financial aid to be provided in the contract is necessary to enable the project to be undertaken in accordance with the urban renewal plan; (ii) the urban renewal plan will afford maximum opportunity, consistent with the sound needs of the locality as a whole, for the rehabilitation or redevelopment of the urban renewal area by private enterprise; and (iii) the urban renewal plan conforms to a general plan for the development of the locality as a whole;

(b) When real property acquired or held by the local public agency in connection with the project is sold or leased, the purchasers or lessees and their assignees shall be obligated (i) to devote such property to the uses specified in the urban renewal plan for the project area; (ii) to begin within a reasonable time any improvements on such property required by the urban renewal plan; and (iii) to comply with such other conditions as the Administrator finds, prior to the execution of the contract for loan or capital grant pursuant to this title, are necessary to carry out the purposes of this title: Provided, That clause (ii) of this subsection shall not apply to mortgagees and others who require an interest in such property as the result of the enforcement of any lien or claim thereon: And provided further, That, with respect to any improvements of a type which it is otherwise authorized to undertake, any Federal agency (as defined in section 3(b) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949, as amended, and also including the District of Columbia or any agency thereof) is hereby authorized to become obligated in accordance with this subsection, except that clause (ii) of this subsection shall apply to such Federal agency only to the extent that it is authorized (and funds have been made available) to make the improvements involved;

(c) There be a feasible method for the temporary relocation of families displaced from the urban renewed area, and that there are or

(e) No understanding with respect to, or contract for, the disposition of land within an urban renewal area shall be entered into by a local public agency unless the local public agency shall have first made public, in such form and manner as may be prescribed by the Administrator, (1) the name of the redeveloper, together with the names of its officers and principal members, shareholders and investors, and other interested parties, (2) the redeveloper's estimate of the cost of any residential redevelopment and rehabilitation, and (3) the redeveloper's estimate of rentals and sales prices of any proposed housing involved in such redevelopment and rehabilitation: Provided, That nothing in this subsection shall constitute a basis for contesting the conveyance of, or title to, such land.

nection with projects assisted under this title) as he may deem necessary to assure that the purposes of this title will be achieved. No provision of this title shall be construed or administered to permit speculation in land holding; and

(8) make advance or progress payments on account of any grant contracted to be made pursuant to this title, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3648 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, or any other provisions of this title.

(2) As used in this subsection, the term "relocation payments" means payments by a local public agency to individuals, families, and business concerns for their reasonable and necessary moving expenses and any actual direct losses of property except goodwill or profit (which are incurred on and after August 7, 1956, and for which reimbursement or compensation is not otherwise made) resulting from their displacement from an urban renewal area made necessary by (i) the acquisition of real property by a local public agency or by any other public body, (ii) code enforcement activities undertaken in connection with an urban renewal project, or (iii) a program of voluntary rehabilitation of buildings or other improvements in accordance with an urban renewal plan: Provided, That such payments shall not be made after completion of the project or if completion is deferred solely for the purpose of obtaining further relocation payments. Such payments shall be made subject to such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Administrator, and shall not exceed $200 in the case of an individual or family, or $3,000 in the case of a business concern. Such rules and regulations may include provisions authorizing payment to individuals and families of fixed amounts (not to exceed $200 in any case) in lieu of their respective reasonable and necessary moving expenses.

(g) No provision permitting the new construction of hotels or other housing for transient use in the redevelopment of any urban renewal area under this title shall be included in the urban renewal plan unless the community in which the project is located, under regulations prescribed by the Administrator, has caused to be made a competent independent analysis of the local supply of transient housing and as a result thereof has determined that there exists in the area a need for additional units of such housing.

PAYMENT FOR LAND USED FOR LOW-RENT PUBLIC HOUSING

SEC. 107. When it appears in the public interest that land to be acquired as part of an urban renewal project should be used in whole or in part as a site for a low-rent housing project assisted under the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, or under a State or local program found by the Administrator to have the same general purposes as the Federal program under such Act, the site shall be made available to the public housing agency undertaking the low-rent housing project at a price equal to the fair value of land to a private redeveloper who wants to buy a site in the community for private rental housing with physical characteristics similar to those of the proposed low-rent housing project, and such amount shall be included as part of the development cost of such low-rent housing project: Provided, That the local contribution in the form of tax exemption or tax remission required by section 10(h) of such Act, or by analogous provisions in legislation authorizing such State or local program, with respect to the low-rent housing project into which such land is incorporated shall (if covered by a contract which, in the determination of the Public Housing Commissioner, and without regard to the requirements of the first proviso of such section 10(h), will assure that such local contribution will be made during the entire period that the project is used as low-rent housing within the meaning of such Act, or by provisions found by the Administrator to give equivalent assurance in the case of State or local programs), be accepted as a local grant-in-aid equal in amount, as determined by the Administrator, to one-half (or one-third in the case of an urban renewal project on a three-fourths capital grant basis) of the difference between the cost of such site (including costs of land, clearance, site improvements, and a share, prorated on an area basis, of administrative, interest, and other project costs) and its sales price, and shall be considered a local grant-in-aid furnished in a form other than cash within the meaning of section 110(d) of this Act.

SURPLUS FEDERAL REAL PROPERTY

SEC. 108. The President may at any time in his discretion, transfer, or cause to be transferred, to the Administrator any right, title, or interest held by the Federal Government or any department or agency thereof in any land (including buildings thereon) which is surplus to the needs of the Government and which a local public agency certifies will be within the area of a project being planned by it. When such land is sold to the local public agency by the Administrator, it shall be sold at a price equal to its fair market value, and the proceeds from such sale shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

PROTECTION OF LABOR STANDARDS

SEC. 109. In order to protect labor standards—

(a) any contract for loan or capital grant pursuant to this title shall contain a provision requiring that not less than the salaries prevailing in the locality, as determined or adopted (subsequent to a determination under applicable State or local law) by the Administrator, shall be paid to all architects, technical engineers, draftsmen, and technicians employed in the development of the project involved and shall also contain a provision that not less than the wages prevailing in the locality, as predetermined by the Secretary of Labor pursuant to the Davis-Bacon Act (49 Stat. 1011), shall be paid to all laborers and mechanics, except such laborers or mechanics who are employees of municipalities or other local public bodies, employed in the development of the project involved for work financed in whole or in part with funds made available pursuant to this title; and the Administrator shall require certification as to compliance with the provisions of this paragraph prior to making any payment under such contract; and

(b) the provisions of title 18, United States Code, section 874, and of title 40, United States Code, section 276c, shall apply to work financed in whole or in part with funds made available for the development of a project pursuant to this title.

Such undertakings and activities may include—

(1) acquisition of (i) a slum area or a deteriorated or deteriorating area, or (ii) land which is predominantly open and which because of obsolete platting, diversity of ownership, deterioration of structures or of site improvements, or otherwise, substantially impairs or arrests the sound growth of the community, or (iii) open land necessary for sound community growth which is to be developed for predominantly residential uses: Provided, That the requirement in paragraph (a) of this section that the area be a slum area or a blighted, deteriorated or deteriorating area shall not be applicable in the case of an open land project;

(2) demolition and removal of buildings and improvements;

(3) installation, construction, or reconstruction of streets, utilities, parks, playgrounds, and other improvements necessary for carrying out in the urban renewal area the urban renewal objectives of this title in accordance with the urban renewal plan;

(4) disposition of any property acquired in the urban renewal area (including sale, initial leasing or retention by the local public agency itself) at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan;

(5) carrying out plans for a program of voluntary repair and rehabilitation of buildings or other improvements in accordance with urban renewal plan; and

(6) acquisition of any other real property in the urban renewal area where necessary to eliminate unhealthful, insanitary or unsafe conditions, lessen density, eliminate obsolete or other uses detrimental to the public welfare, or otherwise to remove or prevent the spread of blight or deterioration, or to provide land for needed public facilities.

For the purposes of this title, the term "project" shall not include the construction or improvement of any building, and the term "redevelopment" and derivatives thereof shall mean development as well as redevelopment. For any of the purposes of section 109 hereof, the term "project" shall not include any donations or provisions made as local grants-in-aid and eligible as such pursuant to clauses (2) and (3) of section 110(d) hereof.

Financial assistance shall not be extended under this title with respect to any urban renewal area which is not predominantly residential in character and which, under the urban renewal plan therefor, is not to be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses: Provided, That, if the governing body of the local public agency determines that the redevelopment of such an area for predominantly nonresidential uses is necessary for the proper development of the community, the Administrator may extend financial assistance under this title for such a project: Provided further, That the aggregate amount of capital grants contracted to be made pursuant to this title with respect to such projects after the date of the enactment of the Housing Act of 1959 shall not exceed 20 per centum of the aggregate amount of grants authorized by this title to be contracted for after such date.

In addition to all other powers hereunder vested, where land within the purview of clause (1) (ii) or (1) (iii) of the first paragraph of this subsection (whether it be predominantly residential or nonresidential in character) is to be redeveloped for predominantly nonresidential uses, loans and advances under this title may be extended therefor if the governing body of the local public agency determines that such redevelopment for predominantly nonresidential uses is necessary and appropriate to facilitate the proper growth and development of the community in accordance with sound planning standards and local community objectives and to afford maximum opportunity for the redevelopment of the project area by private enterprise: Provided, That loans and outstanding advances to any local public agency pursuant to the authorization of this sentence shall not exceed 2½ per centum of the estimated gross project costs of the projects undertaken under other contracts with such local public agency pursuant to this title.

(d) "Local grants-in-aid" shall mean assistance by a State, municipality, or other public body, or (in the case of cash grants or donations of land or other real property) any other entity, in connection with any project on which a contract for capital grant has been made under this title, in the form of (1) cash grants to defray expenditures within the purview of section 110(e)(1) hereof; (2) donations, at cash value, of land or other real property (exclusive of land in streets, alleys, and other public rights-of-way which may be vacated in connection with the project) in the urban renewal area, and demolition, removal, or other work or improvements in the urban renewal area, at the cost thereof, of the types described in clause (2) and clause (3) of the second sentence of section 110(c); and (3) the provision, at their cost, of public buildings or other public facilities (other than publicly owned housing and revenue producing public utilities the capital cost of which is wholly financed with local bonds or obligations payable solely out of revenues derived from service charges) which are necessary for carrying out in the area the urban renewal objectives of this title in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That in any case where, in the determination of the Administrator, any park, playground, public building, or other public facility is of direct benefit both to the urban renewal area and to other areas, and the approximate degree of the benefit to such other areas is estimated by the Administrator at 20 per centum or more of the total benefits, the Administrator shall provide that, for the purpose of computing the amount of the local grants-in-aid for the project, there shall be included only such portion of the cost of such facility as the Administrator estimates to be proportionate to the approximate degree of the benefit of such facility to the urban renewal area: And provided further, That for the purpose of computing the amount of local grants-in-aid under this section 110(d) with respect to any project covered by a Federal-aid contract under this title, the estimated cost (as determined by the Administrator) of parks, playgrounds, public buildings, or other public facilities may be deemed to be the actual cost thereof if (i) the construction or provision thereof is not completed at the time of final disposition of land in the project to be acquired and disposed of under the urban renewal plan, and (ii) the Administrator has received assurances satisfactory to him that such park, playground, public building, or other public facility will be constructed or completed when needed and within a time prescribed by him: And provided further, That in any case where a public facility furnished as a local grant-in-aid is financed in whole or in part by special assessments against real property in the project area acquired by the local public agency as part of the project, an amount equal to the total special assessments against such real property (or, in the case of a computation pursuant to the proviso immediately preceding, the estimated amount of such total special assessments) shall be deducted from the cost of such facility for the purpose of computing the amount of the local grants-in-aid for the project. With respect to any demolition or removal work, improvement or facility for which a State, municipality, or other public body has received or has contracted to receive any grant or subsidy from the United States, or any agency or instrumentality thereof, the portion of the cost thereof defrayed or estimated by the Administrator to be defrayed with such subsidy or grant shall not be eligible for inclusion as a local grant-in-aid.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, on donation or provision of a public improvement or public facility of a type falling within the purview of this subsection shall be deemed to be ineligible as a local grant-in-aid for any project solely on the basis that the construction of such improvement or facility was commenced without notification to the Administrator or prior to Federal recognition of such project, if such construction was commenced not more than three years prior to the authorization by the Administrator of a contract for loan or capital grant for the project.

(e) "Gross project cost" shall comprise (1) the amount of the expenditures by the local public agency with respect to any and all undertakings necessary to carry out the project (including the payment of carrying charges, but not beyond the point where the project is completed), and (2) the amount of such local grants-in-aid as are furnished in forms other than cash. There may be included as part of the gross project cost, under any contract for loan or grant heretofore or hereafter executed under this title, with respect to moneys of the local public agency which are actually expended and outstanding for undertakings (other than in the form of local grants-in-aid) necessary to carry out the project, in the absence of carrying charges on such moneys, an amount in lieu of carrying charges which might otherwise have been payable thereon for the period such moneys are expended and outstanding but not beyond the point where the project is completed, computed for each six-month period or portion thereof, at an interest rate to be determined by the Administrator after taking into consideration for each preceding six-month period the average interest rate borne by any obligations of local public agencies for short-term funds obtained from sources other than the Federal Government in the manner provided in section 102(c): Provided, That such amount may be computed on the net total of all such moneys of the local public agency remaining expended and outstanding, less other moneys received from the project undertaken in excess of project expenditures, in all projects of the local public agency under this title and allocated, as the Administrator may determine, to each of such projects. With respect to a project for which a contract for capital grant has been executed on a three-fourths basis pursuant to the proviso in the second sentence of section 103(a), gross project cost shall include, in lieu of the amount specified in clause (1) above, the amount of the expenditures by the local public agency with respect to the following undertakings and activities necessary to carry out such project:

(i) acquisition of land (but only to the extent of the consideration paid to the owner and not title, appraisal, negotiating, legal, or any other expenditures of the local public agency incidental to acquiring land), disposition of land, demolition and removal of buildings and improvements, and site preparation and improvements, all as provided in paragraphs (1), (2), (3), (4), and (6) of subsection (c); and

(ii) the payment of carrying charges related to the undertakings in clause (i) (including amounts in lieu of carrying charges as determined above), exclusive of taxes and payments in lieu of taxes, but not beyond the point where such project is completed; but not the cost of any other undertakings and activities (including, but without being limited to, the cost of surveys and plans, legal services of any kind, and all administrative and overhead expenses of the local public agency) with respect to such project. Where real property in the project area is acquired and is owned as part of the project by the local public agency and such property is not subject to ad valorem taxes by reason of its ownership by the local public agency and payments in lieu of taxes are not made on account of such property, there may (with respect to any project for which a contract of Federal assistance under this title is in force or is hereafter executed, other than a project on which a contract for capital grant is made on a three-fourths basis pursuant to the proviso in the second sentence of section 103(a)) be included, at the discretion of the Administrator, in gross project cost an amount equal to the ad valorem taxes which would have been levied upon such property if it had been subject to ad valorem taxes, but in all cases prorated for the period during which such property is owned by the local public agency as part of the project, and such amount shall also be considered a cash local grant-in-aid within the purview of section 110(d) hereof. Such amount, and the amount of taxes or payments in lieu of taxes included in gross project cost, shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator and rules, regulations, limitations, and conditions as he may prescribe.

(f) "Net project cost" shall mean the difference between the gross project cost and the aggregate of (1) the total sales prices of all land or other property sold, and (2) the total capital values (i) imputed, on a basis approved by the Administrator, to all land or other property leased, and (ii) used as a basis for determining the amounts to be transferred to the project from other funds of the local public agency to compensate for any land or other property retained by it for use in accordance with the urban renewal plan.

(g) "Going Federal rate" means (with respect to any contract for a loan or advance entered into after the first annual rate has been specified as provided in this sentence) the annual rate of interest which the Secretary of the Treasury shall specify as applicable to the six-month period (beginning with the six-month period ending December 31, 1953) during which the contract for loan or advance for any project under this title is authorized by the Administrator, which applicable rate for each six-month period shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury by estimating the average yield to maturity, on the basis of daily closing market bid quotations or prices during the month of May or the month of November, as the case may be, next preceding such six-month period, on all outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having a maturity date of fifteen or more years from the first day of such month of May or November, and by adjusting such estimated average annual yield to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum. Any such contract for loan made may be revised or superseded by a later contract, so that the going Federal rate, on the basis of which the interest rate on the loan is fixed, shall mean the going Federal rate, as herein defined, on the date that such later contract is authorized.

(h) "Local public agency" means any State, county, municipality, or other governmental entity or public body, or two or more such entities or bodies, authorized to undertake the project for which assistance is sought. "State" includes the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the Territories and possessions of the United States.

(i) "Land" means any real property, including improved or unimproved land, structures, improvements, easements, incorporeal hereditaments, estates, and other rights in land, legal or equitable.

(j) "Administrator" means the Housing and Home Finance Administrator.

(k) "Federal recognition" means execution of any contract for financial assistance under this title or concurrence by the Administrator in the commencement, without such assistance, of surveys and plans.

DISASTER AREAS

SEC. 111. Where the local governing body certifies, and the Administrator finds, that an urban area is in need of redevelopment or rehabilitation as a result of a flood, fire, hurricane, earthquake, storm, or other catastrophe which the President, pursuant to section 2(a) of the Act entitled "An Act to authorize Federal assistance to States and local governments in major disasters, and for other purposes" (Public Law 875, Eighty-first Congress, approved September 30, 1950), as amended, has determined to be a major disaster, the Administrator is authorized to extend financial assistance under this title for an urban renewal project with respect to such area without regard to the following:

(1) the "workable program" requirement in section 101(c), except that any contract for temporary loan or capital grant pursuant to this section shall obligated the local public agency to comply with the "workable program" requirement in section 101(c) by a future date determined to be reasonable by the Administrator and specified in such contract;

(2) the requirements in section 105(a)(iii) and section 110(b)(1) that the urban renewal plan conform to a general plan of the locality as a whole and to the workable program referred to in section 101(c);

(3) the "relocation" requirements in section 105(c): Provided, That the Administrator finds that the local public agency has presented a plan for the encouragement, to the maximum extent feasible, of the provision of dwellings suitable for the needs of families displaced by the catastrophe or by redevelopment or rehabilitation activities;

(4) the "public hearing" requirement in section 105(d);

(5) the requirements in sections 102 and 110 that the urban renewal area be a slum area or a blighted, deteriorated, or deteriorating area; and

(6) the requirements in section 110 with respect to the predominantly residential character or predominantly residential reuse of urban renewal areas.

In the preparation of the urban renewal plan with respect to a project aided under this section, the local public agency shall give due regard to the removal or relocation of dwellings from the site of recurring floods or other recurring catastrophes in the project area.

URBAN RENEWAL AREAS INVOLVING COLLEGES OR UNIVERSITIES

SEC. 112. In any case where an educational institution is located in or near an urban renewal project area and the governing body of the locality determines that, in addition to the elimination of slums and blight from such area, the undertaking of an urban renewal project in such area will further promote the public welfare and the proper development of the community (1) by making land in such area available for disposition, for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan, to such educational institution for redevelopment in accordance with the use or uses specified in the urban renewal plan, (2) by providing, through the redevelopment of the area in accordance with the urban renewal plan, a cohesive neighborhood environment compatible with the functions and needs of such educational institution, or (3) by any combination of the foregoing, the Administrator is authorized to extend financial assistance under this title for an urban renewal project in such area without regard to the requirements in section 110 hereof with respect to the predominantly residential character or predominantly residential reuse of urban renewal areas: Provided, That the aggregate expenditures made by such institution (directly or through a private redevelopment corporation) for the acquisition (from others than the local public agency), within, adjacent to, or in the immediate vicinity of the project area, of land, buildings, and structures to be redeveloped or rehabilitated by such institution for educational uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan (or with a development plan proposed by such institution or corporation, found acceptable by the Administrator after considering the standards specified in section 110(b), and approved under State or local law after public hearing), and for the demolition of such buildings and structures (including expenditures to assist in relocating tenants therefrom), if, pursuant to such urban renewal or development plan, the land is to be cleared and redeveloped, as certified by such institution to the local public agency and approved by the Administrator, shall be a local grant-in-aid in connection with such urban renewal project: Provided further, That no such expenditures shall be deemed ineligible as a local grant-in-aid in connection with any such project if made not more than five years prior to the authorization by the Administrator of a contract for a loan or capital grant for such urban renewal project: And provided further, That the term "educational institution" as used herein shall mean any educational institution of higher learning, including any public educational institution or any private educational institution, no part of the net earnings of which shall inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual.

REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (in this section referred to as a "municipality") is situated in an area designated under section 5 of the Area Redevelopment Act as a redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economy, the Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e) of this section, the Secretary may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirement or limitations of section 110(c) that the project area be predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses under the urban renewal plan, and without regard to any of the limitations of that section on the undertaking of projects for predominantly nonresidential uses.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, a contract for financial assistance under this section may include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the project area designated under the urban renewal plan for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or nonprofit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to such public agency or corporation under this section shall be made at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And provided further, That only the purchasers from or lessees of such public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obligations relating to the commencement of improvements imposed under section 105(b) hereof.

(d) Following the execution of any contract for financial assistance under this section with respect to any project, the Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him under this section as well as other provisions of this title for the completion of such projects, notwithstanding any determination made after the execution of such contract that the area in which the project is located is no longer a redevelopment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

(e) The aggregate amount of capital grants which may be contracted for under this title with respect to projects for the redevelopment of urban renewal areas for predominantly nonresidential uses, under the second proviso of the fifth sentence of section 110(c), may be increased by an amount not to exceed 10 per centum of the aggregate amount of new grant contract authority provided after September 23, 1959, whenever the Administrator determines (1) that an increase in such amount is necessary in order to provide financial assistance under this section, and (2) that such assistance is not otherwise available because of the limitation contained in such proviso.

SECTION 701 OF THE HOUSING ACT OF 1954

URBAN PLANNING

SEC. 701. (a) In order to assist State and local governments in solving planning problems resulting from increasing concentration of population in metropolitan and other urban areas, including smaller communities, to facilitate comprehensive planning for urban development by State and local governments on a continuing basis, and to encourage State and local governments to establish and develop planning staffs, the Administrator is authorized to make planning grants to—

(1) State planning agencies, or (in States where no such planning agency exists) to agencies or instrumentalities of State government designated by the Governor of the State and acceptable to the Administrator as capable of carrying out the planning functions contemplated by this section, for the provision of planning assistance to (A) cities, other municipalities, and counties having a population of less than 50,000 according to the latest decennial census, (B) any group of adjacent communities, either incorporated or unincorporated, having a total population of less than 50,000 according to the latest decennial census and having common or related urban planning problems resulting from rapid urbanization, and (C) cities, other municipalities, and counties referred to in paragraph (3) of this subsection and areas referred to in paragraph (4) of this subsection;

(2) official State, metropolitan, and regional planning agencies empowered under State or local laws or interstate compact to perform metropolitan or regional planning;

(3) cities, other municipalities, and counties which (A) are situated in areas designated by the Secretary of Commerce under section 5(a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as redevelopment areas or (B) have suffered substantial damage as a result of a catastrophe which the President, pursuant to section 2(a) of "An Act to authorize Federal assistance to States and local governments in major disasters, and for other purposes" has determined to be a major disaster;

(4) to official governmental planning agencies for areas where rapid urbanization has resulted or is expected to result from the establishment or rapid and substantial expansion of a Federal installation; and

(5) State planning agencies for State and interstate comprehensive planning (as defined in subsection (d)) and for research and coordination activity related thereto.

Planning assisted under this section shall, to the maximum extent feasible, cover entire urban areas having common or related urban development problems.

(b) A grant made under this section shall not exceed 50 per centum of the estimated cost of the work for which the grant is made: Provided, That a grant may be made under clause (A) of paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this section for not more than 75 per centum of such estimated cost. All grants made under this section shall be subject to terms and conditions prescribed by the Administrator. No portion of any grant made under this section shall be used for the preparation of plans for specific public works. The Administrator is authorized, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3648 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, to make advances or progress payments on account of any planning grant made under this section. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not exceeding $20,000,000 to carry out the purposes of this section, and any amounts so appropriated shall remain available until expended.

(c) The Administrator is authorized, in areas embracing several municipalities or other political subdivisions, to encourage planning on a unified metropolitan basis and to provide technical assistance for such planning and the solution of problems relating thereto.

(d) It is the further intent of this section to encourage comprehensive planning for States, cities, counties, metropolitan areas, and urban regions and the establishment and development of the organizational units needed therefor. In extending financial assistance under this section, the Administrator may require such assurances as he deems adequate that the appropriate State and local agencies are making reasonable progress in the development of the elements of comprehensive planning. Comprehensive planning, as used in this section, includes the following, to the extent directly related to urban needs: (1) preparation, as a guide for long-range development, of general physical plans with respect to the pattern and intensity of land use and the provision of public facilities, together with long-range fiscal plans for such development; (2) programming of capital improvements based on a determination of relative urgency, together with definitive financing plans for the improvements to be constructed in the earlier years of the program; (3) coordination of all related plans of the departments or subdivisions of the government concerned; (4) inter-governmental coordination of all related planned activities among the State and local governmental agencies concerned; and (5) preparation of regulatory and administrative measures in support of the foregoing.

(e) In the exercise of his function of encouraging comprehensive planning by the States, the Administrator shall consult with those officials of the Federal Government responsible for the administration of programs of Federal assistance to the States and municipalities for various categories of public facilities.

AN ACT

To establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas.

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,
3 That this Act may be cited as the "Area Redevelopment
4 Act".

5 DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

6 SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of 7 the national economy at a high level is vital to the best in-
8 terests of the United States, but that some of our communi-
9 ties are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment
10 and underemployment; that such unemployment and under-

1 employment cause hardship to many individuals and their
2 families and detract from the national welfare by wasting
3 vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the
4 Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, should
5 help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and
6 underemployment to take effective steps in planning and
7 financing their economic redevelopment; that Federal as-
8 sistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and indi-
9 viduals in areas needing redevelopment should enable such
10 areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the do-
11 mestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diver-
12 sified local economies and improved local living conditions;
13 and that under the provisions of this Act new employment
14 opportunities should be created by developing and expanding
15 new and existing facilities and resources rather than merely 16 transferring jobs from one community to another.

17 AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATOR

18 SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by 19 and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Re-
20 development Administrator in the Department of Commerce
21 who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that re-
22 ceived by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Admin-
23 istrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act
24 as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the 25 "Secretary") may assign.

ADVISORY POLICY BOARD

SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is authorized to be created an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board (hereinafter referred to as the "Board"), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration.

The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of

2 less than two meetings during each calendar year.

3 ~~(e)~~ The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call
4 together and confer with any persons, including representa-
5 tives of labor, management, agriculture, and government,
6 who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment
7 or underemployment in the several areas designated by the
8 Secretary as redevelopment areas.

9 REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

10 SEC. 5. ~~(a)~~ The Secretary shall designate as "rede-
11 velopment areas" those areas within the United States in 12 which he determines, upon the basis of standards generally
13 comparable with those set forth in subparagraphs ~~(1)~~ and 14 ~~(2)~~ below, that there has existed substantial and persistent
15 unemployment for an extended period of time. There shall 16 be included among the areas so designated any area—

17 ~~(1)~~ where the rate of unemployment, excluding un-
18 employment due primarily to temporary or seasonal 19 factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has 20 averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time
21 periods specified in subparagraph ~~(2)~~ below; and

22 ~~(2)~~ where the annual average rate of unemploy-
23 ment has been at least—

24 ~~(A)~~ 50 per centum above the national average
25 for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two years.

The Secretary of Labor shall find the facts and provide the data to be used by the Secretary in making the determinations required by this subsection. Any area in which a substantial part of the employment is or most recently was in an industry adversely affected by the reduction in trade barriers under section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, with respect to which the President has reported to the Congress under section 4(a) or 7(e) of the Trade Agreements Extension Act of 1951, as amended, and meeting the standards of unemployment set forth in this section shall be entitled on application to special consideration by the Secretary for designation as a redevelopment area.

(b) The Secretary shall also designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas (including Indian reservations) within the United States which do not meet the requirements set forth in subsection (a) but which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection and before making any loans as the result of design-

1 nations under this subsection, the Secretary shall, by
2 regulation, prescribe detailed standards upon which the desig-
3 nations under this subsection shall be based. In the formula-
4 tion of such standards the Secretary shall consider,
5 among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm
6 families in the various rural areas of the United States, the
7 proportion that such low-income families are to the total farm
8 families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income
9 levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of 10 income in the United States, the extent to which "rural de-
11 velopment" projects have previously been located in any
12 such area under programs administered by the Department
13 of Agriculture, the current and prospective employment
14 opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower
15 in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent
16 of migration out of the area, and the proportion of the popu-
17 lation of each such area which has been receiving public
18 assistance from the Federal Government and/or from the 19 State or States in which such area is located or from any 20 municipality therein. In making the designations under this 21 subsection, the Secretary shall endeavor to distribute the
22 projects widely among the several States, so far as is feasible
23 and proper, in order that actual experience with this pro-
24 gram may be had in as many States and in as many areas and 25 under as many different circumstances as possible: Provided,

1 That not more than one such project shall be located in any
2 one State unless the Secretary has considered such applica-
3 tions for assistance under this Act as may have come from
4 the several States which apply for such assistance. In mak-
5 ing these determinations, the Secretary shall be guided,
6 but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies made, and
7 information and data collected or compiled, by ~~(1)~~ depart-
8 ments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Govern-
9 ment, ~~(2)~~ State and local governments, ~~(3)~~ universities and 10 land-grant colleges, and ~~(4)~~ private organizations.

11 ~~(c)~~ Upon the request of the Secretary, the Secre-
12 tary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary
13 of the Interior, and such other heads of agencies as may be
14 appropriate, are authorized to conduct such special studies,
15 obtain such information, and compile and furnish to the Sec-
16 retary such data as the Secretary may deem necessary or 17 proper to enable him to make the determinations provided
18 for in subsection ~~(b)~~ of this section. The Secretary shall 19 reimburse when appropriate, out of any funds appropriated
20 to carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers
21 for any expenditures incurred by them under this section:

22 ~~(d)~~ As used in this Act, the term "redevelopment area"
23 refers to any area within the United States which has
24 been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area
25 and may include one or more States, one or more counties,

1 or one or more municipalities, or a part of a county or
2 municipality.

3 LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS

4 SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase
5 evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (including
6 participations therein) to aid in financing any project within
7 a redevelopment area for the purchase or development of
8 land and facilities (including machinery and equipment in 9 cases of demonstrated need) for industrial or commercial
10 usage, including the construction of new buildings, the re-
11 habilitation of abandoned or unoccupied buildings, and the 12 alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings.
13 Such financial assistance shall not be extended (1) for work-
14 ing capital, or (2) to assist establishments relocating from 15 one area to another. The limitation set forth in clause (2)-
16 above shall not be construed to prohibit assistance for the ex-
17 pansion of an existing business operation from its original
18 location or for the establishment of a new branch affiliate, or
19 subsidiary: Provided, That such assistance will not sub-
20 stantially decrease employment in the area of original
21 location.

22 (b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on 23 such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, sub-
24 ject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

25 (1) The total amount of loans and loan participations

1 ~~(including purchased evidences of indebtedness)~~ outstanding
2 at any one time under this section ~~(A)~~ with respect to
3 projects in redevelopment areas designated under section
4 ~~5(a)~~ shall not exceed $100,000,000 and ~~(B)~~ with respect
5 to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section
6 ~~5(b)~~ shall not exceed $100,000,000;

7 ~~(2)~~ Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants,
8 both private and public ~~(including Indian tribes)~~, which 9 have been approved for such assistance by an agency or
10 instrumentality of the State or political subdivision thereof
11 in which the project to be financed is located, and which 12 agency or instrumentality is directly concerned with prob-
13 lems of economic development in such State or subdivision;
14 ~~(3)~~ The project for which financial assistance is sought
15 is reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary
16 alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the 17 redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located;

18 ~~(4)~~ No such assistance shall be extended hereunder
19 unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise
20 available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on 21 reasonable terms;

22 ~~(5)~~ The Secretary shall not make any loan without
23 a participation unless he determines that the loan cannot be
24 made on a participation basis;

1 ~~(6)~~ No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased
2 and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there
3 is a reasonable assurance of repayment;

4 ~~(7)~~ Subject to section 12~~(5)~~ of this Act, no loan,
5 including renewals or extension thereof, may be made
6 hereunder for a period exceeding twenty-five years and no
7 evidences of indebtedness maturing more than twenty-five
8 years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder:
9 Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities
10 shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the 11 Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable re-
12 organization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant
13 upon insolvency of the obligor;

14 ~~(8)~~ Such loans shall bear interest at a rate equal to the 15 rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained
16 from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9
17 of this Act, plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum to 18 cover administrative expenses and to provide for losses on 19 loans under this section;

20 ~~(9)~~ Such assistance shall not exceed 65 per centum of 21 the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Fed-
22 eral aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or 23 developing land and facilities (including, in cases of demon-
24 strated need, machinery and equipment), and of constructing,
25 altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building

1 or buildings of the particular project and shall, among others,
2 be on the following conditions:

3 ~~(A)~~ That other funds are available in an amount which,
4 together with the assistance provided hereunder, shall be
5 sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

6 ~~(B)~~ That not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate
7 cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality,
8 or political subdivision thereof, or by an Indian tribe or a
9 community or area organization which is nongovernmental
10 in character, as equity capital or as a loan;

11 ~~(C)~~ That in extending financial assistance under this
12 section with respect to a redevelopment area, the Secretary
13 shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate
14 cost of the project for which such loan is made shall be 15 supplied by nongovernmental sources; and

16 ~~(D)~~ That to the extent the Secretary finds such action
17 necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular
18 project by other lenders and investors any Federal financial 19 assistance extended under this section may be repayable only
20 after other loans made in connection with such project and 21 in accordance with this section have been repaid in full,
22 and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance
23 may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing
24 other loans made in connection with the same project;

25 ~~(10)~~ No such assistance shall be extended unless there

1 shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an
 2 overall program for the economic development of the area
 3 and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality,
 4 or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for
 5 which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such
 6 program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize 7 financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the 8 State or local political subdivision in which the project would 9 be located.

10 ~~(c)~~ Of the funds authorized to be raised under section
 11 9 of this Act, not more than $100,000,000 shall be deposited
 12 in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of 13 making loans under this section with respect to projects in 14 redevelopment areas designated under section 5(a), and 15 not more than $100,000,000 shall be deposited in a revolv-
 16 ing fund which shall be used for the purpose of making
 17 loans under this section with respect to projects in redevel-
 18 opment areas designated under section 5(b).

19 PUBLIC FACILITY LOANS FOR INDUSTRIAL OR COMMER-
 20 CIAL PURPOSES

21 SEC. 7. (a) Upon the application of any State, or 22 political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or public or 23 private nonprofit organization or association representing 24 any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is
 25 authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase

1 or development of land for public facility usage, and the
 2 construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or im-
 3 provement of public facilities within any redevelopment area,
 4 if he finds that such facilities will serve primarily industrial
 5 or commercial needs and that—

6 ~~(1)~~ the project for which financial assistance is
 7 sought will provide more than a temporary alleviation
 8 of unemployment or underemployment in the redevelop-
 9 ment area wherein such project is, or will be, located,
 10 and will tend to improve the opportunities in such area
 11 for the successful establishment or expansion of indus-
 12 trial or commercial plants or facilities;

13 ~~(2)~~ the funds requested for such project are not
 14 otherwise available on reasonable terms;

15 ~~(3)~~ the amount of the loan plus the amount of 16 other available funds for such projects are adequate to 17 insure the completion thereof;

18 ~~(4)~~ there is a reasonable expectation of repayment;
 19 and

20 ~~(5)~~ such area has an approved economic develop-
 21 ment program as provided in section 6(b)-(10) and 22 the project for which financial assistance is sought is 23 consistent with such program.

24 ~~(b)~~ No loan under this section shall be for an amount
 25 in excess of 65 per centum of the aggregate cost of the proj-

1 eet for which such loan is made. Subject to section 12(5),
2 the maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than
3 forty years after the date such loan is made. Any such
4 loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest
5 paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secre-
6 tary of the Treasury as provided in section 9 of this Act, plus
7 one-quarter of 1 per centum per annum.

8 (c) In making any loan under this section, the Secre-
9 tary shall require that not less than 10 per centum
10 of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is 11 made shall be supplied by the State (including any political 12 subdivision thereof) within which such project is located or 13 by the Indian tribe on whose reservation such project is 14 located as equity capital or as a loan. In determining the 15 amount of participation required under this subsection with 16 respect to any particular project, the Secretary shall give 17 consideration to the financial condition of the State or local 18 government, and to the per capita income of the residents of 19 the redevelopment area, within which such project is to be 20 located.

21 (d) To the extent the Secretary finds such action
22 necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular
23 project by other lenders and investors, any Federal financial 24 assistance extended under this section may be repayable only
25 after other loans made in connection with such project and in

1 accordance with this section have been repaid in full, and the
2 security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be
3 subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other
4 loans made in connection with the same project.

5 ~~(e)~~ No financial assistance shall be extended under this
6 section with respect to any public facility which would com-
7 pete with an existing privately owned public utility render-
8 ing a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regu-
9 lation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory
10 body determines that in the area to be served by the public
11 facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended
12 there is a need for an increase in such service ~~(taking into~~ 13 ~~consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs)~~ which the 14 existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing 15 facilities or through an expansion which it agrees to under-
16 take.

17 ~~(f)~~ Of the funds authorized to be raised under section
18 9 of this Act, not more than $100,000,000 shall be deposited
19 in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of 20 making loans under this section.

21 PUBLIC FACILITY GRANTS FOR INDUSTRIAL OR COMMER-
22 CIAL PURPOSES

23 SEC. 8. ~~(a)~~ The Secretary may conduct studies of 24 needs in the various redevelopment areas throughout the 25 United States for, and the probable cost of, land acquisition

1 or development for public facility usage in serving industrial
2 or commercial needs, and the construction, rehabilitation,
3 alteration, expansion, or improvement of useful public
4 facilities to serve such needs within such areas, and
5 may receive proposals from any State, or political sub-
6 division thereof, Indian tribe, or public or private
7 nonprofit organization or association representing any re-
8 development area, or part thereof, relating to land acquisition
9 or development for such public facility usage, and the con-
10 struction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improve-
11 ment of such public facilities within any such area. Any 12 such proposal shall contain plans showing the project pro-
13 posed to be undertaken, the cost thereof, and the contribu-
14 tions proposed to be made to such cost by the entity making
15 the proposal. The Secretary, in consultation with such 16 entity, is authorized to modify all or any part of such 17 proposal.

18 (b) The Secretary, pursuant to a proposal received
19 by him under this section, may make grants to any State, or 20 political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or public or private
21 nonprofit organization or association representing any re-
22 development area, or part thereof, for land acquisition or de-
23 velopment for public facility usage, and the construction, re-
24 habilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public
25 facilities within a redevelopment area, if he finds that such

1 facilities will serve primarily industrial or commercial needs
2 and that—

3 (1) the project for which financial assistance is
4 sought will provide more than a temporary alleviation
5 of unemployment or underemployment in the redevelop-
6 ment area wherein such project is, or will be, located,
7 and will tend to improve the opportunities in such area
8 for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial
9 or commercial plants or facilities;

10 (2) the entity requesting the grant proposes to 11 contribute to the cost of the project for which such grant
12 is requested in proportion to its ability so to contribute;

13 (3) the project for which a grant is requested will 14 fulfill a pressing need of the area, or part thereof, in 15 which it is, or will be, located, and there is little proba-
16 bility that such project can be undertaken without the 17 assistance of a grant under this section; and

18 (4) the area for which a project is to be undertaken
19 has an approved economic development program as pro-
20 vided in section 6(b)(10) and such project is consistent
21 with such program.

22 The amount of any grant under this section for any such
23 project shall not exceed the difference between the funds
24 which can be practicably obtained from other sources (in-

1 eluding a loan under section 7 of this Act) for such project,
2 and the amount which is necessary to insure the completion
3 thereof.

4 (c) The Secretary shall by regulation provide for the
5 supervision of projects with respect to which grants are
6 made under this section so as to insure that Federal funds
7 are not wasted or dissipated.

8 (d) No financial assistance shall be extended under 9 this section with respect to any public facility which would
10 compete with an existing privately owned public utility
11 rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject
12 to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State
13 regulatory body determines that in the area to be served
14 by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to 15 be extended there is a need for an increase in such service
16 (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future
17 needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet
18 through its existing facilities or through an expansion which 19 it agrees to undertake.

20 (e) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated
21 not to exceed $75,000,000 for the purpose of making grants
22 under this section.

23 FUNDS FOR LOANS

24 SEC. 9. (a) To obtain funds for loans under this Act, the 25 Secretary may, with the approval of the President, issue

1 and have outstanding at any one time notes and obligations
2 for purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury in an amount
3 not to exceed $300,000,000. Such notes or other obliga-
4 tions shall be in such forms and denominations, have such
5 maturities, and be subject to such terms and conditions as
6 may be prescribed by the Secretary with the approval of the 7 Secretary of the Treasury. Any such notes or other ob-
8 ligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds
9 for loans under section 6 shall bear interest at a rate de-
10 termined by the Secretary of the Treasury, but such rate
11 shall not be greater than the current average yields on 12 outstanding marketable obligations of the United States
13 of comparable maturities as of the last day of the month
14 preceeding the issuance of such notes or other obligations.
15 Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the 16 Secretary to raise funds for loans under section 7 shall 17 bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the 18 Treasury which shall be not more than the higher of (1)
19 $2\frac{1}{2}$ per centum per annum, or (2) the average annual in-
20 terest rate on all interest-bearing obligations of the United
21 States then forming a part of the public debt as computed 22 at the end of the fiscal year next preceeding the issuance by 23 the Secretary and adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1
24 per centum. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized
25 and directed to purchase any notes and other obligations

1 issued under this section and for such purpose is authorized
2 to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale
3 of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond
4 Act, as amended, and the purposes for which securities may
5 be issued under such Act are extended to include any pur-
6 chase of such notes and other obligations. The Secretary
7 of the Treasury may at any time sell any of the notes or
8 other obligations acquired by him under this section. All
9 redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the 10 Treasury of such notes or other obligations shall be treated 11 in every respect as public debt transactions of the United 12 States.

13 (b) In the performance of and with respect to the func-
14 tions, powers, and duties vested in him by sections 6 and 7 of 15 this Act, the Secretary shall—

16 (1) prepare annually and submit a budget program
17 in accordance with the provisions of sections 102, 103,
18 and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as 19 amended; and

20 (2) determine the character of and the necessity for 21 obligations and expenditures and the manner in which
22 they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to pro-
23 visions of law specifically applicable to Government
24 corporations.

2 SEC. 10. Subject to section 24, the Secretary shall aid
3 redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to inter-
4 ested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises
5 within such areas any assistance, technical information, mar-
6 ket research, or other forms of assistance, information, or
7 advice which are obtainable from the various departments,
8 agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government
9 and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing con-

13 agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Govern-

16 which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for 17 the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the 18 supplies and services such firm are engaged in providing.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

20 SEC. 11. Subject to section 24, in carrying out his duties
21 under this Act the Secretary is authorized to provide
22 technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or 23 preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or under-
24 employment (1) to areas which he has designated as rede-

1 velopment areas under this Act, and ~~(2)~~ to other areas
2 which he finds have substantial need for such assistance.
3 Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs
4 of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of
5 such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secre-
6 tary through members of his staff or through the employ-
7 ment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations,
8 or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such
9 purposes. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the pur-
10 poses of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000
11 annually.

13 SEC. 12. In performing his duties under this Act, the 14 Secretary is authorized to—

18 or held by him in connection with the payment of loans
19 made under this Act, and collect or compromise all

23 for suit or collection;

24 (5) further extend the maturity of or renew any

5 ~~(6)~~ deal with, complete, renovate, improve, mod-
6 ernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such
7 terms and conditions and for such consideration as he

25 The power to convey and to execute, in the name of the

1 Secretary, deeds of conveyance, deeds of release,
2 assignments and satisfactions of mortgages, and any
3 other written instrument relating to real or personal
4 property or any interest therein acquired by the Sec-

6 exercised by the Secretary or by any officer or agent
7 appointed by him for that purpose without the execution
8 of any express delegation of power or power of attorney;

9 (8) acquire, in any lawful manner, any property

2 the civil service and classification laws, and, except in
3 the case of stenographic reporting services by organiza-

TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

SEC. 13. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall be granted under this Act with respect to such area and, for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall ~~(1)~~ prevent any such area from again being designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such section, or ~~(2)~~ affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secretary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment area. URBAN RENEWAL

SEC. 14. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

“SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (in this section referred to as a ‘municipality’) is situated in an area designated under section 5 of the Area Redevelopment Act as a redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economy, the Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

“(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (c) of this section, the Administrator may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirement or limitations of section 110(c) that the project area be predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for

1 and without regard to any of the limitations of that section
2 on the undertaking of projects for predominantly nonresi-
3 dential uses.

4 “(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title,
5 a contract for financial assistance under this section may
6 include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in
7 the project area designated under the urban renewal plan
8 for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or 9 nonprofit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly
10 as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the 11 redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban re-
12 newal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to 13 such public agency or corporation under this section shall be 14 made at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban
15 renewal plan: And provided further, That only the pur-

17 and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obliga-
18 tions relating to the commencement of improvements im-
19 posed under section 105(b) hereof.

20 “(d) Following the execution of any contract for finan-
21 cial assistance under this section with respect to any project,
22 the Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him
23 under this section as well as other provisions of this title for 24 the completion of such projects, notwithstanding any deter-

1 mination made after the execution of such contract that the
 2 area in which the project is located is no longer a redevelop-
 3 ment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

4 “(c) The aggregate amount of capital grants which may
 5 be contracted for under this title with respect to projects for 6 the redevelopment of urban renewal areas for predominantly
 7 nonresidential uses, under the second proviso of the fifth

9 of any redevelopment area.

10 (b) When a redevelopment area has an approved eco-

13 of the Social Security Act) as will promote effective ad-

DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

10 SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance
11 of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best
12 interests of the United States, but that some of our com-
13 munities are suffering substantial and persistent unemploy-
14 ment and underemployment; that such unemployment and 15 underemployment cause hardship to many individuals and 16 their families and detract from the national welfare by 17 wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this prob-
18 lem the Federal Government, in cooperation with the States,
19 should help areas of substantial and persistent unemploy-
20 ment and underemployment to take effective steps in plan-
21 ning and financing their economic redevelopment; that Fed-22 eral assistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and 23 individuals in areas needing redevelopment should enable 24 such areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the 25 domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diver-

1 sified local economies and improved local living conditions;
2 and that under the provisions of this Act new employment op-
3 portunities should be created by developing and expanding
4 new and existing facilities and resources.

5 AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATOR

6 SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by
7 and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Re-
8 development Administrator in the Department of Commerce
9 who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that re-
10 ceived by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Admin-
11 istrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act
12 as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the

19 bers, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries
20 of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior;
21 Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing
22 and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Adminis-
23 tration. The Chairman may from time to time invite the 24 participation of officials of other agencies of the executive 25 branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each

1 member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency
2 to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any 3 matter there considered.

4 (b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Ad-
5 visory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall con-
6 sist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of repre-
7 sentatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local 8 governments, and the public in general. From the members
9 appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a 10 Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcom-
11 mittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations
12 to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under 13 this Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meet-
14 ings during each calendar year.

15 (c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to 16 call together and confer with any persons, including repre-
17 sentatives of labor, management, agriculture, and government, 18 who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment or 19 underemployment in the several areas designated by the Secre-
20 tary as redevelopment areas.

21 REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

22 SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as "rede-
23 velopment areas" those areas within the United States in 24 which he determines, upon the basis of standards generally
25 comparable with those set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2),

1 that there has existed substantial and persistent unemploy-
2 ment for an extended period of time. There shall be included
3 among the areas so designated any area—

4 (1) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the rate
5 of unemployment, excluding unemployment due pri-
6 marily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6
7 per centum or more and has averaged at least 6 per 8 centum for the qualifying time periods specified in para-
9 graph (2); and

10 (2) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the an-

25 are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-

1 income families, and in which there exists a condition of sub-
2 stantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment.
3 In making the designations under this subsection, the Secre-
4 tary shall consider, among other relevant factors, the number
5 of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the 6 United States, the proportion that such low-income families
7 are of the total farm families of each of such areas, the re-8 lationship of the income levels of the families in each such 9 area to the general levels of income in the United States, the 10 current and prospective employment opportunities in each 11 such area, the availability of manpower in each such area for 12 supplemental employment, the extent of migration out of 13 the area, and the proportion of the population of each such 14 area which has been receiving public assistance from the 15 Federal Government or from the State or States in 16 which such area is located or from any municipality therein.
17 In making these determinations the Secretary shall be 18 guided, but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies
19 made, and information and data collected or compiled, by 20 (1) departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Fed-
21 eral Government, (2) State and local governments, (3) uni-
22 versities and land-grant colleges, and (4) private organiza-

2 propriate are authorized to conduct such special studies, ob-

4 tary such data as the Secretary may deem necessary or
5 proper to enable him to make the determinations provided
6 for in subsection (b) of this section. The Secretary shall re-
7 imburse when appropriate, out of any funds appropriated to 8 carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers for 9 any expenditures incurred by them under this section.

17 is or will be located.

18 (3) The project for which financial assistance is

17 bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor
18 in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the 19 obligor.

20 (8) Loans made and evidences of indebtedness pur-

Directs the Secretary of Commerce to appoint a 25-member National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment, to be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the general public.

Directs the Secretary of Commerce to designate as "redevelopment areas" areas within the U. S. which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making these designations the Secretary would be required to consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families to the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of families in each such area to the general levels of income in the U. S., the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent of migration from such area, and the proportion of the population in each such area which has been receiving public assistance from the Federal, State, or local government. In making these determinations, the Secretary would be guided (but not conclusively governed) by studies made, and information compiled, by Federal agencies, State and local governments, educational institutions, and private organizations.

Authorizes the Secretary of Commerce to make loans (and participations in loans) and purchase evidences of indebtedness to assist in financing the purchase and development of land and facilities for industrial and commercial use in redevelopment areas.

Provides that the total amount of assistance outstanding at any one time with respect to industrial redevelopment areas shall not exceed $100 million, and with respect to rural redevelopment areas shall not exceed $100 million. Establishes certain restrictions and limitations on the financial assistance which may be extended.

Authorizes loans of not to exceed $100,000,000 at any one time to State or local governments, Indian tribes, or private or public nonprofit organizations for the purchase or development of land for public facilities in redevelopment areas, and for the construction, rehabilitation, expansion, or improvement of public facilities in such areas. Also, authorizes appropriations not exceeding $75 million for grants for such public facilities.

Establishes in the Treasury Department an area redevelopment fund of up to $300 million to be available to the Secretary of Commerce to extend financial assistance to redevelopment areas.

Authorizes the appropriation of $4.5 million annually to provide technical assistance to redevelopment areas and other areas needing assistance.

Authorizes the appropriation of $4.5 million annually for occupational training in redevelopment areas.

Authorizes the appropriation of $10 million annually for retraining subsistence payments to unemployed or underemployed persons in redevelopment areas.

Authorizes the Secretary of Commerce to delegate to the heads of other Federal agencies any of his functions, powers, and duties, and the redelegation of such by the heads of the agencies.

Authorizes the transfer of funds to other Federal agencies, with the approval of the Director of the Budget Bureau.

10 ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and 11 Currency, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 12 five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider, without

1 the intervention of any point of order, the substitute amend-
2 ment recommended by the Committee on Banking and Cur-
3 rency now in the bill, and such substitute for the purpose of 4 amendment shall be considered under the five-minute rule
5 as an original bill. At the conclusion of such consideration
6 the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House
7 with such amendments as may have been adopted and any 8 member may demand a separate vote in the House on any 9 of the amendments adopted in the Committee of the Whole
10 to the bill or committee substitute. The previous question
11 shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments

HIGHLIGHTS: Senate committee reported sugar bill. House began debate on depressed areas bill. Senate confirmed CCC Board and Bagwell nominations. House passed Treasury-Post Office appropriation bill.

HOUSE

1. THIRD SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATION BILL, 1961. Conferees were appointed on this bill, H. R. 5188 (p. 4715). Senate conferees have already been appointed.
2. TREASURY-POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL, 1962. Passed without amendment this bill, H. R. 5954. pp. 4721-38
3. DEPRESSED AREAS. Began debate on S. 1, the depressed areas bill. pp. 4733-70
4. COMMITTEE ASSIGNMENTS. Rep. William H. Avery, Kan., was elected to the Committee on Rules. p. 4744
5. TEXTILES. Reps. Hemphill, Whitener and Lindsay deplored the increasing U. S. imports of cotton and cotton goods in relation to the economy in the South. pp. 4771-5
6. GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS. Received GAO findings and recommendations for improving Government operations. p. 4781

7. SURPLUS PROPERTY. Received from GSA a proposed bill "to repeal a certain provision of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1961 (74 Stat. 434), regarding the disposal of surplus real property"; to Government Operations Committee. p. 4781
8. REORGANIZATION. The committee report on H. R. 5742, to amend and extend the Reorganization Act, includes the following statement regarding the submission of reorganization plans by the Executive branch:

"Criticisms have been made and the committee has been concerned with the tendency of the Executive to draft reorganization plans in general terms so that the full scope of the reorganization is not always readily apparent from the contents of the plans as presented. At times, the plans seem to confer on Department and agency heads such unrestricted redelegation authority that they are able to effect further substantial reorganizations without referring them to the Congress. In its review of any plans submitted under the bill the committee will insist that they be composed with such detail that their full import is readily ascertainable. The committee is also undertaking a review of the act to see if any improvements are needed.

"The committee has also noted a tendency in recent years for the Executive to submit plans without the full justification in reducing expenditures and promoting economy that the bill requires. The committee will insist that the plans submitted be in accord with the language and intent of the act and we will continue to scrutinize with care all plans accordingly."

SENATE

9. SUGAR. The Finance Committee reported with amendments H. R. 5463, to amend and extend the Sugar Act (S. Rept. 125) (p. 4646). The "Daily Digest" states that the committee adopted amendments which "would (1) limit extension of the act to 15 months (instead of 21 as in House-passed bill); and (2) in regard to re-allocation of Cuban quota, importers of such sugar would pay into U. S. Treasury an amount equal to the difference between world price and U. S. price of raw sugar" (p. D208).
Sen. Church inserted a speech by Sen. Moss before the Cache Co., Utah, Sugar Beet Growers Assoc. "which outlines how extensively sugar has become embroiled in international relations, and suggests some of the problems which must be considered in drafting the new long-term bill." pp. 4664-5
10. NOMINATIONS. Confirmed the nominations of Charles S. Murphy, John P. Duncan, Frank J. Welch, James T. Ralph, Horace Godfrey, and Willard Cochrane to be members of the CCC Board of Directors and John C. Bagwell to be General Counsel of this Department (p. 4702). The nominations were reported earlier by the Agriculture and Forestry Committee (p. 4643).
11. FOREIGN AID. Both Houses received a GAO audit report of the Development Loan Fund (H. Doc. 126). pp. 4644, 4781
Sen. Bridges expressed concern over the expenditure of funds for certain foreign aid activities and inserted a newspaper article criticizing the foreign aid program. pp. 4679-80
Sen. Fulbright stated that the President's message on foreign aid included a number of recommendations submitted in 1957 by the Senate Special Committee To Study the Foreign Aid Program and inserted a summary of the recommendations of the Special Committee. pp. 4681-3 the users of the mail. For example, we asked the Post Office Department last year to distribute to every home a census blank. This cost the Department money, obviously, but we say that this amount should be paid out of the Treasury and not charged against the users of first-, second-, third-, and fourth-class mail.

What we are trying to do, Mr. Chairman, is to segregate those services the Post Office does which have no relation to what the users of the mail should be charged with—services which we as a Congress impose upon the Post Office Department. We are trying to point out certain services and say that they are not proper charges against the users of the mail and that the users should not be asked to pay for the services. I am hopeful we can arrive at some decision on it this year and arrive at a rate basis that will eliminate the postal deficit. I am sure that is what the gentleman wants to accomplish.

Mr. GARY. We think we ought to bring the deficit down from what it is now. The gentleman knows that the greater part of the deficit is caused from those users of the mails who are getting subsidies. Some say it is a public service; I say it is a special service that is rendered, and when people get special services from the Government they should be willing to pay for them and be made to pay for them. Ordinary users of the mail should not be called upon to pay more than the cost of the service rendered to them. But I do not think the deficit has anything to do with that. Let us get an adequate cost accounting system and determine what it is costing to handle this mail.

Mr. CORBETT. The gentleman's committee, I am afraid, is using the term "public service" a little differently than my committee is in order to determine what things are proper charges to the Treasury and what things are proper charges to the users of the mail—figures you are going to give out at the end of this year.

Mr. GARY. I hope the gentleman will not base it on the difference between first- and second-class post offices and third- and fourth-class post offices. I see no justification for that distinction, in that they all render service to the people in handling the mail.

Mr. CORBETT. We are going to try to show the gentleman that the cost figures are unclear.

When the Post Office Department closes a fourth-class office they say they do not put any figure on it because they do not know how much it should be; therefore, they made an estimate of zero instead of an estimate of $70 million, or whatever it was. They do say that everytime they close a fourth-class office there has been a saving of $1,400,000. So they have put an estimate on it.

Your third- and fourth-class offices are community centers, and they operate far beyond the scope of simply being a depository for letters. However, beyond that, here is the determination which it is the duty of the Congress and the Post Office Department to work out. This is our job. If we fail to do it then we should be held accountable, but having done it then we should join with you folks and with others in saying there should not be any special services granted to users of the mail for which they do not pay. Then we can agree on that and destroy the argument of any users of the mail hiding behind the public service factor if we implement it dollarwise.

Mr. BASS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I should like to call attention to page 14 of the committee report which states:

The committee considers that the post office construction program is being accelerated entirely too rapidly.

I think that the statement is misleading because we have not had any construction actually performed by the Federal Government that is noticeable throughout the country in post office and Federal buildings in the past 20 years.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BASS of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. GARY. I will say to the gentleman that with reference to construction under lease, they are planning new construction next year for 1,762 new post offices. It is true they will be constructed under lease and not by the Federal Government. The way that is handled, the Federal Government acquires a piece of land, it then gets somebody to agree to erect a building on it. The Government sells the land to them, then they enter into a lease agreement for the land and the building. We feel they have been entering into these lease agreements too fast, and they have not been giving sufficient consideration to the cost of the transaction. We think it ought to be slowed down until we can get some figures.

Mr. BASS of Tennessee. I might be in position to agree with the chairman in some instances as to cost of the leased buildings, but what I would like to point out is that the program of building is not overly accelerated because there is a tremendous need for post office quarters throughout the country. As a matter of fact, in the 16 counties of the district of Tennessee that I represent there has been only one post office building constructed as a Federal building since World War II. Certainly if we are in the period now where we see a necessity for increased construction as a stimulus to the economy—and I am fully aware of the necessity for it—then I think greater consideration should be placed on building Federal buildings. If there is an acceleration that is above what it should be, it is an acceleration of buildings that are leased where Government-owned quarters would serve better, but certainly the program of construction itself in the instance of procuring adequate quarters for post office operations has not been overly accelerated. They should be changed from ordinary leased quarters to those of federally owned quarters throughout the Nation.

Mr. GARY. Our committee has no jurisdiction over that subject matter at all because all government construction is handled by the General Services Administration. We do not handle the appropriations for the General Services Administration, so we cannot put one dollar of construction costs in our program.

Mr. BASS of Tennessee. You can slow down providing funds for leased quarters in the larger cities and towns which will necessarily make them build federal buildings.

Mr. PILLION. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BASS of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. PILLION. Our subcommittee was in trouble on account of the tremendous jump in the costs of leased buildings and a few of the utilities. There was a feeling that perhaps we were going too far and too fast. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. ALEXANDER], referred to this figure in his presentation. That item of rents and utilities jumped from $75 million a year to $113 million in the space of 2 years; a 50 percent increase. So, the committee felt that there ought to be a review and a stop, look, and listen attitude so that we do not get into a situation to where we are committed to lease cost way beyond what may be absolutely necessary.

Mr. BASS of Tennessee. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am interested in this discussion, too, and I would like to pursue this just a little bit further with the distinguished chairman of this great Subcommittee on Appropriations as well as with the gentleman on the minority side who has apparently expressed agreement with what the chairman of the subcommittee has just said.

I would like to ask the chairman this: Is it not a fact that most of these lease contract agreements referred to by the Post Office Department for use of facilities have been for third-class offices?

Mr. GARY. No, they are not.

Mr. HARRIS. Well, I have several in my district, and every one of them that has been authorized and a lease permitted has been for third-class offices without exception. And, I think the Post Office Department has done a pretty good job working cooperatively with the local people for this particular class of office. I think the gentleman from Virginia and the members of this committee realize from a practical standpoint we are not going to get the General Services Administration, and everyone else who would be involved with it, to approve a Federal building, a Post Office facility, for a third-class office in any community. And, I would like to impress upon the members of this committee, if you have any question about these leased facilities, that you do not cut out these third-class offices in the small communities where they cannot get facilities otherwise except by lease or rental.

Mr. BASS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARRIS. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BASS of Tennessee. I am in perfect agreement with the gentleman on this matter, and I am not suggesting in any degree that we start building Federal buildings for post offices in all of these small communities. The business of providing adequate quarters by lease is adequate. But, in the building of buildings and leasing quarters for first-class offices in large metropolitan areas where Federal buildings should be provided is what I am talking about. Now, in the smaller communities that is a different problem, and I am in agreement with the gentleman.

Mr. HARRIS. But this is a broad statement in the report. It refers to all leased quarters.

Mr. CONTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARRIS. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. CONTE. There is another benefit to lease-building construction. It puts that building on the tax roll in the smaller communities, where you have these third-class offices in the small towns, where they already have a heavy real estate tax burden. Instead of having a Government building which is tax exempt, you will have a leased building on which to get some revenues.

Mr. HARRIS. Yes; the gentleman makes a good point. But, the point I want to emphasize here—and I hope the committee does not go that far—is that while I agree with the committee that we should review these programs, they should give close scrutiny to them, at the same time I do not believe that the committee by its report here should be telling the Post Office Department where an acceptable contract for leased quarters can be provided for facilities in a small community that cannot get them otherwise, that it should not be permitted, and I hope that the gentleman's committee will insist that that program be followed.

Mr. GARY. Certainly there has been no attempt on the part of our committee to tell the Post Office Department that, but we have said where this cost is going up by leaps and bounds, we think it should be scrutinized very carefully.

Mr. HARRIS. I agree with the gentleman, but I think in these small communities you should not take action that would defer them or result in stopping the program to provide adequate facilities for these small communities which are entitled to them as much as the larger communities.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

(Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, my purpose is to learn, if possible, from whoever is in charge of this bill, just who is running the Post Office Department. Some weeks ago we were told by the press that Mr. Day, our Postmaster General intended to run the Department as he wished notwithstanding anything Congress might do. That is all right with me, but I doubt that he ever was discourteous or intended to disregard Congress for he like other Cabinet members depends to some extent upon the Congress for appropriations. This morning a letter came in from the Sturgis Journal, a newspaper that prints a fine conservative publication. Three years ago the Journal, which gives much daily news and sound, constructive editorials, put more boxes around on a rural route, running out of, Burr Oak, St. Joseph County, Mich. For 3 years there has not been any trouble, everyone was satisfied, all the people on the route, the newspaper, which owned and placed the boxes with the Department's approval. But along comes this mail carrier, Martin Maystead, the rural carrier on that route, and he now says—and that is since the change in administration—he does not like the location of those boxes and he wants them all moved. Whether he wants them all in one place and nearer the post office, I do not know. Maybe he wants to establish a New Frontier all his own.

I notice the gentle lady from New York [Mrs. ST. GEORGE], who is a member of the Committee on Post Office, is present. May I ask her, Does the carrier have that authority, or is that authority downtown or with a regional office?

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. I do not think the carrier has the authority, but he might have; there is no way of telling. Things are very fluid right now.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Apparently he is a supporter of the New Frontier.

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. Then he probably has the right.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Perhaps this is not a fair question, but should the boxes be moved nearer the road or back a little further?

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. Oh, definitely nearer the road.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Nearer the road?

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. Yes.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. And closer together?

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. Possibly, yes.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. So the route will be shorter.

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. That is right; that is very important.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I certainly thank the gentle lady from New York.

Mr. Chairman, I shall certainly pass that information along to the paper and I hope they will take it on to the carrier, because he has the idea that he is running the Post Office Department, at least in his territory.

The Clerk read as follows:

This title may be cited as the "Post Office Department Appropriation Act, 1962".

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I want to take a minute to ask the chairman of the subcommittee about the trust funds as shown on page 17 of the report. Who authorizes payment of this money from the trust funds?

Mr. GARY. They are permanent appropriations authorized by the Congress.

Mr. GROSS. Not by the Committee on Foreign Affairs or any other legislative committee?

Mr. GARY. No. They are authorized by the Congress and are payable in accordance with direct legislation enacted by the Congress.

Mr. GROSS. I thank the gentleman. The Clerk concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. THORNBERRY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 5954) making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments, and the Tax Court of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1962, and for other purposes, had directed him to report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

Mr. BOLLING. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 237 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution, it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed three hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the bill shall be read for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider, without the intervention of any point of order, the substitute amendment recommended by the Committee on Banking and Currency now in the bill, and such substitute for the purpose of amendment shall be considered under the five-minute rule as an original bill. At the conclusion of such consideration the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and any member may demand a separate vote in the House on any of the amendments adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or committee substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. BOLLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Brown], and pending that I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 237 provides for the consideration of S. 1 as amended, a bill to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas. The resolution provides for an open rule, waiving points of order, with 3 hours of general debate.

S. 1 as amended would provide a coordinated attack on the basic economic problems confronting those areas with persistent and substantial unemployment. While it would rely on local initiative and the efforts of private enterprise, it would enable the Federal Government to play its proper role and meet its responsibilities in this field. Technical assistance and guidance would be made available along with financial aid, primarily in the form of loans to implement local economic programs.

The principle of Federal action to relieve unemployment in areas of persistent and substantial labor surplus has been endorsed in the platforms of both parties. It has also received wide support from labor, industry, municipal, and private citizen groups.

S. 1, as amended and reported out by the House Committee on Banking and Currency, contains a number of safeguards to insure both that the assistance will produce a real measure of relief to the areas in need and that it will do this without detriment to any other community. Naturally, wise administration is essential and it is believed this is best cared for by placing responsibility for the program in a Cabinet rank officer and at the same time establishing a high-level Government official in the Department of Commerce to perform such functions as the Secretary may assign to him in carrying out the program.

To conserve the funds for their most urgent uses the bill provides that no loan may be made unless funds are not otherwise available from other sources on reasonable terms. To make certain that the assistance given under this program will not result in dislocations in other areas, the Banking and Currency Committee amendment carries a flat prohibition against the use of any funds for the transfer of business establishments from one area to another.

The purpose of the legislation is to make a net expansion of job opportunities and not to "pirate" industries from other locations.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the adoption of House Resolution 237.

BACKGROUND AND SUMMARY OF S. 1, THE AREA REDEVELOPMENT BILL

S. 1 is designed to establish a new program to meet the problem of chronic localized unemployment. It will do this through Federal technical assistance, financial aid, and occupational retraining assistance.

Background of the bill: Proposals for area redevelopment along the lines of the present bill have been before the Congress for over a decade. On two occasions bills have passed both Houses. In 1958 an area redevelopment bill was passed but was pocket vetoed. In 1960 another bill (S. 722) was passed but also was vetoed. The Senate failed to override. In spite of this, the principle of Federal aid to chronically depressed areas has been endorsed in the platform of both parties.

The committee amendment to S. 1 represents generally the administration views. It was introduced by Chairman SPENCE of the Committee on Banking and Currency, at the request of the President and reported out of the Committee with amendments by a vote of 20 to 6.

Need for this program: Many communities suffer heavy unemployment even when the overall economy is prosperous. The general reasons are technological advances by which machines replace manpower; changes in demand which make existing plants and skills obsolete, and depletion of resources such as timber, coal, and ore. In addition, the rapid advances in farm technology, combined with historical conditions which have created many small uneconomical farms, have resulted in serious unemployment, underemployment, and poverty in many rural areas.

As a result of these conditions, 20 major labor market areas and 83 smaller areas would be eligible for the assistance provided in S. 1 under the mandatory designation provision. In addition, many other areas, particularly rural places, would be eligible under the guidelines established by the bill.

Experience has shown that local efforts by themselves, however vigorous and imaginative, cannot do the whole job of redeveloping these communities. Local resources, both public and private, become depleted under the pressure of heavy persistent unemployment, and outside credit aid is not available in adequate volume to finance redevelopment. The bill would provide this assistance along with technical aid, loans and grants for public facilities, and occupational retraining benefits.

MAJOR PROVISIONS OF THE BILL

Responsibility for the program would be placed in the Secretary of Commerce, though he would be directed to use existing Government agencies and facilities, such as the Small Business Administration and the housing agencies, wherever possible. An Area Redevelopment Administrator would be established in the Department of Commerce to give his whole time and attention to the program, carrying out whatever duties are assigned to him by the Secretary.

A prerequisite for aid under the bill is an overall economic redevelopment program which meets the approval of the Secretary. This program will analyze the community's economic problem, determine whether or not redevelopment is feasible, and, if it is, indicate the steps that should be taken to achieve it. To enable the Secretary to provide technical assistance for these programs and for other studies aimed at preventing or alleviating any unemployment, the bill authorizes annual appropriations of $4.5 million.

In order to carry out the recommendation of the economic plan, Federal loan funds are provided in case adequate private financing is not available. This would take the form of liberal loans for industrial expansion. These loans could be used for the acquisition and development of land, the construction of industrial or commercial buildings, and in exceptional cases for the purchase of machinery. Such loans could not exceed 65 percent of the total cost of the project with the balance to be met by the community or local redevelopment organization and by private lenders. The maximum term would be 25 years with a possible extension for another 10 years. The interest rate is based on a formula which currently produces a rate of 4 3/8 percent. The bill authorizes for appropriation $100 million for each of two revolving funds—one to be used for loans in industrial areas and the other for rural areas.

These loans can be used to rehabilitate existing plants or provide for the expansion of plants either in the locality or from outside the area. However, the bill explicitly states that none of this financial aid is to be used to help any firm to relocate, totally or partially, from one area to another.

A prime need in many communities is the improvement or expansion of community facilities. Adequate sewer and waterworks and other public investment is essential to modern industry. Many communities faced with the burden of chronic heavy unemployment have found their revenue reduced while at the same time their outlays for relief have increased. As a result, they are unable to finance the necessary public works by themselves. To meet this need the bill authorizes $100 million for appropriation to be used for Federal loans to these communities. Such loans would have terms up to 40 years with a possible 10-year extension, and the interest rate would be computed on a formula based on the average cost of money to the Federal Government plus one-fourth of 1 percent for additional administrative costs. Currently this interest rate would be 3 1/2 percent.

In some communities the need is so great that it is not feasible to finance needed local public works entirely on the basis of loans. A subsidy is necessary to finance the project and keep rates on the utility low. For this purpose the bill authorizes the appropriation of $75 million for partial grants for local public works. These grants could not exceed 65 percent of the net difference between the total cost of the project and the amount borrowed from any source. The community itself must raise the funds required for the other 35 percent of the difference.

The bill also makes it possible for designated communities to take advantage of the urban renewal program. While this program is aimed primarily at clearing residential slums, there has been growing recognition of the need to eliminate blighted business areas as well. On past occasions the Congress has made available a certain portion of the urban renewal capital grant authority for these nonresidential projects. To assure that this assistance will be available to depressed communities, S. 1 provides that up to 10 percent of any future capital grant authority made available for the urban renewal program can be used for nonresidential slum clearance projects in designated depressed areas. This will make it possible for these communities to provide industrial sites and at the same time bolster their tax bases. In addition, the bill makes the urban planning grant program available to communities designated as eligible under this bill.

While many workers in these areas are skilled, their abilities are no longer in demand. Such workers as well as untrained workers require occupational training if they are to find adequate employment. Therefore the bill authorizes annual appropriations of $4.5 million to assist the State vocational training programs. Because in many States workers undergoing training are not eligible for unemployment compensation, the bill authorizes annual appropriations of $10 million to make subsistence payments for periods up to 16 weeks.

Finally, the bill makes permanent the authority of the Small Business Administration to make loans to State and local development companies for plant construction, conversion, and expansion. Under present law this authority will expire on June 30 of this year.

Altogether this bill authorizes appropriations totaling $394 million. Of this, $300 million is for loans repayable with interest. Considered in perspective, this is a relatively small amount to do a large and vitally important job. For example, it is less than half of 1 percent of our total Federal budget. However, this bill will make a vital contribution by providing concentrated and comprehensive attention to the problems of areas which suffer chronic unemployment and, in the long run, will benefit the entire Nation.

(Mr. BOLLING asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may require.

(Mr. BROWN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from Missouri has explained, this rule, which is an open rule and provides for 3 hours of general debate, makes in order, the consideration of the bill S. 1, the so-called depressed areas bill.

It provides that the committee amendments shall be considered as an original bill, which, of course, will permit the offering of a substitute at the proper time and place. The rule also provides for one motion to recommit, reserved to the minority, either with or without instructions. I would like to take just a minute or two, if I may, to discuss this legislation because we had rather extensive hearings on it before the Committee on Rules.

First of all, I want to congratulate, if I may, the House Committee on Banking and Currency for bringing out what all of us on the Committee on Rules seemingly agreed is the best bill of this type that has been presented in the Congress. This bill is a much better measure than that which has been approved in another body, that is, the original bill, the amendments to S. 1, because S. 1, you will find, while it has the title of the Senate bill contains none of the provisions of the Senate original bill, which has all been rewritten and the amendment is being considered as the original bill.

One of the things I am very happy about in connection with this legislation is the fact that it does not provide for backdoor spending nor the backdoor approach to the Federal Treasury, but requires all funds to be spent under this legislation, should it be enacted into law, shall be appropriated by the Congress after due hearings before the Committee on Appropriations. It also eliminates a number of other bad provisions in that measure, and yet even as much improved as the bill is, I believe it goes too far in many instances and is certainly so distorted, if I can use that word, that the meaning of it is unclear in certain sections and certain provisions, and it confers entirely too much power on some unknown individual who is designated as the administrator. Who he may be, no one knows. What his thinking may be on some of the matters that may come under his jurisdiction seemingly no one knew or could understand. So there will be a substitute bill offered. This committee amendment, the same as the Senate bill, provides for an expenditure of $394,500,000 over a period of time, I think, to run up to 1963, if I remember correctly, supposedly a terminal date and yet with no exact terminal date for the working up of this program, as I could understand this measure. Instead, it provides for certain new approaches to what we might call chronic unemployment that have never been thought of before. I want to call your attention, if I may, to section 5(b). No one could explain just what it meant or what could happen or what might be decided under it. We were advised by the proponents of the bill that the Secretary of Agriculture, because it deals with rural districts, did not know what section 5(b) meant or how it might be administered. The Secretary of Labor knew nothing about it.

The Secretary of Commerce said he could not explain it, did not understand it, yet under that provision we embark upon some sort of program just as thin as the air. It is some sort of program to take care of unemployment and depressed areas out in the rural sections of the country; and it was admitted that every rural area in the United States can be declared a depressed area and come in and get funds.

Another provision opens the door to all sorts of Federal contributions under this particular program for the construction of community facilities such as antipollution programs, water treatment plants, sewage disposal plants, and such things, although we have special acts and laws set up for that purpose. They could even go so far under this bill as to construct public schools under the depressed areas section of the bill, as community facilities.

Then there is no clear definition and no clear alinement. They say very frankly to us that what may be a depressed area or area of unemployment changes from day to day; and I can understand there may be some changes, of course. But I have looked this over rather carefully and I suggest that you look at page 18 of the report on this act. I understand this list has been changed very materially, so we were advised by some of the proponents of the bill.

Seemingly some of these rather abstract and peculiar provisions of this bill have been left to the Administrator to decide, whether a community can qualify for aid as a distressed area, one of unemployment, or underemployment as the case may be, whether or not this district or that district, or this State or that State will qualify or will not qualify.

And I just want to mention this, to you, if I may, because I have been here quite a long time and have seen politics in their practical application, and from my experience I have observed that no law is better than the person who administers it. I am fearful that in this bill if it is adopted and approved, we are delegating to one man, some unknown administrator, all the powers and authority of Congress, almost, to decide as to what are actual distressed areas or depressed areas, and the need for these plants, these industries, the retraining of workers, just whatever he may decide in his discretion whether all of the rural counties in your State shall be declared distressed and depressed areas, or none of them. Also, I think you and I can understand from the practical point of view that it may be necessary to send quite a number of experts out of Washington to check these particular areas at different times and perhaps to check them for a long time to see just what areas may qualify and what should be done. It leaves the door open, of course, for building a very, very efficient and a very, very effective political machine should the Administrator be of the type or the mind that might like to engage in just a little bit of politicking along with his other public duties.

Somehow or other, in my opinion, if this legislation is to be enacted—and, of course, there is a realization in the minds of all of us, there is a certain realization, that there are some problems in depressed areas where there has been unemployment and no employment, that have existed for a long, long time.

Somehow or other this measure has to be tightened up. It should be made a proper kind of a bill with every possible safeguard thrown about it or else it should be defeated. That will be the issue you will have confronting you when it comes time to consider a substitute that will be offered by the minority on the Committee on Banking and Currency, or when the bill comes to final passage.

This measure is an embarkation, if we can call it that, upon an entirely new theory as to the Federal Government's responsibility, an embarkation, if you please, upon an entirely new program. While they talk about terminal dates and the possible ending of the program, it will probably be like many other of these spending programs that have come to us through the years, it will be with us for many, many years to come. If we are going to do this with the Federal Government now owing more than $290 billion, with the report coming to us from downtown that the White House will soon send us a message asking the Congress to increase the national debt limit again so that at least $10 billion more may be borrowed for our children and grandchildren to pay off in the future, we should look at this measure closely. We should scrutinize it carefully. If we are going to do a thing like this we should do it in the safest, most practical, sound way that we possibly can. I hope that careful attention will be given to the debate, as the sponsors, the proponents and opponents to this legislation, those who believe this bill should be changed so that it can be enacted into law, perhaps those who may oppose it entirely, will present their views. We should listen to those views because this is a very, very important piece of legislation upon which we are starting consideration at this time.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. ST. GEORGE].

(Mrs. ST. GEORGE asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. ST. GEORGE. Mr. Speaker, it has been well said that this bill, S. 1, comes before us in far better shape than the bill that was passed last year. First of all, the bill makes the clause on piracy much stronger. This is in many ways a good thing, although at the same time it gives very great and possibly dangerous powers to the Administrator. There is also no back-door spending in the House bill. It does appear in the Senate bill.

Another thing is that this matter has been put in the hands of, and under, the Department of Commerce, which was requested by President Eisenhower, I believe, in his veto message. So that it is on the whole a better bill; nevertheless, it is open to some quite serious criticism, it seems to me. It needs to be tightened up in many respects.

The amount of spending, $394 million, is to all intents and purposes quite modest. If you will turn to page 18 of the report you will find that under "major areas" there is a total of 28 such areas, under "smaller areas" there is a total of 83 areas, which makes a grand total of 103. At the questioning it came out that the witness was constantly speaking about 101 areas. In answer to my question I pointed out I could obtain only 103, not 101. I was told there had been a change since the report had been written and that at the present time there are 101 major areas. I am telling this merely to show how necessary it is to look into this bill and to tighten it up wherever possible.

There is an awfully big difference, I submit to you, between 20 major areas and 101. That is just one of the things that is typical of this legislation.

Now, it is also true that if we are to give $394 million and divide it and spread it all over these areas and all over this country, especially over the rural areas that are very ill defined in this bill—in fact, they are not defined at all—we are going to have a great many very disillusioned citizens because no one is going to get enough to satisfy them in any way.

In walking through the Speaker's lobby you can see a great many maps of just one of our States, West Virginia. And, I submit to you that $394 million will not go very far even in that one State if things are as bad as we are told. Therefore, a number of rural areas should be looked over also with great care; otherwise, as has been well said here on the floor, it might be that entire States would be turned over as depressed areas.

Now, in the minority views of the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. DWYER], she has this to say, and I think it is well said and very much to the point:

To that end we favor discharge by Government of responsibility for those activities which the private sector cannot do or cannot so well do, such as constructive Federal-local action to aid areas of chronic high unemployment.

She then says:

The committee bill fails to meet the test of "constructive Federal-local action" because it tries to do too much for too many areas—thus the assistance it provides would tend to be dissipated.

And, I submit, Mr. Speaker, that that is true and that that is a very serious disadvantage in this legislation.

I was also very much interested to see another thing that has been said by a gentleman who happens to be one of my constituents, Mr. Hans Christian Sonne, head of the National Planning Association. Mr. Sonne was born in Denmark and brought up in England. Both of these countries, I submit, are further along in welfare programs than the United States is today. Mr. Sonne points to the fact that we may be in very, very real danger. He says:

An effective depressed areas program must contribute to an increase in total production and total employment, not merely to a shift of production and employment from one area to another. We are seeking a program to help depressed areas participate in national economic growth and well-being, not to distribute the distress more evenly throughout the economy.

The possibility of "disturbing the distress more evenly throughout the economy" is precisely what disturbs him about the standards in S. 1 as reported.

I think it is a very valid criticism and I think it is one that we must take cognizance of. If we will do this and if we will tighten the bill up—and we have an opportunity of doing it in the substitute that is to be offered—I think we may have a sound piece of legislation. I still think the overall amount is too small, unless it is brought into a much smaller radius, to be very effective.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MEADER].

(Mr. MEADER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. MEADER. Mr. Speaker, the way to get a bill passed is to give it an attractive label.

That is why we have bills like unemployment compensation, aid to children of the unemployed, minimum wage, medical care for the aged, and now the depressed areas bill.

There should be a rule prohibiting misbranding of bills.

No one wants to oppose a bill to assist chronically depressed areas. We all are sympathetic to their plight and their problems. But, should they be exploited to promote socialism—which actually will harm instead of helping them and at the same time introduce turmoil, uncertainty, and politics into our whole business community?

This bill should be relabeled. Under rule XIX of the House Rules you cannot amend the title of a bill until the bill is passed, but this bill should be called a bill to socialize the American economy by Federal intrusion into the equity end of business enterprises; to assist in pirating the same through politics; by nationalizing the municipal bond market, and for other socialistic purposes.

This bill is an unkind fraud on the downtrodden and the charity-minded.

It will bring untold added misery to areas already miserable and impede the march of a dynamic free economy—the genius and guiding principle of the American dream.

It is a half-baked excursion into unsophisticated socialism.

The only beneficiary of this proposal will be the fly-by-night operator—the medicine man—the scalawag who has all but vanished—harried by State blue-sky laws and the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission.

The Federal Government—that is, all the people of the United States through their tax contributions—and civic-minded local citizens impressed by the backing of the Federal Government will be the victims of this marginal entrepreneur who risks little of his own—5 percent of total cost. If the business should succeed, the entrepreneur will reap the benefit. If it fails—as is most likely since available private capital shied away—the entrepreneur will milk the business as long as he can get away with it and then depart with his loot, leaving the area worse off than when he arrived.

Where will the Federal Government recruit the wizards of industry to make a marginal or submarginal enterprise flourish? Have past bureaucratic performances demonstrated that the Government can attract talent with the imagination and enterprise even to make an essentially sound business succeed? How can it expect to enlist the genius to manage a business which is basically unsound, or at the best marginal, or sub-marginal?

Mr. Speaker, on August 1, 1958, a similar proposal was brought before this House of Representatives, the so-called community facilities bill, another experiment in socialism. And I might say to you that I believe many of these socialistic experiments originate in the think machine of the UAW-CIO.

Mr. Speaker, the House on that day, using good judgment, defeated the rule for the consideration of the community facilities bill by a vote of 173 for the rule to 187 opposed to it. You will find the rollcall on page 15874 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of August 1, 1958.

Mr. Speaker, there are two areas in Michigan listed as depressed areas located in my congressional district. This morning I received from the city of Monroe, Mich., one of the areas, a letter signed by the president of the chamber of commerce and four other gentlemen from the city of Monroe asking me to oppose this legislation. The letter is as follows:

GREATER MONROE
CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
Monroe, Mich., March 27, 1961.

HON. GEORGE MEADER,
Representative from Michigan,
House Office Building, Washington, D.C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN MEADER: The board of directors of the Greater Monroe Chamber of Commerce, meeting in special session on March 24, 1961, went on record as opposing S. 1 (Douglas area redevelopment bill) for the following reasons:

1. The bill would only relocate unemployment;
2. It would provide some industries with unfair, Government-created advantages over their competitors at the expense of the already overburdened American taxpayer;
3. It does not recognize the basic causes of depressed area problems, which are not a lack of plant sites, buildings, and community facilities. The real reasons we have unemployment cover a much broader area than that which can be solved by the use of Federal funds; and
4. The bill would do a grave injustice to communities which have, through their own efforts, maintained a good employment record.

We believe that the solution to the unemployment problem lies in independent local action spearheaded by local leadership.

We respectfully request, therefore, that you vote in opposition to the passage of this bill.

Very truly yours,
GREATER MONROE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
WALTER G. HAESSLER, President.
WARREN W. GRUBER, Immediate Past President.
WARREN M. PELLOT, Treasurer.
JAMES E. RAU, Secretary to Board of Directors.
RICHARD D. MCHENRY, Manager.

I do not believe we ought to undertake to consider this measure. I say to those who want to get away for an Easter vacation, rather than being put under the gun for the consideration of this bill, if they want to get their vacation started a little earlier, just vote down the rule.

Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks, I also include an editorial from the Jackson Citizen Patriot, Jackson, Mich., of Sunday, March 19, 1961:

WHO'S DEPRESSED?

It's always been fun to play Robin Hood, and the new peachfuzz and gray flannel set in Washington seems out to do it with a vengeance.

Their version, of course, is taking from the prosperous sections of the Nation and giving to the poorer areas. They call this aid to depressed areas and duck the fact that the logic involved is at loggerheads with everything that built America.

But apparently some of the folk the young men in Washington want to help still nurse something called pride, obviously a stumbling block for the let-George-do-it-for-you lads.

Senator PAUL DOUGLAS, that intrepid economist-turned-Congressman from Illinois, is author of the bill.

In it, he described as a "depressed area" Marion County, Ill. It's not hard to wring out a few tears for the poor hapless of Marion County, waiting patiently in long drab lines for handouts of cold, thin soup.

Only trouble is that the folks in Marion apparently haven't heard about this hard luck.

The daily newspaper in Marion posts this list of indications of a nondepressed situation:

Bank deposits of personal accounts are more than a half million dollars higher than they were on January 1. Local utilities are bustling into a $6 million expansion program. A new Federal prison, costing $10 million, is going up.

Residents of the area in January purchased $215,000 in saving bonds. One of the most important industries is expanding its plant. The local hospital just got a new roof.

Another industry is building a $400,000 warehouse. The bank just doubled the size of its building, two new office buildings are being constructed, two finance companies have moved to larger quarters and the Presbyterian Church has announced plans for a new building.

Postal service has been expanded into growing suburban areas.

The amount the people spent on purchase of Federal savings bonds in a month was larger than the amount they could expect to receive in Federal aid from the Douglas bill in 3 years.

What do you do for people like this? What sort of American is it who asks not for whom the dole tolls, but instead asks for help in keeping bureaucracy off his neck?

He obviously poses big problems for the legislators with the social worker hearts.

But then, shucks, those guys in Washington are always reminding us that we're out of step with the rest of the country, we fuddyduddy Midwesterners. Why can't we just shut up and let Sam do it?

If there is anyone left in America who doesn't want to plop his freedom on his head like an apple and let the Ivy League-trained archers take potshots at it with their fuzzy arrows, let him keep his peace. After all, time must march on.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remaining time on this side to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL], a member of the committee.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Speaker, some Members of the House may think that I speciously offered a substitute bill in connection with area redevelopment. This is certainly false. May I say this about my own district? I do not think it makes any difference in votes to me whether I am for or against area redevelopment. I do believe there is a specific problem in the United States toward which we can address our attention, toward which we should make some positive progress and toward which there should be a contribution by the American people as a whole. Because of that feeling, in the last Congress I supported a bill that was sponsored by the administration; now I have introduced a bill which will be offered as a substitute bill when we are in the Committee of the Whole, that will attempt to use the best that has come out of the subcommittee and the committee, taking out those sections we feel are not right, that did not have a healthy approach toward solving the problem.

There are 15 differences between the bill that I have offered and the bill that came out of the House committee. Incidentally, the subcommittee did a fine job in considering the bill. There was intelligent work by Members on both sides of the aisle, and an attempt to reach an agreement, but there is fundamental disagreement with respect to a number of the sections.

In the designation of industrial redevelopment areas in the bill that I have offered, the authority to designate redevelopment areas contained in the first sentence of section 5(a) of the committee bill is eliminated. Under it, in the bill as reported, the Administrator can designate a whole State as a redevelopment area. Certainly if we believe that the chronically depressed areas, the ones we have talked about both in political campaigns and outside political campaigns, are to have effective support through this legislation, they should be pinned down, and pinned down to the areas that really need the help. The truly depressed areas should not have to share the benefits intended for them on any such basis as a statewide area.

In the proposed substitute bill the term "labor market area" is used in place of "areas." The Department of Labor Statistics has unemployment benefits on the basis of labor market areas. Therefore, we are using what seems to be an intelligent connotation of the area so it can be pinned down. Areas within a State can only be designated as redevelopment areas after the chief executive of the State has requested the designation be made. This preserves the States' rights in the making of such designation.

The criteria that must exist before areas can be designated as redevelopment areas are set forth. This will tend to assure that the assistance provided in the bill will be available for the hardcore depressed areas, which are the ones in greatest need.

The loans for rural areas are eliminated in the substitute bill. Why was this done? The members of the subcommittee itself and many members of the full committee, and I am sure many members of the House Committee on Rules, were not satisfied with the loose development of this section of the committee bill, with the failure to pin down programs to definite areas and to establish what can be done in rural areas. So in the substitute bill instead of $100 million for rural development work there is $500,000 that will be used to research and develop a feasible program that can be pinned down and directed in a direction that will give substantial assistance to the underemployed areas.

Other differences between the bill I have introduced and the bill reported by the House Banking and Currency Committee:

First. Plant loan funds by the industrial redevelopment areas—section 6(b).

In my bill, a 50-percent increase is provided in the loan funds available for the hardcore industrial depressed areas since that program can proceed on a sensible basis.

Since it is the apparent intention of the committee bill that there be at least a 15-percent State and local equity participation in plant loans, section 6(b) (9) (C) is amended to close a loophole under which, in certain cases, only a 10-percent participation would be required.

Second. Loans for public facilities—section 7.

In place of establishing a new, duplicating public facility loan program on a subsidized basis, provision in my bill is made for expanding by $100 million the existing public facility loan program in the housing agency with provisions for a priority for counties, cities, and other municipalities and political subdivisions in redevelopment areas. Such a program is on a nonsubsidized lending basis.

Protection is afforded against such loan funds being utilized in a manner to induce pirating of industry from other areas to redevelopment areas.

Third. Grants for public facilities:

This WPA-type program—section 8 of the reported bill—is completely eliminated from my bill on basic policy considerations as follows:

It is a foot-in-the-door start of omnibus Federal grant-in-aid legislation.

The eligibility criteria are virtually unlimited.

It could be used to foster unsound projects in that it would apply to a project for which there would be "little probability that such project can be undertaken without the assistance of a grant under this section."

Fourth. Termination of eligibility for further assistance—section 12:

Although no change is made in this section, nevertheless for the first time it would acquire real meaning because of the deletion of the broad area designation authority contained in the first sentence of section 5(a) of the bill as reported. Eligibility of an area is terminated when it no longer meets requirements for designation as a redevelopment area.

Fifth. Urban renewal—section 13.

A provision is added in my bill protecting against plant pirating in the use of this program in redevelopment areas. Somewhat similar protection was included in the bill S. 722 which was sent to the President by the last Congress.

Sixth. Occupational training—section 15.

Since this is the only help some of the unemployed in depressed areas will get out of this bill, the amount provided for occupational training in my bill has been more than doubled—increased from $4.5 million to $10 million.

The authorized appropriation is placed on a 1-year basis to force the coordination within that time of this new program with the existing vocational training programs of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Seventh. Retraining subsistence payments—section 16.

The amount is the same as the reported bill.

The authorized appropriation is placed on a 1-year basis to afford the Ways and Means Committee an opportunity to coordinate and possibly consolidate this program with the basic unemployment compensation program.

Recapitulation follows:

³ New, duplicating program on subsidized basis (3½-percent interest rate).

⁴ Added authority to existing HIFA program with a priority for redevelopment areas. Loans not on subsidized basis (4½-percent interest rate).

The substitute bill should be seriously considered and adopted when offered in the Committee of the Whole.

(Mr. WIDNALL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOLLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MARSHALL].

(Mr. MARSHALL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Speaker, the people who live in the towns and village of the Cuyuna Range in my district are greatly interested in the legislation before us today.

This area has suffered substantial and persistent unemployment and these communities are suffering real hardship. Unemployment has reached almost 13 percent of the available working force. According to the report of the Committee on Banking and Currency, this is one of the areas that meets the criteria for mandatory designation as a redevelopment area under the bill.

In this area, iron ore mining constitutes a major source of direct employment and income and provides an important basis for secondary employment in transportation, construction, and various services. Because of the geographic concentration of the industry in counties like Aitkin and Crow Wing, any change in manpower requirements is intensified within the counties rather than absorbed in the rest of the State's economy.

The committee has implied that the success of this bill will depend in large measure upon local initiative and local cooperation. I can assure the House, Mr. Chairman, that the people of the Cuyuna Range are prepared to assume their share of the responsibility for a constructive and coordinated attack on their own economic problems. With the assistance contemplated in this bill, they should have an opportunity to undertake programs to develop diversified industries which can stabilize the local economy.

The communities concerned have themselves given a great deal of study and thought to their own problems. A Cuyuna Range Distressed Areas Committee was formed to develop all of the pertinent facts. This committee prepared for us a comprehensive report of economic conditions on the range and the potentials for improvement. Each conclusion was carefully documented by local sources.

Mr. Speaker, under unanimous consent I insert the summary of this report be included in the RECORD since it states in a clear and concise manner the case for Federal cooperation in this vital area. The documentary material which supports this summary has been included in the hearings on the bill:

REPORT OF CUYUNA RANGE DISTRESSED AREA COMMITTEE

ECONOMIC HISTORY OF CUYUNA RANGE

The villages and towns within the area known as the Cuyuna Range were conceived when the mining companies began removing iron ore from the ground. Their continuing existence to date is solely because ore has been mined. There are no other industries in the area. For all practical purposes, there is no farming and cannot be because the soil is inadequate. While there are some lakes in the area, they are largely unsuitable for resort purposes.

With the advent of taconite and the use of high grade foreign ores in the middle fifties, mining operations on the Cuyuna Range have steadily decreased.

FINDINGS OF THE COMMITTEE

The committee has attempted to objectively determine the present economic condition of the area and what may be expected to develop in the future. These findings are based on actual surveys, interviews with people who can best advise on specific fields of endeavor, and undisputed facts.

(a) Present and future employment at the mines

To set a base for what constitutes "normal" as far as mining operations are concerned, the years 1952 through 1957 were used. The postwar boom had ended and the Nation's economy was generally stable.

For the past 3 years the output of ore tonnage has been approximately 50 percent of normal and the estimate of what 1961 will be is less than 33½ percent. Overburden removal will be 29 percent of normal.

The result will be that less than 50 percent of the families directly dependent on employment at the mines will not be called back to work. Those called back will work 3- and 4-day weeks. The total man-hours to be worked will be less than 36 percent of normal. There are strong indications that the estimated tonnage removal will be even less than what we estimate because even as this report is being completed, Pickands Mather, one of the large Cuyuna operators, announced the closing of Michigan underground mines.

All of the companies have drastically reduced or transferred their office, engineering, and management personnel. The usual preparatory winter work such as drilling and removal of overburden is nonexistent.

Unemployment is widespread, with approximately 13 percent of the available labor force working. Because of high average age of this labor force and because unemployment in Brainerd and other nearby towns is high, other employment in other areas is extremely difficult to attain.

Records of the Minnesota Department of Employment Security reflect that unemployment claims of workers in the Iron-ton and Aitkin offices (which service most Cuyuna Range workers) are increasing rapidly and will go even higher. Also, there will be a large increase in exhaustion of the amount available to the workers.

Funds available to supplement unemployment compensation, which the union administrators, comes from the mining companies at the rate of 3 cents per man-hour.

This fund is rapidly dwindling so that within another month little or nothing will be available. Obviously, the fund cannot be replenished until work is available. This, coupled with the fact that unemployment compensation paid by reason of the large layoffs of July and August of 1960 will be exhausted early in 1961, means that many miners will be without funds of any kind.

As a result of this, the county welfare board is girding itself for a tremendous number of new claims for direct relief particularly for maintenance. Mr. Buth, who is the executive secretary of welfare, has indicated that almost all of the increases given for direct relief in the last 3 years has gone to the Cuyuna Range and that there is a direct correlation between direct relief granted and number of man-hours worked on the Cuyuna Range; although he couldn't support this conclusion without a great deal of work.

(b) Derivative effect on "Main Street"

Retail sales (except for staples) are down as much as 60 percent from 1957 and it appears the bottom has not been reached.

Accounts receivable continue to mount and average length of time before payment and delinquencies soar. Young married men who can't get work at the mines because of lack of seniority have to be satisfied with part-time odd jobs which cannot pay enough to sustain their families. Everyone is affected.

Real estate is not selling. Because office, engineering, and administrative workers are leaving, many houses are available without takers. Lower values result.

Area lending agencies are extremely wary of making home loans (exhibit H) and short-term personal and business loans.

For the past several years, a very hard working committee backed by an eager Cuyuna Range populace has been raising funds for a badly needed community hospital. An effort was made to qualify for funds under the Hill-Burton Act and all of the requirements were met, including local raising of funds. The application, however, has been rejected because the mining future of the area is uncertain and the mining companies have not contributed, but have taken a "wait and see" attitude.

(c) Taxation

Records of the Crow Wing County auditor show that in the last 8 years the percentage of taxes levied on minerals and mining property has decreased 10.9 percent. Expenses of operating the school districts, villages, and towns has increased and so the loss of mining tax revenue has increased the levy on nonmining property. This further depresses value of nonmining property and will make nonmining tax delinquencies larger.

(d) Miscellaneous forecast

There is no evidence that the mining companies plan to build plants which will process Cuyuna Range ore so that it can compete with taconite and high grade foreign ore. Economically, it is presently unsound to market the existing ore in normal quantities.

Unemployment will be widespread. Benefits under the unemployment compensation plan and under the union management contract will all but disappear. Businesses dependent on sales to the mining companies will not be able to operate. Retail stores will be in desperate condition. All segments of the area, which consists of over 10,000 people, will suffer.

CONCLUSIONS OF THE COMMITTEE

(a) The Cuyuna Range, consisting of roughly the easterly one-half of Crow Wing County, Minn., is presently in a perilous economic condition.

(b) That the area is a "one industry area" and the industry does not contemplate anything close to a normal year for 1961 or beyond.

(c) That the area has a large, able labor force presently unemployed.

(d) That the area is suitable for new industry.

(e) That Federal aid is of vital necessity at this time and for the foreseeable future.

Respectfully submitted.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment in certain economically distressed areas.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] will be recognized for 1½ hours and the gentleman from New York [Mr. KILBURN] will be recognized for 1½ hours.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN].

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, we have before us S. 1 with a committee amendment. This bill is designed to meet the problems facing communities which have suffered heavy and chronic unemployment. It provides for technical assistance and financial aids mainly in the form of loans from the Federal Government. This bill is truly a bipartisan bill in this, that the members of Subcommittee No. 2 of the Committee on Banking and Currency, held hearings for more than 2 weeks on this bill. Every member of that committee participated actively in questioning each and every witness. All the members participated in the writing and rewriting of this bill. The members of the minority party were very helpful in suggesting constructive amendments to this particular bill, and we accepted a number of amendments that were rec-commended by the minority members. They were good amendments and helped the bill. I feel this bill is really a bipartisan bill because the members of the committee from both sides of the aisle helped in writing it and caused it to be labeled the best bill of its kind that has come before Congress. You heard the speeches made here under the rule, and Members who are violently opposed to this bill admit it is the best bill of its kind that has been before the Congress. They all admit that the anti-piracy provisions are as near perfect as it is possible to write them, and particularly in writing these provisions of the bill, we had the constructive help, assistance and guidance of the minority members for which we are grateful.

Let me say at the outset, this bill by itself is not intended to solve all of our problems. The primary reliance is still on private enterprise and local initiative. The purpose is to create conditions in which private industry will prosper. This bill will simply enable the Federal Government to meet its responsibilities toward these places and the people there who suffer from unemployment and underemployment.

Also, this bill is not primarily an anti-recession measure. It is aimed at the depression conditions which exist in certain communities in good times and in bad.

This bill, if passed and administered properly, and it is as effective as we expect it to be, will probably render unnecessary the passage later of a public works bill. If we do not do something now to stop these pockets of unemployment and underemployment we are going to have such a clamor for a general public works bill that Congress will be compelled to pass it. The step we are taking here will probably render unnecessary—we hope it will—the passage of a general public works bill.

And may I invite your attention to the fact that in this bill the localities, cities, and States having industry now are protected in that we have adequate anti-piracy provisions in this bill. But if you were to have a general public works bill there would be no anti-piracy provisions; it would be a question of catch as catch can.

Mr. HIESTAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HIESTAND. I would like to ask the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee if in the deliberations of the committee on this bill there was any discussion or study or report on the causes of the depression in these areas?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes; most of our hearings were directed to the question the gentleman raises.

Mr. HIESTAND. Can the gentleman refer me to them?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes. I think you will find them in the hearings which are printed and available now.

Mr. HIESTAND. But not in the report?

Mr. PATMAN. Not in the report, but you will find the testimony in the hearings of all the witnesses. This subject was gone into rather fully.

Mr. REUSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. REUSS. I would call the attention of the gentleman from California [Mr. HIESTAND] to the sections of the report on pages 9 and 10 which are entitled "Causes of Localized Chronic Unemployment," and summarize some of the specifics. I think the gentleman will find it will constitute an answer to his question.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FLOOD. I would like to say to the gentleman that under the last five Presidents there have been special commissions appointed by the President; there have been committees of Congress, there have been special committees of each of the two houses of Congress over a period of many years. There is in Washington today a vast library of the most complete, the most analytical, the most statistical and diagrammatic information imaginable on the basic, fundamental causes of these unfortunate economic tendencies.

Mr. PATMAN. I thank the gentleman.

Assistance provided by this bill is aimed at creating a net increase in employment and production. The bill explicitly states that none of the plant loans which would be provided are to be used to transfer jobs from one place to another. The idea is to enable communities which now have basic economic problems to share in our rising standard of living and our general uptrend in production and employment. Every year between $30 and $40 billion is invested in new plant and equipment by American business firms. On the average, about $7 billion of this is for new plants in new locations and create new jobs. With the technical assistance and the modest amount of financial aid in this bill, these hard-hit areas of substantial and persistent unemployment will be able to share fully in that tremendous flow of investment.

The program embodied in S. 1 is not a novel idea. Bills of similar intent and with generally similar provisions have been before the Congress for more than a decade. In fact, area redevelopment bills have passed both House of Congress on two occasions. In 1958, an area redevelopment bill was sent to the President but met with a pocket veto. Just last year, another bill passed the Congress but it too was vetoed. In spite of this, it should be kept in mind that the principle of area redevelopment legislation has been endorsed by the platforms of both parties. While there have been differences on the dollar amounts involved, there is no question on either side of the Aisle that this is a serious problem and one which needs and deserves Federal attention.

The bill now before us embodies the administration's views on this subject. It is substantially identical with the bill, H.R. 4659, introduced by the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the Honorable Brent Spence. The bill, with some amendments adopted in the Committee, was reported by an overwhelming vote of 20 to 6.

It is indeed pleasing that now at last we can expect that an area redevelopment bill will become law and the program will get underway. The delays of the past have cost us dearly both in a cold dollars and cents calculation of the cost of unemployment compensation and relief payments and in terms of the much greater cost of human suffering and the waste of our resources. Over the years, the need for this legislation has increased. Many of the areas which would benefit have suffered unemployment and underemployment for more than a decade. We have in the past witnessed dramatic changes in our economy and those changes are still occurring today. In fact, they are a permanent feature of our economy.

I do not believe that there is any need to go into an analysis of the economic changes which give rise to this problem. They have been spelled out in thousands of pages of testimony before congressional committees and they are summarized in our own committee report. Moreover, they have been directly experienced in the home districts of many of our colleagues here in the House today. These changes include dramatic technological improvements which have greatly increased efficiency and reduced the manpower needed in many lines of employment. We have witnessed a revolution in agriculture which has enabled us to produce record-breaking crops with only a fraction of the number of workers once used for a lower level of production. We have witnessed similar revolutions in other lines, such as coal mining. Another important cause is the shift in demand, as for example, from coal to oil and natural gas for many purposes. Just in the past decade we have seen changes in military requirements from manned aircraft to missiles which has already hit hard at a number of communities where the manufacture of aircraft had built up to high levels under the pressure of World War II and the cold war. There is also a constant migration of industry. The classic example of this is the trend that began in the 1920's in the textile industry from North to the South. A recent newspaper story quoted that between 1949 and 1957 overall employment in textiles grew by 8 percent but employment in that industry in the 14 southern States grew by 40 percent. Now we are witnessing further changes in demand, technology and location that are resulting in the closing of plants in the South.

I hope it is well understood by now that this bill will not only benefit those communities which have chronic unemployment but will help the entire Nation. Every community in our country is dependent on other communities as markets for the goods and services which they produce. Obviously, no steel-producing center or auto-manufacturing center or household-appliance center exists just to serve a local market. They exist to serve the entire Nation and they need the entire Nation to buy their products. Anything that we can do to bring these many areas of low income up to the national norm will increase overall demand and make the entire Nation more prosperous. Moreover, the goods produced by areas which now have idle manpower will help to meet the needs of other communities. If we fail to help the growing number of areas which are suffering basic economic problems it might well lead to a serious slack in demand and a rise in layoffs throughout the economy. I am sure that most of my colleagues will recall how the depression conditions in agriculture served to undercut the markets of industry and was one of the factors that lead us into the great depression of the 1930's.

The need for Federal legislation to meet these problems is perfectly clear. This is not just a local problem but truly a national problem. Federal responsibility to combat unemployment was explicitly assumed in the Full Employment Act of 1946. Moreover, as I have said, both parties endorse the principle of Federal assistance to these areas. In our Nation the Federal Government cannot stand by and ignore the problems of any important segment of the economy. While it is private enterprise which must supply the jobs and the local communities which must supply the initiative, the Federal Government's role is still an important one. It can and it should supply expert advice and technical assistance to help these areas plan their own rehabilitation. It also must provide some credit and other financial assistance. It is obviously illogical to expect a community which has suffered high unemployment, and along with it the erosion of its own tax base, to finance its own redevelopment. If these redevelopment programs are to be realized, they will often need a little push through Federal financial assistance. The funds provided in this bill are in the nature of seed money. They will help to get redevelopment programs underway.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to summarize briefly the contents of this bill. S. 1 would create a new program under the Secretary of Commerce to help designated areas which suffer substantial and persistent unemployment or which have heavy concentrations of low income families and chronic underemployment.

Under S. 1, the Secretary of Commerce will designate as redevelopment areas those places which he determines have had substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. This will include those areas in which the rate of unemployment, excluding temporary or seasonal unemployment, is 6 percent or more; has exceeded the national average by 50 percent for 3 of the 4 preceding calendar years, or 75 percent for 2 of the 3 preceding years, or 100 percent for 1 of the 2 preceding years; and has averaged 6 percent or more during each of the qualifying years. The Secretary of Commerce will also designate as redevelopment areas those areas which do not meet the above requirements but which he finds are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income farm families and have substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment.

According to the latest figures, 20 major labor markets and 83 smaller ones would be included in the requirement for mandatory designation. In addition, other areas, particularly rural places, would be designated according to criteria sent forth in the bill.

These latter areas, the rural places, represent a major national problem. In some of them poverty and waste of manpower has persisted for many decades. The Secretary of Agriculture, in testimony given before my subcommittee, stated that the underemployment in rural areas is equivalent to the full unemployment of 1,400,000 men. That is, if our statistics could take into account the idle time of rural workers our unemployment today instead of being 5.7 million would be 7.1 million.

Mr. Chairman, the legislation we are discussing today can have a far-reaching effect in the rural communities and small towns of this Nation.

As we all know, technological change and mechanization have had a severe impact on our farm population. In recent years, many thousands of farm families have been forced to close up their farms and move to town in search of work. Other thousands of families have come to depend almost entirely on the income earned through work off the farm in nearby factories and other enterprises. The Census Bureau informs us that there are now 3.7 million farms in the Nation, a drop of more than a million in just 5 years. Yet in 1959 nearly half of all our farmers worked parttime off their farms. And 3 out of 10 worked off their farms 100 days or more. About one-third of the income of farm people is now derived from nonfarm sources, principally jobs in local industry.

The point of all these statistics is that the growth of rural industries is of crucial importance to the Nation's farming families. Without local jobs and other nonfarm opportunities, to supplement their incomes, many thousands of farm families would be forced to sell out and join the migration to our already crowded cities.

The bill requires that an overall program for the economic development of a redevelopment area must be submitted to and approved by the Secretary of Commerce before financial assistance is made available under the bill. Any project for which financial assistance is sought must be consistent with the approved program. Appropriations of $4.5 million a year are authorized by the bill to provide technical assistance to redevelopment areas to enable them to explore methods of expanding their industrial resources. The Secretary may also furnish such assistance to other areas which need it to alleviate or prevent excessive unemployment or underemployment.

This economic program is a vital feature of the bill. By itself it will enable many communities to attract industry by presenting a reasoned case for the potential value of the area. Also, if it is found that Federal assistance is needed, it will be a guarantee that the Federal funds will be put to a good use and not dissipated.

To help these communities get their redevelopment programs underway, the bill provides for Federal loans. These loans can be used for the acquisition of land, the construction of plant facilities and in exceptional cases, for the purchase of machinery. They can have terms up to 25 years with a possible 10-year extension. The Federal grant cannot exceed 65 percent of the total cost with the balance to come from the local government or community organization and from private lenders. The interest rate is established by a formula contained in the bill which currently works out to 4½ percent for a 20-year loan. The bill authorizes appropriation of $200 million for these loans, $100 million for urban areas and $100 million for rural areas.

In addition, the bill recognizes that adequate local public facilities are essential to industrial expansion. Modern industry is highly dependent on adequate sewer and water facilities and other community works. However, many depressed areas cannot afford to expand under present conditions. In fact, they are often hard-pressed even to maintain existing facilities. Here they are caught in a vicious circle—adequate public facilities are needed for industrial expansion but the community cannot afford these facilities until the expansion takes place. To overcome this problem, the committee amendment provides for Federal loans and grants. The loans could be for the full cost of the work and would be repayable over a term of 40 years with a possible 10-year extension. The interest rate would be based on a formula which fully reflects the actual cost of money to the Federal Government, plus one-fourth of 1 percent to cover expenses of administration. This is the well-known "college housing" interest rate under which the Federal Government has already loaned $1.6 billion. Currently it works out to 3½ percent. The bill authorizes $100 million for appropriation for these loans. In addition, the bill authorizes Federal grants to those communities which cannot provide the local public works entirely upon a loan basis. These grants are on an approximately 2 to 1 matching basis. They can cover up to 65 percent of the net difference between the total cost of a project and the loans raised from any source to finance the project. The bill authorizes the appropriation of $75 million to make these grants.

The bill also assures that the benefits of the urban renewal program will be available to depressed industrial communities. While that program is aimed primarily at clearing residential slums, there has been a growing recognition of the need to eliminate blighted business districts as well. Therefore, on past occasions, the Congress has authorized the use of a certain proportion of the capital grant authority for this program for nonresidential slum clearance projects. The committee amendment provides that not more than 10 percent of any future capital grant authority made available to the urban renewal program may be used for nonresidential projects in designated depressed areas. By this means these communities will be able to make available industrial sites and at the same time restore local tax bases and local revenues. Also, the bill extends the program of planning grants authorized by the Housing Act of 1954 to redevelopment areas.

A highly important provision of the bill is the aid extended for occupational training of workers in redevelopment areas. This would be highly fruitful in the long run. Many workers in these places are already skilled but the skills which they have acquired are no longer in demand. They need to learn new trades in order to find employment. To meet this need the bill authorizes annual appropriations of $4.5 million to assist State vocational training programs. Also, because in 45 States, workers undergoing training are not eligible for unemployment compensation the bill authorizes annual appropriations of $10 million for subsistence payments equal to the rate of State unemployment compensation payments.

The bill also makes permanent the authority for the Small Business Administration to make loans to local development corporations to finance construction or expansion of plants. Without this provision that authority would expire on June 30 this year.

All in all, this bill authorizes appropriations of $394 million, of which $300 million is for loans to be repaid with interest. Viewed in perspective this is a relatively small amount. It would be less than one-half of 1 percent of our total Federal budget. It is less than one-tenth of 1 percent of our total gross national product even in our present recession circumstances. It is far less than Congress has voted on many occasions for comparable aid to foreign countries. It is small, but it is extremely important. With this bill we will have a comprehensive and concentrated effort to end the suffering in areas of chronic heavy unemployment and add many times that amount to our total national output. Mr. Chairman, I know that many Members on both sides of the aisle will vote for this measure. I am hopeful that it will be approved by a substantial majority.

SUMMARY OF S. 1 (AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT), AS REPORTED TO THE HOUSE

S. 1 establishes a new program to provide new employment opportunities in areas suffering substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time, and in other areas which have heavy concentrations of low-income families and substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment.

The bill provides for an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce. The administrator will be appointed by the President, subject to Senate confirmation and will perform such duties in the execution of the act as the Secretary may assign.

The bill requires that an overall program for the economic development of a redevelopment area must be submitted to and approved by the Secretary of Commerce before financial assistance is made available under the bill. Any project for which financial assistance is sought must be consistent with the approved program. Appropriations of $4.5 million a year are authorized by the bill for providing technical assistance to designated redevelopment areas to enable them to explore methods of expanding their industrial resources. The Secretary may also furnish such assistance to other areas which need it to alleviate or prevent excessive unemployment or underemployment.

Under S. 1, the Secretary of Commerce will designate as redevelopment areas those areas which he determines have had substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. This will include those areas in which the Secretary of Labor has found that the rate of unemployment, excluding temporary or seasonal unemployment, is currently 6 percent or more; has exceeded the national average by 50 percent for 3 of the 4 preceding calendar years, or 75 percent for 2 of the 3 preceding years, or 100 percent for 1 of the 2 preceding years; and has averaged 6 percent or more during each of the qualifying years. The Secretary of Commerce will also designate as redevelopment areas those areas which do not meet the above requirements but which he finds are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income farm families and have substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment.

The Secretary of Commerce may make loans to purchase or develop land and facilities for industrial or commercial usage within redevelopment areas out of two $100 million revolving funds. The loan cannot exceed 65 percent of the project cost, and there must be reasonable assurance of repayment. The maximum term of the loan will be 25 years—with a possible 10-year extension. The interest rate will be determined under a formula which would work out at 4⅓ percent currently for 20-year loans.

The bill also authorizes loans to provide needed public facilities in redevelopment areas, out of another $100 million revolving fund. These loans may have a maximum term of 40 years—with a possible 10-year extension—and an interest rate of 3½ percent currently. To help provide public facilities in redevelopment areas that are unable to undertake them without grant aid, grants are authorized, to be made out of appropriations of not more than $75 million. The grant is limited to that portion of the cost which cannot be financed through loans. Before such a Federal grant may be made, a non-Federal source must provide a matching grant, in the proportion of 35 percent, non-Federal to 65 percent Federal. Such loans and grants may be made only for projects that would improve the opportunities for establishing industries in the area.

The bill waives certain of the normal requirements of the urban renewal program, so that financial assistance may be extended under this program to clear sites in these areas for industrial and commercial development.

The bill also makes planning grants under section 701 of the Housing Act of 1954 available to counties and municipalities located in redevelopment areas. These grants are for surveys, land-use studies, and other planning work—excluding plans for specific public works.

Stepped-up programs for retraining unemployed workers in these redevelopment areas will also be provided. The need for such training will be determined by surveys conducted under the supervision of the Department of Labor. The actual training will be provided in the normal case by the State vocational education agencies, with assistance from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Annual appropriations of $4.5 million are authorized for this purpose.

For unemployed or underemployed workers who are receiving vocational training under the bill and who are not receiving or seeking unemployment compensation, the bill would authorize payments equal to the State unemployment compensation payments, for up to 16 weeks. Appropriations of $10 million annually would be authorized for this purpose.

The bill also makes permanent the authority—now due to expire on June 30 of this year—for the Small Business Administration to make loans to local development corporations to finance construction or expansion of plants.

The following table summarizes limits on new money authorizations in the bill:

	Million
Plant loans (sec. 5(a) areas)-----	$100.0
Plant loans (sec. 5(b) areas)-----	100.0
Public facility loans-----	100.0
Public facility grants-----	75.0
Technical assistance (annually)-----	4.5
Occupational training (annually)-----	4.5
Retraining subsistence payments annually)-----	10.0

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON THE AREA REDEVELOPMENT BILL

Question. What is the purpose of this bill?

Answer. The bill provides Federal financial assistance and technical aids to supplement the efforts of State and local government and private enterprise to cure the economic problems which have resulted in high and chronic unemployment in good times and in bad in certain communities.

Question. About how many areas are involved?

Answer. Under the terms of the bill, 20 major labor market areas and 83 smaller ones would automatically be eligible for assistance. In addition, an undetermined number of rural areas and some additional urban areas would be designated according to the guidelines set forth in the legislation.

Question. Why is it that these places suffer from unemployment even when the national economy is prosperous?

Answer. There are a number of reasons. Broadly speaking, these reasons include technological change such as the shift of railroads from coal to oil; migration of industry such as the movement of the textile industry from the Northeast to the South; depletion of resources as in the case of some timberlands, coal and iron and other ores; widely fluctuating seasonal employment requirements as in the case of tobacco manufacturing centers; and overdependence on a single crop or on farming in general as in many rural areas, particularly in the Southeastern States.

Question. What Federal aids are provided by this bill?

Answer. The bill would provide financial assistance, primarily loans, technical assistance for local economic programs, and vocational training help. In more detail, the bill would authorize for appropriation $100 million for loans for industrial and commercial facilities in urban depressed areas; $100 million for such loans in rural areas; $100 million for loans for local public facilities; and $75 million for partial grants, if necessary, for local public facilities. In addition it would authorize annual appropriations of $4.5 million for technical assistance, $4.5 million for occupational retraining, and $10 million for subsistence payments to those receiving technical retraining.

Question. Why is Federal aid needed?

Answer. The very fact of depressed economic conditions makes it difficult or impossible for local efforts to provide the money or raise the credit needed for the rehabilitation of existing plant facilities or the construction of new ones, and outside private capital is often reluctant to go into these areas. Moreover, there is a need for coordinated efforts in developing local economic programs and to provide workers in these areas with new skills.

Question. Can we afford this program?

Answer. There is every reason to expect that this program will return a profit to the Treasury in the long run. Even apart from our moral responsibility to those suffering from unemployment—a responsibility expressly assumed by the Full Employment Act of 1946—a cold dollars and cents analysis will probably show a profit. For one thing, the bulk of the funds provided are for loans to be repaid with interest. The successful operation of this program is bound to increase the revenues of every level of government—local, State, and Federal. Offset against this is the fact that there is a heavy cost for failure to take action. There are direct outlays for unemployment compensation and relief payments to the unemployed and the hidden costs of lost production.

Question. How do we know that the money will actually accomplish something and not be wasted?

Answer. Experience under local programs, such as those in Pennsylvania where local development groups and the State have worked together, shows that if credit is available much can be done to bolster the economic bases of these depressed communities. Moreover, before any financial assistance is extended under this program, the community must work out a general economic development program for the approval of the Secretary of Commerce. This program will have to show that there is good reason to believe that the aid sought will make a meaningful contribution toward long-term economic improvement for the area. If the economic program does not convince the Secretary, he will not authorize Federal loans and grants under the bill.

Question. Will this program take the place of local efforts?

Answer. This program is designed to assist and supplement local efforts, not take the place of them. The initiative for loan and grant assistance under this program must come from the community level.

Question. Why can't, or why doesn't, private enterprise restore these areas without Government aid?

Answer. Actually the program ultimately relies on private enterprise to provide the long-run solution to chronic unemployment in these places. The benefits provided in this bill are all aimed at creating conditions in which private enterprise can flourish. This includes not only the industrial loan funds but the assistance for community facilities and the aid for retraining workers.

Question. Will this aid be used to transfer plants from one place to another?

Answer. Absolutely not. There is a flat prohibition in the bill against using these loans to assist establishments relocating from one area to another. The program rests on the fact that billions of dollars are spent for new plant facilities every year in new locations. Given a modest amount of assistance to efforts of local community and business leaders, there are many opportunities to develop new employment opportunities in these areas for the benefit of the entire country.

Question. Why should the Federal Government finance plants in these areas; can't they get credit from private sources if they are sound?

Answer. The bill requires that there must be some private investment in every project financed with Federal help under the plant loans section. The Federal loan cannot exceed 65 percent of the project cost. Experience in Pennsylvania with this sort of program indicates that in many cases private investors or the State, or both, will provide 50 percent or more of the funds needed. Federal loans are limited to the amount which cannot be obtained from other sources.

So if private credit is available, on reasonable terms, it will be used. But in these areas credit tends to be tight, especially in areas which have already strained every resource to help themselves, so they must turn to the Federal Government for the additional credit they need.

Question. Is there enough money in the bill to do the job?

Answer. The financial assistance provided in this bill should be regarded as "seed" money. It is not expected to do the whole job itself. Primary reliance will continue to be on private enterprise. The assistance in the bill is aimed at getting local economic development programs under way.

Question. Will all of the designated areas share in these aids?

Answer. Probably all of them will benefit one way or another from the technical assistance and other aids in developing local economic programs. However, not all of them will need the financial assistance. Financial assistance will be extended only if the local economic program shows its need and if application is made for a project which the State and the Secretary approve.

Question. How will this help areas not designated as eligible?

Answer. Anything that can be done to improve employment and incomes in these places will increase total demand. In our closely interrelated economy every area is dependent on other areas for markets for the goods and services produced. Helping these depressed areas will mean the sale of more cars, more appliances, and other products. By the same token, if nothing is done, the lack of buying power in these areas may undercut general business activity and result in unemployment and stagnation in other communities.

Question. Wouldn't it be better if the people moved out of these depressed communities?

Answer. Actually a substantial amount of migration is taking place from these communities, but this is not an adequate answer to the problem. For one thing, many families, particularly older workers, are unwilling or unable to cut their ties from home and friends and move to strange communities. Moreover, business firms are often unable to move their investment out of the community except at a substantial loss.

A particular problem which shows the weakness of migration as a solution is the fact that many workers who have moved to another city to find employment, often leaving their family behind, discover that they have no seniority for job security in the new place. They are among the first laid off and often have no recourse but to return home.

In a broader view, our country can ill afford the abandonment of the tremendous investment in schools, roads, homes, industry and commercial buildings, and the like, which would be entailed by wholesale abandonment of these communities.

Question. Is area redevelopment legislation a new idea?

Answer. It is not. Bills for this purpose have been before the Congress for several years and in fact two of them have passed but met with Presidential vetoes. However, the basic principles of area redevelopment legislation have bipartisan support and have been endorsed in the platforms of both parties.

Question. Why is aid for public facilities necessary?

Answer. Adequate public facilities, particularly water and sewer works, are highly important to industry expansion. However, many of these communities are unable to finance them on their own. High unemployment poses a heavy burden of relief assistance while at the same time tax sources are eroded. Therefore, the bill provides for Federal loans and, where necessary, partial grants to finance local facilities which will improve the opportunities for business growth.

Question. Is the interest rate for these public facility loans a subsidized rate?

Answer. There is no subsidy involved. The rate is based on the average interest paid by the Treasury on the outstanding public debt plus one-quarter of 1 percent. Currently this means an interest rate of 3½ percent. It is the same rate as applies now to college housing loans.

Question. Can't these communities borrow more cheaply on their own?

Answer. Because of the Federal tax exemption on the interest on local bonds, it will be possible for some communities to borrow more cheaply on their own and where this is true, the bill directs them to do so. Federal loans may be used only where the community cannot borrow more advantageously through their own securities.

Question. What do you mean by "underemployment"?

Answer. In our industrial areas, people normally have a full-time job or none at all. But in rural areas, many farmers must have part-time jobs off the farm to earn an adequate living. In 1959, nearly a third of our farmers worked off their farms 100 days or more. There are hundreds of rural counties where these part-time jobs are not available, and farmers cannot earn adequate incomes. These are the "underemployed" who must be helped.

Question. What is the extent of underemployment in rural areas?

Answer. Secretary of Agriculture Freeman testified that "There is enough underemployment each year among workers 20 to 64 years of age who live on farms to equal a full year of unemployment for 1,400,000 workers. That is to say—if we did not have so many people underemployed in agriculture, the Nation would have roughly 1,400,000 more unemployed workers than are currently reported."

Question. How does underemployment affect farmers' incomes?

Answer. More and more farm families are found in the lowest income group—the lowest one-fifth in the Nation. In 1959, 36 percent of farm families had incomes below $2,000.

Question. How will the bill help these rural areas?

Answer. The same aids are available for these areas as for industrial areas, except, of course, for the urban renewal assistance which would not be applicable. There is a special revolving fund of $100 million for industrial and commercial projects in rural areas, and the $75 million public facility grant fund will probably be of particular benefit to our smaller towns.

Question. What would be the impact of the vocational training program in a rural area?

Answer. Many workers, particularly younger ones, want to enter trades and occupations other than farming. The vocational training provision of the bill would be an important added resource providing such individuals with opportunities to learn new skills.

Question. Why isn't the existing rural development program enough?

Answer. The rural development program through regular agricultural agencies is providing help to local business, farm and other individuals to permit economic development. The area redevelopment bill would provide intensified assistance with additional resources and broader scope for designating rural areas. Under this bill some local development programs would have additional capital for industrial development; vocational training programs would be speeded up; and the technical assistance provisions would provide additional resources for basic economic studies and technical advice in special agricultural, industrial and marketing development projects.

Question. What urban renewal aids are provided for?

Answer. Under the urban renewal program, the Federal government can make grants to communities to pay up to two-thirds of the net cost of clearing slum areas. While the program is aimed primarily at residential blight, a certain amount has been authorized for redeveloping blighted business areas. The bill waives certain requirements of the regular program to make sure that depressed industrial areas can take advantage of this assistance.

Question. Why is this urban renewal aid important?

Answer. First, it will make it possible for communities to provide sites for industrial development. Secondly, by clearing away rundown business districts and replacing them with new plants and offices, the community's tax base will be strengthened.

Question. How will the Department of Labor decide what type of training is needed in redevelopment areas?

Answer. The basic information will be gathered through the State employment security offices. There are now 1,800 of these offices throughout the country, operating at the grassroots level. They have had 25 years' experience, working with the Department of Labor and community groups, in gathering information about the labor force, including the information needed to determine what types of training can result in useful jobs for idle workers.

Question. Can you accomplish much with retraining?

Answer. Yes. This may prove to be one of the most constructive features of the bill, because it should provide permanent solutions to the occupational problems of many people. There are vacancies even in depressed areas which men or women with special skills can fill. This is evident from success in placing graduates from some of the technical vocational schools. Moreover, if the unemployed do get specific training, they may find it easier later on to get jobs in some other nearby communities.

Question. Who will conduct the training?

Answer. Here again, existing State and local agencies will be used, for the most part. There is a well-established Federal-State vocational education training program. This will be expanded under the bill, with increased Federal assistance to the State vocational education boards for stepped-up training in redevelopment areas. There will also be some on-the-job training. Occupational training under the bill will require cooperation among the various representative groups in the community—the school system, the employment service, management, and labor—both in appraising the skills that are needed and in helping to plan realistic training courses for those skills.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL], has announced that he will offer his bill (H.R. 5943) as a substitute amendment for the committee bill.

The Widnall amendment increases plant loans for industrial areas by 50 percent. At the same time, it narrows the criteria for designating these areas, and completely eliminates aid to rural areas. It also eliminates, or makes unworkable, or puts a 1-year expiration date on most of the other assistance offered by the bill, including assistance for public facilities, urban renewal, and occupational training.

The farm areas would be cut out completely, and told to settle for a $500,000 study of their problems. Their problems have been studied for years. They need action, not more study.

Also, grants for public facilities would be eliminated completely.

The rest of the damage would be done in the name of "coordinating" the new program with existing programs. In the case of public facility loans, this "coordination" results in forcing the chronically depressed areas to seek assistance under a 5-year-old program which has accomplished very little. Chronically depressed areas, as well as the less-hard-hit "areas of substantial labor surplus" have a priority today for assistance under this program. But the interest rate has been so high it has been of little value. But, for what it is worth, it is available today, for depressed areas as well as more prosperous communities. The Widnall amendment would impose a completely unworkable "antipirating" restriction on this program; a restriction that even the Eisenhower administration opposed. The result would be that there would be no more public facility loans for any community, depressed or not, if the Widnall amendment were adopted.

An even stranger result would follow for urban renewal. Under the Widnall amendment, the same "antipirating" restriction would be placed on urban renewal assistance for chronically depressed areas, but not for prosperous cities who can get assistance under the regular program today for clearing industrial slums.

Again in the name of "coordination," the Widnall amendment would terminate assistance for occupational training after June 30, 1962. The same death sentence would be imposed on subsistence payments for workers being trained.

Under unanimous consent I include in the RECORD at this point a more detailed discussion of these points.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST WIDNALL SUBSTITUTE (H.R. 5943)

First. It eliminates help for rural areas.

The Widnall amendment increases plant loans for urban areas by 50 percent—$50 million—and eliminates or makes unworkable most of the provisions which would help farm areas. It eliminates completely the committee bill's authorization of $100 million for plant loans in rural areas, and the $75 million authorization for grants of public facilities, which would be particularly helpful to smaller communities in outlying areas.

Instead, the farmer is told to be content with a study. The problems of underemployment in rural areas have been studied for years; it's time to act.

The committee bill is criticized because the criteria for designating rural areas are "loose and meaningless." And yet last year, when specific criteria were specified, they were attacked because they showed the South had the highest concentrations of low-income farm families and low-income farms. This bill has seven criteria for designating rural areas, and the Secretary of Agriculture has testified that they will work well. See appendix B, page 19 of the committee report. The data for underemployment in rural areas are not as advanced as the data for unemployment in industrial areas, and so the criteria for designating rural areas must be more flexible. But we shouldn't penalize the farmer for defects in our statistics. The Department of Agriculture has enough data now to identify some of the worst areas. They are now studying the results of the 1960 census and will shortly have available more information to round out the picture. There is no need to wait for some indefinite time in the future to do something about this problem. The problem is here now, and we have enough information now to go ahead with a solution.

The Secretary of Commerce yesterday wrote a letter to Hon. BRENT SPENCE, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee and author of the committee bill, urging again that the rural areas be allowed to participate in this new redevelopment program. I quote from the Secretary's letter:

The bill which is now pending before the House contains provisions for loans in both urban and rural areas. It is my firm opinion that we should certainly deal with both the rural and urban economic problems which now confront many areas of the Nation. I see absolutely no justification to attempt to deal with one to the exclusion of the other—I see no justification, for example, for the deletion of the provision for rural assistance in order to concentrate solely on urban areas, as has recently been suggested. I recommend and urge that the basic proposals contained in S. 1 for both rural and urban assistance—as reported by your committee—be approved by the House.

The National Grange testified that from the long-range standpoint, this bill could be one of the most important pieces of agricultural legislation of the 87th Congress. The National Farmers Union and the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association also enthusiastically support it.

Second. Its antipirating provisions are unworkable and actually penalize depressed areas.

The committee bill has a general statement of policy to the effect that the bill is to be used to create new job opportunities—as opposed to transferring jobs from one place to another—and it has a specific prohibition against pirating in the plant loan section. This prohibition will work for plant loans, because when a plant loan is made, you can normally identify the business that will occupy the plant, and you can make sure that no one will be thrown out of work as a result. The Widnall amendment is identical with the committee bill in this respect.

But the Widnall amendment requires an impossible finding before urban renewal aid is given to clear a site in an industrial depressed area. No one can tell before a site is cleared who will move in to use the cleared land. And yet the Widnall amendment requires the Housing and Home Finance Administrator, before authorizing urban renewal help to clear the site, to determine whether it will assist business establishments in relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another. The Eisenhower administration opposed any such requirement, on the ground that it could not work—hearings on area redevelopment before Subcommittee No. 3 of the Banking and Currency Committee, 1959, page 443. The Widnall amendment would impose this unworkable requirement on aid to depressed areas, when no such requirement is imposed today under the regular urban renewal program on aid to prosperous cities.

The Widnall amendment also imposes the same unworkable restriction on public facility loans. But at least in this case, the amendment is consistent. It not only imposes the requirement on depressed areas, but it also imposes it on other more prosperous communities. Depressed areas as well as other communities can get assistance under the program today without being faced with this particular roadblock. The amendment makes sure that no community, depressed or not, will be able to get a loan under the public facility loan program.

Third. It would mean high interest rates on public facility loans. The Widnall amendment coordinates the public facility loan provisions of the bill with the existing public facility loan program. While the amendment does not specify the interest rate for these loans, the interest rate on this loan program has traditionally been so high that the program has been of very little value. Currently, the rate is $4\frac{1}{2}$ percent for general obligation bonds, and $4\frac{3}{8}$ percent for revenue bonds, with 30-year maturities. The Dow-Jones index on yields on tax-exempt municipal bonds, by comparison, has been averaging about $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent in the last week, according to the Wall Street Journal of Monday, March 27, 1961. You cannot expect a loan program to give any real help to depressed areas if it is priced that far above the market. The committee bill produces a rate close to the market: $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent.

It is claimed that the committee bill provides for a subsidized interest rate. And yet it is based on the average rate the Government pays on all its borrowing, plus a quarter of 1 percent to cover administrative expenses. An identical interest rate now prevails in the college housing loan program, and a lower interest rate is in effect for REA loans.

Fourth. Occupational training would be terminated June 30, 1962.

Despite the fact that even the opponents of the committee bill are conceding that occupational training would be one of the most valuable tools for helping depressed areas, and despite the fact that the Widnall amendment actually increases the authorization for appropriations for this purpose during the first fiscal year, it terminates this program on June 30, 1962, by limiting the authorized appropriations to fiscal year 1962.

The reason given for this death-sentence is that this will "force coordination within that time of this new program with the existing vocational training programs of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare." The committee bill, of course, provides for just such coordination. It provides that these training programs will normally be set up by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, through the State vocational education boards. It is hard to see how improved coordination will be achieved by killing the program after 1 year.

Similarly, the Widnall amendment kills off the retraining subsistence payments after 1 year. The reason given is that this will allow the Ways and Means Committee to "coordinate and possibly consolidate this program with the basic unemployment compensation program." The fact is that these training payment are needed because under State law in 45 States unemployed workers are denied unemployment compensation while they are in training because they are not "available for work." This is a matter of State law which the Ways and Means Committee has no control over. But even if the Ways and Means Committee does have some plans to provide a better program next year, there is no reason to impose a death sentence on this program. It will be entirely feasible to enact improvements, if they are developed, without such a death sentence.

Fifth. It eliminates grants for public facilities.

The public facility grants authorized in Section 8 represent but a small portion of the committee bill in terms of dollars, but they could prove the most important part of the measure to those areas which qualify for them. Grants are to be made only in situations of extreme need. There will be a few places in the United States where all the energy and resources of local people will not suffice to attract a project vitally needed to strengthen the community's economic base.

The margin between failure and success might be very small, and Federal grants could be the only lever to lift community resources to a level where new enterprises can make a beginning. If all sources of financing, together with Government loans, are fully explored and found insufficient to meet a fully demonstrated need, then we should have in reserve at least the limited authority for Federal grants provided in the committee bill.

The proposal for grants in the committee bill is modest and well protected against possible abuse or waste. Section 3(e) authorizes a total appropriation not exceeding $75 million for public facility grants, and subsection (b) establishes four safeguards. These specify that grants shall be made only after the maximum local contribution has been made and found insufficient, only where the need is urgent and could not be otherwise undertaken, only for projects that assure permanent benefits, and finally, only for projects that are consistent with the approved development program. In any case, a matching State or local grant, equal to roughly half the Federal grant, will be required as a minimum.

Mr. Chairman, I desire to answer some of the statements that will be made and I therefore reserve the remainder of my time.

(Mr. PATMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I think this bill will do more harm than good. I do not think it will take care of the depressed areas of our country, which, of course, is what we all want to do.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SEELY-BROWN].

Mr. SEELY-BROWN. Mr. Chairman, this bill is certainly the best bill as such that has been reported by the committee covering this particular subject. Personally I feel that the Widnall suggestion, the Widnall amendment, or the Widnall substitute is even a better approach, therefore I expect to support the Widnall amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I am for Federal assistance to help those areas of our country which want and need help to recover from chronic unemployment and underemployment. This assistance should, to be effective, provide some long-range improvements in our economy. It is not intended to be a part of a program to help relieve a recession.

The list of those communities which apparently would qualify for Federal assistance includes three areas in Connecticut, one of which is in my district, which have lost jobs and which have been striving, with some success, through local and State efforts, to bring in industries that will provide new ones.

A helping hand for these communities and others like them, from the Federal Government is in order, to put more beef behind those who already have their shoulders to the wheel, and by which there is reasonable expectation that the job-producing complex can be put back on the track.

It was to help these communities that, during my previous service in Congress, I advocated and supported legislation for the assistance of depressed areas. I am eager to help them now.

The best way to do that, I am convinced after a thorough study, is to pass the Widnall substitute for S. 1.

The Widnall bill, H.R. 5943, which my friend from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] introduced on last Friday, will provide more loan assistance—50 percent more—for the construction of plants in truly depressed areas, it will provide more than double the amount of funds allocated for occupational training and retraining, and it will do all of this at a cost which will be a third less than the cost under S. 1.

Under the Widnall substitute, it is estimated that the cost will be $275 million; but the committee bill will cost the taxpayers at least $394 million.

Since the substitute which is now before us was introduced as an original bill last week by its sponsor, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL], and printed copies of the bill have been available for several days, it is unnecessary for me to go into a detailed comparison of the provisions of this bill with the committee bill.

There are some highlights about it, however, which should appeal to all Members of the House.

For loans, on a nonsubsidy basis, too, it should be pointed out, for the construction of plants in redevelopment areas, $150 million is provided in the Widnall substitute, as against $100 million in the committee bill.

For occupational training, which is the only help some of the unemployed in depressed areas will get out of Area Redevelopment legislation, $10 million is provided, which is more than double the $4.5 million in the committee bill. The Widnall bill provides the same amounts as the committee bill, for technical assistance to redevelopment areas and, for subsistence payments during retraining.

Not only is the overall total of loans authorized increased in the Widnall bill, as compared with the committee bill, but the truly depressed areas will not have to share benefits intended for them with areas which might include an entire State under the broad authority to designate redevelopment areas contained in the committee bill.

The Widnall substitute uses the term "labor market area" instead of "area," which appears in the committee bill, because Department of Labor statistics on unemployment are tabulated on this basis, and by using this term in the legislation before us, there will be correlation between the areas designated and the areas for which unemployment information is available.

In the Widnall substitute, a redevelopment area can be designated as such only after the chief executive of the State has requested such designation, so that the rights of the States are protected.

The loose and meaningless criteria for designation of rural development are eliminated. Under the committee bill, although it was evident from the testimony at the hearings that nobody had the faintest idea how it would work, half the counties in the country could be designated as redevelopment areas, and even Indian tribes are included.

The Widnall substitute gets down to earth on rural redevelopment, by removing the $100 million loaning capacity, and allotting $500,000 for a study by the Secretary of Agriculture so that he could come up with some kind of a workable program for rural areas for redevelopment.

The substitute bill also eliminates the duplication in authority to make loans for community facilities. The Community Facilities Administration of the Housing and Home Finance Agency already has full authority to make loans for all kinds of communities. The Widnall substitute takes out of the bill before us the $175 million for public facility loans and grants, and adds the $100 million for public facility loans to the Community Facilities Administration authority, with a priority for redevelopment areas.

The Widnall substitute makes 15 changes in the committee bill.

They are changes which are constructive, and which strengthen the bill. They would provide more dollars for redevelopment than the committee bill. They would provide the framework for adding jobs in areas where they are most needed.

I hope the substitute bill will be passed by the House, in place of the committee bill.

(Mr. SEELY-BROWN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HARVEY].

(Mr. HARVEY of Michigan asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HARVEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to S. 1 as it was reported out of committee and as Mr. PATMAN has presented it today. I would like to make clear at the outset that the purpose of this legislation is commendable, and as a Member of Congress from Michigan, one of the States to be affected by this legislation, I, too, desire to lessen human suffering and to get people back to work in these economically distressed areas. Contrary to what some people might say, there should be no question of whether our Federal Government should act to alleviate this type of unemployment, but rather only a question of how the Government should act. I certainly agree that not enough praise can be said for the many fine people in these areas who have tried diligently to help themselves out of their predicament, where natural resources have been depleted or industries have left. I do not mind saying that I have come to admire my colleague from Scranton, Pa., who sits on the same side of the aisle as I, and who in my mind probably best personifies the tremendous efforts of planning on the part of these communities to help themselves.

I do not believe, however, that this bill, the Spence bill, or now referred to as S. 1, is the proper legislation to put these communities back on their feet. It is important to remember that what we are trying to do is to give industry an incentive to build new plants and thereby create new jobs in these areas. This legislation starts with the erroneous assumption that there are numerous companies ready and willing to move into one of these depressed areas just as soon as arrangements can be made to find them a site and build them a plant. In other words, it is based upon the promise that the extension of credit is the key factor in the expansion of industry. I call to your attention that we have ample plant space in Michigan already built and unoccupied at the present time, and ours is only one instance where that is true. My point is that the extension of credit to build a plant is only one of many factors that persuade an industry to expand an existing plant, or to build a new plant. There are other factors just as important. These include the type of labor, markets, materials and services, transportation, as well as the local government and an intangible factor often referred to as business climate. During the subcommittee hearings on this subject, one of our witnesses testified that not more than 350 new plants a year are created. The representative of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce stated, and this should be obvious to us all, that there are already thousands of these industrial development agencies competing for these few new plants that are constructed each year. I call to your attention that almost all of these are presently advertising 100 percent financing for new plants. Quite properly then, we should conclude that credit is only one factor in locating a new industry.

I believe that it is important for Congress to recognize that there are other incentives to bring about the expansion of industry and the creation of new plants that are more important than simply extending credit. I know that I am digressing from the bill before us, but let us look for a minute at our policy with regard to depreciation of plant machinery and equipment. We only have to look to the north, to Canada, to see the tremendous growth of that economy in the next decade. Again, we need only look abroad to Europe to see the growth of these countries. It is time that we in Congress should change our thinking with regard to depreciation for tax purposes. We must begin thinking in terms of "useful life" of machinery rather than in terms of "physical life." We must think in terms of "replacement cost" and not "original cost." Inasmuch as I have introduced a bill which would make these changes in our tax laws, I was very happy to see an article recently appearing in one of the newspapers in my district quoting President Kennedy as "renewing his pledge to quickly receive tax reforms to help business update its plants." These simple changes in our tax laws I submit to you will do more toward bringing about new plants and new jobs than any depressed areas bill such as you have here.

Getting back to the Spence bill that we have before us, however, I would like to talk to you briefly about those features of the bill which I believe have merit and those features to which I object.

First. The industrial loan provision, section 6(a): There was testimony in our hearings that some of the areas who have been conducting these industrial development programs, for more than a decade, have been having difficulty raising local funds. Now I do not deny that extending credit for construction of a plant is some incentive to industry to expand. I do say, however, that the capital you are providing under this system is minor by comparison to the overall need. In other words, you are doing this the hard way. Much more capital for expansion would be provided by a realistic depreciation policy for tax purposes. The effects would be felt by industry immediately, as well.

Second. The retraining provision in section 16(a): The testimony at our hearings indicated that some States have conducted very worthwhile retraining programs. I read only last week of a very successful retraining program conducted by the Armour Co. and its union in Chicago without any help from the Federal Government whatsoever. I believe that retraining makes sense. I say so because rather than for a person to just sit idly by and receive unemployment benefits, I would much prefer to have him learn something at the same time. However, I call to your attention that no reasons have been shown why all of the States have not been conducting such retraining programs, nor if the Federal Government is to get into the act, why the retraining program should not be tied in with the legislation we just passed to extend unemployment compensation benefits for an additional period of time. We in the minority of the committee feel that although these features of the bill have some merit, they can better be accomplished by the methods which I have described to you.

The objectionable features of this bill in my judgment far outweigh any benefits rendered. One of the most objectionable features is certainly section 5(b), "rural development areas." No one knows what areas these are. Everyone agrees that complete discretion in designating these areas is invested in the Secretary. Listen to what Mr. Hodges and Mr. Freeman have to say:

Secretary HODGES. I agree with you that it is not as clear cut as would be desirable, and when you are dealing with a rural area it is not as specific, of course, as you have in your urban area. We would have to lean very heavily on the Secretary of Agriculture and his agency for their recommendations. We would have our own people doublechecking it to be sure of it.

Mr. SCRANTON. In other words, there is no limitation, as you see it, in the criteria as to number; is that correct?

Secretary FREEMAN. No, sir; I think this allows discretion as to that on the administrator.

Certainly, having these statements of Secretary Freeman in mind, we cannot justify handing over to him $100 million and let him determine wherever he wants to spend it.

Another equally objectionable feature of this bill is the provision for loans and grants for the construction of public facilities. Granting that public facilities are another factor considered by industry in locating a new plant, I point out to you that there are numerous communities throughout our Nation with such public facilities already constructed and with credit readily available, but which have, so far, been unsuccessful in attracting new industry.

As far as loans for public facilities are concerned, I call to your attention that the need has not been shown and, second, that we would be duplicating existing machinery. I say no need has been shown because, as we have set forth in our minority views, most of the areas have excellent credit. They are borrowing money as well, or better, than our Federal Government. I say that there is a duplication of machinery because we are already loaning money through the HHFA, the Community Facilities Administration, to communities all over the Nation for all types of public works projects. Just listen to this letter written to one of our communities from the HHFA, practically begging this community to borrow money to build any kind of a public works project:

Other policies which in the past restricted public facility loans to water, sewer, and gas projects have also been changed to provide financing for all types of public works, except schools, which the community is interested in placing under immediate construction.

Even a more objectionable aspect of these public facility loans, however, is the fact that this bill includes a subsidized interest formula. This is preposterous as far as I am concerned. Having just finished serving as mayor in Saginaw, Mich., a town of 100,000 persons, I say to you that I do not believe that any of our citizens, nor any in the United States, expect our Government to lend money at a lesser rate than they can borrow it. This just does not make sense. Only this last week our Federal Government converted some obligations for 3 to 5 years and paid from 3.98 percent to 4.09 percent interest. How can we then justify lending at 3½ percent? Not even Secretary Hodges asks this. Here is what he says:

I don't think it will make too much difference, sir, what communities could borrow money for because, keep in mind, you are dealing with communities that are in tough situations where money or credit is often not available at any interest rate.

Section 8 of the proposed bill, which provides for $75 million in grants for public facilities is just as objectionable. I heard it said that this bill would forestall the need for a huge public works program. On the contrary, that is just what this section of the bill is. A public works program cannot be justified on the basis of need. What are the communities in our district going to say who have already paid for these public facilities when they see our Government building them for free next door? Keep in mind that complete discretion is vested in the Secretary to decide what sort of facility, whether it be school, highway, public building, or any other project, where it will be built, or how much will be spent within the limits of the $75 million that we give him for a starter. This is poor legislation to end a recession, for the recession will be over by the time the project gets underway. I submit to you that for the Government to engage in a vast public works program is also highly inflationary, as well. I do not believe it can be justified under any circumstances today.

In summary, let me say this; I believe there are dangerous aspects to this bill other than those individual features I have pointed out. I would rather see us give industry incentive by a realistic depreciation policy, and conduct a retraining program where it belongs, than in a bill such as this, for I feel that this bill, itself, is a vast step toward socialized industry. I know that the cry of socialism has been raised for the last 30 years, but I call to your attention that where the Government begins to finance the plants, and where the Government determines where a plant shall be located, or denies such permission, is no less than the socialized industry that has been such a failure in England during the past years.

Much has been said about the anti-pirating provision in the bill. Neither Secretaries Hodges, Freeman, nor Goldberg felt that pirating could be eliminated entirely. No one as yet knows how to handle the situation where the company has a plant and built a new plant in a depressed area, then for reasons of its own decides to close the plant in the older established area. I was interested to read a clipping in the Wall Street Journal just the other day where Mr. Walter Reuther, the head of one of our largest unions, advocated that industry should be required to secure a permit or get clearance from the Federal Government before it should be permitted to move a plant. I call to your attention that this is just what we are doing in this legislation, and that it is, therefore, a big step toward socialized industry, which I am not prepared to accept. It is for these reasons that I oppose the Spence bill.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. REUSS].

Mr. REUSS. Mr. Chairman, the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN], has made his usual comprehensive and thoughtful statement in support of the bill S. 1 with the committee amendment. There is little to add to it.

But I want to address myself briefly to the bill's antipiracy clause. As the gentleman from Texas well said, this is the strongest antipiracy provision ever put into an area development bill. It was the particular task of many of us on the subcommittee and the full committee to see that the most apt language possible for this task was used. The main antipiracy provision is contained in section 6, and provides that no loan shall be made "to assist establishments relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another."

That, I submit, Mr. Chairman, effectively locks up the bill against any possibility of pirating industry from one area to another.

That the committee's intent might be even more abundantly clear, it is set forth on pages 4 to 6 of the committee report just what those words mean. Specifically, the bill itself and the committee report lay it down that if a plant is to be erected in a new locality, the locality of distress, no loan can be granted if it even appears that some time in the future this might cause a plant to be withdrawn or relocated from some other area. The Secretary of Commerce is expressly vested with the power to see to that.

Secondly, the words "totally or partially" in the amendment just read are defined so that the Secretary of Commerce is required reasonably to assure himself that the establishment of the branch is not going to cause any unemployment in the area where the original plant is located. The prohibition is absolute; it is clear. We do not believe it will inhibit the good that this bill will do, but we do want to make it clear, and we certainly have made it clear, that if action under this bill is going to cause unemployment, then the action is prohibited.

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REUSS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VANIK. I want to agree with what the gentleman has said. I shared with him great concern when we began consideration of this legislation that the industrial communities where industry was now established would not suffer in any way as the result of this legislation; and I am satisfied, as he is, that the language we have adopted in committee is the strongest possible language and that it is the furthest, I think, that every community can feel assured that there will be no piracy under the provisions of this act. I might add, we hope the administrator of the act will, when loans are made, provide as part of the loan contract that there will be some penalties for bad faith or subterfuge if any should be practiced by anyone who is seeking to take advantage of the loan benefits under the terms of this legislation.

Mr. REUSS. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REUSS. I am glad to yield to my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey, a member of the committee.

Mr. WIDNALL. I know the subcommittee and the full committee were greatly concerned with antipirating. I would like to ask the gentleman this question. With that evident concern, why was it not extended to the urban renewal section and to public facilities? In the substitute I have offered, it would cover both of those sections also, and I feel the committee bill has a few holes in it. It does not have that at the present time.

Mr. REUSS. The reason we thought it impractical to put anything into those sections is as follows. The urban redevelopment section, of course, is merely a section to be taken into consideration with the existing urban renewal and redevelopment provisions of the housing bill; and, as the gentleman well knows, there is no antipiracy section there because piracy is not really an issue. For example, we are redeveloping most of the major cities of this country. At the time of redevelopment, one cannot tell what plants may relocate in that area in the days to come. If we are going to try to engraft antipiracy provisions upon that section of the bill, I think it would tend to do away with the entire urban redevelopment program.

Mr. WIDNALL. I believe in the bill which was sent to the President last year, which was vetoed, there was such a clause covering urban renewal. Why was that removed this time?

Mr. REUSS. I do not know whether it was removed or not, because I do not recall whether it existed in the bill last year, but I repeat my answer to the gentleman. I yield to no one in my desire to find the strongest possible workable antipirating clause. The urban redevelopment program is a program independent of the area redevelopment act. Nowhere in the urban redevelopment program in general is there any antipiracy clause, and to add an antipiracy clause would not only produce an unbalancing effect applying as it would to only a small part of the urban redevelopment program, but I suggested that it is really not workable. How do you know when you tear down some old slum buildings in a city that five years later a plant may move into that area? The time to stop that plant from moving into the area, if it causes unemployment in the area of origin, is when it starts to talk turkey and wants to move to the new area.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REUSS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. The Eisenhower administration proposed this provision. In the hearings before our subcommittee in 1959 at page 443, it was stated that the Widnall amendment would impose this unworkable requirement on aid to depressed areas, when no such requirement is imposed today under the regular urban renewal program on aid to prosperous cities. So, it will not work, as the gentleman properly said. You cannot except these things. And to make a requirement that you must show that there will be no piracy is making it impossible, because you do not even know who you will deal with if you deal at all. It is just making a climate in the local community such that the industry will come there when you do not know whether industry will come or not.

Mr. REUSS. I would ask the gentleman from Texas from what the gentleman is reading.

Mr. PATMAN. The 1959 hearings, page 443. This was the Eisenhower administration talking.

Mr. REUSS. I thank the gentleman from Texas. So, if one wants to serve the Eisenhower policy, he would not insist on an antipiracy clause in the urban redevelopment or community facilities section.

Mr. SEELY-BROWN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REUSS. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. SEELY-BROWN. As one who appeared before the subcommittee in support of a strong antipiracy clause I am very pleased to see that you have included one in the bill as reported by the committee.

I wonder if before the gentleman's time expires he would make a few observations as to whether or not funds under this bill could be made available for such things as trade schools or schools in which trades can be taught? I would like to know whether or not there is anything in this bill which would prohibit that.

Mr. REUSS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas to answer the gentleman.

Mr. PATMAN. I do not believe it is in the bill. If it is, it is in the Widnall amendment also; but I may say that would not be permitted in either event, because that is not contemplated.

Mr. SEELY-BROWN. It is a question of a technical or training school.

Mr. PATMAN. Yes, it is possible for any retraining.

Mr. SEELY-BROWN. That is what I am getting at.

Mr. PATMAN. It would be possible there.

Mr. REUSS. Occupational retraining aid is in the bill in the amount of only $4.5 million. I would infer, therefore, that no brick-and-mortar program for school building is contemplated.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. DWYER].

Mrs. DWYER. Mr. Chairman, I want to vote for an area redevelopment bill. In good conscience, however, I can do so only if the bill in question meets two tests: First, that the legislation is so written as to create honest prospects that it will effectively put people back to work in chronic labor-surplus areas; and, second, that it will help depressed areas without hurting nondepressed areas.

The existence—indeed, the growth—over the past 7 or 8 years of well-defined areas of the country which have not responded to the general growth and prosperity of the economy is a matter of the utmost concern. The problem of chronically depressed areas and long-term unemployment is no longer simply a local one, as both political parties have formally recognized. Its proportions are such that the Federal Government has a clear obligation to help.

In devising the means by which we propose to help put people back to work, we have a solemn responsibility to be frank. We must not lead the people of depressed areas to expect miracles. On the other hand, we must be as certain as possible that the assistance we provide will really help. The criteria in the bill by which redevelopment areas would be designated should be precise and realistic. And the channels through which aid would go to these areas should be designed for maximum effectiveness.

In both these respects, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the substitute proposed by my distinguished colleague from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] is superior to the committee bill. It would tighten up the definition of redevelopment area and help reduce the possibility of waste through the dissipation of Federal aid in too many areas. And it would emphasize the most practicable forms of assistance by increasing plant loan funds, by expanding the existing public facility loan program, and by more than doubling funds for occupational training.

In discussing this legislation with many of our colleagues, Mr. Chairman, I have found much agreement that Federal assistance should be sent where it is needed most and where it will do the most good. I hope, therefore, that the House during this debate will make it clear that Congress intends this purpose. I suggest that three general standards would be suitable as an expression of congressional intent in this respect. The Area Redevelopment Act should be so administered as to give priority to and to concentrate the available assistance in redevelopment areas, first, where the rate of unemployment has been among the highest; second, where substantial unemployment has existed for the longest periods of time; and, third, where economic circumstances are such that the assistance can most effectively be utilized in developing employment opportunities.

These are general standards, Mr. Chairman, but I believe they would indicate to those charged with administering the legislation that Congress intends to establish priorities and to emphasize those areas where prospects are greatest that Federal assistance will result in substantial economic improvement.

Secondly, Mr. Chairman, I believe the so-called antipirating provisions in the legislation should be strengthened. I hope the House will agree to amend the bill by adding language to the declaration of purpose in section 2, specifying that assistance under the bill shall not be approved in any case where a loss of employment would result in any other area.

I would also hope that antipirating provisions would be strengthened in other relevant sections of the bill by adding language specifically prohibiting the use of assistance not only for relocating establishments but also for transferring production from plants in one area to establishments in a redevelopment area.

Most of us, Mr. Chairman, represent areas which are not yet classified as labor-surplus areas. We have an obligation to help keep these areas economically healthy. It would be futile, wasteful, and tragic if we should write legislation which encouraged, or even permitted, Federal funds to be used which would have the effect of transferring jobs rather than creating new ones.

(Mr. DENTON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. DENTON. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of S. 1, to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically depressed areas. For a number of sessions, I have introduced similar legislation.

There is a condition in the district I represent, which illustrates the need for the enactment of depressed areas legislation. My hometown is the city of Evansville, Ind. It is a community of approximately 140,000. One of the largest industries in the city was Servel, Inc., which at its peak employed about 15,000 people. Three years ago it discontinued operations.

Then, year before last, Chrysler, another large industry employing approximately 6,000 men, moved to St. Louis. A number of other small businesses in Evansville discontinued operations. All told, 20,000 wage earners lost their positions.

If you lived in a community where this happened, I am sure you would know that this was a real calamity. It might happen to any community, where, like Evansville, it was no fault of the community. If some disaster such as a flood, fire, tornado or earthquake, occurred, everyone would spring into action to help the victims. I assure you that a situation such as befell Evansville is a very serious disaster.

The people of the city have made an heroic effort to alleviate the situation. A survey has been made by an expert of the conditions in the community and recommendation made as to what can be done to alleviate the situation. A million dollars has been raised by popular subscription to build plant sites and attract industry to the community, and an additional $300,000 has been raised for loans to small businesses.

Evansville's Future, Inc., has been set up to deal with every phase of this unemployment problem. Surely, the Government should give some assistance to a community which has made such diligent efforts to rescue itself from such a disaster.

The bill before us provides for loans of $300 million, and grants of $95 million. If past experience is any criterion, the money loaned will all be recovered by the Government with interest and profit, so that the only money the Government will be out is the $95 million, to relieve the entire Nation from this critical situation. I am not opposed to foreign aid if the money is properly spent, but certainly any nation which has spent billions of dollars to relieve distressed areas all over the world can afford to spend $95 million to aid the depressed areas in its own boundaries.

There is some talk to the effect that distressed areas assistance would pirate and take business from other communities. The act prohibits that, but as one who has lived in a so-called distressed area, I can assure you we have no desire to take business from any other community. We simply know the conditions in an area which has been so disastrously affected. We know it is contagious, and we want to prevent it from spreading to other communities.

Mr. Chairman, I want to go on record as approving the passage of S. 1.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FLOOD].

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, this is the third time that this committee and the House have considered this type of legislation. The imprimatur of the Congress has twice been placed upon the principle of this bill, the Congress has decreed twice that there is Federal responsibility to meet this demand, and I am sure this Congress will do the same.

I have heard certain papers read here today, not too well in some cases. The reason why would be obvious. The recent acquaintance with documents causes difficulty in semantics, syntax, and syllables, but when you have been here a hundred years as I have been this is not unusual. Strange little birdies drop stranger specks in certain hands—but this fools no one—unless it is the reader.

This bill does not bear the signet of the Bourbons. "Après moi le deluge" for the first time in these debates has appeared, but only once or twice comes an important phrase in this debate that would lend assistance to trying to help people like mine. But the Bourbons are not dead. Maybe that is good. The contrast is startling on both sides.

Now, Mr. Chairman—and I tell you this because I have lived with it—for 6 years there has not been politics in this bill. I have served as chairman of an unofficial committee to help the leadership with this bill for 6 years, and with the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FENTON] and the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VAN ZANDT] and a dozen other Representatives of distinction, joined this year by my neighbor and a new Member, the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SCRANTON], for years together across this aisle have we joined hands to help the people in the distressed areas. Politics. From the bottom of the barrel came that one and only from a politician.

Now, this bill is not conceived by some long-haired, flat-heeled bureaucrat, somebody left over from the vestigial remainders of the New Deal, not at all. This is no brain child of some campus wonder that often we have all seen trotted in and out of here, and I joined you and you me to deny that paternity. This bill has been written by Republicans and Democrats of distinction and seniority after hearings by the other body, with committees in 20 States for 6 years and by this House with its committee and in 20 States for 6 years. This is the synthesis not of some 90-day wonder but of the best brains in business, in finance, in labor, in every phase of the American economy. So was this bill born. Mark that.

Let me tell you this, and I have a right to say this, because I supported those bills, and I point to the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. ANDREWS], who sits on the foreign aid Committee on Appropriations, and I sat for years upon the defense Appropriations Committee; there was $500 million for a special fund for South America last year. To do what? To do exactly what this bill prays you do for the United States. Three hundred and ninety-four million dollars of that five hundred million was earmarked in one check to a special bank to build factories, to give jobs to South Americans.

This is a point 4 program for America. This is a foreign aid bill for my people and yours. This is bad? Can there be a Member, Republican or Democrat, who ever voted for any foreign aid bill who will vote "no" on this? I challenge you—I dare you. This is money that your people will borrow from your Government, and your people will pay back in American dollars, with interest—every dime. You are giving them nothing. This no giveaway. Socialism? Drivel. I heard that ghost trotted across this well against every piece of constructive legislation that is now part of the body of American law. We have laid that ghost. Where have you been?

But the $500 million probably will not be paid back and if it is paid back it will be paid back—in dollars? No; in soft currency. To the Treasury of the United States? No; to the revolving fund of the Bank. And my friend the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. ANDREWS] on the record asked the question last year, "Will this be the end, the $500 million loan to South America?" And the answer was, "No; it will go on for more than 10 years. It will come to $3 billion." And this bill is one shot for Americans alone, with interest, $340 million, the exact amount you put on a blank check into the Bank for South America. And this is bad. This will destroy America. This will eat the heart of our poor unemployed who are being prostituted by these Socialists. ANDREWS, of Alabama? There is a Socialist for you, is there not? Look at him.

Dr. FENTON, of Pennsylvania? That bad old Socialist—Doc FENTON? JIMMIE VAN ZANDT, of Pennsylvania, three times national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars? JIMMIE's a "Red"? A Socialist? We should laugh off the floor any Member who tries that tack in this debate.

Mr. Chairman, I do not presume to be so impertinent or presumptuous with this committee on both sides to analyze this bill for you section by section. But I can.

DEPRESSED AREAS BILL VITALLY NEEDED

Mr. Chairman, as a further extension of my remarks made during the course of today's floor debate on the depressed areas bill, I submit the following supporting documentation which I feel should be made a part of today's House proceedings so that all who are interested in this vital and necessary program to aid the depressed economic areas throughout the Nation will have these figures on unemployment in various sections of the country on hand for easy reference.

I submit first my home State's unemployment figures—Pennsylvania's areas of substantial labor surplus—second, the surplus labor markets in the Southern States; and, finally, the surplus labor markets in Western, Mountain, and Pacific States; and North Central States:

PENNSYLVANIA'S AREAS OF SUBSTANTIAL LABOR SURPLUS

(Extension of remarks of Hon. DANIEL J. FLOOD, of Pennsylvania, in the House of Representatives, Thursday, March 23, 1961)

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following press release of March 17, 1961, issued by the Bureau of Employment Security, Department of Labor and Industry, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, which was sent to me by the secretary of the department, Mr. William L. Batt, Jr. The figures incorporated in this release are broken down by labor-market areas, and it is to be noted that 26 of Pennsylvania's 29 classified labor-market areas are areas of substantial labor surplus.

This report, Mr. Speaker, certainly underscores the need for the passage by the House of the area redevelopment bill, approved last week by a wide margin, 63-27, in the U.S. Senate. These depressed economic areas in Pennsylvania and elsewhere in the country are looking toward this aid for real and solid help to assist them in meeting their long-term, chronic unemployment problems.

The indicated press release follows:

"According to January ratings, and following the national trend, 4 additional labor-market areas in Pennsylvania were classified as areas of substantial labor surplus, bringing the total to 26, according to a report released today by Secretary of Labor and Industry William L. Batt, Jr.

"The classifications of the areas are made jointly by the U.S. and Pennsylvania Bureaus of Employment Security on the basis of the adequacy of labor supply as of January 15, 1961, and showed 9 major and 17 smaller areas in the substantial labor surplus category. This represented the addition of three major and one smaller areas since the November ratings.

"Layoffs in durable goods industries which were expected to continue over the next few months were primarily responsible for the reclassification of the three major areas, Philadelphia, York, and Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton. In Lock Haven, the smaller area, cutbacks in aircraft manufacturing and the anticipated closing of an electrical machinery plant prompted the labor surplus rating.

"Of these 26 areas, 19 are designated as 'areas of substantial and persistent labor surplus.' This constitutes an increase of three over November, one major, Pittsburgh, and two smaller labor market areas, Indiana and Sayre-Athens-Towanda.

"Since November, classification changes in the Nation as a whole resulted in an increase in the number of major areas of substantial labor surplus from 51 to 76. The number of smaller areas meanwhile rose from 123 to 152. Of the total number of substantial labor surplus areas in the United States, 103 are classified as 'areas of substantial and persistent labor surplus.'

"In January, the U.S. rate of unemployment again remained well below the Pennsylvania rate. The national percent of labor force unemployed in January was 7.7 and the Pennsylvania percentage was 11.4. Seasonally adjusted, the national rate was 6.6.

"The areas in Pennsylvania which are presently classified appear on the list below. Data presented include the estimated total number of unemployed workers as of mid-January and their percentage of labor force unemployed. These data reflect a revised method of computing unemployment. The computations were made in accordance with a new, standardized methodology developed by the U.S. Bureau of Employment Security in cooperation with State agencies. The new method which incorporates newly available data and the results of special studies is designed to establish a uniform system in all the States for estimating the number of jobless workers.

Source: State employment security agencies.

Mr. Chairman, this is the fourth Congress in which I have introduced an area redevelopment bill. The Senate has approved such a bill on four occasions, the latest on March 15 of this year by a vote of 63 to 27. Twice previously the Congress has adopted such a vital program and on each occasion it was vetoed by the former President.

I sincerely hope this Congress will consider the bill favorably and with a sense of urgency.

Rising unemployment and inadequate economic growth have accentuated the problems of unemployment throughout the Nation. Today there are nearly 5 million in this country out of work and in my congressional district of Luzerne County, Pa., the total unemployed is currently 17.1 percent of the work force, some 23,000 looking for gainful employment. Mr. Chairman, this is a tragic and an appalling thing to realize and contemplate. Twenty-three thousand in just one congressional district. Think of it.

Moreover, Mr. Chairman, the number of distressed economic areas has increased sharply in recent months, with some 101 out of a total of 150 major industrial areas now classified as distressed areas, according to an announcement just last week by the Department of Labor.

Unemployment throughout the Nation now exceeds 6 percent, but unemployment in the distressed areas is nearly twice as high, and in many communities it exceeds depression proportions of 15 percent or more, such as the conditions found in my congressional district.

There are also hundreds of counties in predominantly rural areas where incomes are extremely low and unemployment is extremely high. These counties have an additional population of from 4 to 7 million.

The express purpose of my bill, Mr. Chairman, is to establish an effective program for reducing substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in the distressed areas of the Nation and to help maintain a continuing high level of economy throughout the United States.

This economically unhealthy situation as we find at the present time creates hardship to many millions of individuals and their families and impairs the national welfare by wasting human resources. My bill will assist communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals in distressed economic areas to achieve lasting local improvements by the development of new employment opportunities.

Mr. Chairman, it is now generally accepted that the Federal Government has a responsibility to help assure maximum employment. This principle is now a part of the law of the land, through the enactment of the Employment Act of 1946. The persistence of high unemployment and underemployment in many areas should be fought by the Federal Government, not only because it causes great human suffering in these areas, but also because these conditions are a threat to the general welfare of the Nation.

The bill which I offer, Mr. Chairman, recognizes this responsibility to the areas of chronic unemployment and underemployment and provides for a program which will help the people of these areas expand their economic activities. The bill also proposes a program which will stimulate these areas to help themselves.

I sincerely hope that the House will adopt the bill which I have submitted, the same as that passed on March 15 of this year by an overwhelming vote in the U.S. Senate with Senator PAUL DOUGLAS, of Illinois, spearheading the attack and guiding it through that body to successful passage. This program, Mr. Chairman, is indeed very badly needed and needed right now.

Mr. Chairman, before this session of Congress ends it is my hope and the hope of many of my colleagues that the House and the Senate will have agreed upon an adequate and effective bill to aid the many U.S. communities suffering from chronic and persistent unemployment.

The Area Redevelopment Act, sponsored as S. 1 by the Honorable PAUL DOUGLAS in the Senate, was passed on March 15, 1961, by the Senate by a 63 to 27 rollcall vote.

Mr. Chairman, I share with my colleagues and with thousands of unemployed Americans throughout our Nation the fervent hope that the House will soon have an opportunity to act upon this proposal.

One of the groups which has led the fight for area redevelopment legislation is the Area Employment Expansion Committee, of 99 University Place, New York, 3, N.Y.

Recently this organization prepared an excellent summary and legislative history of the fight for area redevelopment legislation. I should like to list the table of contents of this fine and comprehensive piece of research work:

Mr. Chairman, I take pleasure in the opportunity to bring this fine research to the attention of Members of Congress by joining with several of my colleagues to insert the entire text in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

1. INTRODUCTION

Proposals for area redevelopment legislation have been before the U.S. Congress for more than a decade. The basic principles have been endorsed by both parties in convention and by their leaders. Differences have involved the amounts of the assistance, the need for integrating rural and urban area redevelopment, the proposals for loans and grants for public facilities, the provision for subsistence grants for the unemployed who are being retrained, and the administrative machinery for carrying out the program.

The needs of the chronic labor surplus areas are most urgent. Their problems become more intense and their solution more complicated the longer they persist. The human, social, and capital waste is high. The cost is a tremendous burden upon our communities and State and Federal Governments.

It should be emphasized that in virtually every case these local communities have exerted the maximum effort of which they are capable toward their own economic rehabilitation. Residents of the stricken communities have literally given till it hurts to raise money for industrial site preparation, plant construction, and other services necessary to attract industry. The simple truth is that, in most cases, local financial resources have been exhausted.

So long as these communities remain unassisted in their efforts at redevelopment the Nation is neglecting its commitment under the Employment Act of 1946 to achieve maximum employment, production and purchasing power.

The American people have undertaken to finance economic redevelopment of the distressed and underdeveloped areas in foreign countries. It appears appropriate that we establish a similar program for our own people confronted with comparable problems. If a point 4 program is a good program for us to carry on overseas, it is doubly worthy for us to carry on at home.

II. HISTORY OF FEDERAL ACTION RESPECTING DISTRESSED AREAS

A. Urban areas.

The initial interest in the problem of distressed areas can be traced back to the recession of 1949. There have been persistent subsequent efforts to provide some assistance to these communities, but these steps have been largely temporary and inadequate.

1. The E area program (1949-50).

The executive branch of the Government ordered that aid be given to the E labor market (very substantial labor surplus) by channeling regularly budgeted Federal activities, primarily procurement and construction, to these areas. In all, 62 areas became eligible at one time or another but only 36 shared in the modest consideration. Some observers doubt that any substantial priorities were given these areas.

2. Defense manpower policy No. 4 (February 1952).

This policy was designed for labor surplus communities adversely affected by the cessation of military contracts. In the 85 months through March 1959, contracts amounting to only $213 million were allocated to these areas by virtue of DMP No. 4.

3. Extra accelerated tax amortization (November 1953).

The program for rapid tax amortization for investments in facilities needed for the Nation's industrial mobilization base was further liberalized first for chronic and later for all substantial labor surplus areas. Through April 1959, only 71 facilities were located in 38 areas, for an investment of $318 million, providing jobs for approximately 16,625 workers. This program ceased functioning at the close of 1959.

4. Buy American Act.

American producers supplying goods substantially all of which are produced in areas of substantial unemployment may enjoy a price differential of either 12 or 20 percent depending upon the formula. No data are available on the benefits.

5. U.S. Employment Service.

Since 1949 this Service has helped a number of communities in their developmental activities by providing information on the local labor markets and labor supply but it has been limited by inadequate staff resources.

6. Office of Area Development (U.S. Department of Commerce).

This office has provided technical pamphlets and statistical studies to all communities seeking help and information to attract new industries without regard to their employment experience.

7. Urban planning grants (HHFA).

Section 701 is designed to aid long-term planning by communities of less than 50,000 population and counties of less than 25,000 population suffering from major natural disasters or rapid urbanization following Federal installations. No special provision is made for distressed areas.

8. Urban renewal (HHFA).

This program aids communities to eliminate slums and blight in predominantly residential areas. No special provision is made for distressed areas.

9. Community facilities (HHFA).

(a) The program for public facility loans may be used by a community of less than 10,000 population for water and sewer systems if it has been denied credit by at least two lending institutions and submits evidence of an ability to repay. No special provisions are made for distressed communities.

(b) The program for interest-free advances for public works planning, which have gone primarily for sewage and water systems, is limited in amount. There is no special provision for distressed areas.

10. President Eisenhower in 1960 set up an interdepartmental committee to "coordinate Federal urban area assistance" which is staffed by the Office of Area Development of the U.S. Department of Commerce.

B. Rural areas.

A rural redevelopment program was instituted in June 1955 to increase productivity of low-income farm people; increase prospects for employment in part-time and non-farm jobs by encouraging nonagricultural outlets in rural areas; increase opportunities for young people to secure training; and raise the social and economic standards in low-income rural areas. The primary responsibility is lodged with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Appropriations consisted of $2,061,645 in fiscal 1957 distributed among the Agricultural Extension Service, Soil Conservation, Agricultural Research Service, Agricultural Marketing Service, Farmers Home Administration, and some information and administrative offices.

In the fourth annual report covering the years 1958-59 the Secretary of Agriculture reported that some 200 counties in 30 States and Puerto Rico had been included in the rural development program areas.

In October 1959, the President formally constituted a committee for rural development programs, supplanting the earlier committee which had been operating informally.

Thus the need for rural redevelopment has long been recognized. The program established by S. 722, described later in this document, insures that this recognized need will be adequately met.

III. LEGISLATIVE HISTORY RELATING TO AREA REDEVELOPMENT BILLS

A. S. 281 introduced in 1949 sought to implement the Employment Act of 1946 and in title V provided specific aids to areas of serious employment. After certification such areas would be examined and measures for economic adjustment would be recommended for them. It provided for placement of Government contracts in these areas; RFC loans to private industry; an unemployment emergency reserve fund; retraining facilities; relocation funds; maintenance allowances for trainees.

B. In 1950 a similar measure was introduced, entitled H.R. 7444.

C. Republican candidate Eisenhower in his 1952 speech at Lawrence, Mass., promised to help hard-hit communities.

D. The March 1955 report of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report urged that loans and technical assistance be extended to distressed areas. The committee declared that "we are very concerned with distressed conditions which persist in certain industries and regions, even in an expanding economy. We believe that action is required now and that much can be done through public works to assist these communities. The Federal Government should recognize its responsibility to those areas and industries by promoting research to discover new products and new processes. Consideration should be given to the possibility of modifying the unemployment compensation programs to meet the special problems of retraining and readjusting facing these areas. Loans, technical assistance and, as the President recommends, an expanded area development program should be provided for these areas to help them to adapt to changed economic conditions." The Democratic members of the committee criticized the Economic Report of the President for identifying the problem as a local rather than as a national one. The committee itself declared that "we must recognize and deal with unemployment as a local as well as a National and State problem. The failure of the executive branch to show sufficient vigor in its approach to this problem disturbs us. It should have occupied a high place in the Economic Report." (Statement of supplemental views of Senators Douglas, Sparkman and O'Mahoney, Representatives Patman, Bolling, Mills and Kelly.)

E. Senator PAUL DOUGLAS introduced the Depressed Areas Act (S. 2663) in July 1955 to provide assistance for distressed areas.

F. The Subcommittee on Low-Income Families of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report recommended in January 1956 that "there be established in the executive branch of the Federal Government a central group with the responsibility of preparing a coordinated comprehensive program aiding currently depressed industrial and rural areas."

G. The President's Economic Report for 1956 reversed its position of the prior year and concluded that the "fate of distressed communities is a matter or national as well as local concern," and recommended special legislation. The report further added that "although these (administrative) programs have proved helpful, experience demonstrates that bolder measures are needed. To this end, a new area assistance program is recommended for aiding a community that experienced persistent and substantial unemployment."

H. Senator SMITH, of New Jersey, introduced the administration's bill (S. 2892) entitled "Area Assistance Act of 1956."

I. The Senate in the 84th Congress, 2d session, passed a revised Douglas bill. It was reported out by the House Banking and Currency Committee but it died in the House Rules Committee.

J. Both major parties in their 1956 platforms called for Federal legislation to aid economically distressed areas.

K. In the 85th Congress, Senator DOUGLAS and cosponsors introduced a slightly revised version of the bill considered in the preceding Congress (S. 1433) which was followed by another administration bill (S. 9641). Hearings were held in the first session. A clean bill (S. 3684) was reported out in the second session by the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency. This bill passed the House with some slight amendments and was finally sent to the President at the end of the session. The President pocket-vetoed the bill on September 6, 1958.

L. In the 86th Congress, Senator DOUGLAS introduced a similar bill (S. 722) which was followed by the administration bill called Area Assistance Act of 1959 (S. 1064). After some modifications, S. 722 was passed by the Senate. The House Banking and Currency Committee revised the Senate bill and asked for a rule from the House Rules Committee. The report of the House Banking and Currency Committee was filed May 14, 1959 and is House Report No. 360.

M. The Special Senate Committee on Unemployment Problems conducted a series of hearings on unemployment in many major centers at the end of 1959 and the beginning of 1960. These hearings brought to light the plight of the distressed areas. The recommendations of this special committee can be obtained by contacting the committee in Room 357 of the Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D.C.

N. The Joint Economic Committee conducted an extended series of hearings on "Employment Growth and Price Levels" during 1959. Both the staff and committee reports urged action on distressed areas.

1. The staff report declared that "Federal leadership is needed to assist the recovery of a number of chronically distressed areas. Both technical and long-term financial aid will probably be required. Assistance programs should be of sufficient scope to justify the expectation that the areas will become self-sustaining within a reasonable period. While some nonrecoverable costs may be incurred by the Federal Government in this effort, a well-planned program for reviving the chronically depressed areas should result in a net economic and social gain to the country" (Staff Report, p. xxix).

2. The Joint Economic Committee in its report concluded that "a program of assistance to chronically depressed areas should be started. Both technical and long-term financial aid will be required to help these areas to become self-sustaining and to help themselves. Where necessary, retraining of workers should be undertaken, particularly where the long-term outlook for an area is poor" (Senate Rept. No. 1043, p. 54).

O. The 1960 Economic Report of the President declared:

"Legislation is needed, however, to supplement and strengthen these efforts to help areas of persistent unemployment create new job opportunities. Such legislation should stimulate and complement efforts of communities to help themselves, should promote maximum participation by private financial institutions and by State and local agencies, should encourage the creation of new job opportunities rather than the mere transference of jobs from one area of the country to another, and should encompass technical aid for the economic diversification of rural low-income areas and single-industry communities."

Mr. Chairman, under unanimous consent, I include in the RECORD the following portion of the text of an article prepared by the Area Employment Expansion Committee on the subject of area redevelopment legislation:

(a) Unemployment persists in chronically distressed areas.

(1) The number of labor markets with substantial labor surpluses (6 percent or more unemployment) fluctuates with the rise and fall in business activity but distressed areas continue with substantial labor surpluses.

(2) The chronically distressed communities (with 6 percent or more unemployment for at least 18 months out of the last 24 months) persist. Even in periods of general prosperity they have substantial labor surpluses. Chronic unemployment is only slightly relieved even when unemployment is low in the Nation as a whole.

The number of chronically distressed labor markets has continued to rise. The recent recession created a new group of chronically distressed labor markets, because of dislocations in the automobile and aircraft industries.

(b) Unemployment unduly concentrated in chronically distressed labor markets.

The rate of unemployment continues to be unduly high in the distressed labor markets. In November 1959 the total unemployed in the 172 distressed labor markets (exclusive of the 5 in Alaska) numbered 923,000. Though these areas had 13.7 percent of the civilian labor force, they included 25.1 percent of the unemployed. The rate of unemployment in these areas was 9.8 percent as compared with a national rate of 5.3 percent.

(c) Chronically distressed labor markets suffer from substantial labor surpluses for long periods.

The principal characteristic of unemployment in the chronically distressed communities is that the substantial labor surplus continues to fester for long periods of time. Recovery is not quick. Even the labor market which is later graduated out of the distressed condition takes many years for significant improvements to occur. In some areas the relief has come from the outmigration of people and the reinvigoration of existing rather than new enterprises. But where these alternatives are not easily available the recovery is particularly slow in coming. It has taken some communities a decade or two of the most aggressive local action to effect a measurable reduction in unemployment. The reason basically is that the community may have failed to redevelop itself properly to provide the base for a new industry.

Evidence of the length of the time of the persisting substantial labor surplus is provided by the following table, which enumerates the time of the start of the most recent period of continuous substantial labor surplus.

Date of start of last period of substantial surplus	Total	Distressed labor markets		Number with prior period of substantial labor surplus

Some labor markets with more recent starting dates for their chronic distress had suffered prior periods of substantial labor surpluses. The revival was short lived and these communities fell back again into the category of chronically distressed.

(d) Few chronically distressed communities graduate out of classification.

The vague hope that many communities will be able to graduate out of the chronically distressful conditions is not justified by experience. On the contrary, the best available data appears to confirm the conclusion that only a small group of distressed labor markets have lifted themselves to a better status.

Of the total of 116 labor markets which between July 1953 and March 1958 became chronically distressed, only 41 were not so classified in March 1958. Of the remaining 75 labor markets, 64 were continuously distressed from the time their economic difficulties began and they continued unrelieved in this condition of substantial labor surplus. The remaining 11 experienced a temporary period of economic revival.

The 41 labor markets which were not classified as chronically distressed in March 1958 included 19 which had as substantial labor surplus in January or March 1958.

Labor markets chronically distressed, July 1953-March 1958:

1. Total chronically distressed labor markets, 112.

2. Number of labor markets suffering continuous distress from time of origin, 64.

3. Markets which experienced partial revival but chronically distressed as of March 1958, 11.

(a) Chronically distressed in prior period of labor surplus, four.

(b) Substantial labor surplus but not chronically distressed in prior period of labor surplus, seven.

4. Labor markets formerly distressed markets but not so classified in March 1958, 41.

(a) Areas with a substantial labor surplus in January or March 1958, 19.

(b) Areas not classified as having substantial labor surplus as of March 1958, 22.

(c) Structural unemployment core of unemployment problem in good times.

Deputy Assistant Secretary of Labor Charles D. Stewart declared recently that "one-third of the unemployed in periods we usually regard as one of full employment fall in this (structural unemployment) category."

2. Chronic unemployment in distressed areas is caused by longrun economic changes.

A. Types of economic changes causing chronic unemployment.

1. Industries have declined because new products or services have captured the markets.

(a) Oil has challenged both anthracite and bituminous coal and has preempted many significant markets.

(b) Diesel power has supplanted steam-power on the railroads with far-reaching effects, seen in the reduction of the number of repair stations and in the amount of railroad equipment built by the railroads and other service industries.

(c) The railroads have lost out to trucks, passenger cars, and airplanes so that number of spur lines has been reduced and the volume of passenger traffic dropped. Employment has decreased.

(d) Synthetic fibers have made tremendous inroads on silk and wool. The former has been practically eliminated except for specialized restricted areas.

(e) The change in the types of refrigerators has resulted in the closing of a number of older plants.

2. Regional migration has denuded older areas of plants.

(a) The migration has been particularly marked in the soft goods industries. Where there has not been any significant migration, the relative rates of growth in various areas have differed strikingly.

In the textile industry, many mills moved South during the twenties. While the number of such shifts has since been small, the rate of attrition has been high in the North, whereas mill closings in the South have been the exception until recently.

(b) The apparel industry has been subject to violent shifts in location since the beginning of the century. The movement out of the large cities to new markets has been frequently recorded. Recently the so-called newer markets and areas have been losing plants to southern locations.

(c) The electronics parts industry, originally located in the large cities, has been standardized so that production units could be moved to outside lower wage areas. Such migration has taken place at an impressive rate during the last decade.

(d) The automobile industry has been highly decentralized as assembly and parts plants have been placed nearer the consumer markets. As growth of the industry has been halted, the older areas have witnessed many plant closings.

3. Some industrial changes result in plant closings.

(a) The amount of subcontracting by the automobile industry resulted in the shutdown of many parts plants.

4. Changing military requirements have left many communities stranded.

(a) Military installations have been closed as the size of the Armed Forces has been reduced.

(b) The substitution of missiles for armed aircraft has had many significant effects. It has resulted in a severe reduction in the aircraft industry. Some plants have been converted to electronics and become part of the missile industry. The full impact has not yet been felt as increased civilian demands for jet planes has helped fill part of the gap.

The new military defenses require less warehousing and storage facilities, resulting in the closing of depots.

5. Automation and increased mechanization and efficiency have resulted in lower labor demands.

(a) Man-hour productivity is constantly rising. This is effected through mechanization, automation, better management, better materials and standardization of processes. Almost every industry is affected.

(b) Industries in which output is not rising or is declining and yet are experiencing considerable advances in gross productivity are necessarily reducing manpower needs; as witness the textile industry.

(c) New processes may render older plants obsolete and demand a change in the location of the operation as exemplified by the meatpacking industry.

(d) Automation will reduce the needs for warehouses, branch offices and shipping facilities.

6. Import competition is accelerating the decline or forcing the shrinkage of some industries.

(a) Imports have captured the markets for some industries such as leather and knit gloves, watches and clocks, flatware, tubular brass plumbing, rope, chinaware. As a result they have caused plant closings in these industries.

(b) Raw material industries have found that lower foreign prices make them non-competitive and some mines have been affected by this competition. These include fluorspar, lead, zinc, antimony, copper and iron ore industries.

7. Depletion of natural resources.

(a) Lumber and other raw material product industries have in some areas been affected by sheer exhaustion.

B. Scientific, technical, product, and economic changes will continue.

1. America's investment in scientific research and development is rising. In 1957 it had increased to $10 billion of which about three-quarters was done by private firms. This research is constantly stimulating new products, new industries, and new consumer demands, rendering older ones obsolete.

2. The rate of man-hour productivity is rising. The National Bureau of Economic Research has declared that "the long-term pace of advance in output per man-hour has been speeded up." The average annual output per man-hour increased, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, 4 percent in 1909-19 and 2.9 percent in 1939-58. The rate for 1947-58 was 3.1 percent.

3. The rate of increase in productivity in many industries is even higher than the national average: candy, 19.8 percent; cigars, 18.1 percent; copper, 10.7 percent; iron ore, 9.4 percent; flour, 7.5 percent; synthetic fabrics, 15.2 percent; bituminous coal, 6.8 percent; railroads, 6.2 percent.

4. Dr. Arthur Burns has concluded that "the life histories of industries are becoming shorter * * * [the] increased birth rate of new products means an increase in death rate of old products and a decline in the average life span of individual industries."

5. The continuance of these changes spells the obsolescence of different parts of our economy and the displacement of workers. Where one or another industry provides a substantial part of the employment, the industry when declining will cause a labor surplus. If the community is itself not immediately ready to fit into the newer industrial and economic trends, it will suffer from long-term chronic unemployment.

C. Industries primarily responsible for heavy unemployment in chronically distressed labor markets.

Area Employment Expansion Committee Fact Sheet 42-A lists the industries primarily responsible for heavy unemployment in chronically distressed labor markets and the specific areas affected.

Mr. Chairman, I include the following portion of the text of an article prepared by the Area Employment Expansion Committee on the subject of area redevelopment legislation:

The industries listed in this fact sheet are—mining: Anthracite, bituminous, fluor-spar, iron ore, lead and zinc, copper, and antimony; quarrying: limestone; fishing and seafood processing; oil refining; tobacco; textiles; apparel; logging and lumber; shoes; leather; metal and products: fabricated, brass, clocks and watches, air conditioners, refrigerators, textile machinery, electrical equipment, other machinery and railroad equipment; automobiles; aircraft; ordnance; railroads and repair shops; stone, clay, glass, pottery; chemicals; Federal and military installations; shipbuilding; agriculture; construction; natural resources industries.

D. Cycles of major industries in difficulty. The distressed area problem has gained particular attention because of the tendency for adversity to hit a group of communities dependent upon the same major industry at relatively similar periods. The concentrated effect tends to highlight the problem.

In recent years, the contracting cycles have been associated with important American industries.

(1) The reverses in the anthracite and coal industry beginning in the thirties.

(2) The liquidation of northern textile mills in the twenties and fifties.

(3) The closing of railroad repair shops and contraction of railroad employment beginning in the thirties.

(4) The decentralization of the automobile industry during the fifties.

(5) The substitution of the missiles for manned aircraft in the fifties.

3. Communities in distressed and chronic condition of substantial labor surplus.

(a) The communities adversely affected by these economic trends are with few exceptions centers of advanced industrial development. Otherwise they would not have attracted high concentration of population and enterprises. Being urbanized communities they have not only the core industries upon which their development was founded but all of the service and auxiliary developments with which to supply the needs of the people. They are communities in which there are vast investments of private, commercial, and industrial capital.

(b) Most of the distressed communities are dependent upon one or two industries which have suffered reverses. In some there has been a concurrent drop in a number of interrelated industries as has occurred in the communities dependent upon the automobile industry.

(c) There are among the distressed communities a large number of single industry communities.

There are many other similar communities in the United States. A study of the U.S. Census of Manufactures for 1954 indicates that of the 3,103 counties, there were 1,986 or 64 percent in which the largest two companies accounted for 50 percent or more of the manufacturing activity in these counties. The proportion in the counties with less than 1,000 manufacturing employees was 70 percent indicating the high dependence upon two employers.

(d) No community is safe from the above reverses. It is clear that the high dependence on a limited number of industries increases the chances of reverses, but complete diversification is not feasible or economically sound. It is better to deal with the problem in realistic terms of establishing provisions for handling the reverses when they come. There can be no insurance policy against adversities.

4. Migration from distressed areas is no general solution.

(a) It is often quite casually suggested that the solution for the distressed areas is the outmigration of the people to other communities. This well-meant suggestion ignores the difficulties standing in the way of this solution.

(b) Some people do move out of the distressed areas. As a matter of fact there are considerable disadvantages in such outmigration. First, it deprives the community of many younger aggressive and ambitious persons. Second, these people tend to return as they face reverses in the newer communities aggravating the lot of the distressed community at a time when it is least able to face the problem.

(c) There is a large volume of migration taking place in the United States which already taxes our national facilities and skill. There is a movement from rural to urban and from urban to suburban areas and other purely personal shifts. People move for various reasons including the desire for advancement, preferred jobs in terms of wages, benefits and prospects.

Surveys on migration already indicate that each year, 7 percent of the population changes its place of residence across county lines and 3 percent across State lines.

A study of unemployment shows that 10 percent of unemployment is accounted for by voluntary shifts, 20 percent by seasonal factors, 20 percent by new job seekers, 30 percent by structural changes and 20 percent by the mobility of people for personal reasons.

A study of population changes from 1940 to 1950 indicates that 1,051 counties lost population, 1,535 had a stable population and 430 showed a fast rate of growth in population.

(d) The people who are not readily moving are reluctant to move because of the difficulties it would entail either to them personally, their investments or both.

People don't want to move because of their strong attachments, social ties, home ownership, possible losses from the sale of houses, advanced age, fear of distant parts, dependents, fear of adjustment, and differences in ethnic backgrounds. Housing problems may be encountered. Moreover jobs in the new community are tentative and uncertain.

Businessmen and people with investments cannot move easily since their livelihood is often completely tied up with a specific locality.

(e) There are no real shortage areas in the United States. In January 1960 there were no major labor markets classified in group A. The occupational shortages relate to skilled professional and clerical jobs.

(f) The cost of migration is sufficiently high as to discourage workers.

Migration can be of help to individuals, and may assist individual communities where redevelopment will not be adequate to absorb the total displaced, but it is not the answer to the problem of chronic unemployment.

5. Local efforts for redevelopment are insufficient.

(a) Most of the recovery experienced in distressed areas has been due to expansion and revitalization of existing industry or outmigration or commutation, often at very high cost to the individual and community.

(b) The three presently available approaches to redevelopment are inadequate.

(1) "Realtor Approach." This is a common one which seeks to find an employing tenant for existing vacant space.

(a) This approach is inadequate because it relies on existing space which is obsolete and attracts tenants who want low-price floor space. These may not be energetic and expanding companies.

(b) If the tenant is successful, he will want to expand and find modern space. Otherwise, he is likely to close up.

(2) "Diversification Approach." This has been endorsed by the U.S. Department of Commerce and many developers. The purpose is to bring in new industries. This approach may not be economic since there may not be a justifiable base for diversification. Economic advantage may not support it. Diversification is no guarantee against chronic unemployment.

(3) "New Commercial and Industrial Structures. This approach seeks to build a new plant and secure a tenant for it.

(a) This approach may net a tenant but there is no assurance that it will be sufficient to stop the decline in employment or that the new plant will become the nucleus for new economic growth. Many communities with new plants find that they have no multiplier effect.

(b) Local communities and State groups may exhaust their financial resources to build plants.

(c) Local programs often falter and fail. The reasons for these failings are:

(1) They may lack sufficient funds for the project as resources are drained by their local recession and as tax capacity dwindles. The longer the distress, the more limited are the resources.

(2) They become discouraged at the meagerness of the results.

(3) Local vested groups often resist expansion and the appropriation of funds to pay for it.

(4) The people may become resigned to the patterns of unemployment and underemployment.

(5) Local leadership is often lacking after the major industry leaves.

(6) Neglect of distressed urban communities conflicts with Employment Act of 1946.

(a) The act prescribes "maximum employment, production, and purchasing power." The tolerance of chronic unemployment defeats this end. Economic growth depends upon the optimum use of our resources.

(1) The neglect of distressed communities means the deterioration of manpower, entrepreneurial skills and experience; public and social capital; private commercial, personal, and industrial capital.

(2) The development of new communities demands costly investments in new facilities which duplicate existing ones. We already have a tremendous backlog resulting from the unfinished development of our suburbs. The completion of these communities should have a high priority on our capital investment.

(3) Many new or rapidly growing communities already have difficulty in absorbing new population. The cost of facilities is very high.

(4) The conservation and renewal of existing communities through redevelopment is cheaper and wiser, since much of it involves renewal rather than clearance for redevelopment.

(b) Neglect of unemployment areas is costly.

(1) Large scale unemployment means high costs of poverty in the form of costs of relief, unemployment, high rate of dependence, slums, social evils, and other problems.

(2) Chronic distress means business bankruptcies.

(3) Disuse brings deterioration of public and private capital.

(4) Low income means deterioration of public services for raising young (low standards of education, hospitals, welfare facilities.) This places a burden on the Nation as a whole.

(5) Unemployment spreads pessimism and disaffection.

(6) Unemployment depresses wage scales generally.

B. Rural areas.

1. Rural unemployment, underemployment, and low income widely known.

There is little dispute about the prevalence of rural poverty and underemployment. Studies by the Joint Committee on the Economic Report and the Department of Agriculture highlight these facts.

One of every three commercial farms in this country had in 1954 gross sales below $2,500. One quarter of the farm families had an annual income of $1,000 or less.

The greater preponderance of the counties in which unemployment is chronic and in which low standards of living prevail is in the Southern States, particularly Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia. Additional low-income counties are to be found in Florida, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, and New Mexico.

2. Characteristics of rural distressed areas.

a. These are communities in which population increases have outrun local resources.

b. Population has increased faster than outmigration.

c. Nonfarm jobs tend to be limited.

d. Farms are small and underdeveloped with low capital investment.

3. Rural redevelopment program is inadequate.

The present program sponsored by the Department of Agriculture is inadequate. It rests primarily upon voluntary cooperation and little or no funds are provided the areas. In the period from 1958-59, the budget provided $15 million for the Farmers Home Administration for additional local authorizations in the pilot counties or about $150,000 per county and $2.6 million for the special services and research activities by public agricultural agencies assisting the program. No funds have been provided for industrial development.

4. Local resources are not sufficient to remove rural poverty.

The National Planning Association declared that "to place exclusive emphasis on private initiative and local initiative is unrealistic and self-defeating. If a century and a half of dependence on local initiative has failed to eliminate America's low-income rural regions, it seems futile to depend only upon such initiative to solve the same rural poverty problems still before us."

5. Rural redevelopment requires outside capital and experience.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Flood] has expired.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FENTON].

(Mr. FENTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FENTON. Mr. Chairman, first of all let me assure my colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Flood], that I am for this bill.

Mr. Chairman and Members of the House, my district in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania is one that has been beset with problems of unemployment for a long time. In addition to the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre area—my area—Pottsville, Shamokin, Mount Carmel, Shenandoah, Mahanoy City, Tamaqua, Minersville, Girardville, and other towns are in great need.

Ever since the turn of the century, the number of jobs in the anthracite mines has been lessening, and the communities in my district have fought a valiant battle in trying to establish new industries to provide jobs for displaced miners and their families. This battle has been a monument to the principle of community self-help.

Even now people in my district do not seek charity or handouts. We are happy to continue to shoulder the main responsibility for providing new footings, a new base for our economy.

At this point Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out that I was the one who pioneered area assistance legislation when I introduced in the House on January 9, 1956 the proposals of the former Eisenhower administration 4 days after the President in his state of the Union message recommended such assistance after I had personally arranged various group conferences at the White House.

We have before us S. 1 as amended by our Banking and Currency Committee.

Another bill—H.R. 5943, the Widnall bill—will be offered as a substitute for the committee bill.

I wish to say that no one in the Congress is more keenly interested in helping our domestic distressed areas than am I.

Mr. Chairman, former President Eisenhower in his state of the Union messages, and in economic reports, announced the principle that there is a responsibility in the Federal Government to help areas of substantial and persistent labor surplus in their efforts to solve their problems. This is clear, despite the fact that the Nation as a whole has enjoyed a period of general prosperity since 1952.

Many people have spoken at length in behalf of legislation of this kind at this and previous sessions of Congress.

Secretaries of Commerce and Labor, both in the last and present administration have spoken in favor of legislation to help areas of persistent unemployment, especially the so-called chronic areas.

Representatives of labor, and the chief executive of the State of Pennsylvania, and others have appealed for adequate legislation.

I will try to give you some idea of our economic conditions in the Schuylkill-Nothumberland anthracite-producing area of Pennsylvania, and the time and efforts given by the people of my area in trying to help themselves.

We have witnessed the population of my district shrink over 80,000 from 1940 to 1960.

We have seen our major and basic anthracite industry have its annual tonnage reduced from almost 100 million tons in 1919, in World War I, to around 20 million tons at the present time.

We have also seen the number of miners diminish from a peak of 179,679 in 1917 to less than 20,000 today.

Now the causes of all these decreases are well known to those of us from the hard coalfields. In fact, the Federal Government itself knows full well the condition in which our area finds itself, because, over the years, since I have been a Member of Congress, I have brought to the attention of our various administrations the economic plight of the anthracite industry and the people dependent upon it for a livelihood.

As a matter of fact, and the record will disclose this, I have been successful in having a number of my proposals enacted into law to assist the anthracite industry and our people. For example, first, Public Law 812, 77th Congress, which established the Anthracite Research Laboratory; second, Public Law 738, 83d Congress, which authorizes the appropriation of Federal funds to the Bureau of Mines to fight mine fires and which eliminates the necessity of asking for special funds each year; the appropriations for this type of work over the past several years has saved over 350 million tons of coal from destruction at a cost of less than 1 cent a ton.

I also sponsored Public Law 162, 84th Congress, which authorizes the Federal Government to appropriate $8,500,000 to match a similar amount from the State of Pennsylvania to dewater mines for health and safety purposes, and to conserve one of the Nation's greatest natural resources—Pennsylvania's anthracite mines.

While we have been trying to stay the continued onslaught of unemployment by helping to stabilize our anthracite mining industry, our people and our communities have been doing a splendid job in organizing in various ways, and indeed have succeeded in securing new plants in some communities and also expanding plants already there.

Our people want to work, as is evidenced by the fact that thousands of them travel over 100 miles each day in commuting back and forth to work. Others are compelled to leave their families for the week and return home on the weekends.

Our people cannot understand why a helping hand has not been extended them long ago as has been done by our Government to other segments of our economy. Neither can they understand why the Government itself permits the terrific influx of residual oil on the eastern seaboard, which displaces millions and millions of tons of coal each year.

We have recommended that this excessive importation of residual or waste oil be curtailed or be placed on a proper quota basis, and I introduced legislation to accomplish this. If this was done it would help in keeping down our unemployment.

In addition to the influx of foreign waste oil, we have been hurt by the "big and little inch" pipelines built by the Government. We had no complaint to make when these pipelines were built because of their necessity to aid in winning the war. We did not intend to have them later used by private enterprise in competition and injury to the coal industry.

We objected strenuously to their being sold to the oil and gas industries after the war because we knew it would hurt our anthracite markets. It did hurt us very severely, and the Government did assist the oil and gas industry in selling the pipelines.

I cite these several instances about the plight of our basic industry, because our pleas fell on deaf ears for many, many years.

We have in various communities in my district, attempted to help ourselves and have succeeded in securing new plants, but we have reached the limit and we now look forward to the State and Federal Governments for assistance in the form of loans.

The President is concerned about areas of chronic unemployment and is attempting to do something about it.

According to January ratings of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry, four additional labor market areas in Pennsylvania were classified as areas of substantial labor surplus, bringing the total to 26.

The classification of the areas, made jointly by the United States and Pennsylvania Bureaus of Employment Security, showed 9 major and 17 smaller areas in the substantial labor market surplus category. This represented the addition of three major and one smaller area since the November ratings.

Of the 26 areas, 19 are designated as "areas of substantial and persistent labor surplus." This constitutes an increase of three in January over the preceding November.

Since November, classification changes in the Nation as a whole resulted in an increase in the number of major areas of substantial labor surplus from 51 to 76. The number of smaller areas meanwhile rose from 123 to 152. Of the total number of substantial labor surplus areas in the United States, 103 are classified as "areas of substantial and persistent labor surplus."

In January, the U.S. rate of unemployment again remained well below the Pennsylvania rate. The national percent of labor force unemployed in January was 7.7, and the Pennsylvania percentage was 11.4. Seasonally adjusted, the national rate was 6.6.

At the present time the unemployment figures for my district in Pennsylvania is about 26,000. In Schuylkill County we have 16,900 unemployed, and in Northumberland County 9,100. In Schuylkill County alone this means that the percentage of unemployed is 22.1 percent, and in Northumberland 13.9 percent.

Many bills have been introduced for distressed areas by members of both political parties in the 84th, 85th, 86th, and the current 87th Congress.

I urge and trust that we will pass and bring forth a bill that can be accepted by the House and Senate, and signed into law by the President.

The anthracite coal producing area of Pennsylvania is a chronically distressed area and the people of my district will be especially grateful for favorable action.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORHEAD].

Mr. MOORHEAD of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I am honored to follow in the well of this House my distinguished colleagues from Pennsylvania [Mr. FLOOD and Dr. FENTON] and to join with them in urging the passage of this area redevelopment bill.

Mr. Chairman, the area redevelopment bill is legislation designed to take care of human needs in a businesslike way.

The name of this bill, the area redevelopment bill, should not confuse us. We are not concerned so much with distressed areas as with distressed people who live in these areas.

The distress that comes to people from long-continued unemployment is serious whether the unemployed people live in a large city, a small town, or in a rural community. The committee bill recognizes this fact and is designed to help people wherever they may live in the United States of America. Even without considering the rural areas, people in more than one-half of the 50 States will be benefited by the legislation.

The purpose of the committee bill is to help people but the means it uses are businesslike. This is no dole, handout, or giveaway program. It is a program to help business create new job opportunities for our unemployed.

Those who oppose this legislation say that local States and communities should do the job for themselves. One of the witnesses at the hearing described what a wonderful job the city of Erie in my State of Pennsylvania was doing to attract industry. He neglected to point out that in November of 1960, unemployment of Erie was 9.4 percent and that Erie is classified as an area of substantial and persistent unemployment. The opponents of this legislation fail to recognize that, although Pennsylvania has been doing a wonderful job of trying to solve its problems, some 49 of the 67 counties in Pennsylvania are classified as distressed areas. Mr. Chairman, we in Pennsylvania have gone as far as we can go. We need a partnership with the Federal Government if we are to solve our problems.

But this is not Pennsylvania's problem alone; it is a national problem. Persistent unemployment, for any of a number of reasons, has arisen or can arise in every one of 50 States and in every one of the 437 congressional districts. It may not have arisen in your congressional district but who knows what tomorrow may bring? One technological change or invention may eliminate the economical basis of your community.

The committee bill will help people who live in cities. It will help primarily through the provisions for industrial, urban renewal, economic planning assistance, and training and retraining of workers. Sixty-three percent of the unemployed in Pennsylvania are classified as either unskilled or semiskilled. Others have skills no longer in need. Training and retraining will be their salvation.

The committee bill will help people who live in small towns. It will help by bringing new industry to towns and by assisting them in providing the public facilities which industry may need. The tax basis in some of these smaller communities may have become so eroded that they cannot even borrow money for public facilities. The committee bill recognizes this situation and provides a limited program of grants in aid.

The committee bill will help people who live in farming communities and suffer from chronic unemployment. It will help farming communities to develop agricultural production in combination with processing—what the Secretary of Agriculture referred to as "Agribusiness." "Agribusiness" may mean a combination of farming, forestry and woodwork. In another area "agribusiness" may mean the promotion of tourists and recreation.

In short, Mr. Chairman, the area redevelopment bill is national legislation to help all the people of our Nation whether they live in city, town, or village. I urge the adoption of the committee bill.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VAN ZANDT].

(Mr. VAN ZANDT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, in beginning my statement, I want to commend the House Banking and Currency Committee for the job they have done in perfecting and bringing to the House floor for consideration at this time the bill, S. 1.

My interest in area redevelopment began on June 21, 1954 when I introduced bills designed to provide programs of public facilities construction to stimulate employment in areas having substantial surplus labor and to amend the Small Business Act of 1953 to authorize loans to be made by the Small Business Administration to municipalities having a substantial labor surplus.

Since the introduction of these bills, I have joined many of my colleagues annually in sponsoring similar legislation and at the same time have stood in the well of this Chamber frequently appealing for positive action in alleviating the distress of unemployment in labor surplus areas.

In addition, I have voted for every area redevelopment bill brought to this floor since the 85th Congress and joined advocates of the legislation in an effort to override the Presidential veto of S. 722. Therefore, it is my desire to emphasize that I am prepared to support S. 1 when perfected and ready for a vote by this House.

The basis of my longtime interest in area redevelopment legislation stems from the fact that since World War II—with the exception of the Korean conflict—my congressional district in Pennsylvania comprising the counties of Blair, Centre, and Clearfield has been plagued with chronic unemployment due to depressed conditions in the coal, railroad, clay and related industries, such as brickyards, machine shops, and so forth. Believe it or not, at times as much as 18 percent of our total labor force has been unemployed.

These depressed conditions I have mentioned stem from technological changes, migration of industry, shifts in demand from one product to another, as well as foreign imports such as residual oil, which have captured our eastern seaboard coal markets.

As a classic example, I should like to point to my hometown of Altoona, Pa., which until some years ago was the largest locomotive repair center in the United States. With the advent of diesel locomotives, the pattern of skills required by locomotive repairmen shrank considerably, thus throwing many railroad mechanics and men with related skills into the ranks of the unemployed.

When you add this group to others who lost their jobs due to the decline in coal, freight, and passenger business, you will understand why employment in the Altoona, Pa., railroad shops dropped from nearly 15,000 in 1951 to 4,900 as of March 1, this year, or a loss of more than 10,000 jobs.

With respect to the coal industry, it should be pointed out that since 1948 in the central Pennsylvania area the production of bituminous coal has been on the decline with the result that production has dropped from 60 million tons to 31 million tons in 1960, or a loss in production of 48 percent. In manpower, in 1948 these mines employed 51,500 miners while in 1960 the number employed was approximately 17,500, a decrease of 66 percent. In other words, 34,000 coal miners lost their jobs.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I yield.

Mr. FLOOD. If the gentleman will, I would like him to tell us how many men and women in his district are receiving surplus foods?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. At the present time out of the overall population in my congressional district we have 14 percent receiving surplus commodities. As I say, it is difficult to watch these people because they are mechanics, they are boilermakers, they are upholsterers, they are carpenters, they are bricklayers, and they are all unemployed.

With the unemployment in the railroad and coal industries making up the majority of the unemployed in the two labor market areas in my congressional district, here is the picture as compiled by the U.S. Department of Labor:

	Altoona			Clearfield-DuBois
	Labor force	Unemployment	Ratio, unemployment to labor force	Labor force	Unemployment	Ratio, unemployment to labor force
			Percent			Percent
July 1956.....	52,700	8,100	15.4	(1)	(1)	(1)
July 1957.....	53,800	6,300	11.7	(1)	(1)	(1)
July 1958.....	54,000	9,800	18.1	36,700	5,000	13.6
July 1959.....	53,800	4,500	8.4	35,700	4,200	11.8
July 1960.....	53,300	6,100	11.4	35,600	4,000	11.2

As these figures show, the unemployment problem in my congressional district is simply this: Out of a labor force of nearly 90,000, some 13,000 are unemployed or about 14 percent. This unemployment is not seasonal but chronic, as it has plagued us since the close of World War II with the exception of the period of the Korean conflict.

As you can imagine, both of these labor market areas have been for years classified as areas of substantial and persistent unemployment by the U.S. Department of Labor.

Having lived with all of this chronic unemployment for years, the residents of the central Pennsylvania area know the meaning of ghost towns and the misery that follows in the wake of unemployment, as we watch good American families being forced to exist on public assistance and surplus commodities.

In this connection, as of January 1, in my three-county area there are 29,386 persons eligible for surplus food or nearly 10 percent of the overall population. In fact, in Clearfield County nearly 14 percent of the population are recipients of surplus commodities and dependent upon them for necessities of life.

Faced with the unemployment problem, my colleagues many times have asked the question: "Why is it that these areas of chronic unemployment cannot help themselves?"

The answer is that while some 1,800 communities throughout the country have active area redevelopment groups, I can only speak for my own congressional district where such groups have been active for years and have enjoyed a measure of success. As a matter of fact, every area of unemployment in my congressional district has an industrial development committee of some kind and number 25 in all.

While not all of the committees have been successful, we can point with pride to the fact that hundreds of new jobs have been created in the central Pennsylvania area through community effort.

Outstanding in the effort is the city of Altoona, Pa., where through the Altoona Enterprises, Inc., a subsidiary of the Altoona Chamber of Commerce, 14 new industries have been secured, representing employment for 4,500 persons with an increased annual payroll for the area exceeding $18 million.

The $1,595,000 contributed by Altoona residents to finance this effort represents contributions on the part of a cross section of Altoona's population. In addition, it was necessary to borrow funds from the local banks and, at this moment, the Altoona group has exhausted its borrowing capacity.

Besides praising Altoona, I should like also to commend other communities of my congressional district such as Curwensville, Coalport, Clearfield, Du Bois, Tyrone, Philipsburg, Martinsburg, and Houtzdale, all of which are also pulling themselves up by their own bootstraps.

Therefore, in my congressional district these 25 area redevelopment groups—which have been instrumental not only in attracting new industries to the area but by their activities and faith in the future have created an atmosphere of hope and confidence—are in need of the type of Federal assistance provided for in the bill before us.

What I am saying is this: Our experience in the central Pennsylvania area has convinced us that we cannot do this job alone. If we are going to lick these areas of depression stemming from pockets of unemployment, we desperately need Federal assistance in coordinating our efforts.

Frankly, I do not find it difficult to support S. 1 because as my statement reveals, I have firsthand knowledge of the great need for this legislation. In addition the program as contained in S. 1, if written into law, will provide a coordinated attack on the basic economic problems confronting areas of substantial and persistent unemployment, such as I have in the two labor market areas in my Congressional District.

I have studied the seven major provisions of S. 1 and agree with the Committee Report when it says that such provisions will enable the Federal Government to play its proper role and meet its responsibilities in the field of area redevelopment.

The provisions follow:

First. The bill would place the responsibility for area redevelopment in the Secretary of Commerce to insure that the program will be dealt with at the Cabinet level. At the same time, an Area Redevelopment Administrator would be established in the Department to perform such functions as the Secretary may assign to him under the bill.

Second. The bill would authorize the designation of areas of chronic unemployment and underemployment. Such designation would be mandatory for some communities under criteria set forth in the amendment but the Secretary would designate other areas including rural places according to guidelines set forth.

Third. The Secretary would be authorized to make loans for industrial projects in the designated areas. Two funds of $100 million each would be established by appropriation.

Fourth. Loans would be available on liberal terms for local public facilities to encourage economic expansion. The amount of $100 million would be authorized for appropriation for these loans.

Fifth. Partial grants could be made to communities for local public facilities if these are necessary for the financing of the project. The amount of $75 million is authorized for appropriation for these grants.

Sixth. The bill contains two sections which would vest additional authority in the HHFA Administrator in order to assist redevelopment areas. Grants and loans for urban renewal could be made without regard to the predominantly residential requirement which must be met in most cases. Urban planning grants authorized by the Housing Act of 1954 would be made available to redevelopment areas without regard to the population limit otherwise applicable.

Seventh. Upon a finding by the Secretary of Labor that training is needed, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare could provide information and financial assistance in connection with occupational retraining programs. The Secretary of Labor would be authorized to enter into agreements with the States to pay subsistence payments up to 16 weeks for persons receiving such occupational training.

Mr. Chairman, according to the committee report, the cost of this legislation will be $394 million. May I say I hold no brief for those who quibble and employ delaying tactics over the price tag of an area redevelopment program. Like a few here today, some provisions of the bill may not meet my approval and the cost may be a little high, but since we have billions of dollars to pour into foreign aid, we certainly have a moral obligation to care for the needs of America's unemployed.

By the facts that I have given you, my constituents without Federal aid have given their own money as well as their time and effort to combat this economic problem. Yes, some progress has been made down the long, hard road, but they need a helping hand to attain their objective.

Before concluding my statement I wish to point out that if this bill is enacted into law in its present form, the two labor market areas located in my congressional district—both of which have been classified by the U.S. Department of Labor as areas of substantial and persistent unemployment—will meet the criteria for mandatory designation as redevelopment areas.

In plain words this means that the area redevelopment groups in my three-county area will enjoy Federal assistance in a coordinated attack on the basic economic problems representing the causes of the chronic unemployment.

I think it should be understood that enactment of this bill will not cause the Government to provide jobs immediately for the unemployed through the construction of plants and assignment of Government contracts.

To the contrary, it may be months before many of these areas will solve their unemployment problem since this bill if written into law simply authorizes the Federal Government to rely on local initiative and the efforts of private enterprise by furnishing them technical assistance and guidance together with financial aid, primarily in the form of loans to implement local community redevelopment programs.

Mr. Chairman, as one who represents two chronically depressed areas in Pennsylvania with unemployment at 14 percent of the total labor force it is my sincere desire that S. 1 be approved promptly and that a conference report on the Senate and House bills be agreed to so that the legislation may be sent to the White House at the earliest possible date.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILBERT].

(Mr. GILBERT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GILBERT. Mr. Chairman, I wish to express my strong support of the bill before us which would provide Federal aid to distressed areas. In fact, I introduced a bill covering such aid in January of this year, for I have long recognized the dire need for such assistance.

As a member of subcommittee 2 of the Committee on Banking and Currency, which held extensive hearings on the bill, I heard the many witnesses who testified before us. Members of the Cabinet, representatives of unions, municipal associations, Governors, mayors, and other city officials were among those we heard. All pleaded for passage of this legislation and proved its urgency and necessity. I wish to stress that every elected official, whether city or State, who came before us, urged passage of this legislation.

President Kennedy has stressed that our economy is in trouble. We have had 7 years of diminished economic growth, 3½ years of slack, and 7 months of recession. In these days of crises, we cannot permit further deterioration in our economy; we must take positive and effective steps to stimulate the economy and pave the way for its full capacity performance; we must aim for the highest possible rate of economic growth. Five and a half million unemployed workers live in the 103 designated distressed areas. The bill before us which provides for area redevelopment would be a big step forward in combating the unemployment problem on an intelligent basis and in helping the country generally by stimulating our economy. In New York State there are numerous areas which are in trouble and which are in desperate need of the assistance this legislation would give them.

Due to natural exhaustion of coal and other natural reserves, mechanization of facilities, automation, competition, and technological changes, industrial rehabilitation of numerous areas is necessary if those communities are to survive. Many have tried to solve their own problems; the community has worked, civic leaders have tried to attract new industries, money has been borrowed, the people have made great personal sacrifices, but the forces responsible for the condition are so strong and varied, they require comprehensive measures, and assistance by the Federal Government is imperative. No community can win the battle without Federal help. Let us also recognize the fact that the long-range view is necessary, for a community which is booming today may, because of automation or a new scientific development, find itself in the depressed areas class tomorrow. Sensible, workable plans must be laid now to eliminate and prevent economic distress to the fullest degree possible.

I like to think of the help provided by this bill as a transfusion into the life stream of the economy of those communities now suffering from the blight of economic depression and as a ray of hope into the lives of the unemployed who are now suffering hardships.

Many of my colleagues have been concerned with the question of the pirating of industry from one community to another. The committee, mindful of the dangers which might lie in this type of program, included the strongest, possible antipirating provisions in the bill. If there is any language providing stronger protection, I am certain that we would be happy to adopt that type of amendment.

Many of my constituents are of Puerto Rican background; I am happy that the bill before us would help Puerto Rico, as it meets the bill's requirements as to depressed industrial areas. Much progress is being made in Puerto Rico, and I should like the people there to be encouraged in their efforts to improve their Commonwealth as well as their standards of living.

The chairman of our committee worked conscientiously and judiciously to bring out a good, workable bill, and every effort was made by him to do his best for all concerned. He treated all who appeared before him with fairness and interest. He is to be complimented upon the fine results he has accomplished.

I strongly urge passage of this important bill.

FEDERAL AID TO DISTRESSED AREAS—FACT SHEET 1

VII. PROMPT ACTION ON AREA DEVELOPMENT SOUGHT BY KENNEDY ADMINISTRATION

After reviewing the postelection task force study on area redevelopment, President Kennedy concluded that depressed area problems deserve the most important domestic priority.

"As President, I will direct all agencies of Government to give priority, in all regular programs, to the needs of depressed areas. This includes * * * the agencies concerned with transportation, with flood control, with urban renewal, with conservation." (Senator Kennedy, October 28, 1960.)

In his state of the Union address President Kennedy stressed that our economy is in trouble. He based this on the 7 years of diminished economic growth, 3½ years of slack, and 7 months of recession which we have been experiencing. Among the measures to be proposed to remedy the situation was to redevelop distressed areas, pointing out that large numbers of the 5½ million unemployed workers live in the 103 designated distressed areas.

A. Administration recommendations

1. Provide a workable program to alleviate distress and meet the immediate subsistence needs of the people and to stimulate sustained economic growth, so that the people who live in these distressed areas may share in our Nation's expansion, including:

- (a) technical assistance to enable local communities to plan their economic growth and development intelligently;
- (b) participating loans to assist when conventional lending facilities are unavailable to the area;
- (c) modernized public facilities to encourage industry;
- (d) facilities and opportunities for training and retraining the labor force.

2. Place the depressed areas program in the Department of Commerce, which would be responsible for coordinating aspects of the program involving other Government agencies and departments.

3. Provide flexibility in the program so as to benefit urban and rural areas alike and to function in regions of economic distress which includes parts of two or more States.

B. The need for immediate action

Problems of distressed areas are accentuated with rising unemployment and present inadequate economic growth.

Unemployment over a long period has a destructive effect on the lives of people affected and on the entire community.

The potential of our economy is constantly expanding but the failure to use our full capacity is the urgent economic problem of our day.

The performance of our economy is far below its full capacity: Labor force is rising 1.5 percent yearly; output per man-hour is rising 2 percent yearly due to better plants, equipment, modern technology, improved human skills.

This manpower and productivity alone is basis for a potential annual growth rate of 3.5 percent, but this would still fall short of the rate necessary if we are to meet our challenges at home and abroad.

The deterioration in our economy over the past 7 years makes it imperative that we take immediate steps to stimulate the economy to reverse the trend and to achieve a high rate of economic growth. Area redevelopment legislation is one of several such actions.

As of January 1961, the national unemployment rate was 7.7 percent of the labor force. Seventeen major distressed areas in the Nation have an unemployment rate three-fifths higher than the national average.

The number of distressed areas has risen since President Eisenhower vetoed the 1960 Area Redevelopment bill. In March 1961 101 of the Nation's 150 major industrial areas had 6 percent or more unemployed; 184 smaller areas also had unemployment of 6 percent or more.

C. Senate action

By a 63-27 vote on March 15, 1961, the Senate approved an amended version of S. 1, which conforms in most respects to the administration's bill, H.R. 4569. It authorizes a $394 million program of loans and grants to help rehabilitate the 103 industrial and numerous rural areas designated as chronically depressed areas.

Senate debate centered on control of the program, method of financing, and the amount of expenditures. Senator DOUGLAS, Democrat, of Illinois, sponsor of the Senate bill, originally wanted a new independent agency to administer the program, but yielded to administration wishes that it be placed in the Commerce Department.

DOUGLAS' plan to finance the program through Treasury borrowing instead of requiring annual congressional appropriations survived on a 49-45 roll call vote.

Attempts to scale down the size of the program were defeated as was DIRKSEN's substitute bill providing only a $180 million program. Under the Senate version, the program would expire June 30, 1965 unless renewed by Congress.

D. House Banking and Currency Committee action

During 2 weeks of hearings on the administration's bill (H.R. 4569), testimony supporting the measure was presented by the Secretaries of Commerce, Labor, and Agriculture. The bill was also supported by witnesses representing the AFL-CIO, United Mine Workers, National Farmers Union, American Municipal Association, U.S. Conference of Mayors, and the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association.

Representatives of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the NAM appeared in opposition to the administration bill.

The committee substituted the language of the House bill for the provisions of S. 1 and reported the amended bill on March 22, 1961. (For detailed provisions see H. Rept. 186.)

E. Major provisions of S. 1 (H. Rept. 186)

1. Authorizes $394 million in Federal loans and grants for redevelopment of economically depressed industrial and rural areas.

2. Establishes 3 separate $100 million revolving loan funds, financed by regular congressional appropriations:

(a) Urban redevelopment loans, and (b) rural redevelopment loans may be used for industrial and commercial projects, including construction of new plants, rehabilitation and improvement of existing buildings, and in certain cases, for the purchase of machinery and equipment; may be made for a period of up to 25 years and cover up to 65 percent of the cost of the project; a minimum of 10 percent must be met by State funds and 5 percent must be provided by private lending facilities. The interest rate is based on the average current yield of outstanding Treasury bonds of comparable maturity, plus one-half of 1 percent to cover overhead cost.

(c) Public facility loans may be used for construction and improvement of public facilities within redevelopment area; may be made for a period up to 40 years and cover 100 percent of the total cost of the project.

3. Authorizes $75 million in Federal grants for public facility expansion in areas where it is not practical to use the loan program described in 2-c above. All loans and grants listed are contingent on approval of a local economic development program.

4. Authorizes annual appropriation of $4.5 million for subsistence payments for unemployed workers who are taking part in an authorized training program and $10 million annually for retraining subsistence payments.

5. Makes permanent the authority of the Small Business Administration to make loans to local development corporations.

6. Permits redevelopment areas to participate more fully in the urban renewal program by amending the Housing Act to permit urban planning grants to be made directly to cities and counties in redevelopment areas without time-consuming delays.

7. Authorizes annual appropriation of up to $4.5 million for technical assistance for studies as to how redevelopment programs may be best utilized.

8. Contains an "antipirating" section to forbid the use of funds to assist businesses in relocating "totally or partially" from one area to another.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Boggs, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee having had under consideration the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas, had come to no resolution thereon.

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members speaking today in Committee may have permission to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

HOUSE

1. SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATION BILL, 1961. Both Houses received the conference report on this bill, H. R. 5188 (pp. 4901, 4903, 4961-2). The House agreed to the conference report and acted on amendments in disagreement (pp. 4962-5). The conferees eliminated the items on reimbursement of CCC for various programs. The item on the Development Loan Fund was reduced to $50,000,000 and limited to the Western Hemisphere. (H. Rept. No. 211).
2. DEPRESSED AREAS. Passed, 251-167, with amendments S. 1, to provide aid for depressed areas (pp. 4904-55, 4978). Rejected, 139-242, an amendment by Rep. Widnall in the nature of a substitute, which eliminated the provisions for rural areas and provided for USDA to make a study of this subject (pp. 4928-39). Later rejected a motion by Rep. Widnall to recommit the bill with instructions to report it back with his amendment included, by a 125-291 vote (pp. 4949-54).

Agreed to the following amendments:

- By Rep. Halpern, to make clear that the bill should not result in "raiding industry from one area of the United States to another." pp. 4945-6
- By Rep. Multer, to provide that existing facilities of other Federal agencies would be used "to the fullest extent practicable" rather than "whenever possible." p. 4946
- By Rep. Davis (Ga.), to reduce the number of supergrades from 15 to 5. p. 4947
- By Rep. Montoya, to make clear that the bill would authorize vocational training programs wherever they are feasible for agricultural workers who are unemployed out of season. pp. 4947-8
- By Rep. Montoya, to direct the Commerce Department to establish and conduct a research program on the causes and solutions of unemployment, etc. p. 4948

3. REORGANIZATION. Passed without amendment S. 153, to continue from June 1, 1959, to June 1, 1963, the President's authority to institute reorganization plans unless they are vetoed by Congress. A similar bill, H. R. 5742, was laid on the table. Rejected an amendment by Rep. Hoffman to prohibit effectuation of plans unless approved by a positive vote in both Houses. This bill will now be sent to the President. pp. 4955-61
4. FEED GRAINS PROGRAM. Rep. Schwengel criticized this program and referred to a statement by Dr. Cochrane regarding the anticipated price of corn under the program. p. 4980
5. PURCHASING; SMALL BUSINESS. Rep. Multer reported on recent work and findings of the Small Business Committee regarding Government purchasing, etc. pp. 4965-9
6. PEACE CORPS. Rep. Libonati made various suggestions for administration of the Peace Corps and inserted questions to Mr. Shriver and his answers. pp. 4969-72
7. APPROPRIATIONS. Received from the President amendments to the 1962 Budget for various Government agencies (H. Doc. 129); to Appropriations Committee. p. 4984
8. LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM. Agreed to a concurrent resolution to provide that when the House adjourns today, Mar. 30, it shall stand adjourned until Mon., Apr. 10. Majority Leader McCormack stated that he knew of no business to be transacted on Apr. 10. It was agreed that, on Apr. 11, bills will be in order for consideration under suspension of the rules (if cleared with the minority leadership) and also the Private Calendar. The House is to consider today, Mar. 30, a bill to extend the loan guarantee authority of ICC. pp. 4976-7

House of Representatives

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 29, 1961

The House met at 11 o'clock a.m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D.D., offered the following prayer:

John 3: 17: God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that through Him, the world might be saved.

Almighty God, during this Holy Week, we are commemorating events in the life of our Lord, whose spiritual significance our finite minds cannot comprehend.

We rejoice that when there was no eye to pity and no arm to save, then in the fullness of time Thou didst send Thine only begotten Son, who, on Good Friday, laid upon the altar the acceptable sacrifice of His own life.

May these days be for all of us not only a time of commemoration but of consecration when we are seeking to share in our Master's redemptive ministry.

Show us how we may release the hidden splendor of humanity, emancipating it from everything that defiles and degrades the soul of man and mars the image of God in which we have been created.

Hear us in the name of the Captain of our salvation. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Ratchford, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. McGown, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 107. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to construct, operate, and maintain the Navajo Indian irrigation project and the initial stage of the San Juan-Chama project as participating projects of the Colorado River storage project, and for other purposes.

S. 1358. An act to repeal section 12 of the act of June 26, 1904, prohibiting a charge or collection of fees by consular officers for official services to American vessels and seamen, and to repeal the provisions of the act of June 4, 1920, authorizing the free issuance of passports to seamen.

The message also announced that the Vice President had appointed Mr. Charles William Engelhard, Jr., of New Jersey, Mr. Elmo B. Roper, Jr., of Connecticut, Mr. Douglas Wynn, of Mississippi, Mrs. Edith S. Sampson, of Illinois,

Mr. Alex Warden, of Montana, Mr. Christian A. Herter, of Massachusetts, Mr. William F. Knowland, of California, Mr. Ben Regan, of Illinois, Mr. David Rockefeller, of New York, and Dr. Francis S. Hutchins, of Kentucky, to the U.S. Citizens Commission on NATO.

THIRD SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the managers on the part of the House may have until midnight tonight to file a conference report on the third supplemental appropriation bill, H.R. 5188.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this deficiency appropriation bill has been tremendously increased in cost since it left the House by reason of some 90 amendments put on the bill by the other body. I would hope that the House would have ample time to study this conference report before it is called up. I assume the request of the distinguished majority leader means that it could be called up tomorrow morning or tomorrow afternoon; is that correct?

Mr. McCORMACK. Well, if I might make an observation, I am simply a conduit to make the request. Now, in answer to the gentleman's question, I would say that if the conference report is not filed tonight, the only opportunity to read the report would be in the morning. I think that observation is practically correct.

Mr. GROSS. I am only pleading for time for Members of the House in view of the fact, as I understand it, that there are some 90 amendments to this bill to study and know what is in the conference report.

Mr. McCORMACK. Of course, this is the customary way to do it.

Mr. GROSS. I am well aware of that. But, I do believe that Members should have an opportunity to examine the conference report that may carry an abnormal number of amendments and changes of language.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I knew, of course, of the addition of these very substantial amounts in the other body. To my mind, they are completely unjustified. It may be that some consider it a matter of bookkeeping, but I believe it is more than that. Now, I shall not object to this request because I am quite sure that the managers on the part of the House are not going along with those additions that were made in the other body. I certainly do not think they should. I think they ought to stand for the House position.

We passed a bill providing for supplemental appropriations that I think contained all that is needed at this time. As far as I am concerned, I am not going to object, but I express the hope that the managers on the part of the House will maintain the House position.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

EDUCATION SUBCOMMITTEE OF COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION AND LABOR

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Education of the Committee on Education and Labor be permitted to sit during general debate today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 31]

Cannon	McDonough	Taber
Celler	McSweeney	Thompson, La.
Davis, Tenn.	Macdonald	Willis
Durno	Morrison	Wilson, Calif.
Findley	Morse	Wright
Fino	St. Germain

The SPEAKER. On this rollcall 405 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

CORRECTION OF VOTE

Mr. KING of California. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 22 I am recorded as not voting. I was present and voted

"aye." I ask unanimous consent that the RECORD and Journal be corrected accordingly.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON UNEMPLOYMENT AND AUTOMATION

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Unemployment and Automation of the Committee on Education and Labor be permitted to sit today during general debate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Ways and Means may have until midnight Friday, March 31, to file a report on the bill H.R. 6027, including minority views and individual supplemental views.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment in certain economically distressed areas.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (S. 1), with Mr. Boggs in the chair.

The clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee rose on yesterday, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] had 52 minutes remaining and the gentleman from New York [Mr. KILBURN] had 58 minutes remaining.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN].

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. BAILEY].

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Chairman, first of all I want to express my wholehearted support of S. 1 as amended by the House Committee on Banking and Currency. I shall leave questions of technicalities and the composition of the legislation to members of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

It will be my purpose, Mr. Chairman, since my State of West Virginia has the greatest unemployment and is at the bottom of the economic totem pole to devote the time allotted me to the consideration of some situations in West Virginia.

This photograph shows a typical mine tippie in West Virginia. More than one-half of the tipples in West Virginia are now closed and they are crumbling to waste material because the mines are no longer in use. The point I want to make here is that coal is an important factor in national defense. If mine installations like this one are allowed to depreciate, what will be the situation in a basic fuel as necessary as coal in the event we had a third world war? I mention that to show its importance to our national defense. This is a typical mine tippie. You can see what is happening to it.

Here is a mine that has been closed. Here is the mine foreman. There are no men working. This is another installation that is depreciating, but it may be needed before many more years.

Here is a typical mine company store, boarded up, not in operation during the last year. Four hundred miners were employed at that installation.

This shows a typical notice on the side of the company house telling them to apply for jobs, but the window is boarded up. There are no jobs.

Mr. Chairman, I want everybody to see this one. Here is a bus used by the company to transport miners to their mines. Today it is occupied by a family of four as a home for an unemployed miner.

Here is a typical situation in a miner's home in West Virginia in which this family lived. You can see the coal burner there and the wrack and ruin inside the home of a typical miner.

I hope you all have an opportunity to observe this one. This is the unemployment situation in West Virginia areas of substantial unemployment. I call your attention to the fact that the distressed areas in West Virginia parallel largely our areas of coal production. Coal is in difficulty, and every coal area in West Virginia is in difficulty. In these red areas indicated on this map there is an excess of unemployment of 30 percent. While in the State as a whole it is not that high, these are the outstanding areas of unemployment. In these areas marked in red over 35 percent of the people are living on surplus foods.

On this map the counties marked in red have lost population in excess of 40 percent between 1950 and 1960.

Here are the public assistance payments. Notice the rise during the 10-year period, and they are still mounting.

Here is the out-migration, showing the percentage of people who have left West Virginia to try to find jobs in other areas. This would indicate that some counties have lost from 20 to 50 percent of their population, and some even more. The others are less, of course. But the people of West Virginia have honestly tried to find jobs abroad but have not been able to find them because of the fact that 101 of the 154 economic areas have the same situation, although not quite as bad as West Virginia has, but there is unemployment all over the Nation.

Here is your per capita income for West Virginia. Notice that these red areas here are $900 to $1,299 of income.

In the white areas the income is from $1,300 to $1,699. In the other areas like this area here it is $1,700 to $2,099. The national average is $2,247. West Virginia's average is $1,700, over $500 below the average income of the people throughout the Nation.

I know my time is limited, but I would like to make this appeal to you. Ten years ago when we found approximately 4,000 of our school districts throughout the county impacted you rallied to my legislation and set up legislation for making payments by the Government for having impacted school districts. It was a very popular piece of legislation. I submit that the Federal Government by legislation on the statute books, overt action by the Congress itself, has impacted these distressed areas.

Seventy-five percent of the economic troubles in the State of West Virginia and the unfavorable conditions in West Virginia have been brought about by the administration as well as the maladministration of our present trade agreement policies. Do not let them tell you that our troubles in West Virginia are due to automation. We have lost 27½ million tons of our soft coal markets as a result of the importation of cheap residual oil from Venezuela. As a result of the way our present trade policies are being administered, we have had just as much of an impact as a result of the actions of the Government in these distressed areas as there was in the 4,000 school districts.

When it comes to the matter of school districts, I have been witnessing as chairman of the committee hearing Members of Congress tell about how terrific the Government impact has been on their districts, and I am a little bit surprised that there is not a little more interest shown on this economic impact as a result of the trade agreement policies that is very, very serious, indeed.

Let me tell you that testimony was brought out before my Committee on Education about a week ago showing that schoolteachers in the State of West Virginia are receiving as their basic, beginning pay as low as $1,500 a year.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from West Virginia has expired.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 additional minutes to the gentleman.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Chairman, my State of West Virginia is not asking for charity. All we want in West Virginia is jobs. At least six and possibly seven of the major industries in the State of West Virginia are suffering under the handicap of too much competition from foreign imports. If that situation were remedied, we would not be in a bad economic condition in West Virginia. I ask you to give serious consideration to the needs not only of my State of West Virginia but to the needs of all of the other States that have been impacted by government activities and by Federal legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I want to express my appreciation for what was done by the Committee on Banking and Currency. Section 5 of the original bill stated that these grants and loans are being made to compensate distressed areas for injury suffered as a result of certain Federal laws and the reciprocal trade agreements act was named as being one of those Federal laws. I asked the committee to take that out because I would feel somewhat embarrassed to support a bill which would not solve the economic difficulties of the State of West Virginia. The passage of this bill will not solve the problems we face in my State. It will be a temporary shot in the arm, but it will not solve these economic problems. We are simply asking you to give us the same consideration that was given to large parts of this Nation.

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate this opportunity to plead the cause of my State of West Virginia before my colleagues.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SCRANTON].

(Mr. SCRANTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCRANTON. Mr. Chairman, coming from an area which is highly interested in this legislation, as almost everybody in this Chamber knows, it would be very remiss of me at this time if I failed to thank the Republican leadership of the House for the opportunity to serve on this committee, and to thank the eminent ranking minority member of this committee [Mr. KILBURN] for giving me the opportunity to serve on the subcommittee. I am exceedingly grateful to that distinguished Member of this body, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE] who heads our committee and the distinguished Member, the gentleman from Texas, the head of the subcommittee [Mr. PATMAN], for their courtesies and kindnesses shown me in the hearings and in the meetings of the committee.

There is a reason for this gratitude, and the reason goes deep: A great many people of my area have had this condition of chronic and persistent unemployment for a period of many years. This area was one of many which immediately after World War II started an effort of its own to establish a community organization, to establish more businesses and more enterprises, and to build plants. The results were amazing.

Because this was the first such approach, the first such community corporation formed, it was copied and followed by a great many others, in foreign countries as well as our own, and we have had as many as 200 delegations come to our county to learn what we have done and to follow in our path.

Many depressed areas have tried to the best of their ability to provide self-help. They have gone to the people over and over again. Some 51,000 people in Lackawanna County alone have given money in order to pick themselves up by their own bootstraps; and these people and many others in the country have established such organizations and have done the best they could to help themselves. The result is that we now have a great number of such community corporations. In addition there are many smaller communities in long-distressed areas which unfortunately are in no financial shape today, nor have they been over many years, to carry on such self-help without some outside source of financing.

Essentially, therefore, I support this bill, not to give these places of persistent and substantial unemployment certain advantages over more prosperous communities, but simply to give them an opportunity to compete or, to put it colloquially, "to catch up." They have tried on their own, they have obtained bank help, they have obtained some help from insurance companies, some State help, but, unfortunately, a great many of them have now run out of money or are in the process of running out, or are in such condition that they are unable to borrow because of legal limits on their indebtedness.

The fact is that in this Nation today financing of industrial plants has become a common practice, so common in fact, that industry just assumes it will be available. It is available almost without limit almost everywhere in the Nation except in distressed areas. So availability of financing through public or private means is assumed by industry, and that is exactly why the labor surplus areas find themselves at such a disadvantage without such financing.

Without this additional source of financing many of these areas are unable to develop public facilities, and this is a dire and extreme need in certain areas. Why? Because without industry you do not have the tax source to keep up with the rest of the Nation in the development of public facilities; and, without public facilities, industry is not interested in locating in an area. It is, in essence, a vicious spiral; one goes hand in hand with the other.

I have tried to describe a situation that maintains in a great many areas. Let us see how it occurs and why it is something that must be attacked, why this program will work and why it will do the job. Let me give you just one example, an example from our own area, if you will, but which I think is extremely important.

Most of these communities, as you well know, have established a system of self-help. They have an organization. They have built plants. These plants have been leased or rented to industries. The result is that in the course of time by rentals, or by purchasing the plants the money comes back, and it comes back well and finally. The same thing is happening to all of our community organizations we have established; it is happening in States where they have aided in financing for this purpose, and it will happen with the Federal Government if it steps into the field.

Remember, this is not a handout, and a handout is not what we want. We want simply another source of financing, the kind of financing we have been doing in our States and the States have been helping us to do. These communities have gone to the people over and over again for money and many have reached the limit of what can be raised locally.

Likewise, we are not in the least interested in having Federal control over this system. We believe that having done it ourselves, through our own local leadership and initiative, that is the way to do it, that is the most effective way.

I am pleased to state to you, Mr. Chairman, that the Secretary of Commerce in his testimony before our subcommittee made it very clear he feels likewise; that local leadership and local initiative are the basic essentials of this program as they have been over the past 15 years.

In short, this whole program is not intended in any sense as a method of having the Federal Government get into an area where it does not belong. It is intended as a separate step of financing of exactly the same type we have been doing locally through the people, out of their own pockets, and with the help of banks and other institutions.

It is, as I say, an answer to this problem which, instead of giving out Federal money as a handout, acts as an impetus to private enterprise, so that private enterprise takes over the buildings just as we would like to have them do once they are paid for by rentals or by purchase.

Two last points. It has been pointed out before, and I reiterate, this bill is a better bill than any that has yet come before the House for consideration. Why? Because it has four features recommended by the Eisenhower administration—the direct method of appropriation, a strong antipiracy provision, criteria which was recommended by the Eisenhower administration and, last but by no means least, the administration of it is placed in the Department of Commerce.

That leads me to make my last point, which is basic, in my opinion. Certainly for a bill of this type which gives a great deal of discretion to the administrator it is very important as to how it will be administered. I recommend to every Member of this body that they read the testimony given before our subcommittee by the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Hodges, not for any specific words but for his general approach to this problem. Here is a man who quietly and sincerely has the proper and correct approach.

He wants this legislation to be used as an impetus to private enterprise, and not as a Federal takeover. He makes it very clear that first and foremost in his mind is an effort to make this the kind of program that will fit into our private enterprise system. He wants this legislation used as it is intended for those areas that most need it so that we can revive the economic status of them and give them an opportunity to catch up.

Clearly I favor this legislation.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCRANTON. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FULTON. I would like to compliment the gentleman on an excellent statement and also on his hard work on this subject. It is encouraging to find someone like him who went into this thoroughly and knows what he is talking about.

Mr. SCRANTON. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, as a further extension of my remarks made during the course of today's debate on the Area Redevelopment Act, I submit the following:

ANSWERING OPPOSITION ARGUMENTS

In the subcommittee hearings, testimony in opposition to this legislation has centered around four main arguments. The first of these is piracy. All who testified recognize the necessity for freedom of movement by industry and, in fact, advocated such mobility. Industry will move, and does.

In the first instance, the corporation itself makes a decision to relocate. Then, there follow innumerable factors involved in picking the site. Financing is only one of these factors; others being markets, transportation, educational and recreational facilities, housing, labor relations and so forth.

I firmly believe that pirating by depressed areas is tremendously over-emphasized and, in fact, has been turned into something of a "red herring" or shibboleth. In my own district, for example, of 32 new industries that have come to our area through our local financing arrangement, only two have been relocations which have involved only 155 employees. I think Secretary Hodges, in his testimony, hit the nail on the head, and I quote:

Gentleman, these areas are now not in balance. They are not competitive economically with other places in the Nation. You can do a whole lot for them and still they won't be as good as the average industrial and rural community of this country.

The subcommittee and full committee have established the strongest anti-piracy provision in the history of this legislation. It states unequivocally, in section 6(a), "Such financial assistance shall not be extended for working capital, or to assist establishments relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another." In addition, there is the very strong right arm of congressional pressure in the event of an attempt to use Federal funds for relocations of industry, once this legislation is passed.

The second main argument is that this legislation is discriminatory in favor of certain areas as opposed to others. This same argument may be used for almost anything that this Congress does. Any time you appropriate for airports, or dams, or rivers, or highways, or defense installations, or harbors, and so forth, you are using tax money obtained from certain areas for the benefit of others. I think this is no argument at all.

The third major charge made against this legislation is that it is based on a handout, or, at the very least, a Federal intervention into an area where the Federal Government does not belong.

This legislation was planned to assist certain areas that have been subjected to chronic unemployment for various reasons. I submit that it will not act as a handout and, in fact, is a far better way of handling this problem for the areas concerned and the unemployed than one of continued extension of unemployment compensation by both the National and State Governments. For this legislation helps to give a permanent answer to the problem, and not merely a temporary doling of money. It has, in fact, proved just that. It acts as an impetus to the creation of more private enterprise.

Let me give you an example. The programs of self-help in northeastern Pennsylvania have resulted in many new plants being built there. These plants are built and financed by community development, nonprofit organizations. They build plants and then lease them to industrial tenants who, over a period of years, pay off the investment of the community corporation and eventually, through rental payments or outright purchase, own the buildings.

This is no different than what occurs with insurance or other institutional financing or, for that matter, corporate financing itself.

With the advent of the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority, communities were helped by the State taking second mortgages on the buildings. These, too, are paid through the rental or the purchase of properties by the industries themselves.

Exactly the same course would take place with the Federal loans that are provided for in the legislation before us.

Accordingly, what happens is simply this—and it has happened over and over again in our area. The industries, through their payment of rent or outright purchase, pay back to the community corporation or the State government, or the banks—and now perhaps the Federal Government—the funds that are used for this industrial development, and the plants themselves are in the hands of private enterprise, as we all desire them to be.

I repeat, this is exactly what has happened in our area, and what will continue to happen under this legislation.

The last main argument used against this legislation is that it is pointless because the money will simply be wasted and will accomplish no results. Or, that it isn't enough money to do the job.

If the road to industrial rehabilitation is 20 miles long and a community like those of northeastern Pennsylvania that I have described has been able to travel the first 10 miles on its own resources, it is pure nonsense to argue that Federal funds needed now, for the last 10 miles of the road, will be used for the same purpose and in the same way as the now exhausted local money was used on the first 10-mile stretch.

Incidentally, isn't it ironic that the same witnesses who tell us that this legislation is bad because it will be so effective that it will lead to pirating are invariably the same witnesses who tell us that this legislation is bad because it won't help the distressed areas at all? These arguments, frequently offered by the same witness, are not even consistent. The truth, of course, lies where it usually does, somewhere in the middle. The truth is that Federal funds, though they contain no magic to pirate industry from one area to another, are absolutely essential if the economically distressed areas are going to be able to continue the self-help programs which they have so courageously begun.

ALTERNATIVES

I have attempted to answer the main arguments against this legislation. I now raise the question of what the alternatives are to it.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce and others recommended moving the unemployed. I completely disagree with this thesis. Clearly, there will be, in the course of time, necessity for moving people from some areas that are not economically viable. But to take hundreds of thousands of people and tell them they must go somewhere else to live is, in the first instance, callous and inhuman and, looking at it utterly realistically, it is uneconomic.

The expense of moving people and the establishment of new houses, streets, sewers, schools, and all the facilities for same is far beyond the expense of establishing industry in the areas where they already live. In addition, of course, there is tremendous waste involved in abandoning the selfsame facilities in the areas where they now live. Unemployed peoples for the most part do not have the means to make such moves and, by moving, clearly they would lose most of their present assets.

The second alternative is what we are presently doing—paying unemployment compensation and public assistance. This, too, is fantastically wasteful in comparison with efforts for putting men to work. In the State of Pennsylvania, in the year 1960, $82 million was paid in unemployment compensation and $48 million in public assistance. If the unemployment rate were reduced to 3 percent, this would mean a $90 million per year saving in that State alone.

Besides being tremendously expensive, such sums do not solve anything. They simply help people to subsist temporarily. In contrast, this legislation, through its impetus to private initiative and enterprise, fosters a permanent solution to unemployment.

ADMINISTRATION

Much of the success of this legislation will depend on its administration. Personally, I was greatly impressed by Secretary Hodges' approach to this subject. He sees this in its proper light, designed to help those areas which are truly areas of substantial and persistent unemployment, and as a method of fostering their economic comeback through giving an impetus to a free economy.

I quote from his testimony:

Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the Committee: I think that the very passage of this bill will give heart to many of these thousands. Now, it is true that they will not all be taken care of. Nothing ever does that. But we can make a start.

I would just like to say this: I am basically a conservative. I talked with three people the other day from one of the Western European countries who were over here, people I knew very high up in business and government, and that country has imported 300,000 laborers to take care of the jobs and there are still a hundred thousand more jobs than they have people. It is a country that we in this Nation helped to build up to its present condition, where now they not only have money, they have more jobs than they can take care of. They cannot find enough people.

It seems to be a shame that in areas, whether it is eastern Kentucky, eastern Pennsylvania, or where, that we cannot do something to help take care of some of our own people even though it looks on the face of it, at times, like we are trying to give away money. Actually, we can inspire these people in the various areas to do something themselves. I don't like to see the Federal Government do everything, and I believe we can inspire these various groups to do something. There have been various questions raised about piracy. I know what they are talking about because I have had letters from other States already, saying we are against this because we don't want somebody to move out of our State; we are afraid they will move to a depressed area, and so forth.

Gentlemen, these areas are now not in balance. They are not competitive economically with other places in the Nation. You can do a whole lot for them and still they won't be as good as the average industrial and rural community of this country.

So I think we ought to see, whether it is in Kentucky, West Virginia, where your coal mines are pulled out, or wherever, what we can do. You have the basic problem, of course, of people, whatever their economic condition is, not wanting to leave home. That adds to this difficulty, so it would call for retraining, it could call for some relocation of people in isolated places, but I hope we will make a start on it because I think it is the human and proper thing to do, and it is no more than we are doing for people in other parts of the world.

Mr. Chairman, by his testimony, the Secretary of Commerce, to whose Department this legislation will be assigned for administration, has shown a sound, sensible, and reasonable approach to the problem. In my opinion, his is the proper approach, for this legislation is designed to assist the areas of substantial and persistent unemployment, and not to be used as a "boondoggle" or as an opportunity for master planning of our entire economy. The Secretary sees it in the proper light, and hopefully will see to it that the administration of this legislation will follow his philosophy.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. JONAS].

Mr. JONAS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to congratulate the last speaker on a very fine and clear-cut statement of his position. I should like to ask him one question, if I may.

Have the communities or the development corporations in Pennsylvania made any use of their borrowing authority from the revolving fund of the Small Business Administration?

Mr. SCRANTON. Yes, they have. In fact, we have in the counties, for example, that I represent, many small business loans.

Mr. JONAS. I do not mean that. I mean loans to publicly owned investment and development corporations organized within the State, and not loans to individual small business concerns.

Mr. SCRANTON. Yes, they have, sir, to a certain extent. Our great problem, as I tried to point out, is that we are using now every source of financing but we still need more.

Mr. JONAS. I thank the gentleman. I asked that question because the Washington Star for March 27 quoted Mr. John E. Horne, head of the Small Business Administration, as inviting local chambers of commerce, planning organizations, and development agencies to take the initiative in organizing development companies which can make application for loans out of the revolving fund of SBA. The story says that fewer than 100 loans have been made to State and local development companies during the 2½ years that SBA has been authorized to make such loans.

I was interested in that, because my State is one which has a well functioning business development corporation, and it has already obtained a million dollar loan out of this revolving fund and has a commitment for another million dollar loan.

Now, the report of the Small Business Administration for the 6-month period ending December 31, 1960, shows that up to that date a total of $17,405,224 had been loaned to State and local development companies to be used by them to promote the purposes of this legislation. In addition, a total of $26,022,156 has been committed for future loans. This makes a total of $43,427,380 either already lent to these State and local development corporations or committed, and the report shows $152,422,881 available balance as of December 31, 1960. Now, that is a substantial sum of money and it appears to me that the States that have business development corporations are making a mistake if they do not take advantage of the borrowing authority out of this revolving fund.

While I am on this subject, may I ask the gentleman from West Virginia, who made a very appealing statement, a question if he is in the chamber? Or, may I ask anyone on the committee, is it true—and I read this in the testimony of one of the witnesses before the committee—that during the last 10 years more than $2 billion in new plant investment has been made in West Virginia? Is that correct, or does the record confirm that statement?

Mr. BAILEY. That is not true.

Mr. JONAS. I saw that statement in the testimony before the committee and it was not challenged. The statement was that during the last decade $2 billion had been invested in West Virginia in plant expansion.

Mr. BAILEY. That is not true. It is true that we brought in an installation known as the Kaiser Aluminum Co. in the last 10 years, but no figure even approximating $2 billion in investment.

Mr. JONAS. May I ask the gentleman one other question. Does West Virginia have a business development corporation?

Mr. BAILEY. Just what does the gentleman mean by that?

Mr. JONAS. A publicly owned development corporation organized to help locate industry within the State or in expanding existing industry, with authority to borrow funds from the Revolving Fund of the Small Business Administration and otherwise to carry out its corporate functions.

Mr. BAILEY. We have a service carried on by our State Publicity Bureau, an industrial group set up by law.

Mr. JONAS. We have a Development Corporation in North Carolina, and I would like to call the Committee's attention to its record during the last 5 years.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me for just a moment?

Mr. JONAS. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. We have a lot of so-called community groups over the State trying to interest industry to come in, but there is no active organization other than that carried on through our Governor's office.

Mr. JONAS. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. BAILEY. One other thought, please. Let me say that the State will only be benefited temporarily by this type of legislation. Basically something else will have to be done.

Mr. JONAS. Well, we have a Business Development Corporation in North Carolina. It was organized under the leadership of then Governor now Secretary of Commerce Hodges 5 years ago and has had a very successful career as I will point out shortly. Before doing that, I would like to say that if we are going to have this legislation I am gratified that the administration will be under the direction of Secretary of Commerce Hodges instead of under a separate and new bureau. Secretary Hodges has had a great deal of experience, during his 6 years as Governor of our State, in the location of industry and I am sure he will do a better job of administering this program than one who might be brought in from the outside. It isn't because the responsibility of this proposed program is placed upon the Secretary of Commerce that I question the advisability of this legislation but for entirely different reasons which I will state later.

As a matter of fact, the Department of Commerce is already active in the field encompassed by this legislation. This activity is under the Office of Area Development and this office has described its activities as follows:

The Office of Area Development in the Business and Defense Services Administration serves as a central point in the Federal Government where State and local organizations, public and private, can obtain information on Federal programs available to communities seeking assistance in their economic development activities. Technical advice and guidance, based on the successful experiences of other communities, is a key factor in the Office's assistance to labor-surplus areas in developing new jobs.

But now I would like to give you a report on the experiences of the Business Development Corp. of North Carolina, to show what can be accomplished in bringing new industry to a State and in expanding existing business enterprises to provide new jobs. This corporation was organized for the purpose of promoting, developing, and advancing the economic welfare of our State. The fifth annual report shows that there are 1,802 stockholders of this corporation. Capital funds were supplied to the corporation as follows: 85 commercial banks provided $2,906,000; 13 life insurance companies provided $1,105,200; 40 building, savings and loan associations provided $1,093,000. This makes a total of $5,104,200. In addition, the corporation has borrowed $1 million from the Small Business Administration and has in hand a commitment from SBA for another $1 million.

Since the start of operations in 1956, the corporation has approved 131 loans totaling $15,915,965. Some of the loans were to finance the construction of new plants and the expansion of existing ones, for the acquisition of machinery and equipment, working capital, and for payment of existing indebtedness. The direct result of this activity was maintaining employment for at least 8,356 people and creating employment for an additional 13,540 people, or a total of 21,896 jobs.

As of December 31, 1960, all installments on loans were current. Additional applications for loans are being processed daily. The operations of this development corporation have been so successful that at the October 12, 1960, meeting of the board of directors a dividend of 10 cents per share was declared on the capital stock. This is truly an example of how a State can by aggressive and imaginative action, and through the aid of existing agencies of the Federal Government, promote its own business prosperity and economic welfare.

Mr. Chairman, may I say also that we have other Federal programs that are available for assistance without setting up a new organization which will duplicate the work that is already being done by various other Federal agencies. For example, we have a Community Facilities Administration in the Housing and Home Finance Agency. May I quote one statement from the last report of that agency?

By the end of November 1960 local communities had been assisted in the provision of new or improved facilities through 294 net approved loans for almost $90 million. In addition, 37 loans for $10 million have been canceled after approval due to subsequent availability of private financing.

The Community Facilities Administration also makes advances to local communities for advance planning on public works projects. This program is financed from a revolving fund to which appropriations are authorized up to $48 million. Through the end of fiscal year 1960, this agency approved advances amounting to some $34.2 million. Under the program for the current year and that proposed for fiscal year 1962, net approved advances will reach $55 million with a potential construction cost of $3.3 billion.

The Department of Agriculture, through the Farmers Home Administration, is making loans to farmers, and it also has a rural development program instituted in 1955.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONAS. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. WIDNALL. The gentleman earlier spoke about $2 billion in new plant investment, as testified to by somebody on page 230 of the subcommittee hearings. It reads as follows:

When we consider that in the past decade more than $2 billion in new plant investment has been made in West Virginia, yet there remain areas of chronic distress, just what might be the effect of West Virginia's share of $389.5 million fund? * * * With the need for investment of at least $15,000 to create one job, just think of the inadequacy of these funds to meet the apparent present needs for jobs.

Mr. JONAS. That was the statement I remember reading in the hearings. I should like to quote one other statement made by the same witness, which I think points out the fallacy of this approach:

The laws of economics cannot be revoked by the Congress. Neither can the facts of geography, the absence of natural resources, the location of markets, the desires of the consumer, or the personal will of the worker be radically affected by anything you place upon the lawbooks.

It is my judgment that credit, in addition to what is already available through Government agencies and from private and commercial sources, will not be decisive in locating industry in depressed areas. There are many and more important factors, such as aggressive leadership on the State and local level, availability of markets, labor supply, transportation, government, climate, availability of water and power, individual site characteristics—and of course many others—that will determine where industry will locate or relocate.

This bill will not do what its sponsors hope. If I thought it would, I would support it. I think the result will be a cruel disappointment to those who hope for so much from it.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON].

(Mr. MAGNUSON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the area redevelopment bill, S. 1, as reported from the House Committee on Banking and Currency. The national economy has reached a state that requires comprehensive and prompt action. As of January 1, 1961, 103 areas in 26 States and Puerto Rico were in such a state as to be considered depressed areas under the requirements of the administration bill, 3—such areas being in the State of Washington—Aberdeen, Anacortes, and Port Angeles. One community in Washington State reported as much as 37 percent of its work force idle. On January 1, 1961, 7.7 percent of the national labor force was unemployed. The nature and extent of this economic distress is such that the Government can no longer wait for it to pass.

There are two forms of unemployment. The first is the interim displacement of a worker who will shortly be rehired in the same occupational area. There is no need to retrain this worker, while the normal program of unemployment compensation—though, perhaps, inadequate—is sufficient to ameliorate his interim distress. The second is chronic or permanent displacement. This is essentially different from interim short-term unemployment. Here we refer to the worker who, though skilled, suddenly discovers that his particular skill is no longer needed by industry—in some cases the industry itself may cease to function. For this worker no amount of unemployment compensation is adequate. This worker will not be re-employed—will not be employable—unless he acquires the new skills demanded by industrial growth.

It is the relief of chronic or permanent unemployment with which the supporters of S. 1 are primarily concerned. Explicit in the bill is the recognition that this type of unemployment is an area-wide disability, not limited to the individual worker. Its causes are multiple: First, excessive reliance upon a single industry or occupation—the failure to diversify; second, technological change and systems advance; third, shifts in demand—the introduction of new products and materials; fourth, migration of industry; and fifth, the depletion of natural resources—minerals and timber.

The answer to the problem of chronic unemployment is obviously complex. Often the most grievously injured are the established workers who have plied their skills for many years, who may have families and homes. When chronic unemployment strikes, property values fall, while the worker who has placed his life savings in a home finds himself unable to retrieve his equity. Even should he relocate in another area, his seniority—his job security—is lost and he is the first to be laid off in slack times. Relocation would further entail the abandonment of heavy investment in schools, roads, public utilities and private enterprise. To be sure, some workers, largely young workers, may be relocated, but clearly relocation is not the answer.

The proponents of the area redevelopment bill believe that at least part of the answer is to be found in the retraining of workers. The decline of certain industries, new technical processes, and the demands of the new industries of the space age for men of technical skills has created alternate scarcity and abundance which society has not proved sufficiently flexible to absorb. S. 1 would provide stepped-up programs for retraining workers in areas of chronic unemployment. Under the bill, 4.5 million would be appropriated annually for this retraining, to be conducted, in normal situations, by existing State vocational education agencies, with the assistance of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. In addition, a $10 million annual appropriation would be provided for retraining subsistence payments, to workers engaged in such a program and not receiving other compensation, to be paid for a period of up to 16 weeks and at a rate equal to the State unemployment compensation benefits. The significant element here is that at the end of the 16-week period, the worker might qualify for a position utilizing his newly acquired skills. Whereas, when the present system terminates, the worker is still displaced, still unprepared for productive reentry into the labor market, and compelled by necessity to rely upon the various welfare agencies.

The area redevelopment bill is geared to the presently distressed areas. Although we have every hope that it will serve its purpose, it can only be considered as an emergency measure. As reported from the Senate, the bill would lapse on June 30, 1965, unless renewed. In the interim it is incumbent upon the various areas of our economy to face squarely their responsibility. Trade unions, the traditional guardians of worker skills, must have the foresight to encourage their members to extend their capabilities, while apprenticeship programs must be directed to meet the challenge of technological advance. Private enterprise must recognize its social responsibility as a source of the commonweal, must look forward to meet market changes, and must cooperate with the trade unions in refitting and retraining to meet new requirements of our complex and growing economy.

The retraining of workers is only part of the answer. S. 1 proposed that the direction of retraining be determined by Department of Labor surveys. Extensive planning is essential at all levels to produce an efficient meeting of capability with demand. The program would be administered through an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce. The local areas would survey their economic resources and with assistance from appropriate agencies, submit a program to the coordinating agency. Programs consistent with the economic needs of the area and Nation would then receive Federal matching funds in the proportion of 35 percent non-Federal and 65 percent Federal. Grants would be made available to areas where no other means of development could be found. Suitable industries would be encouraged to relocate in redevelopment areas, always on the basis of comparative advantage. Industrial diversification would be promoted. The bill extends the authority of the Small Business Administration and amends section 701 of the Housing Act of 1954, the latter to stimulate needed renewal projects both in residential housing and commercial district rehabilitation. Where a direct relationship could be shown to the total economic development, grants and loans would be made for public utility type projects—water and sewage systems, access roads, and so forth. For basic project assistance, both urban and rural, 375 million would be appropriated.

Obviously, the amount of planning necessary to conduct successfully such a program would be beyond the scope of strictly area groups—labor unions, private industries, planning bodies, and municipal and State agencies. The Area Redevelopment Administrator would, however, be expected to work in closest coordination with these area groups. The comprehensiveness of the program is its essence.

Essentially, this is a positive program. Instead of granting a mere subsistence dole, it endeavors to retrain workers and to renew their productivity. It encourages industry to relocate in areas of chronic unemployment. It encourages communities to plan for their future, and in this regard, supplies technical assistance. Mr. Chairman, it occurs to me that passage of this bill at this time is vital, not only to the depressed areas but also to the reinvigoration of our national economy.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MORGAN.]

(Mr. MORGAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of Senate bill 1, and I want to commend the House Banking and Currency Committee for the fine bill presented here today. For years I have been working to alleviate and aid the plight of the unemployed in my district. For the past five or six years I have joined many of my colleagues in sponsoring similar legislation. I have appeared before the Banking and Currency Committee to testify in behalf of area redevelopment bills and have also appeared before the Senate committee considered similar legislation. I have voted for every area redevelopment bill for the past 3 years and I joined in the attempt to override the President's veto. Therefore, I have a vital interest in this bill because I believe it will be helpful in offsetting the chronic unemployment in surplus labor areas, not only in my district, but in other parts of the State and country.

This bill makes provisions for loans for industrial projects; it provides for loans and grants for local public facilities; it provides for technical assistance; for urban renewal and planning aid and it provides for occupational retraining and subsistence payments.

In an area such as mine where we have had chronic unemployment for a number of years, we look to this bill as the means of helping some of our unemployed to find other jobs. We look to this bill in the hope that it will change some of our ghost towns into live communities once again. We look to this bill to relieve some of the human misery that results from continued and chronic unemployment. We realize, however, that passage of this bill will not bring immediate aid. It may be months and years before many of these areas will solve their unemployment problems. With the passage of this bill, however, my congressional district will have Federal assistance in a coordinated attack on our number one problem.

Mr. Chairman, I am not going to burden the Members of this body with a repetition of facts, which I have presented on this floor many times. I do want to stress the change in conditions which have occurred in my district since we last considered area development legislation.

I have three counties in my congressional district—Fayette, Greene, and Washington. According to January ratings, the Uniontown-Connellsville area in Fayette County had an unemployment percentage of 27.9. This is not only the highest in the State of Pennsylvania, but it is among the highest in the country. This is an increase of 5.8 percent since November 1960. In Greene County, the rate of unemployment is 15.7 percent and in Washington County it is 17.4 percent. These figures do not begin to tell the whole story, however, because many of those unemployed are working only part-time, some only a day or two a week.

Our dominant industries in Fayette County were the coal and coke industries. During the past ten years the coal industry has steadily declined due to the depletion of coal deposits and because of technological improvements. The coke industry has been gradually supplanted through the more economical production of byproduct coke.

Our steel mills in Washington County are operating at about 50 percent capacity. Many of the people who have been unemployed have used up their unemployment compensation benefits and depend upon public assistance for sustenance.

Our local people did not sit idly by, however, and watch conditions grow worse. They formed industrial groups and have been engaged in development activities. They have had industrial promotion campaigns, fund raising campaigns and plant building programs. They have done a good job and together with the aid they have been able to obtain from the State Industrial Authority, they have been able to attract some new industry into the area. Funds from local sources are just about exhausted, however, and Federal cooperation and support, such as provided under this bill are needed to supplant the efforts of State and local communities.

Mr. Chairman, we do not want handouts. We do want the prospect of work, of new jobs and new industries, which in itself will bring about a more healthy community life and a fuller utilization and development of our human resources. I believe this bill goes direct to the problem and holds real promise of practical and effective assistance. It has my wholehearted support and I hope sincerely that the bill will pass.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 4 minutes.

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. JONAS] in talking on this bill referred to the local development corporations. The local development corporations are doing a fine job. The reason for this bill is that the local development corporations cannot do the job alone. They have done all they can on their own. Now they must turn to the Federal Government. That is particularly true as to Pennsylvania and the area described by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SCRANTON]. He knows all about this and was very helpful to the committee in bringing out those facts.

It is true that the Small Business Administration makes loans to these local development corporations. They are very careful about these loans, but they are making them nevertheless. Up to March 17 this year $10,700,000 had been loaned by SBA to these local development corporations. In voting for this bill you will vote for a provision that permits the Small Business Administration to continue to make these loans. This provision expires June 30 of this year, and they will be unable to make the loans, after that date. But in this bill we have a provision to make this lending authority permanent.

Mr. JONAS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. JONAS. I would be willing to vote to extend that authority and provide additional funds, but we already have this Small Business Administration in this field. That is the reason I do not want to set up another agency.

Mr. PATMAN. You would not want to leave this to the Small Business Administration, because they cannot meet the need in the depressed areas. Their loans are rather narrowly restricted, and are made to assist small business concerns only. This is for the purpose of helping these communities that are in distress.

The gentleman referred to as testifying on page 230 of the hearings was a witness for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. He made a suggestion which I think was a cruel suggestion coming from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. He suggested the remedy for this was not giving the people in these areas any Federal aid, not even the small amount that is offered here, but to see that they had opportunities to move from their homes and go elsewhere and seek jobs elsewhere, and leave these distressed communities.

He recommended to our committee to get after the employment services and to get the employment service to go into every distressed community in this country and take an inventory of the available manpower in those communities. He said we should induce unemployed people in these areas to leave their community where they were born and reared. That was his remedy for helping these distressed areas. We did not agree with him. We believe this bill is the minimum. We believe it will do some good. We know it is not a cure-all. It will possibly make unnecessary a general public works bill. If we do not pass this bill, we probably will be called upon to pass one that will cost billions of dollars instead of millions of dollars. This is a good step in the right direction and I hope the committee will support the bill.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ALGER].

(Mr. ALGER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ALGER. Mr. Chairman, obviously I am out of step with many, both those for the substitute bill and for the committee bill. I will say what must be said as I see it.

I do not think most of the people in this country are in sympathy with this Federal regulatory effort. I am looking now at the committee bill, starting on page 44. I am not an attorney so probably I am outside of a privileged circle that understands this language. This language starting on line 18 is in both bills, and if this is not unconstitutional, then I do not know what is unconstitutional. I find it difficult to analyze how some of my colleagues can comprehend what the language actually means. This language is gobbledygook, if I ever heard it. It prescribes complete Government planning and regimentation. I just wonder if you realize, gentlemen, what some of us hear in the taxation committee? Do you realize that the lumber industry, as an example, all of which is now classified in the category of depressed areas, is coming before us saying, Do not impose on us any more Federal taxation. Do not give us any more of that kind of help. Do not bankrupt us. Yet today what are we doing in this bill? We are running up the Federal ante and it has got to come out of the hides of our people in taxes. What do you think is going to happen? I know what is going to happen. We are going to be asked now as in the past for billions of dollars. There is no limit to money expended at the Federal level. Yet the Federal Government has no money, only what it will take in future taxes. Of course, when it comes to that it means we will raise everybody's taxes and there is no limit to where that will take us, nor how much we may deficit finance as an alternative. I understand right at this very minute, while some may be willing to exercise independent judgment, the Secretary of Commerce is in the Speaker's lobby talking to some of the Members to be sure they understand how they ought to vote. I suppose that is the case—I do not know—I know he is there.

In any event, I think such pressure is wrong.

Now, let us look at the bill. I am looking at page 46 of the bill. It says the Secretary will designate the redevelopment areas. Then it goes on to give him more and larger powers as though he were the absolute dictator of American industry, the wishes of the people of the United States, if you please, notwithstanding. However, the substitute bill strikes the redevelopment area definitions. Of course, that is all to the good.

Then, another provision of the bill makes it clear that State government must first designate the areas. Then we are back in the old permissive area. Gentlemen, you understand when we pass a law that is permissive to the States we force the States to comply or lose the return of their share of tax money they have already paid in. I say that is wrong. We are forcing them, indeed, bribing them with their own money to do as we at the Federal level prescribe.

If we would use anything like the effort to try to lighten the tax loan on industry that we use to saddle them with additional tax burdens we would see a wave of prosperity sweep over the Nation the like of which has not been seen since New Deal legislators came down here to Washington to tell men how to run their business. What industry needs is tax relief, not increased Federal spending in the name of help, followed by higher taxes and/or deficit financing, and inflation.

When it comes to who gets these loans, the way it is set up must the recipient be of the right political party? Must he come to some Congressional committee and declare his political connections and plead, please give me some help, I need a loan? I do not think that is right; I do not think the American people think that is right. Again, making Federal loans to some and not to others is unconstitutional.

On page 50:

The project for which financial assistance is sought must be reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located.

What does that mean? I feel it is impossible to tell anybody just what that means. This gobbledygook to support later bureaucratic decisions.

Page 51, starting on the bottom of page 50:

No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms.

That means no one but poor risk cases. It says if they have suffered a turn-down and are poor risks they can get attention from their Uncle Sam. Only poor risks need apply.

Page 61: There is so much talk about what information the Secretary can obtain. Under this he can get all the information he wishes. I read:

SEC. 10. The Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas.

So here we have a ring-around-a-rosy of Federal and local officials conspiring to promote more Federal handouts. Obviously, this is not the intent of some but this language appeals to human beings to be human beings—that is, get all they can while the getting is good.

Then we find this—

The Secretary shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, * * *

This will leave it in the hands of the Secretary to determine what areas and what firms shall receive this aid, placing industries in a supplicating position so much so that their business may succeed or fail based on dependence on government aid and contracts.

Do we really understand what we are doing? We are going to catalogue all industry and could then help those who support the right political party. Some might even say this is a reelection bill, judging from the support such faulty legislation is receiving. For my part I will not support either the committee or substitute bill. One may be the lesser of two evils but the evil either will do our private enterprise economy is something in which I will not be a participant. I regret that politics is in this bill on both sides. The people of this Nation as citizens and as business participants—management and labor alike—deserve better than this abrogation of Constitutional protection.

This Nation will suffer to the degree that this bill is implemented in our economic system. Free enterprise and the right to own property, so greatly under attack worldwide, is here being dealt a staggering blow, one from which it could possibly not recover, unless—and this is my hope—as bad legislation it will not, in practice, become reality.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SAYLOR].

(Mr. SAYLOR asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SAYLOR. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with interest the last 2 days to those who spoke for this bill and to those who spoke against it. I have not been here as long as some of those who spoke either for or against it, but I have been here long enough to know that it depends entirely on which committee brings out a bill, and which part of the country gets the most out of the bill is where you get your support.

I want to tell you I am supporting this bill that came out of the committee, and I am supporting it right down the line. I introduced my first bill on this subject back in the 83d Congress and I have introduced similar legislation in every Congress since that time. My only regret is that there is not more in this for the people of this country.

Do you realize, Mr. Chairman, that since I have been a Member of this House, this Congress in its wisdom has given in foreign aid over $70 billion to countries all over the world? And most of the people who are living in the areas that will be helped by this bill, were working when the foreign aid program started. They were willing to pay their taxes and have their taxes spent where Congress determined.

These same people when working helped pay for all the farm programs that have cost the Nation untold billions of dollars in stores of grain and other agricultural products.

These people when working helped pay for all the reclamation projects in the 17 Western States.

These people when working helped pay for all the mineral subsidy bills that Congress passed to keep a healthy mining industry in this country.

These people when working helped pay for all the flood control projects throughout the length and breadth of our land, and all the other projects too numerous to mention.

Now through no fault of their own they are unemployed and live in areas of chronic unemployment. All this bill does is to say to American citizens who live in those areas, "Fellow Americans, you have helped all others when you could, now this is a little token from a grateful people for all you have done for others. It is a little encouragement to not give up hope—to carry on and help make our country a better place in which to live.

One of the current popular pastimes is to label everything you do not like as either socialistic or communistic. This is neither, but it is putting into practice what Abraham Lincoln—in my opinion the greatest of our Presidents—said was the duty of a government: "To do for its people what they could not do for themselves, or do so well for themselves."

I am very much interested to note that the minority views contain the name of the principal town in my home district. One of the reasons that they tell you not to vote for this bill is that my home town community Johnstown Pa., being a depressed area and having been one ever since we set up the criteria in 1952, had enough community spirit to try to help themselves. But they are still good American citizens. They are people who love this country. They are not Communist. They are not socialist. They are red-blooded Americans who want to do some work and still are trying with all their heart to make their community a better place to live, a better place to raise their families, a better country for themselves and for all Americans and as a result they hope a better world for all. The people who lend money in this country still like to find that kind of spirit, and my community has that kind of spirit. When Johnstown wanted to borrow $5 million to complete a sewer system and sewage disposal plant to take care of and clean up the sewage out of the rivers and streams of that area, following the program that this Congress set up for all sections of the country, they presented such a picture of community spirit to the bond buyers in New York that they got themselves a better rate than they would have had if they had borrowed the money under this bill. The minority report concludes therefore because the city of Johnstown borrowed money at a pretty good rate of interest, nobody should give any money to a local community because if they borrow this money from Uncle Sam they will have to pay a higher rate of interest. That is poor logic as far as I am concerned. This is a very small amount of money. This is merely the American Congress saying to the people who find themselves in these areas, "Look, we know you are trying to help yourselves, we know you are trying to get ahead; here is just a little pat on the back and a little help from some of those districts that are still enjoying this untold prosperity we are having in this country."

To you who benefit from the price support programs of the country, I ask you to support this distressed area bill.

To you who come from the reclamation areas and who have benefited so much from them, I ask you to support this distressed area bill.

You who have prosperity in your districts, I ask you to support this bill.

Not because of what you have enjoyed from your Government, but because as a Christian nation we have always believed in the Golden Rule. Here is a chance for each one of you to put it into action. Now let us take care of the people who live in the industrial areas in this country that are depressed. Vote for this bill, vote against any substitutes and against any amendments.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. STRATTON].

(Mr. STRATTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Chairman, I take this time for two reasons, first to establish a little bit of legislative history with respect to one aspect of this bill and, secondly, to advise the membership of the House as to an amendment which I intend to offer when we reach the 5-minute rule.

Mr. Chairman, I am very much in favor of the bill S. 1; in fact, I have been, since becoming a Member of this body, a cosponsor of this legislation. I cosponsored it again this year. In fact, this year I introduced the same legislation which passed the Congress last year but which was vetoed by the White House.

Mr. Chairman, I am interested in the bill because of what it will do for the country. I am interested in it for what it will do to my home district. I have two areas in my district, Gloversville, a great glove manufacturing city, and Amsterdam, a carpet center, which qualify under the provisions of this bill as distressed areas, even under the somewhat more restricted provisions of the bill S. 1, as contrasted with the bill we adopted last year.

I am disturbed, however, because of the fact that perhaps the most important economic area in my district, the great industrial city of Schenectady, will not be helped by the bill. That city has lost 20,000 factory jobs in the course of the past 6 or 7 years, the greatest loss of any single city or community in the country. But under the present formula the great city of Schenectady cannot qualify as a redevelopment area for the reason that in determining the rate of unemployment in Schenectady, our city is considered as part of a larger metropolitan area which includes the city of Albany and the city of Troy. The city of Troy has been hit by unemployment, but Albany is the capital of the State, and it seems that no matter what the economic picture is the employees of the State government in Albany continue at the same high level.

Therefore, if unemployment is to be determined only on the basis of this overall metropolitan area, then the more critical situation in Schenectady would be counterbalanced by the more favorable situation in Albany, and the overall area would not qualify for help. I am sure that this is something which applies to other areas as well. Therefore, I would like to ask the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN], if it is not his understanding that under the provisions of the bill the Secretary shall, in fact, have the right to determine areas for consideration as redevelopment areas without regard to present boundary lines now in effect in the Department of Labor for reporting unemployment. Is that not the understanding of the chairman of the subcommittee? Let me say that it was the understanding of the other body and was so included in the report of the committee of the other body, but there is no reference to it in the report of the committee of the House.

Mr. PATMAN. I think a more correct statement would be that they would have the power to change the lines after they are once made. I think it is contemplated that they will follow the existing labor market area boundaries in the beginning. But, of course, this bill will have to be reconciled with the Senate bill, and whatever is in the public interest I feel the conferees will agree to it.

Mr. STRATTON. On this point, if I may say to the distinguished chairman, there is no difference in wording on this point between the House bill and the bill passed by the other body, but the report of the other body definitely says that these boundaries would not have to be identical with the standard labor market areas as presently defined by the Department of Labor. And, I am wondering if the chairman would agree with the interpretation which was made by the other body?

Mr. PATMAN. I would prefer not to express an opinion at this time on the particular situation to which the gentleman refers. If the gentleman had called it to my attention ahead of time, I would have been very glad to have been in a position to answer it more definitely, but I cannot, because I do not understand the situation sufficiently.

Mr. STRATTON. Perhaps this matter can be clarified before the debate is ended. It is my understanding that the Secretary does have this authority in the House version of the bill, and it seems to me that it is most important that a major city or a county like Schenectady, or other cities throughout this country, should not be penalized because there is some sort of device in effect in the Department of Labor at the present time which requires them to include other areas which are not seriously affected by unemployment when determining which areas should be called unemployment areas.

Mr. PATMAN. Personally I would not like to say, for another reason. There is more involved in this than appears on the surface, and I would like to give it more consideration.

Mr. STRATTON. I thank the chairman. The other point that I wanted to make, Mr. Chairman, was to advise Members of the House, as I have advised them by letter this morning, that I intend to offer under the 5-minute rule an amendment similar to the one offered in the other body by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], which simply puts on the Secretary of Commerce the responsibility of examining the economic and employment impact of the closing down of military bases. In the State of New York, for instance, the Air Force has been talking about closing down a major function of the Rome Air Force Base, the air material area called Roama, with a loss of 6,200 jobs. Now, I am in favor of this bill. If the bill goes into effect and Rome should get a new industry that would bring in 200 or 300 or 400 jobs, that will be very fine. But if at the same time the Federal Government, which is trying to eliminate unemployment, closes down an operation which will take 6,200 jobs out of Rome, something seems to me to be very, very wrong. We have to coordinate the operations of our Government. We have to insist that if we are trying to combat unemployment, every agency of Government should understand the impact of unemployment before that action is taken. This is what the effect of my amendment will be. It is discussed in detail in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on page 3794 for March 15.

I hope that in view of the President's announcement yesterday that 73 defense bases here and abroad are going to be closed down—and the announcement I understand is going to be made in the very near future—that Members of the House on both sides of the aisle whose districts might be affected by this will listen to my amendment, and I hope that they will support my amendment.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ARENDS].

Mr. ARENDS. Mr. Chairman, on April 10, 1959, speaking on this same subject, I called the attention of the House to something that occurred in my own district, namely in Danville, Ill. At that time I had reprints of the talk made in pamphlet form which I sent to each Member of the House and Senate, and spread it about the country as much as possible, to tell the country what people can do who rely upon their own ingenuity and who through their own determination can and in this case did do. The following is what happened, and I should like to repeat for the House, some of the words used at that time:

Mr. Speaker, the Congress and the country should know the inspiring story of the city of Danville, Vermillion County, Ill., which I am privileged to represent. It is a story of how a resourceful people who, in spite of all economic adversities, built and maintained a thriving community. I speak of this with pride beyond measure.

In truth, the story of the city of Danville, Ill., is the story of America and what has made our country great and strong. It is a factual account of what individual community initiative and ingenuity, self-reliance, and determination can accomplish.

In the course of its history, Danville at one time was a depressed area. If suffered, as all communities do from time to time, to national economic changes, resulting from the development of new products, new manufacturing techniques, labor cost differentials, transportation facilities and costs, and a number of such economic factors.

There were occasions in the history of Danville that doubtless many thought at the time it would become a ghost town. But it did not. Its people decided to make it a thriving city with a prospect for continuing growth. They pooled their ideas. They pooled their resources. They devised plans and put those plans into effect.

Mr. Speaker, it is well that the Congress and the country know the history of the city of Danville, particularly at this time when so many communities are looking to the Federal Government to aid them in their present difficulties. The history of the city of Danville says in words much better than I can employ the true meaning of local responsibility, self-reliance, initiative, and ingenuity. It emphasizes what can be accomplished by following the true American traditions. They did not look to the Federal Government to solve their problems. They did it themselves.

I am inserting in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks, a memorandum, based on fact and not fiction, based on truth and not theory, of what one city itself accomplished on its own, without relying upon Federal aid and dictation.

This memorandum presents the story of a city that must be told over and over again—and there are doubtless other such communities who have and continue to do likewise but, unfortunately, they are becoming fewer and fewer. As we consider proposed legislation to establish a Federal agency to aid depressed areas bear in mind what Danville did for itself. If you take the proposed course of extensive Federal aid, you say to communities like Danville: Why exercise your own ingenuity, why risk your financial resources, why spend your time and effort—the Federal Government will do it for you? When that day comes, when the Federal Government attempts to do everything for us, then our American system of Government is no more.

The following story of Danville was prepared by the local chamber of commerce, a truly progressive and aggressive organization:

"THE STORY OF DANVILLE, ILL.

"Cities do not grow and prosper by chance. They are the result of the vision, the sacrifices, and efforts, of its citizens."

"Many cities have progressed through an economic crisis, and have been left prostrate for all time.

"Danville has experienced such a crisis, but fortunately for us survived.

"Too few of our citizens realize that had our city been left to take its natural course, their homes, their fortunes, and all they treasure in Danville could have been wiped out of existence.

"This is not a story of the Babylonian ages, nor of Colonial times, but one as modern as the last 20-odd years.

"Mr. Walter Bluecher, executive director of the American Society of Planning Officials, in reviewing our transition, said, 'This in Danville is not economic growth, this is industrial revolution.'

"This dramatic period in Danville's life is the story of our community's passage from one that grew and prospered by the exploitation of a nonreplaceable natural resource—coal.

"It is the story of how coal came to dominate our economy, and then how, in just 20 years, it declined to such an extent as to become a minor factor in our community.

"If our citizens would pause now, and look about them, and try to visualize our present coal mining operations, as our major employer of labor they would then have some idea of our possible economic paralysis and how our city, today, could be suffering economic chaos.

"This history of what is known in coal parlance as the Danville district covers an area embracing our own Vermilion County alone.

"It is the story of our major nonreplaceable natural resource, coal, dominating our community for a number of years, and then, its decline into a minor economic factor.

"Those hardy backwoodsmen of America's pioneer era, who made the hazardous trek to and from the banks of the Vermilion River, for their small, but precious supply of salt, did not realize that the troublesome earth fires that resulted from the wood fires, kindled beneath the iron kettles of boiling salt water, would some day become the force that would foster the growth of a busy metropolis on the river's banks.

"The rise of coal mining, as our major industrial employer, began in the 1850's. Then it was that coal was first mined locally, for local home use.

"The entry of the railroads into the community gave added impetus to the then simple mining activity.

"In 1866 several slope mines were opened in the Grape Creek area, followed in 1870 with the sinking of the first shaft mine in Illinois in what is now known as the Vermilion Heights area.

"This new force in our community life grew rapidly.

"It became not only the prime factor for our own growth and prosperity, but a factor also for the State of Illinois; in 1897 and again 1899, Vermilion County was the leading coal-producing county in Illinois.

"At the turn of the century, with a county population of just over 65,000 persons, there were approximately 3,000 persons engaged in the mining industry, or 1 in every 21 persons.

"In succeeding years, even with the introduction of new mining techniques and mechanization, our dependence upon mining for employment increased, and the impact of the increase, and the decrease, of mining employment, is reflected in our population figures.

"From 65,000 in 1900, our county population increased to 78,000 in 1910 and to 86,000 in 1920 but only increased about 900 persons from 1920 to 1950.

"Danville, itself, grew from 16,354 in 1900 to 27,871 in 1910, and to 33,766 in 1920; and to 36,765 in 1930, but it increased by only 154 from 1930 to 1940, and only by 945 from 1940 to 1950, or only 55 persons per year increase for 20 years.

"The causes of our small increases in population growth from 1930 to 1940 and again from 1940 to 1950 which so concerned and disappointed our citizens, is to be found in the period we are to review. People do not long remain in a community of rapidly decreasing employment.

"In the 1920's the peak of mine employment was reached.

"In 1926, out of a county population of 86,000 persons, 4,297 were employed in mining. Approximately one family in every six was dependent upon coal for existence.

"Commencing in 1927, certain economic factors entered into the economy of producing coal in the Danville district that initiated the decline in mining.

"The number of shipping mines decreased from a high of nine mines in the 1920's to one mine in 1951, and a peak of employment of 4,297 eventually dwindled in 1951 to a mere 451 miners.

	Miners employed	Shipping mines in operation
1926.....	4,297	9
1929.....	3,286	8
1934.....	3,097	6
1939.....	2,558	6
1944.....	1,735	5
1951.....	451	1

"In addition to the reduction in the number of mines and miners, the average days that the mines operated each year further decreased mine payrolls.

	Days
1920-25.....	183
1925-30.....	170
1930-35.....	136
1935-40.....	150
1945.....	115

"With the final closing of the Bunsenville mine in 1947, our county ceased to be a major producer of coal.

"In 1918, almost 4 million tons were mined in the country—largely hand mined.

"In 1947, we mined less than 500,000 tons even with the most advanced mechanization.

"Is it any wonder our community's population remained static?

"Had matters been left to take their course, Danville would today be just another ghost of its former self, as are a number of other cities in southern Illinois.

"Here was a community of some 40,000 people, its basic industry all but disappearing in 20 short years.

"The black gold that was the foundation of Danville's growth and prosperity declined into a minor role.

"Danville, known far and wide as 'the heart of a large coal mining area' lost the major product that was the source of its national fame, and the fortunes of its people.

"As if this, the loss of our major community support, were not enough, an additional blow was to simultaneously be struck at our economic foundation.

"Due to the abundance of coal, and the additional asset of local shale adaptable to brick manufacturing, it was only natural that brickmaking should become the second major factor in our community.

"The coming of the automobile brought the new use of bricks for pavements, and along with the demand for bricks in the building of the rapid growth of Chicago, Danville became one of the largest brick producing centers of the country.

"Five brickyards were in production in 1926 and 1,007 persons were employed; but even this substantial source of employment was to face its crisis.

"Concrete became the standard material for highway construction, and steel, concrete blocks, and reinforced concrete, supplanted many uses of brick.

"In addition, the introduction of mechanical processes in brick production further lessened the needed manpower.

"From a high employment of 1,007 persons in this field, brick production in two remaining plants in 1951 employed 220 persons; thus another set of uncontrollable economic factors wiped out another 800 opportunities for employment.

"What tragic consequences could have resulted:

	1926	1951
Mine employment.....	4,297	451
Brick employment.....	1,007	220
Total employment in these two major fields.....	5,304	671

"For our purposes, manufacturing industries are establishments that produce a product for distribution beyond our wholesale or retail area; and Danville in 1926 had 18 such industries, employing 1,938 persons.

"Yes, Danville today could have been only a ghost of its former self, but fortunately for us, it is not.

"Though its major source of employment disappeared, it had one asset that was to sustain it. Had this been lacking, as it had in so many other cities, we would not today live in a city more flourishing than its former self.

"Danville had a primary asset; and that was community leaders and a citizenry that would not admit economic defeat, who would not, as had citizens in so many other cities, give up in despair.

"It was in 1928 that the first of a series of meetings was held to discuss the growing problem. Visits were made to study other cities. Consultations were held with experts in the field of industrial development. No government was asked for aid or succor. This was our own task to solve.

"At the height of our crisis, Danville's leaders were pioneering in a new method of community development.

"After much discussion and days, yes, weeks and months, of effort devoted by loyal citizens to solving our critical situation, the solution was presented.

"At a meeting of the board of directors of the Danville Chamber of Commerce, held in October of 1929, a plan directed toward saving our community from economic chaos was adopted.

"At that chamber of commerce board meeting, the formation of the Danville plan, a new and unique method of securing new industries, was drafted.

"The action of that chamber board of directors meeting was to proceed with formation of the Danville Industrial Foundation, succeeded later by New Industries, Inc., and they set up the machinery to raise the necessary funds.

"Taking a lesson from our past history, the decision was made to secure a diversification of manufacturing establishments in order that a more healthy base for our community's future would be provided.

"In addition, it has as its premise that success, and particularly rapid success, could best be accomplished by a concentrated effort to induce small industrial establishments to locate in Danville, and our people would provide the funds to construct the buildings.

"Danville's citizens responded most heartily. Over $70,000 was subscribed to launch the new enterprise.

"The soundness of this action is given adequate testimony, not only with the revolutionary success we have had in rebuilding our tottering economy, but in the numerous visits by committees from other cities to our chamber of commerce office for advice, and in the hundreds of requests received from other communities for details of our plan, also the scores of articles written about our success that have appeared in magazines, newspapers, and national periodicals.

"What a remarkable story of transition has taken place before our very eyes.

"Our steady, consistent progress has been so constant that many of our citizens are unaware of what has transpired about them.

"From a community, largely sustained by the employment of over 5,000 persons in two basic industries that had been reduced to the employment of only 671 persons in 1951, we have risen into a modern industrial city with 48 manufacturing establishments employing close to 8,000 persons.

"And diversification we have. Jelly candy and dragline buckets, bobby pins and lift trucks, photographs, and automobile castings, dresses, jackets and fertilizers, electrical supplies, and buttermilk products, hoists and dog foods, a host of products flow to the four corners of the world.

"In 1929, at the start of our plan, Danville had 14 plants employing 1,444 persons.

"In the next 2 years, five new plants were added.

"By 1935, we had 23 plants employing 2,384 persons.

"As the years rolled on, its leaders and its citizens were to keep doggedly at their task of reconstruction, and the results exceeded their fondest expectations.

"Manufacturing industries and employment in Danville"

"By 1940, 26 plants, 2,890 employees; 1945, 26 plants, 3,284 employees; 1950, 46 plants, 6,745 employees; 1951, 46 plants, 7,825 employees; 1953 (employment should find us close to the 9,000 employment figure in 48 plants).

"The source of the employment of the more than 12,000 employees of our stores, shops, and offices, and the livelihood and prosperity of the doctor, the lawyer, the wholesaler, and the retailer, in a larger measure than ever before stems from the payrolls of these plants.

"The basis of all human existence stems from farm income and manufacturing payrolls, and our growth in manufacturing payrolls is most startling."

"Payrolls, manufacturing industries"

1940.....	$3,222,000
1945.....	5,837,000
1950.....	20,730,000
1951.....	25,788,000

"But it is difficult to perceive the tremendous strides we have made in industrial payrolls, due to our present inflated dollars.

"We have always taken pride in the richness of our surrounding agricultural area, and it is in comparing the increase in our total county farm income, with our industrial payrolls, that a more vivid picture is to be seen.

	Total farm income of Vermilion County	Manufacturing industry payrolls of Danville
1940.....	$7,849,000	$3,222,000
1945.....	17,983,000	5,837,000
1950.....	25,340,000	25,788,000

"An amazing picture. Our industrial payrolls have grown from less than 40 percent of our total county farm income until they now exceed that income.

"Success. Victory.

"Yes; a city has been saved.

"But what a debt of gratitude is due the men and women responsible for this unprecedented drama.

"And they gave not only of their time, but of their personal resources as well; for to them these funds of their fellow citizens became a public trust.

"The moneys of the foundation stockholders were to be expended solely for the purpose to which they were dedicated, the construction of the buildings that would bring about our new economic era, and that alone.

"And other costs must and did come from their personal resources.

"Fools, some men might call them. But the results?

"Not one penny invested in buildings has been lost.

"Not one stockholder's investment has been squandered.

"By watchful guardianship of the trust, a dividend of 22 percent profit was paid to the original stockholders.

"A triumph most unusual in any joint community enterprise.

"What a glowing monument is ours to see and from which we prosper today. As a testimonial of the time, the effort, and the personal sacrifices of those men and women, we do not have the dust and rubble of a ghost city, but a virile, prosperous city, and this prosperity is our inheritance.

"Let us then pay tribute to them, in the present, and in the years to come.

"Let us not be laggard in our present, and in our future years, with our inherited prosperity, our fortunes, and our livelihoods.

"Let us, like them, by our continued community efforts and sacrifices, strive to make Danville a better city in which to work, a better city in which to play, and a better city in which to live.

"For then, we can take continued pride in our community, and contribute our share in assisting Danville on its march forward."

Yes, oftentimes the impossible is hard to do. But in this case it was done. This is a true story full of meaning and purpose. If more communities would make efforts similar to those expended by the good people of Danville there would be no need for this legislation. I certainly am opposed to this committee bill.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. OLSEN].

Mr. OLSEN. Mr. Chairman, as you all know, I am a newcomer to this body and do not have any of the advantages of being an authority here in this Congress, but I think that has some advantages for I have been walking with the people on the streets of my community in Montana daily over the past years and I have heard their sentiments, and I must say I share them with them.

I rise in support of the bill S. 1. I think that it could be a great deal more adequate if the figures in S. 1 compared more favorably with the figures that are in our foreign aid program. I speak the sentiments of my people in Montana when I say that they, while not being critical of foreign aid, wonder that good Americans cannot have assistance, too, assistance that would be repaid into the economy of the country, that would be repaid into the Treasury of the Government, not handouts, not a dole.

Everyone walking the streets, just ordinary, common people, can see that we pay for this depression. We pay for it whether through this bill, S. 1, or through public welfare, or the loss of public facilities by their wearing out, depreciating, or becoming obsolete. We pay for it whether it be in loss of human beings by idleness, by their depressing experience, or by their loss of will by the very lack of encouragement.

How much better, then, that we loan the money to our communities, that we assist them in reinvesting in their public facilities, that we assist them with seed capital at low interest for new job making industry and thus assist them in again enjoying the production of this free enterprise system and preserving it and making it of greater productivity and greater strength.

It is not very long ago, just last August, that I heard on the streets great complaint that the depressed areas bill of that time did not become law. At that time citizens noted a total of $300 million foreign aid had been spent on a country, Laos, which is smaller than the State of Montana, and at the same time in Montana we had some of the same kinds of troubles with depression that were encountered in the other parts of the world—depression in the way of no jobs—yet no domestic aid for Montana. Today there is the instance of a small Montana city of 30,000 people, last summer and the summer before, that right today has 4,000 people on public welfare or public assistance of some kind.

The need is most apparent to those of us who come from districts which experience cancerous pockets of continued, chronic unemployment and underemployment.

Montana's total civilian labor force on February 15, 1961, was estimated at 258,600. Of this number, 14.4 percent were unemployed. The present state of the economy, held over from the effects of the 1957-58 downturn, is disturbing. Several thousand jobs have been eliminated, especially in mining and lumbering. Unemployment has continued to increase and Montana's job base has not grown sufficiently to absorb these experienced workers or the newcomers to the labor force.

My hometown of Butte, Mont., the center of the mining industry in my State, has been a distressed area by the definitions of S. 1 for a long, long time—more than 19 percent since middle 1957. Also in my district, and not too far distant from Butte, is the city of Kalispell, the center of the lumbering industry in my State, and it, too, has been a distressed area under the definitions of this bill for a long time—over 10 percent for more than 3 years.

I support S. 1—however, I do not think that there is sufficient aid in the bill to bring about all the desired results. Nevertheless, the program named in the bill is a step in the right direction, and the amounts of aid, the degree of aid, the number of dollars of aid in the way of loans and grants, can be improved upon after passage of S. 1.

Again, on the subject of need, my hometown of Butte has suffered depression since the copper price decline in late 1956 and early 1957. Employment of craftsmen—skilled hardrock miners of various qualifications, carpenters, blacksmith, boilermakers, and other similar tradesmen, have been suffering from unemployment and underemployment since early 1957. These are honest, honorable, hard-working people in their late forties and fifties. Their distress has gone from depression to despondency because of the lack of opportunity. These are old friends and neighbors and schoolmates of mine—I testify to the fact I have seen.

In the Kalispell area, unemployment in the lumber industry is a result of the cumulative effects of the 1957-58 economic downturn, and a general slowdown in homebuilding during the past 2 years. Here, too, honest, hard-working craftsmen are unemployed because employment opportunities have vanished.

As further support of S. 1, I have introduced a similar bill. It is urgent that we act now to stop these pockets of unemployment and underemployment before this condition worsens and spreads.

Montana, like the other States which contain these pockets of unemployment and underemployment has witnessed the danger of contagion and of infecting other areas with spread of unemployment.

Because of Montana's vast storehouse of mineral resources, we have a history of a great mining State. However, for one reason or another, foreign competition, low prices, or lack of markets, zinc, lead, gold, silver, manganese, chrome, and other mineral industries have had to close or drastically curtail their operations throughout the State.

Philipsburg, another mining town, is a depressed area like the bigger city of Butte because of depressed prices for manganese, lead, and zinc. Jobs have vanished. The coal mining of Red Lodge and Roundup industry has been especially hard hit by the advent of natural gas for domestic and industrial use and by the transition of the railroads to the diesel engine.

Deep-shaft mining in the copper industry has been replaced by the open pit and a mechanized means requiring very few miners and artisans. The power shovel and the enormous trucks and large conveyor belts have displaced men. Butte and other mining camps—Philipsburg, Red Lodge, and Roundup—could be helped very materially by the Area Redevelopment Act.

Anaconda, a metals smelting city, has experienced unemployment of more than 6 percent—metal prices and automation have eliminated jobs and put men on the street.

The lumber industry in Montana is faced with the same distressing problem as other areas—low prices, low demands, and seasonal operation because of severe winter and spring weather conditions. Here, as in the mining industry, communities suffer from their dependency on a single industry.

All of these single industry communities can have the very needed help of this bill; first, to plan a new economic life of diversified industry, and second, by assisting in the finance of new industry by the extension of low-interest credit.

Further, and probably foremost, we must have in mind that we are dealing with people—not just industry or not just an area. Thus occupational retraining is perhaps the most important because it will give these people new hope to be productive. Thereupon, we can make their dreams a reality by economic planning and by financing new industry to put the new training to work.

Montana has an additional problem in that it contains seven Indian reservations and each one has faced for many years the problems of underemployment of varying degrees. The reservation land areas, set aside for the tribes by Federal statute, are entirely inadequate to provide a livelihood for even a small portion of the Indian inhabitants. The land and resources are generally unproductive and the Indian families with strong tribal ties have had to depend on welfare and direct Federal assistance. We are convinced by the actual success of new industries which have moved on to Indian reservations in other States, that these people can prove their lot if they are given an opportunity. Here again, this bill will avail them of the technical assistance for planning, planned assistance in the actual financing of new job opportunity industries.

Montana is one of the States that is experiencing the decline of employment on the farm and the rush of these people to urban areas. We are in grave danger of a spread of these chronic unemployment and underemployment areas if there is delay in assistance to the already troubled spots.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MATHIAS].

Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. Chairman, western Maryland is part of the Appalachian region of this country, that has suffered the experience of economic difficulties. In my district there are two cities, Hagerstown and Cumberland, that are listed as areas of substantial and persistent unemployment. Throughout this region we need the cooperation of every level of government and the participation of every segment of the community. I am hopeful that the administration of legislation that will be enacted today will provide leadership of the highest character, which will stimulate free enterprise throughout my district and all of the Appalachian region.

On the assumption that area redevelopment assistance will be so administered in areas demonstrated to need such assistance, and will be employed to reinforce, and not to subvert, this free enterprise system, I have decided to support the bill approved by the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

Without reviewing the whole bill, I note two significant provisions which are absent from alternative proposals. These are public facility grants and rural development funds.

As a former city attorney and State legislator, I have had personal experience in working to attract new industry to my home community. One of the major difficulties usually encountered in securing a new industrial plant is the inadequacy or absence of public facilities. It is at times possible to provide the bare necessities by makeshift arrangements, but these are not satisfactory to prospective industrial settlers nor to local authorities. I feel, therefore, that the inclusion of public facilities grants is a valuable feature of this bill, which receives my support.

The committee bill also comprehends rural redevelopment areas. The 6th Congressional District of Maryland not only includes Cumberland and Hagerstown, which are designated as areas of substantial and persistent unemployment, but also areas which should qualify for rural development assistance. For example, farm families with net money income from all sources of under $1,000 or gross farm products sales under $5,000 are clearly low-income families.

In my opinion it would be heartless to provide assistance to urban communities without considering the plight of these rural people. Not only are they equally deserving, but in many cases need more help in confronting unique problems imposed upon them by economic conditions over which they have no control.

Finally, I believe that these areas of western Maryland are typical of many others throughout the Nation. While I agree with critics of this bill that it may not accomplish all the miracles that are promised by its advocates—yet I must ask myself, my colleagues in the Congress and the Nation: Can we deny to areas of economic distress and actual human suffering and hardship this opportunity to help themselves?

An opportunity is all that is provided by this bill. It is up to the people of America to use the tools that we can provide through this bill. If they will once again prove that the sources of our prosperity are the cities, towns and farms where they work, this bill will be a success; if they do not, it will prove to be a delusion.

(Mr. MATHIAS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIRNIE].

(Mr. PIRNIE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PIRNIE. Mr. Chairman, the objective of the pending legislation is to emphasize the concern of the Nation for the plight of economically distressed areas. No one of us believes that we can legislate prosperity for these areas nor can we within the limit of any one proposal solve the basic problems involved. It is right for Congress to show its concern over these situations and to encourage these communities to take steps to restore their economy. Yet of far greater value is a determination on the part of Congress to attack when possible the causes of this distress. Some areas are victims of changing conditions either in demand for certain raw materials or through technological advances. Others have felt the impact of foreign imports. Industries, once thriving, have withered or moved. We have real problems to resolve in the adjustment of foreign trade if we are to preserve our economic strength and the American standard of living. The responsibility of our State Department to take corrective action is immediate and compelling.

The pressures of the cold war have imposed upon our Nation the great responsibility and heavy expense of providing for the security of the free world. To meet this challenge we have had to develop a whole arsenal of new weapons while at the same time maintaining adequate strength in conventional arms. This has required shifts in emphasis as new scientific developments have modified our concepts of defense. The backbone of this effort is found in our military installations scattered throughout our Nation. As they came into being, communities responded magnificently in providing public facilities, roads and schools amounting to many millions of dollars at the cost of the local taxpayers. Patterns of economy were fashioned to service these installations. Now many of these areas are faced with a liquidation of installations aggravating or precipitating disastrous levels of unemployment. It is recognized that the defense of our country should not be run as an employment bureau, but on the other hand a sound economy is the best foundation upon which our real defense can rest. If changing military needs make certain tasks unnecessary, appropriate adjustments should be expected. Yet it should be remembered by the military at all times that communities and faithful employees are more than pawns to be sacrificed at will. Every military decision should be carefully analyzed as to economic impact—every effort should be made to avoid unnecessary hardship. The President took note of this truth in his defense budget message of yesterday. Congress should respond with constructive action to indicate its awareness of the danger and its resolve that appropriate agencies of the Government comply. True we are a vast nation but we must at all times have the right hand know what the left hand is doing.

I would like to join with my colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. STRATTON] in his determination that sound economic principles guide our defense decisions. It is true, I come from an area which during the coming months will be faced with a decision of this type. My people recognize the obligation of the Nation to defend itself as efficiently and as economically as it is possible to do. We do not think we should receive special favors, but we feel we are entitled to full consideration. We believe that since for the past 10 years Roama at Griffiss Air Force Base, N.Y., has been engaged in a very valuable mission for the Air Force in an activity, which is not to be phased out, as being no longer necessary to our defense, but instead is growing and expanding, it should continue the job. Any dislocation of this trained corps of workers, which now approximates about 6,400, would have a terrific impact upon our area. It would destroy a going concern valuable to the Air Force. Our community has supported the Air Force mission in providing public facilities, roads, and schools. There is adequate housing. Continuation of this partnership with the military would seem to be in the national interest. Our country is seeking to eliminate distressed areas, not to create them.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HARVEY].

(Mr. HARVEY of Michigan asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HARVEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I set forth my views in full yesterday, but I just wanted to call attention at this time to a particular effect of this bill which nobody has talked very much about.

Section 7 provides for loans for public facilities to be constructed by municipalities. The administration bill provides for a subsidized rate of interest, 3½ percent, to go to these municipalities. I want to call to your attention that just last week our Federal Government in converting obligations from 3 to 5 years paid 3.98 percent interest and up to 4.09 percent interest. I think lending at a subsidized rate of interest is preposterous. It does not make sense to me to lend money to the others at less than it costs us to borrow it. I do not see how I can justify to the people of my State of Michigan our Federal Government lending money at a lesser rate than it has to pay when it borrows.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. ICHORD].

Mr. ICHORD of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, it is a happy occasion for me to have the opportunity to arise in support of Senate bill 1, the Area Redevelopment Act, with the committee amendment thereto.

In my district, the Flat River area, which is composed of five counties, has been classified by the Department of Labor as an area of substantial and persistent labor surplus since 1958 and would thus be automatically designated as an area entitled to assistance under section 5(a) of the bill. I also anticipate that several other counties in my district will be designated as rural development counties under section 5(B).

The Flat River area or "leadbelt area" is one of the major lead producing regions in the world. As a matter of fact, it produces approximately one-third of the lead mined in the United States. But, today with 60 percent of the United States lead market being supplied by imports of lead and with lead selling at the depressed price of eleven cents per pound, the Flat River area has seen employment in the lead mines decrease 50 percent since 1952.

It is little comfort to the miners that the U.S. Tariff Commission has twice found unanimously that the lead industry was being seriously injured by lead imports as the previous administration both times failed to effectively implement those recommendations under the escape clause of the Reciprocal Trade Act. Since our government has seen fit to undertake to finance economic development of underdeveloped areas in foreign countries, which undertakings in many cases have contributed to conditions in these so-called depressed areas, it seems that we are asking little when we request a similar program for our own people.

The people in the Flat River area want to build a new and stronger economy. They want the means of helping themselves which this Act provides. They do not want charity or relief, and the Area Redevelopment Act does not provide charity or relief. With the exception of the public facilities grants and technical and retraining provisions, it is a loan program. Loans that will be repaid and with interest.

As a constituent of mine from Flat River area said in a letter to me just the other day, "I don't want relief. I just want the opportunity to work." This bill will substantially assist the so-called depressed areas to make available for that man and thousands of others like him the opportunity to earn a living.

This is the third time the House has worked on similar legislation. The third time in this case should be charming as the legislation does have the support of the President. I strongly urge the passage of Senate bill 1.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MONAGAN].

(Mr. MONAGAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MONAGAN. Mr. Chairman, I take this time merely to state my position and, I hope, to help somewhat in the matter of the legislative history of this bill.

I am very much gratified, coming from Connecticut, with the statements of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN], the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. REUSS], and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VANK], concerning the antipirating provisions of this legislation.

I appeared before the committee during the consideration of this bill and expressed my feeling that the people of my section would be in favor of any legislation that would help depressed areas providing it did not mean that these areas were being helped at the expense of our developed sections of the country which have existing industries, which have been established there for a long period of time.

I am in the unusual position of having in my district one area which would qualify for assistance under this bill, but my area is also one which has suffered much from domestic and foreign competition which has lured away much of our business and has reduced our industrial base.

Therefore I am pleased at the statements that have been made and at the changes that have been made in section 2 and section 6(a) of the bill in pursuance of the suggestions that were offered by me and by other Members, and also the explicit provisions in the report of the committee which, it seems to me, tie down very clearly the point that Congress is against the transfer of industry from one section to another, a procedure which would be pointless and foolish and not in the national interest.

There is one other point I am happy about. We have a grave problem in our section and in many other sections of the country in connection with the competition with our industries of the increasing volume of low-cost imports which is coming into the country. I am pleased that the committee has seen fit to take the provisions concerning the Tariff Act of 1930 and the Trade Agreements Extension Act of 1951 out of this bill. The problem of trade and tariffs is too important a problem to be met by an indirect solution such as the one which was contained in H.R. 4569. We are going to have to come to a decision on this problem in the near future, but because of its gravity, it deserves to be made directly on its merits and not indirectly in a bill directed primarily at other objectives.

Mr. Chairman, I shall support S. 1 as amended.

Now I do not regard this legislation as final. We must, of course, keep our attention on it in the future to see how it works, to see that it carries out the objectives outlined therein, and to make sure that it does not injure various other sections of the country. With this in mind, I am supporting the pending legislation.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. MONTROYA].

(Mr. MONTROYA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MONTROYA. Mr. Chairman, I would like to take a few minutes to make some remarks which should be made part of the record and which I am sure a number of my colleagues will wholeheartedly support. I have given some serious consideration and detailed study to a number of depressed area bills not only during this session of Congress but in previous sessions. I also fully realize the benefits from the legislation in terms of dollars will go largely to the States in the eastern half of the country, and the South. However, I do favor the legislation because it is necessary and I would support it even if it did not help my State, but in fact, I support it more closely because I see that it will benefit New Mexico.

If I may, I would like to take a few minutes to present a realistic picture of New Mexico's economic situation as it exists in a number of counties. Although the overall statistics show that our State is prosperous, ignored is the economic retrogression which is taking place in half of the State's 32 counties. Sixteen counties have even lost population with the northern and northeastern sector of the State being particularly hard hit. The latest figures available show that in counties such as Sandoval, the per capita yearly income is as low as $416. Of course, it should be noted that approximately 42 percent of this county's population is Indian.

Other counties in this depressed economic condition have a surplus labor force and are underdeveloped. Some of our counties are unfortunately in the low per capita income category without any hope of extricating themselves unless the provisions of this legislation can offer a helping hand. The mining areas of New Mexico are also hard hit with many miners refusing to leave these areas, thus posing a serious problem and load on our welfare agencies.

These depressed counties also have high proportions of their population receiving State welfare benefits with large numbers of children, a few adults in their productive years, and many older people. Their complex social, cultural, and economic problems pose a serious challenge to both Federal and State Governments.

State unemployment insurance payments doubled during 1960, according to Employment Security Commission reports. They increased from $4,601,002 in 1959 to $8,950,245 last year. The Commission also noted that more people were out of work for longer periods of time, with job openings falling 14 percent and the number of jobseekers increasing by 9 percent.

I am particularly pleased to note that one underprivileged group, the American Indian, under the provisions of the Committee-reported bill will be able to participate in the loan program. This door will be opened not merely to Indians in my State, but to Indians everywhere. Due to the underdeveloped areas on which many of our reservations are located, the Indian tribes in the United States are almost without exception among the rural, low income groups. I would like to point out that in New Mexico a substantial portion of the entire Indian population of the State is included in the northwest third of the State, an area which has been classified as a rural area with serious low income. This means that the area meets three criteria; namely, first, less than $1,000 average residual income to the operator and to family labor on commercial farms; second, level of living index among the lowest fifth of the Nation; and, third, having 50 percent or more of the commercial farms producing annual sales of $2,500 or less.

Turning now to another facet of our population affected by this bill, it is regrettable indeed that the American Indian, because of the trust status of his meager resources, has been unable to seek out the kind of economic opportunity which requires monetary investment. Although the American Indian is very industrious, he prefers the environment of his forefathers and that is why the pueblo type of existence needs economic uplifting through the provisions of this legislation. I understand there is some question as to the justification for making redevelopment loans to Indian tribes or to areas including Indian reservations. It has also been said that this type of legislation is intended to serve a temporary purpose whereas the rehabilitation or development of Indian areas is a longtime task. I would like to point out, however, that under the provisions of the legislation now being considered, long-term loans may be made. Actually, these loan terms run for longer terms than has been the practice of the Bureau of Indian Affairs with funds under its control. Generally, loans made by the Bureau have been for short periods, 10 years, 5 years and even shorter. I know of no loan from the revolving fund so called, for more than 20 years. It is obvious to me that this legislation, for certain long-range purposes, would offer greater opportunities to the tribes than are currently being offered from other sources.

Administrative officials, operating with limited funds, have frequently said to Indian applicants either that Indian tribes were not eligible because they are the responsibility of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, or that the granting agency had no more money available. It is therefore, of the utmost importance that this segment of our population be given every opportunity to avail itself of a program which can and should improve its economic standard.

In connection with an amendment which I will offer to S. 1, I would like to make a few remarks relating to the need for training unemployed and underemployed rural people. One of the significant facts in the social and economic development of the United States is the shift from a rural agricultural society to an urban industrial and service society.

Farm population has been declining for many years. In 1910 about one-third of our people lived on farms; by 1950 only one-sixth, and by 1960 only one-tenth of our people lived on farms. There has been predicted that by 1975 farm population may be around 17 million or about 7.5 percent of the total population. The number of farms has likewise decreased. There were 6 million farms in 1940; 5.3 million in 1950; and 3.7 million farms in 1960. It has been estimated that from 50 percent to as high as 90 percent of our young people in rural areas will need to look elsewhere for placement in an occupation. The rapid changes that have been taking place for many years in the mechanization of agriculture are making it possible for many boys and girls to leave the farms to work in other fields of work. For many years there has been much underemployment in agriculture. The farmer has become such an efficient producer that it is possible for a smaller number of farmers to produce the food and fiber needed by our people. A century ago one farmer produced enough food and fiber for himself and three others. Today he produces enough for himself and 24 others. Experts predict that the farmer will soon be expected to produce food and fiber for himself and 45 others. An increased percentage of farmers are working off farm part of the time during the year. As mechanization and the adoption of educational scientific practices increase, it is expected that a larger percentage of farmers will work part time in other occupations.

It is important to utilize fully the available manpower in rural areas. It is likewise necessary to make available opportunities for youth and adults from farms to prepare for new occupations where they may find opportunities for increased service to the Nation.

There are many depressed areas in rural America where there are limited opportunities for rural people to prepare for an occupation or to obtain placement in an occupation that will offer a satisfactory standard of living. Rural people should be given the same opportunity as offered by their neighbors in urban areas. Unfortunately, many rural people have limited educational opportunities because of the thousands of small high schools. Many of these schools are too small to offer the types of vocational education courses that are needed for their children. If the Nation is to utilize fully its manpower potential then it cannot overlook the millions of young people and adults who are finding it necessary to leave rural communities or who are living in rural communities but are underemployed. If rural areas are not permitted to share in the benefits of Federal funds for providing training for depressed areas, it will be a serious loss to the people who live in these areas and who need the training. It will likewise be a great loss to the Nation because the services of these people will not be utilized to the best advantage.

In order to serve efficiently rural areas, it will be necessary to make available occupational counseling to rural people. Many of these persons are not familiar with the opportunities that exist in other areas; neither are they familiar with the training required for many of the occupations. In addition, careful studies will need to be made to determine those individuals who should be permitted to receive training for an off-farm occupation.

Appropriate courses in vocational education should be made available on an area basis so that individuals who desire may prepare for an occupation. After the training is received, adequate assistance should be given in connection with the placement of these persons in an occupation. It would be unfortunate to prepare these persons for a new occupation and then not assist them in becoming placed in this new work.

Providing vocational training, counseling, and placement, will not help solve all the problems of persons who live in depressed rural areas but these services can be of genuine assistance.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAY].

(Mr. GRAY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GRAY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the bill S. 1, as amended. I deeply appreciate the opportunity of speaking in behalf of this much needed legislation to aid economically distressed areas. I am proud to be one of those Members who has consistently introduced and supported area redevelopment legislation. I have been more than disappointed by the lack of interest the previous administration demonstrated for the welfare of our unemployed people in my district and those of other areas of high unemployment in the country.

Mr. Chairman, I have the honor of representing the 15 southernmost counties in the great State of Illinois and before settling down to the true facts concerning our economic conditions as they now exist, please let me preface my remarks by saying that due to coal and fluorspar mine closures and other factors, the economy of southern Illinois has been slipping for the past 12 years. The people of this region, through their chambers of commerce, Southern Illinois, Inc., Southern Illinois University, community development programs, and other groups have done an outstanding job in trying to promote private industry to our region to take up some of the unemployment slack. However, the decline has been greater than the progress. Southern Illinois is made up of fine people, good schools, churches, and bounded on both sides by two of the greatest navigable streams in the world, the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, but is severely hurt economically; and if this bill is not passed, thousands of people will continue to suffer and be forced to receive public aid, or leave the area. In the past 10 years approximately 38,000 people have left the area to find employment elsewhere. Approximately 20,000 able-bodied men and women remain unemployed in my district. According to the last figures from the Illinois Public Aid Commission, there are approximately 35,000 persons receiving surplus food in the 17 lower counties of southern Illinois.

As I said in my opening remarks, we are doing everything we can to help ourselves and much progress has been made; however, if the situation is to be corrected, we must have outside help. I will give my hometown of West Frankfort, Ill., as an example of what has been happening to southern Illinois communities over the past several years. The official 1940 census listed my hometown population as 15,700. The official 1950 census showed 11,400 and a recent census gave us 9,000 people. Those wearing rose colored glasses cannot dispute these cold facts. When a community loses almost 50 percent of its prewar population, something is drastically wrong and certainly no one can argue that this type of community is not in need of assistance. Speaking for my hometown, I can say that every effort has been made to help ourselves. Unemployed coal miners and others who could not afford it, have contributed to an industrial fund to induce private industry to locate, however, we need many things to attract industry that our local people are not able to provide. That is the real reason Congress must recognize its responsibility and aid these areas suffering from chronic unemployment. The last 12 to 15 years we have been successful in attracting and developing 12,000 to 15,000 manufacturing jobs. Coal mining jobs have declined at a much greater rate however, so many of our miners who lost jobs are 40 years of age or over. New manufacturing concerns are reluctant to employ men in that age bracket when there is a large labor surplus of younger men. When an ex-coal or fluorspar miner is unemployed and is 40 to 55 years of age, he faces a long uncertain wait until his social security benefits are available. Oftimes his skills acquired in the coal mines are not transferrable to manufacturing operations. Generally, he started working in the mines at an early age and terminated his education before he developed any other special talents or skills. I have many close friends and neighbors in my district who are caught in exactly the predicament I described. I firmly believe the passage of an area redevelopment bill will in time provide badly needed facilities to attract and develop more industrial jobs.

In closing Mr. Chairman let me be a little political if I may. During the last campaign several Republican speakers including Vice President Nixon and a so-called Republican truth squad came into southern Illinois saying "Give us a Republican Congress, Give us a Republican administration and we will give you a distressed areas bill much stronger than the Democratic bill vetoed by President Eisenhower." In fact Mr. Chairman, they named certain cities in my congressional district and told how much aid they would get under a Republican bill. Oh, what a difference between election promises and actual performance. We now find the Republican leadership in Congress either opposed to any bill or they are working for a watered down version that would be of no help to anyone at all. What a blessing it has been that the American people saw fit to elect another Democratic Congress and a Democratic President who keeps election promises. If anyone doubts the statement I am making, just wait until the rollcall is taken and you will find over 90 percent of the Republicans opposing S. 1, the committee bill.

Mr. Chairman, does this sound like the wild promises made before the election that Republicans are really for the unemployed. I will let the record speak for itself. I urge everyone who has a sincere desire to help the unfortunate to support this meritorious legislation. All you need do is to take a few minutes of your time and visit an area where young able bodied Americans are suffering undue hardship because of no job; no means of livelihood for their families. This is an all American bill. Please now do for Americans what you have been doing for foreign countries for years. Thank you.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New York [Mr. DULSKI].

(Mr. DULSKI asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DULSKI. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the depressed areas bill before us, and urge its adoption.

There are approximately 100 communities in our Nation, with more than 15 million people, where there are nearly one million unemployed who have little or no hope of finding employment in their communities even when the economy recovers.

What causes these depressed areas? In analyzing the various factors, I find the principal ones to be first, the item produced in the area has lost its demand; second, automation or a change in production has occurred; and third, the plant has shut down and moved to another locality for sundry reasons. We might describe these depressed areas as the "industrial slums" of our country.

The people who live in these areas are suffering great hardships. Their unemployment compensation benefits are exhausted. Their savings are exhausted. Many of them are existing on welfare aid or help they are receiving from relatives and friends.

The communities in these depressed areas are also suffering. They cannot provide the public service that attracts business to localities when unemployment is prolonged indefinitely. Local budgets have to be kept at a minimum, thus necessitating a curtailment of educational facilities, capital improvements, and public construction.

President Kennedy has said:

It would be a mistake to consider the problems of chronic unemployment and underemployment solely in the context of the areas directly affected. The entire Nation suffers when there is prolonged hardship in any locality. This problem is especially critical today, for 1 out of every 10 persons in the United States lives in an area that now feels the impact of chronic unemployment or underemployment.

I believe that industrial development, in the rehabilitation of these distressed areas, should be through the expansion of existing plants and the establishment of new plants. A program that would bring industries into a depressed area from other regions would not result in any improvement in industrial activity, and only shift the problem of unemployment rather than solving it.

If the total demand for labor in our Nation as a whole could be increased more than the average growth of our labor force, the industries moving into the depressed areas would then represent a net addition to the number of jobs normally provided by our economy. In this way an effective redevelopment program can be an invaluable instrument in expanding our economy and the future growth of our Nation. But we must make certain that this legislation will create new jobs rather than transfer jobs from one region to another. This is the aim of the bill before us which states as one of its purposes, "that under the provisions of this act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources without substantially reducing employment in other areas of the United States."

In my city of Buffalo and, in fact, the entire Niagara Frontier area of New York State, has been extremely hard hit by unemployment. Factories have shut down and some of them have even moved out of the area for a number of reasons.

In February of this year it was estimated that the number of unemployed in our area was 12.1 percent of the labor force.

Under the legislation we are now considering, Buffalo could be made eligible for aid even though it just missed the eligibility criteria for redevelopment loans by three-tenths of 1 percent. The bill states that the administrator of the program "shall also designate as 'redevelopment areas' those areas in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment." I am certain that the administrator of this program would give Buffalo every consideration for such a designation.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DENT].

(Mr. DENT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the committee bill to aid distressed areas.

The once great industrial State of Pennsylvania finds itself listed as No. 2 in the Nation in its economic distress.

We are second only to West Virginia in this regard.

Both States are victims of the same destructive forces that have destroyed their normal economic wellbeing.

One cause of their troubles has come from the adverse economic effect of the Reciprocal Trades Agreements Acts.

This was acknowledged by the Senate version of this act before being amended by the House committee.

Section 5 of Senate No. 1 made a community injured by reciprocal trade agreements and foreign imports a first priority under the distressed area bill.

The House revised this section simply because if every single community could be called a distressed area because of import injury the established metropolitan area plan now used as a criteria in determining the areas that qualify for aid under the bill.

This was just as well because this bill should not be compared with the serious problems raised by the perversion of the trade agreements in the last 8 years.

Other causes of course, have added to the troubles of our great State not the least of which have been the automation of industrial production, the impact of gas and oil as a source of fuel replacing the basic coal industry.

In passing it might be helpful to consider the injury to these industrial areas by the raiding forages from Southern States with their tax concessions, free industrial facilities, appeals for migration based upon cheaper labor markets and lower real and personal taxes.

The need for this legislation is brought about by the complete exhaustion of resources in the areas that suffer from chronic and/or long enduring unemployment.

The money loaned to these communities will not put these distressed areas ahead of other more prosperous communities but will in fact only give them a chance to catch up and be able to fight for their existence on more equal terms.

The one serious drawback with the present bill is that it will prove woefully inadequate because too few of us really know the extent of the distress in so many of our States.

One can hardly call legislation involving approximately $400 million for the aid and relief of the 50 States of the Union while we spend billions and billions yearly doing exactly the same thing for states and nations foreign to our shores.

Without denying help to friends and allies, can we honestly deny it to ourselves.

The peoples living in a distressed area are in need of Federal assistance and this Congress will be remiss in their duties if it fails to pass this legislation this session.

We have every reason to believe that this bill will receive Presidential approval from the President rather than a Presidential veto—a veto incidentally that has caused untold and uncounted additional suffering in these distressed areas because of the unwarranted postponement of the help this legislation makes possible.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have permission to extend their remarks at this point in the RECORD on the bill now under consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOOREHEAD of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the subcommittee of the Banking and Currency Committee which developed this bill, I rise in its support. I make this statement in the realization that it is not a perfect bill. There are portions of it which I would prefer to see deleted. Similarly, there are provisions which might be included to improve the bill. Nevertheless, I feel strongly that this legislation represents a compromise developed out of opposing philosophies by men who feel a bill of this kind is necessary. It is a far better bill, in my opinion, than the legislation passed recently by the Senate, and it is a great improvement over the measure which President Eisenhower vetoed for many valid reasons last year.

I represent here an area of southeastern Ohio that has suffered economic plight for many years. The coal and pottery and other industries that once flourished in my district have declined, leaving distress, unemployment, and attendant economic and social problems. Our population has remained stagnant, and over a period of four decades a number of the counties in the district have lost population. Young people have sought employment elsewhere because there were no opportunities or too few opportunities at home. These conditions have persisted in good times and bad if we compare our potential against the progress of other areas of the Nation.

Let me respond to those who argue that the Federal Government should not embark on legislation of this kind, that it destroys local initiative, or that it only serves those persons and groups who sit and wait for their fellow taxpayers to provide them a living. For years, in my district, the people have exercised imagination and initiative. They have worked and are working diligently to attract new industry to utilize the resources we have to create productive jobs for a large and willing number of people seeking work. There have been some notable achievements. New plants have come in. There is a new developing diversity of industry and we have represented in our area plants of some of the largest and most respective American corporations. However, in my opinion, help is needed—not direction and dictation from Washington or a Federal handout. We need a sound program of assistance to help ourselves. That is what I hope this bill will provide, not only in southeastern Ohio but wherever difficulties of this kind persist.

The Federal Government is deeply involved in our local troubles already. The United States pursued, for more than a decade, a policy of bountiful aid to other nations. American dollars have made possible the spectacular recovery of Western Europe and Japan. Machines and technical advice have been furnished in abundance so that these nations could use their own natural skills and the advantage of low-paid labor to invade the American markets with their products. Our laws have consistently encouraged the competition of imported products with American-made goods in our domestic markets. There are many plants padlocked in southeastern Ohio and countless jobless persons who can trace their economic problems directly to the foreign trade policies enacted consistently by the Congress since World War II. Is it not fitting that the Federal Government should express some willingness to help these people help themselves.

Unemployment is, of course, an immediate and tragic problem for the person upon whom it is visited. It is also a serious problem for the community and the Nation. Congress has been quick to respond to this issue when it has arisen. Only recently we have enacted emergency unemployment compensation legislation. Several days later we provided Federal funds to assist the children of the unemployed. These emergency costs amount into the hundreds of millions of dollars. In some areas, the costs continue to mount year in and year out. I recognize that this bill is not intended to deal with the present business slump. Its purpose is to meet the problem of chronic distress in specific areas of the country which meet criteria it establishes. However, I mention them because the States and the Federal Government provide unemployment assistance and public relief to the jobless. These measures are necessary, but they are unproductive in the long run. They assist in a peripheral way, but they add little investment in the future.

It has been pointed out that in 16 areas of chronic unemployment in the State of Pennsylvania, unemployment compensation and public assistance benefits together totaled $130 million in 1960 alone. If unemployment in these 16 areas could have been brought down to 3 percent of the labor force, nearly $90 million might have been saved in 1 year in this one State. I am not interfering, as I believe some of the supporters of this bill may have done, that the legislation we are discussing today would have made this total saving possible. I do say that with this bill enacted into law there would be possibilities which are not available today. We are not discussing the simple issue of the costs of this bill alone. The question cannot be honestly isolated from other considerations. Most of the costs of this bill will be in the form of repayable loans. There is a tremendous cost attached to the failure to provide Federal assistance in this case and the costs can be totaled in savings in existing programs. The costs of losses in human energy, dignity, skills, and progress cannot be measured so easily, but they are deeply involved here, nonetheless.

In this measure, we want no pirating of industries by one community at the expense of another. Redistribution of distress is not to the Nation's advantage. Nor do we want back-door financing by the Federal Government so that we obscure further the fiscal policies of the country. This bill seeks strongly to avoid piracy and calls for necessary funds to be subject to annual review by the Appropriations Committees of the Congress. In this way, this bill would be far better than any on this subject previously submitted to the White House.

Someone has said that if this bill is passed it will result in mass frustration and disillusion, since it promises more than it would deliver. This is true only if it is not regarded in sensible perspective. The Federal Government is not in a position to create productive industrial jobs. It has great power, but jobs are created because individual producers are willing to translate ideas into salable merchandise. This involves insight, vigor, skill, and risk on the part of the producer. Let us have no illusions about how employment which genuinely adds to the Nation's productivity is created. Sleight of hand from Washington does not change this basic fact, and I hope no one in either party will be so naive or cynical as to hold out the promise of immediate benefits that solve all or even most of our economic problems. This bill will not produce miracles. It will, I believe, give needed encouragement and incentive to local people to work even harder with the proper tools to create a favorable climate for general industrial development. The big job still rests with the community.

Both political parties have long recognized the need for Federal area redevelopment legislation. It has been discussed in Washington for a decade or more. The Republican and Democratic Party platforms have both called for its enactment. How the details of the legislation should read has stalled final action. I can understand the differences of opinion which have been so ably expressed here today about this bill. They are founded on sincere interpretations of what is best for the public interest. But with equal sincerity and conviction, I urge the House to pass this bill and to insist that its provisions prevail over those embodied in the bill passed by the other body.

Mr. RYAN. Mr. Chairman, S. 1 is a sound program for Federal area redevelopment assistance designed to put an end to the pockets of chronic unemployment which have marred the American economy for some years. Many of these areas have demonstrated a crying need for assistance since 1955, and their number has been steadily increasing in the last 3 years. Twice the Democratic majorities in the Congress have passed distressed area legislation, only to have their work undone by presidential veto.

Now that we have a President in the White House who is demonstrating an immediate concern in the plight of the more than 6 million Americans living in the 108 presently designated depressed labor markets, we can at last enact a program which offers them the hope of economic recovery for their communities.

My own State of New York has 6 smaller labor surplus areas which will be eligible for Federal assistance under S. 1. These areas are Amsterdam, Auburn, Gloversville, Jamestown-Dunkirk, Ogdensburg-Messena-Malone and Plattsburgh. The latest figures show that in Amsterdam 14.1 percent of the labor force is unemployed; Auburn 9.7 percent of the labor force is unemployed; Gloversville 15.3 percent of the labor force is unemployed; Jamestown-Dunkirk 5.8 percent of the labor force is unemployed; Ogdensburg-Messena-Malone 14.2 percent of the labor force is unemployed and in Plattsburgh 8.4 percent of the labor force is unemployed.

New York State as a whole is in need of help. The State has 7.3 percent unemployment with 557,231 people out of work. Although New York City may not qualify for direct aid under this bill, the city would benefit from any reduction in unemployment in the upstate areas as industries in the city service the entire State. Needless to say, New York City with 353,100 people unemployed needs assistance.

Puerto Rico will also benefit from this bill. This important Commonwealth has been engaged in a program of self-help which should be praised by all of us. However, the recession has hit Puerto Rico, and this area deserves our support and encouragement. There are three areas of substantial and persistent labor surplus in the island. Mayaguez, Ponce, and San Juan. A brief look at the statistics will indicate the need for the type of assistance provided for in S. 1. In the Mayaguez, Ponce, and San Juan, 12.3 percent, 14.4 percent, and 6.2 percent of the labor force respectively is unemployed. There are a total of 22,500 people out of work.

I am somewhat concerned about the adequacy of this proposal should the national economic situation not improve as rapidly as some predict it will. With only $394 million in potential loans and grants to be distributed among 108 industrial areas and an indeterminate number of rural areas, and a restriction on the amount to be made available for use before July 1, 1962—loans not to exceed $90 million before July 1, 1962—one might question whether any community will receive enough financial help to get back on its feet. I firmly support the proposals contained in S. 1. But if the state of the economy does not show a marked sign of an upturn soon, I believe we must consider more drastic measures to alleviate the condition of chronic unemployment in the distressed areas.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, I am anxious to give my full support to those truly depressed areas of the country such as those in Pennsylvania and West Virginia. I am willing to support legislation for such areas even though my own State has a high degree of employment and needs no such assistance from Washington.

However, I cannot with clear conscience support the legislation now pending, as it is a scatter-gun approach. It extends hope to those who need help, but I am confident that such help will never materialize through enactment of the proposed legislation. Contrary to statements made, I am of the opinion that the bill will stimulate the pirating of industry from one city to another at the taxpayers' expense.

So far as my district is concerned, we have a healthy economy built by loyal Americans through our free enterprise system. We do not think it proper or fair that the Federal Government should discriminate against industry in my district as it would undoubtedly do if this legislation is approved in its present form.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I plan to support the Widnall substitute as it is a workable piece of legislation and gets to the root of the problem. It will bring about the results we all want. It will actually cure the problem and put people to work. It has a very strict provision against the pirating of business from one city to another.

I hope that the workable, effective substitute will prevail. I shall support it. If it does not prevail, then I shall vote against the committee bill because I am convinced that it is a "pie in the sky" proposal and will never do the job that needs to be done.

Mr. NIX. Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak briefly in support of S. 1, the area redevelopment bill. This bill was reported out by the Committee on Banking and Currency, after careful study and many long hours of hard work, and after taking thousands of pages of testimony on this and related measures. I hope my colleagues have paid particular attention to the excellent testimony given by Governor Lawrence of my own State of Pennsylvania. I feel that this leaves no room for doubt about the need for this legislation.

This bill provides for Federal loans to industrial firms to expand employment in areas which have long suffered from a high rate of jobless workers, and in depressed rural areas as well. It also provides loans and grants for necessary public facilities in these areas, and it provides important aids for occupational training of workers.

Mr. Chairman, I am convinced that this bill is justified because of our moral responsibility to relieve the suffering of the unemployed. The Congress clearly assumed the obligation to do whatever it can to maintain high levels of employment in the Full Employment Act of 1946. This purpose has repeatedly been reaffirmed in other acts to expand employment and to provide assistance to the unemployed.

I also support the committee bill because I am convinced that it will benefit the people of my own district and, in fact, Americans everywhere. Unemployment wherever it exists means idle resources and a waste of manpower. In the last campaign it was clearly established that one of the basic problems facing America is the recent slackening in its rate of growth. A growing economy will provide higher incomes and better standards of living for all of us. It will enable us to carry our defense burdens more easily and meet the fierce economic competition of the cold war. If this idle manpower can be put to work, the entire Nation will benefit.

By the same token, if we allow economic stagnation to go untended in the more than 100 urban areas and in the many unfortunate rural areas where it now exists, it will sap the strength of the whole economy. People who are out of work or who live in oppressive poverty cannot buy the automobiles, appliances, apparel, and the hundreds of other products of American industry and agriculture. Every unemployed worker and his family represents a lost market to the rest of the economy. It constitutes a drag on business activity which could eventually result in serious layoffs in other towns and cities seeking markets.

Moreover, such unemployment represents substantial costs through unemployment compensation and relief payments. Unfortunately no overall statistics are available, but I am confident that the fact is that depressed areas have cost hundreds of millions of dollars to the rest of the economy. In fact, in my own State it was testified that in 1960 alone, outlays for unemployment compensation and public assistance benefits paid just in the 16 communities in the State of Pennsylvania totalled $131 million. If unemployment in these areas had been held to 3 percent of the labor force, there would have been a saving of nearly $90 million. And this is just for one State in a single year.

Mr. Chairman, we cannot afford to neglect the economic problems of these communities any longer. The cost to the rest of us runs far more than the dollar amount of this bill. More importantly, the people who live in these areas do not want charity—they want work. The provisions in this bill are very carefully calculated to create a net expansion in employment and production to provide work for these people. By raising their incomes it will also increase the markets for the output of other areas and help restore prosperity to the entire economy.

Mr. DERWINSKI. Mr. Chairman, I will briefly discuss the two major areas to which our studies should be directed in considering this so-called depressed areas bill.

First, the question of piracy. Both proponents and opponents of this bill have expressed fears concerning pirating of industry which could occur as use is made of the funds as authorized under this bill. Explanations have been offered that the strongest possible language is included to prevent this, yet obviously there are no safeguards within this bill to stop this feared situation.

In addition, may I point out that in most States and in many local communities throughout the country, industrial development has been effectively promoted, and this federally imposed program would have the effect of competing with activities of State and local governments in these same areas.

Furthermore, the vagueness which characterizes this bill, giving almost unlimited power to the administrative agencies, raises the obvious fear that complete disregard for local interests would result if this bill should be accepted.

I feel that the committee bill does not approach the real source of the problem. Merely aiding in the development of plant sites, buildings, and facilities does not guarantee the manufacturer a ready market for his products. Would we in future years be requested to stockpile production by firms in depressed areas if they are unable to operate with consistent volume of profit?

The formula and vague administrative practices set up in this proposal are such that all the funds allocated could be drawn into a few pockets of the country, leaving other areas whose hopes have been raised by the utopian nature of this program grievously disappointed. It is my frank opinion that this bill actually represents a completely false approach to areas of chronic unemployment, and the disappointment that would follow with the unworkable nature of this proposal would be greater than the economic ailments which States and local communities are themselves striving to overcome.

Despite all the statistics and vague promises we have heard, the plain fact is that the funds we are asked to appropriate will not solve the problem for which they are intended, will add further to the huge budget deficit the new Administration seems determined to create. It will create new depressed areas by pirating industry from booming sections of the country and will result in developments which will be harmful to the employees, employers, and above all, the already overburdened taxpayer.

There is one other item that ought to be discussed, and that is the possible job protection that should be afforded employees whose firms are pirated from their present areas. If the Committee is truly serious in its regard for the employee's rights, it will adopt provisions guaranteeing the seniority rights of employees affected by transfer of a portion of a firm's present manufacturing facility. To fail to provide this protection will cause personal suffering to employees now working in many areas of the country.

I realize that to a degree my words are falling on deaf ears since the Administration is determined to jam this bill through the Congress. I point out, however, that in the coming decade, we face a serious task of gearing our industrial machine to employ a steadily expanding labor force. Complete disregard for human hardship is indefensible, and this bill will cause, in my opinion, a chaotic nationwide situation.

I wish to close by making one brief observation which I hope will not be attacked as a display of sectionalism. Illinois has communities which are tagged with the depressed area label which have helped themselves by effective local industrial development financing programs. The consensus of opinion in these Illinois areas is that the combination of State, regional and local programs is creating consistent economic gains, and with proper acknowledgement of problems, we are well on the way in Illinois to solving them. At the moment money is available for loans to prospective industries in the so-called depressed areas of Illinois, which points out the basic fact that this bill is not needed.

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Chairman, I wholeheartedly support S. 1, the area redevelopment bill, because it is designed to meet the problems confronting all areas in the United States that are suffering from chronic unemployment. I am proud to be a member of the Banking and Currency Committee which considered this legislation. Basically, this bill represents the position of President Kennedy in this field. It is a much needed piece of legislation and one which is long overdue. Unfortunately, two similar bills which were passed in previous years by the Congress met with Presidential vetoes in the last administration. Now at last we will see this program put into action.

The area redevelopment bill will be of direct and immediate benefit to many communities throughout the country, including my own district in south Philadelphia. The Delaware Valley area has long been recognized as one of our greatest industrial areas. However, this does not mean that it does not have problems. Some industries have left the area or closed down. The result has been layoffs and unemployment.

Under the provisions of S. 1, south Philadelphia and the Delaware Valley can be rebuilt. Production and employment will be expanded and income raised.

This bill will directly benefit Philadelphians in a number of ways. It will provide for Government loans on very liberal terms. The interest rate on these loans currently would be 4½ percent and they can be used to construct or improve industrial facilities that will put people back to work. In addition, liberal loans will be available to finance needed public works for the benefit of the entire community. The bill also provides Federal aid for our State vocational training system which will give workers an opportunity to obtain better and higher paying jobs. The bill would further provide subsistence payments to workers while they take this vocational training.

I am particularly pleased with one provision in the bill, which recognizes the hardships and the outright dollar cost imposed by cutbacks in existing defense facilities, such as the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard, the Philadelphia Quartermaster Center, the Marine Corps Quartermaster Depot, and others. If we are to do something to alleviate unemployment, we certainly cannot ignore the impact which defense cutbacks in existing activities are bound to have. Therefore, the bill requires a study and report to the Congress of this problem with a view to maintaining employment in existing Federal installations.

The dollar amounts involved in the area redevelopment bill are small indeed, but the benefits will be extremely important. Unemployment in our wealthy Nation is intolerable and I am pleased that the administration and the Congress recognizes the Federal responsibility to help our people.

Mrs. GRANAHAN. Mr. Chairman, we are a religious and moral people with generally high standards of conduct in our relationships with one another and yet, when it comes to economic issues, the American people seem to divide into two groups with one group seeming to hold to the opinion that helping one's neighbor is in some way un-American and undesirable.

If the neighbor's house were burning, to use President Roosevelt's World War II example, none of us would hesitate to use our garden hose—or any tool at hand—to help the neighbor in desperate need. And we would not say to him: "Convince me you have done everything you possibly could do to help yourself in this emergency before expecting me to give you any help."

However, in the case of our distressed areas—areas with which we in Pennsylvania are so grimly familiar and whose plight we fully recognize and understand—in the case of these distressed areas, some here today would apparently say that we dare not do anything really effective to help them until we are convinced beyond any possible doubt that they have done everything they can to help themselves.

Believe me, Mr. Chairman, this is the same as saying to the neighbor whose house is burning down: "Do not expect any help from me until I am sure you have tried everything you could do on your own, including calling all of your relatives to drive out here to help you." At what point do we finally intervene?

ENTIRE NATION'S ECONOMY AFFECTED

For the areas of substantial and persistent labor surplus—the chronically distressed and depressed areas—are in desperate difficulty. And we—all of us in this country—are involved in their distress, and suffering from it, too.

Philadelphia is currently among the areas of substantial labor surplus, along with most of the 149 other major production centers of the Nation, and along with 184 smaller labor market areas. But our depressed situation is not chronic, not persistent, as it has been for so long in 20 of the major areas now on the list and in 88 of the smaller areas on the list. We bounce back when business picks up, but the upswings have been taking longer and longer in recent years.

However, we fall into the surplus labor category periodically and stay in it longer these years, primarily because of the depressing effect upon us of employment conditions in other parts of Pennsylvania and other parts of the Nation—we are dragged down by the existence of recession and depression in other areas.

Eventually, if we do not cure this persistent problem, every part of this country which now feels that it is relatively prosperous is going to be suffering from the backwash of economic tides from the depressed areas. Even as it is, there is not a single major production center in this country which is at present experiencing any real prosperity—which does not have a labor surplus of at least moderate proportions.

PENNSYLVANIA'S GOVERNOR HAS SOUGHT EVERY POSSIBLE SOLUTION

To those Members of the House who feel it is none of their business how bad business may be in other parts of the country, or how much unemployment may persist in other parts of the country, I say, Mr. Chairman, the bell tolls for them, too—for their areas, too.

Pennsylvania has been alert to this problem and has, under Governor Lawrence and, before him, under Governor Leader, sought with all of its resources to meet our economic problems. Our Governor has not left a stone unturned. But these problems cannot be solved in Pennsylvania alone.

This spreading blight of labor surplus, of mass distress, of technological displacement and automation unemployment, of reduced output in the face of increasing population in the work force—this situation demands prompt correction and it requires national leadership and direction and funds and assistance.

We have gone through the last two Congresses arguing over this issue to no decision—because of vetoes and official disinterest in the executive department. We now have a President who deeply and urgently believes in the solution which would be possible under the bill now before us.

This measure deserves support because it can be effective. It deserves support because it is fair. It deserves support because it would demonstrate that in economic affairs, as in all other ways, this must be one Nation, one people, with common objectives for the benefit of all Americans.

This is not a jungle of 150 major production centers at war with one another. Our economy can prosper only when the 150 areas are all working, and working in harmony, and utilizing to the full the brains and energy and abilities of all of their people in the working force.

Mr. LINDSAY. Mr. Chairman, there is need for a depressed areas bill—one that will focus on areas of chronic need. In my judgment the Widnall substitute is a more effective approach than the committee bill, although I am pleased to note that the committee bill has been tightened in many respects over the legislation that was passed in the 86th Congress and vetoed by the President.

I have long maintained that the function of the Federal Government is to concentrate on areas of chronic need and not to attempt to spread Federal funds thinly over the United States to the detriment of areas in chronic need.

Second, I believe strongly in occupational training programs—programs under which surplus labor is given skills and training in occupations where there is a demand.

The Widnall substitute makes the following improvements over the committee bill: First, instead of providing $100 million in loans for the construction of plants in truly depressed areas, it will provide $150 million, 50 percent more. This is a desirable addition for the hard-core industrial depressed areas. Second, the Widnall substitute will more than double the amount of funds provided for occupational training and retraining. Whereas, the committee bill provides $4,500,000 toward this end, the Widnall substitute provides $10 million.

The Widnall bill makes up most of the cost of the above by reducing the proposed grants in the committee bill to rural areas from $100 million to one-half million dollars, the latter amount to be used to study and develop a workable program for rural areas. The Widnall bill has tighter criteria for the designation of industrial redevelopment areas. Under the committee bill it is possible that a whole State could be a redevelopment area.

There are other differences between the two bills, Mr. Chairman, but the ones I have mentioned are the most important differences. For these reasons, therefore, I support the Widnall substitute, and I intend to vote for it, if necessary on a motion to recommit the committee bill with instructions to the committee to bring back the Widnall substitute.

In the event the Widnall substitute fails of passage, I intend to vote for the committee bill. As I have mentioned, it is a tighter bill than the legislation passed in the 86th Congress, which I voted against. In addition, we cannot overlook the fact that conditions of unemployment are more serious now than they were at the time the 86th Congress considered other depressed areas legislation. A Federal undertaking is necessary and although I prefer the Widnall substitute, I shall not hesitate to vote for the committee bill in the last analysis if I am faced with no other choice.

Mrs. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to associate myself with Chairman PATMAN, of Texas, Congressman JAMES ROOSEVELT, of California, and others who have spoken on behalf of the distressed areas bill because my own district is so deeply affected by this legislation. Its passage is of great importance to western Washington.

Mr. PIRNIE. Mr. Chairman, I am glad to rise in support of the amendment proposed by my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. STRATTON]. He and I have worked closely together in this matter and I want to commend him for his diligence and cooperation in pursuing this problem.

The enactment of this amendment will insure that the economic aspects of defense planning will not be overlooked. The President himself has taken notice of this factor only yesterday in his special defense budget message to the Congress. Without restricting the authority of the Secretary of Defense to make military decisions which he deems in the best interests of the United States, he will have the benefit of a careful study of the overall cost of any proposed elimination of permanent military installations or major parts thereof. This amendment seeks to create confidence in our Government, not shackle it.

Mr. Chairman, we owe this much consideration to those many communities having substantial unemployment, who face untold hardships by the removal of military functions. Millions of dollars have been invested by local taxpayers and private enterprise in providing needed facilities and services. The cities of Rome and Utica in my own area, with an unemployment index exceeding 10 percent, have been faced with the loss of over 6,200 civilian jobs, comprising the Rome Air Materiel Area. Many other congressional districts are now or will be confronted with similar problems.

Therefore, I urge approval of this amendment that will afford these communities ample opportunity to bring their economic situations to the attention of our highest defense planners.

Mr. DONOHUE. Mr. Chairman, in fulfillment of our common duty to promote the national interest, and in very particular concern for the distressed workers and industries of my congressional area, I rise to most earnestly advocate the prompt passage of S. 1, without crippling amendments or extended delay.

At this minute there are some 103 areas of chronic unemployment and economic depression in this country and unfortunately my own home city, together with several other communities in our Commonwealth, are numbered among them. The major number of more than 5½ million unemployed workers live in these areas around the country and over the past 10 years the problem has very obviously developed into one of national concern.

The fundamental question before us then, in connection with this legislative proposal, is whether we shall leave these distressed regions and their people to their further deterioration or shall the resources of the Federal Government be reasonably exercised to assist them?

I firmly believe our obligation to help them to help themselves is quite clear and we can answer the question and discharge our obligation by approving this measure now.

It is extremely difficult to understand those who apparently wish to extend and delay our action on this bill. The concept of this legislation and its overall provisions have twice been exhaustively discussed and debated in this House during the past 3 years. As a matter of fact, a bill of this type was passed in this House in 1958 and again in 1960. The majority of the Members here are thoroughly familiar with all aspects and the background of this current proposal.

It is not designed to, nor is it pretended that it will, cure all of the evils of unemployment and economic depression. It is simply and substantially an attempt to create new job opportunities in areas of high and chronic unemployment and, by such means, to stimulate production and restore purchasing power for the benefit of the national economy.

These jobs would be created through providing assistance for the development of new industrial facilities by constructing water and power projects, where possible, and by encouraging communities to initiate varied public works projects, such as sewage disposal and water pollution control which are so generally needed.

Of special interest to my area, where the textile manufacturing industry, the shoe industry and so many others are fast disappearing, is the provision of this bill to train these unemployed, but loyal and intelligent Americans, in new skills.

For those who may have sincere fears about Federal Government intrusion and control, let us realize the Government is but one factor in these proposed activities. The program embodied in this measure very wisely and practically requires the participation of private industry and of local and State governments. It is not a substitute for local action; it is intended only to inspire dormant local action into effective operation and to stimulate its creative activity.

On the human side, it is in accord with our established democratic traditions of government functioning to try to save people, to save families and to save communities who desperately need such saving assistance through no fault of their own. It is in the fullest accord with the spirit and the principle expressed by our great President, John F. Kennedy, when he stated in his inaugural address last January 20, in front of this building, and I quote:

If a free society cannot help the many who are poor, it cannot save the few who are rich.

Mr. Chairman, the approach, outlined in this measure, to grant assistance to unemployed Americans and economically distressed areas in this country is basically the same as that contained in our foreign aid program, of long duration. On this score, it is puzzling for some of us to observe that those who appear to express the greatest fears about the worth and the wisdom of this bill are among the very ones who speak the loudest in favor of the continuation, and even the expansion, of the spending of the American taxpayers money for foreign redevelopment. We do not question their sincerity, but to promote their consistency we must simply tell them that all we are trying to do today is to apply the same principles, in substance, within our foreign aid program to helping our own American people here at home. We say to them that we deeply believe it is time that we treated our people at home with the same concern we have demonstrated for the welfare and development of foreign countries and foreign peoples.

With the guidance of divine providence behind a determined Congress and a united people, let us, by passing this bill, show the doubtful Communist leaders that our vaunted boast of having the highest living standards and more equality of opportunity than anywhere else in the world, is not an American capitalistic myth.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, as in previous years, I rise today, to reiterate the need of the House of Representatives to pass a workable area redevelopment bill; one that will give immediate substantial support to those residents in chronically depressed communities.

I have stressed this fact several times in the last year. Twice, Congress passed a depressed areas bill, only to have it vetoed by the previous administration.

Both national parties this past summer endorsed Federal aid for chronically depressed communities. Since those two conventions, the number of distressed communities has increased—many of them in my own State of Pennsylvania, and some of them in my own congressional District.

Today, the House of Representatives as a whole debates S. 1 a bill that I feel confident will establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment. It is substantially the identical bill that our distinguished colleague, the Honorable BRENT SPENCE introduced as chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

I have never been more confident that this bill will provide new employment opportunities in distressed areas, such as we have in the once-thriving coal mining communities of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Kentucky.

Our entire economy will be improved as soon as the Federal Government gets substantial help into these communities. Everybody is going to benefit, not only those in the distressed areas but in every community is this great Republic.

This financial aid will supplement the efforts of States and communities, who already have been doing a tremendous job trying to alleviate chronic unemployment conditions.

These States and communities are not looking for handouts. Individually, these communities have invested large sums, including funds raised by popular subscription through community development organizations, for industrial site preparation, plant construction and other services in an effort to attract industry.

Many of these community development organizations can no longer provide help because their local financial resources have been exhausted.

These communities need help. The people in my district will be forever grateful if the House of Representatives will take prompt action today and pass this important piece of legislation—legislation that will start the machinery to get the great number of unemployed off the relief rolls and back to work as soon as possible.

Mr. MOELLER. Mr. Chairman, I join with my colleagues in support of S. 1, the administration bill passed by the Senate on March 16, as an effective Federal program of assistance to the economically depressed areas of our Nation. The national average unemployment has reached an unprecedented rate of 7.7 percent, higher than at any time since the Depression of the 1930's.

This is a situation affecting every American. For instance, in my own District, the 10th of Ohio, seven of the eight counties are listed by the Department of Labor as areas of substantial and persistent unemployment. This means that these counties currently have a rate of unemployment in excess of 6 percent, and have had such a rate for the last 3 years. These seven counties and the latest unemployment statistics released by the Labor Department are as follows:

Hocking County, 10.2 percent; Athens County, 10.2 percent; Vinton County, 10.2 percent; Gallia County, 15.2 percent; Meigs County, 15.2 percent; Jackson County, 9 percent; and Lawrence County, 16 percent.

As is readily apparent, my district has a real need for Federal area redevelopment legislation. This is why I introduced an area redevelopment bill in this House last January, and it is why I have continued to support the administration's effort to secure enactment of a constructive program.

My district is predominantly rural in character and we stand to benefit greatly from the special provisions in the administration bill to assist economically depressed rural areas. I sincerely hope that the Widnall amendment to eliminate virtually all assistance to rural areas and to cut the overall redevelopment program by more than 30 percent is soundly defeated.

In sharp contrast to the Eisenhower area redevelopment veto of last year, Mr. Kennedy has recognized the critical need for effective legislation at this time and has drafted what I consider to be a well-balanced program to stimulate sustained economic growth, so that the people in these distressed areas may share in our Nation's expansion. I urge the House to pass S. 1 and provide these areas with the help they need to help themselves.

Mr. ROBISON. Mr. Chairman, I am keenly aware of the economic distress that currently exists across the Nation and in certain areas of the 37th Congressional District of New York. Humanitarian motives prompt us to do something, and while I do think the Federal Government has a positive duty to help, I cannot convince myself that the House version of S. 1 is the proper medicine.

It would not meet the test of "constructive" Federal-local action because it tries to do too much in too many areas and with far too little money—some of the bill's proponents have accurately referred to the presently authorized amounts as representing only "seed corn"—and it seeks to duplicate, in large measure, already available Federal programs, perhaps near to 50 in number, that now channel millions of dollars of Federal aid of one kind or another to areas of chronic unemployment or those areas that have been hard hit by the current recession. These other existing programs could be retailored and expanded as needed, it would seem, as a better and more logical alternative to having Congress now create what may be an administrative monstrosity that cannot help but become a source of false hope and eventual bitter disillusionment to the people of the truly depressed areas.

As for the industrial provision of S. 1 and their impact on the economic climate of our State of New York, our problem is not one of the lack of industrial capacity, nor is there really such a lack with respect to the country as a whole. We have sufficient factories and machines—obsolete though some of them may be. What we need are jobs to put our people back to work in those factories and at those machines. Such jobs have been lost for a variety of reasons—archaic depreciation laws that stifle the incentive to modernize, the difficulty of accumulating "risk" capital, and so forth, and, last but not least of course, foreign competition. S. 1 would do nothing in any of these areas unless it be to encourage the existing trend toward substituting area-redevelopment activities for the legitimate and historical methods of protecting domestic industry from import injury.

Moreover, S. 1 would serve to stimulate a wave of industrial relocation, in which the already highly-industrial States like New York could only expect to experience a net loss of industry. I think the antipirating language of the House version of S. 1 is much better than that of any prior such measures, but it still leaves a great deal to be desired if we are, in fact, seeking truly to create new job opportunities and economic growth, and to discourage the raiding of already developed areas.

Incidentally, New York has just greatly expanded its own self-help program to improve our own economic climate by establishing a $100-million Job Development Authority loan-fund to be used to attract new industry. In combination with the activities of our local development corporations this progressive step could be of great import, but the good that it could do will be severely curtailed by the increasing State-versus-State competition which will result from Federal subsidies, paid for, in large part, by the taxpayers of the industrial States.

Thus, under S. 1, the people that I represent will be called upon to subsidize, through taxes, the departure of some part of their own industrial base leaving them with new and difficult problems of unemployment to solve locally.

The problem of the truly depressed area has many ramifications. There is no single answer. There is no easy solution. One of the basic facets of that problem, as I see it, is to help the unemployed citizens of those areas to acquire the skills needed for gainful employment, including such other assistance as may be appropriate to enable them to relocate to other areas of prime economic activity. The vocational training and retraining features of S. 1 are good, as far as they go, but are only of secondary importance in the bill as written. I would be prepared to support a greatly expanded Federal-State program of this sort since I believe it offers the only really broad solution for providing both an immediate and a long-range cure for the unemployment problem in our depressed areas.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MEADER].

(Mr. MEADER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MEADER. Mr. Chairman, unless this bill involves a completely new concept and a new Federal activity such as injecting government into business and into the risk end of business, there is no need for this legislation.

There are existing Federal instrumentalities and programs to provide financial assistance to chronically depressed areas already in existence in every one of the fields covered by this legislation. We have the Small Business Administration with authorized business lending authority of $575 million, of which nearly $100 million is uncommitted, the same sum as provided in section 6 of S. 1.

We also have the Small Business Investment Act designed to encourage and support economic undertakings in the small business category.

The Small Business Administration has a total personnel of 2,350, of whom 563 are located in the central office in Washington and 1,787 are distributed among the 56 regional and branch offices throughout the country. It is wasteful, extravagant, and confusing to set up a parallel organization in the Department of Commerce to perform functions which already can be performed by an existing agency.

The Community Facilities Administration in the Housing and Home Finance Agency has a lending authority of $150 million, of which $100 million has been available to them since 1955 and $50 million was added at the end of the last session of Congress. There is adequate authority in this Agency to provide funds for the community facilities purposes set forth in sections 7 and 8 of S. 1. Of the $150 million as of March 15, 1961, $35 million was uncommitted.

So far as retraining of unemployed individuals is concerned, we already have a vocational education program through which any necessary re-training can be handled both in the chronically depressed areas and elsewhere.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I say if the only purpose of this bill is to provide loans for business enterprises and community facilities on a prudent basis and grants for retraining, there is no need to create a new bureaucracy.

Even if we conceded that criteria and standards of performance were too rigid and we desired to loosen them up and make them less business-like, it would be possible by simple amendments to existing programs related specifically to chronically depressed areas to liberalize authority with respect to such areas in existing agencies.

Even though uncommitted funds presently exist which would seem to indicate that the demand has not exhausted amounts Congress has provided, it would be a simple matter to grant additional authority and appropriate additional funds to existing agencies to meet the needs of chronically depressed areas.

Mr. Chairman, the amounts provided in this bill will not provide many jobs. There is a great deal of uncertainty about the amount of invested capital required to make one job. I suggest that the $100 million provided for industrial loans, if it were all used for business undertakings in the two chronically depressed areas in my congressional district—Monroe and Adrian, Mich.—would not provide sufficient employment to absorb the 4,000 unemployment compensation claimants in Adrian and Monroe, Mich.

Mr. Chairman, I believe some idea of the effect of capital investment on adding new jobs can be gained from the 1960 annual report of the Ford Motor Co. which shows that an increase of $53 million in capital expenditures for expansion, modernization, and replacement of facilities—excluding special tools—for 1960 over 1959, was accompanied by an increase in average employment between those 2 years of only 640 positions. I made a computation that this meant an investment of approximately $83,000 per worker.

Mr. Chairman, it is obvious that this legislation is nothing but a label unless it is a foot in the door to put the Government into the equity end of business enterprises in this country. It is bad legislation and ought to be rejected.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of our time to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL].

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, I have long been concerned with the plight of the people of West Virginia and the people in eastern Pennsylvania and other truly and chronically depressed areas. I have been ready and willing to support depressed area legislation that would address itself to helping those critically affected areas. I know what it is to have unemployment in a district. I know what it is to have the impact of foreign imports, as the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. BAILEY], so ably stated in his remarks about the foreign import impact on the people of West Virginia. We have 500 zinc miners out of work in my district because of the importation of foreign zinc, and they have been out of work for several years, and there is no prospect of putting them back to work unless something is done about the imports of low-cost zinc. But, this bill is not going to cure that. This bill is not going to help the unemployed miners in my district, because they could not qualify under my substitute bill and they could not qualify under the committee bill.

Mr. Chairman, some of the provisions in this bill are fantastic. I am now talking about the rural section of the committee bill. We say in our minority report at page 23, which I call your attention to:

This provision of the bill is fantastic. Under it, in effect, you could have a Federal grant school bill, a Federal grant highway bill, a Federal grant hospital bill, a Federal grant airport bill, a Federal grant park bill, and a host of other Federal grant bills as long as the grants related to needed public facilities within a redevelopment area.

It would really be a foot in the door to establish the principal of the omnibus Federal grant bill.

And under the broad authority granted by the first sentence of section 5(a) there can be no question but that a whole State could be declared a depressed area or redevelopment area as it is termed in the bill.

If such a thing were done, just imagine how these funds would be dissipated so that no truly critically depressed area would receive any real benefit.

If I were from West Virginia or Pennsylvania I believe certainly there would be far more help to my district in the substitute bill proposed by me in the critical area of the retraining of workers. We propose to spend $10 million instead of $4.5 million as in the committee bill. It seems to me that that is one area where an unemployed person could find something that he himself would get out of the bill.

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. EDMONDSON. I believe the gentleman when he tells the House that he is seriously concerned about the problems of industrial areas like West Virginia and Pennsylvania. But I find it difficult to understand why the gentleman can close his mind to the problems present in the rural or country areas of the Nation. The testimony before the committee with regard to conditions in some of those counties was equally grave, equally serious, and certainly presented just as critical a problem in terms of the populations in those areas and the need for a redevelopment program in those areas. If the gentleman recognizes the need for aggressive redevelopment programs in the industrial areas, and I believe he does, will he tell us why should not this House recognize the needs in rural sections of the country and attempt to do something constructive about those problems?

Mr. WIDNALL. Because I believe that if there are such critically affected areas in the rural sections, there is $500,000 for a study, in this bill, with a report to be brought back by January 3, 1962, including projects and programs and areas to be assisted. There is nothing in this bill that pins down any area. There was not one word of testimony, by the way, by Secretary Goldberg, Secretary Freeman, and Secretary Hodges, as to how the money would be used and in what areas it would be used. To me right now it looks like a big $100 million bribe and boondoggle for the rural sections, because nobody knows where it is going to be used.

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman started his remarks by saying "if" there were such counties. Can the gentleman, after reviewing the record made by this committee, which shows some counties with per capita incomes of less than $750 a year, seriously stand there and say "if" there are counties where you do have a depressed condition? I am amazed that the gentleman would put an "if" before that statement because I think this committee, if it es-established nothing else, established very clearly the acute need for some kind of action by the Government in the rural sections of the country.

I want to commend the committee for including in this measure provisions which would also make it possible to do something about the depressed condition in the rural areas.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, I call your attention to the definition in section 5(b) of the committee bill and I would like to have explained to me what this means and who will be affected by it.

The Secretary shall also designate as "re-development areas" those areas (including Indian reservations) within the United States which do not meet the requirements set forth in subsection (a) but which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are of the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States."

There has never been any explanation as to where the money would be used and what areas would be helped.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] has expired.

(Mr. WIDNALL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as I may consume, to conclude the debate.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] I know is very sincere in his advocacy of his substitute bill. I assume it will be offered soon after we start reading the bill which will be not very long from now.

I do not believe that the substitute bill is sufficient at all to do the job that we contemplate will be done under the provisions of the committee bill.

No. 1, the Widnall amendment discriminates against rural areas. That means that in a State where you have industrial areas that are depressed and you have rural areas that are just as much depressed, the Administrator will not be privileged to authorize credit assistance for a plant in the rural area that is just as much depressed because under the Widnall amendment it is excluded. He will be limited to the depressed city areas in that State. Suppose there is a country area depressed nearby the city, and they come to the Administrator and make a good case. The Administrator would have to say, "I am sorry, but Congress said we can help only the cities. We cannot help the country at all."

Mr. HIESTAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HIESTAND. I am very much interested in the gentleman's remarks. I wonder what if anything the Secretary or the Administrator can do for these distressed rural areas.

Mr. PATMAN. They can have plants of any type or character desired in that community that would be suitable and feasible. There are lots of plants that could be established in these rural areas. I would not get into a discussion of a particular type or commodity or name a product that could be produced. I would not get into that at all. But I know there could be plants established that would be helpful to the rural areas by giving them employment where they are underemployed or unemployed.

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. EDMONDSON. I think the gentleman might mention to my good friend from California the possibility of frozen food processing plants, canneries, or feed mills, or various types of enterprises that would help these rural areas to make use of their manpower that is surplus at this time, to give them some supplementary income to enable them to continue to make a living on the farm. I think the gentleman would agree with me that it is a worthy and desirable thing to have prosperity in the rural areas as well as in the urban sections of our country.

Mr. HIESTAND. I am wondering where the personnel to run these plants must come from. It would have to come from outside. How then will they help the unemployment situation in the rural areas?

Mr. PATMAN. Just a few experts would come from the outside. They have workers available locally. They would need expert guidance. Only a few hundred would be needed.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. WIDNALL. Given the criteria under section 5(a), these towns you have at the present time—

Mr. PATMAN. Which bill is the gentleman talking about?

Mr. WIDNALL. The gentleman's bill.

Mr. PATMAN. I thought the gentleman was going to answer me when I said that his amendment discriminates against the country areas.

Mr. WIDNALL. There is Batavia, Ohio, 1,729; Georgetown, Ohio, 2,674; and West Union, Ohio, 1,762. Are not those rural areas?

Mr. PATMAN. Those cities can be helped. The gentleman should not ask us to discriminate against rural areas. When you vote for the Widnall amendment you are voting to help only the cities. You are saying that by your vote for the Widnall amendment, that you do not want the country areas to be helped regardless of how worthy they are for help and regardless of the number of feasible projects that can be established in rural areas that would remove their unemployment problem and their underemployment problem. The Administrator could not do anything because he would say, "My hands are tied. Congress tied my hands. We have a city Congress. They want to help only the cities, they do not want to help the country." The Widnall amendment is to help the cities. Therefore, when you vote for the Widnall amendment you are voting against the country areas.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. I wonder where it is proposed to get those technical advisers? Will they be obtained from the United Nations or the ICA where they have had a lot of experience developing the undeveloped.

Mr. PATMAN. No; we will not have to give them that. We are furnishing them technical advisers.

Mr. GROSS. I say again, they have had a lot of experience.

Mr. PATMAN. I have had some experience so far as technical advisers are concerned. We established a steel mill in the district I have the privilege and honor to represent, and we only brought a handful of people from Pittsburgh and Birmingham and steel areas like that, and they trained just a few fellows—4,500 good steelworkers. You can do the same thing with any of these other projects.

Mr. HIESTAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HIESTAND. Just how many rural areas that the gentleman referred to have we in that category? How many would be affected under the present definition?

Mr. PATMAN. I am glad the gentleman mentioned that. You see the rural areas do not have the statistical information that the Labor Department has. The farmers do not have that type of service. But we know, and we have information in the hearings as to the number of counties and as to the number of people who have left the counties and of the distress in those counties. We have an abundance of information, but we do not have it in detail for a town or a city or a county like the Labor Department has for industrial areas. Therefore, the rural areas are under a disadvantage on that. But do not discriminate against them because they are weak on statistics. The actual facts speak for themselves.

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. EDMONDSON. The gentleman recalls that when this was before the last Congress we had criteria which qualified approximately 660 counties across the country for participation in the rural development program. Now the criteria which are set up under this bill include the criteria which prevailed in the legislation which was last before this Congress, which this House voted and passed over to the other body in the last Congress.

Mr. HIESTAND. Will the gentleman assure us that the amount designated is sufficient to cover that?

Mr. EDMONDSON. For my own part, I would say to the gentleman, I have a question in my mind as to the sufficiency of the funds to meet the needs of this program both on the urban and the rural end. I am not prepared to say because I do not believe there is enough money in it that we are not even going to take a step forward toward meeting this problem. I am one who says—let us take a step forward and let us make some progress in this direction within the limits of our ability at this time both on the rural front and on the urban front.

Mr. PATMAN. I agree with what the gentleman from Oklahoma has just said. I know that this is not enough money. It is only about 10 percent of what we give to foreign countries for the same purpose. Are we going to deny to our own people 10 percent of what we are giving annually to foreign countries to do the same thing? That is worthy of consideration, too. But even if it is not enough money, we should not vote against the whole program and we should not discriminate against the rural areas.

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. EDMONDSON. The chairman of our committee represents a State which has both urban areas and rural areas which qualify under this bill, and that clearly qualified under the bill last passed by the House. So does the gentleman from Oklahoma have in his district, counties which qualify both from an urban and from a rural standpoint. But, there are some States represented on this floor that do not have any counties that would qualify as urban areas for redevelopment at this time. The only way those States can participate in any way in this program is to have the rural sections of this program go through. If we adopt the Widnall amendment, we knock out any participation by those States in this program. I think, checking back on the criteria in the bill passed by the last Congress, the State of New Jersey has several areas which qualify as urban areas but in the bill passed in the last Congress, it had no rural sections. I do not think the gentleman from New Jersey would want to see a bill passed which benefited his State and excluded other States from participating in the benefits of a good program of this kind. He has indicated he favors the spirit and the principle behind this legislation. I wish he would join with us in seeing every State in the Union that has depressed areas, whether they are rural or urban in nature, participate and go forward under this program.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield.

Mr. WIDNALL. I would like to call the gentleman's attention to this fact that under industrial sections, the only areas that would qualify in our State at the present time are Atlantic City, a resort area, Long Branch, a resort area, and Bridgeton, with its vegetable production, and its migrant labor. This bill does not help my State at all.

Mr. PATMAN. Let me plead with the gentleman to not discriminate against his rural areas in New Jersey. I believe when he thinks this over a little more he will not want to discriminate against his country people and in favor of the city folks and place the Members who are from States that have depressed rural areas but no depressed city areas, in the untenable position of voting for a bill that helps only the cities.

That places us in a very untenable position.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MULTER. I think the answer to the question raised by the gentleman from New Jersey lies in the testimony of the Secretary of Agriculture when he appeared before the committee. There are no rural areas in my district or my city, but I am for this bill and I am for the provisions that would help the rural areas on the basis of the testimony of the Secretary of Agriculture who says in part, and I quote from the hearings:

If I might summarize, I think we ought to go forward something like this: First of all, we ought to complete the job of summarization, of factfinding, of research and survey. I would expect that the Secretary of Commerce, when this bill becomes law, would ask the Secretary of Agriculture where rural areas are concerned to conduct the surveys, to complete those underway and to certify to him the areas that call for rural redevelopment programs.

When those areas are determined, we would then develop a program for those areas and have it down specifically and in some detail. In both identifying the areas and developing the program, the resources of the area are the key and the guide and they, I think, will lead to what should be done.

I think we should take the suggestion of the Secretary of Agriculture in regard to the need of these rural areas.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. I agree with the gentleman from New York. The fact of the matter is that this bill would bring aid to more than 9 percent of our total work population in New Jersey, of which at the present time 225,000 are unemployed.

We also have depressed rural areas, particularly in the poultry area where they have undergone almost intolerable suffering in recent years.

I think it would be entirely unfair if these rural areas were not in the bill. I think all of us would benefit from having them in, although some of our districts are entirely urban in district complexion.

Mr. PATMAN. I hope that the gentleman from New Jersey in presenting his amendment will change it so as not to discriminate against the country or the rural areas. They are entitled to relief the same as are the city folks.

Mr. LOSER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. LOSER. A number of times during the debate on this bill reference has been made to the number of counties, several hundred, that would qualify under the provisions set forth in this measure for aid. I am wondering whether or not the word "qualify" is not being used rather loosely. As a matter of fact, I think the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. EDMONDSON] has said that in the State of Tennessee there are 70 counties that would qualify under the provisions of this legislation. My question is: Does not the gentleman mean, or is it not the purpose of the measure, that the Secretary of Commerce shall designate certain counties in the State as rural areas as contrasted with urban areas?

Mr. PATMAN. That is my interpretation, I will say to the gentleman.

Mr. LOSER. And that no county, even though designated as a rural redevelopment area, can obtain any benefits under the provisions of this bill unless they meet the criteria set forth in section 5?

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman has brought out a good point. Ten times as many will qualify as will receive it, for the obvious reason that the money is insufficient. That is reason No. 1. The administration will be required to pick out the most deserving and the most needy and service them. Just because they are qualified does not mean they will get assistance because the money is not sufficient.

Mr. LOSER. Mr. Chairman, I do not believe the gentleman from Texas has answered my question.

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me to answer the question?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. EDMONDSON. The only remark I have made with regard to Tennessee was that under the bill which passed the Congress in the last session 70 counties in Tennessee were identified as qualified to participate in the rural section of that bill. I believe the criteria which are in the present bill include the criteria which were present in the last Congress, plus some additional criteria.

Mr. PATMAN. I will have to ask the gentleman to bear with me. My time has almost expired, and I must mention another point. That is about the interest rate.

Under the Widnall amendment the interest rate on public facility loans would be $4\frac{3}{8}$ percent in most cases. Under the bill we have the interest rate will be $3\frac{1}{4}$, which is the average rate for all U.S. Government securities, plus one-fourth of 1 percent. Is that not enough?

Mr. LOSER. I do not think the gentleman has answered the question.

Mr. PATMAN. I cannot do both at the same time, and I prefer to do it this way. Three and a half percent is certainly a high enough rate for tax-exempt securities. Remember that Federal Government obligations are taxable, but State and local municipal bonds are not taxable. Therefore, this 3½ percent rate is high instead of low.

Under the Widnall amendment the interest rate would be the equivalent of 8.5 percent or more for an investor in the 50 percent tax bracket. So, considering the fact these are tax-exempt securities, 3.5 percent interest rate is a high interest rate. We should not think about raising it. Certainly the Widnall amendment should be voted down.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

Mr. KILBURN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count.

One hundred and twenty-two Members are present, a quorum.

Pursuant to the rule, the Clerk will now read the substitute committee amendment as an original bill for the purpose of amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Area Redevelopment Act".

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WIDNALL: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following: "That this Act may be cited as the 'Area Redevelopment Act'."

"DECLARATION OF PURPOSE"

"SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best interests of the United States, but that some of our communities are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment; that such unemployment and underemployment cause hardship to many individuals and their families and detract from the national welfare by wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, should help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment to take effective steps in planning and financing their economic redevelopment; that Federal assistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals in areas needing redevelopment should enable such areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diversified local economies and improved local living conditions; and that under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources.

"AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATOR"

"SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that received by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Administrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the 'Secretary') may assign.

"ADVISORY POLICY BOARD"

"SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is created an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board (hereinafter referred to as the 'Board'), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration. The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

"(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under this Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year.

"(c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call together and confer with any persons, including representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and government, who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment or underemployment in the several areas designated by the Secretary as redevelopment areas.

"REDEVELOPMENT AREAS"

"SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as a 'redevelopment area' any labor market area within the United States with respect to which the chief executive of the State in which such area is located has requested such designation and the Secretary of Labor has found and certified to the Secretary—

"(1) that the rate of unemployment in such area, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in paragraph (2); and

"(2) that the annual average rate of unemployment in such area has been at least—

"(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

"(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

"(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years.

"(b) The Secretary of Agriculture shall conduct such studies as he may deem necessary to enable him to develop and submit to the Congress, not later than January 3, 1962, a proposed workable program to provide for the participation of rural areas, rural nonfarm areas, and Indian reservations, in which there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment for an extended period of time, in the program of financial assistance under this Act. Upon the request of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Interior shall conduct such special studies and compile and furnish to the Secretary of Agriculture such information as the Secretary of Agriculture may deem necessary to enable him to carry out his duties under this subsection. The Secretary of Agriculture shall reimburse the Secretary of the Interior, out of funds appropriated under this subsection, for expenses incurred by the the Secretary of the Interior under this subsection. There are authorized to be appropriated such sums, not to exceed $500,000, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this subsection.

"(c) The Secretary shall reimburse when appropriate, out of any funds available to the Secretary under this Act, the heads of other departments or agencies for expenses incurred by them under this section in conducting studies or furnishing information requested by the Secretary.

"(d) As used in this Act, the term "redevelopment area" refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area.

"LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS"

"SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (which for purposes of this section shall include participations in loans) to aid in financing any project within a redevelopment area for the purchase or development of land and facilities (including, in exceptional cases, machinery and equipment) for industrial or commercial usage, including the construction of new buildings, the rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied buildings, and the alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings. Such financial assistance shall not be extended for working capital, or to assist establishments relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another.

"(b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, subject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

"(1) The total amount of loans (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding at any one time under this section with respect to projects in redevelopment areas shall not exceed $150,000,000.

"(2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants, both private and public, approved for such assistance by the State (or any agency or instrumentality thereof concerned with problems of economic development) in which the project to be financed is or will be located.

"(3) The project for which financial assistance is sought must be reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area wherein it is or will be located.

"(4) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms.

"(5) The Secretary shall not make any loan without a participation unless he determines that the loan cannot be made on a participation basis.

"(6) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there is a reasonable assurance of repayment.

"(7) Subject to section 11(5) of this Act, no loan, including renewals or extension thereof, may be made hereunder for a period exceeding twenty-five years and no evidences of indebtedness maturing more than twenty-five years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor.

"(8) Loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 8(d) of this Act plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum to cover administrative expenses and to provide for losses on loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section.

"(9) Such assistance shall not exceed 65 per centum of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or developing land and facilities (including, in exceptional cases, machinery and equipment), and of constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building or buildings of the particular project, and shall, among others, be on the condition that—

"(A) other funds are available in an amount which, together with the assistance hereunder, shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

"(B) not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by a community or area organization which is nongovernmental in character, as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance;

"(C) in extending financial assistance under this section with respect to a redevelopment area, the Secretary shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such assistance is extended shall be supplied by nongovernmental sources, in addition to any funds supplied from such sources under subparagraph (B), as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance; and

"(D) to the extent the Secretary finds such action necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular project by other lenders and investors, and except as otherwise provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), any Federal financial assistance extended under this section may be repayable only after other loans made in connection with such project have been repaid in full, and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other loans made in connection with the same project.

"(10) No such assistance shall be extended unless there shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an overall program for the economic development of the area and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the State or local political subdivision in which the project would be located.

"LOANS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

"SEC. 7. (a) In order to provide loans for public facilities in redevelopment areas, the first sentence of section 202(c) of title II of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended to read as follows:

"(c) In the processing of applications for financial assistance under this section, the Administrator shall give equal priority to applications of—

"(1) counties, cities, and other municipalities, and political subdivisions for financing needed public facilities in areas determined to be redevelopment areas under the Area Redevelopment Act, if the Secretary of Commerce certifies there is reasonable probability that with assistance made available under the Area Redevelopment Act and other undertakings such areas will be able to achieve lasting improvement in their economic development; and

"(2) smaller municipalities for assistance in the construction of basic public works (including works for the storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water; sewage, sewage treatment, and sewer facilities; and gas distribution systems) for which there is an urgent and vital public need."

"(b) The first sentence of section 203(a) of title II of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended to read as follows:

"(a) In order to finance activities under this title, the Administrator is authorized and empowered to issue to the Secretary of the Treasury, from time to time and to have outstanding at any one time in an amount not exceeding $150,000,000, notes and other obligations, which limit shall be increased by such amounts, not exceeding $100,000,000, as may be specified from time to time in appropriation Acts."

"(c) No financial assistance shall be extended under the amendments made by this section with respect to—

"(1) any public facility situated in a redevelopment area which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it is prepared to undertake; or

"(2) any area if it will assist business establishments in relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another.

"AREA REDEVELOPMENT FUND

"SEC. 8. (a) There is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States an area redevelopment fund (hereinafter referred to as the 'fund'), which shall be available to the Secretary for the purpose of extending financial assistance under section 6 and for the payment of all obligations and expenditures arising therefrom.

"(b) When requested by the Secretary, advances shall be made to the fund from the appropriations made therefor. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of making advances to the fund, without fiscal year limitation, an amount not exceeding $150,000,000.

"(c) Receipts arising from the program of assistance under section 6 shall be credited to the fund. Any moneys in the fund determined by the Secretary to be in excess of current needs shall be credited to the appropriation from which advanced to be held for future advances to the fund.

"(d) There shall be paid into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury at the close of each fiscal year interest, on advances made to the fund for use in extending financial assistance under section 6, at rates which shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury at the time the advances or commitments for advances are made after taking into consideration the current average market yields of outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to loans made by the Secretary under section 6.

"(e) The fund shall contribute to the civil service retirement and disability fund a sum as provided by section 4(a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act (5 U.S.C. 2254(a)), except that such sum shall be determined by applying to the total basic salaries (as defined in that Act) paid to employees performing activities authorized under section 6 of this Act and covered by that Act the per centum rate determined annually by the Civil Service Commission to be the excess of the total normal cost per centum rate of the civil service retirement system over the employee deduction rate specified in such section 4(a). The fund shall also pay into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts that portion of the cost of administration of the civil service retirement and disability fund attributable to employees performing activities authorized under section 6 of this Act, as determined by the Civil Service Commission.

"(f) In the performance of and with respect to the functions, powers, and duties vested in him by section 6 of this Act, the Secretary shall—

"(1) prepare annually and submit a budget program in accordance with the provisions of sections 102, 103, and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended; and

"(2) determine the character of and the necessity for obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to provisions of law specifically applicable to Government corporations.

"INFORMATION

"SEC. 9. The Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas. The Secretary shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

"TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 10. In carrying out his duties under this Act the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment (1) to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under this Act, and (2) to other areas which he finds have substantial need for such assistance. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secretary through members of his staff or through the employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations, or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such purposes. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purposes of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000 annually.

"POWERS OF SECRETARY

"SEC. 11. In performing his duties under this Act, the Secretary is authorized to—

"(1) adopt, alter, and use a seal, which shall be judicially noticed;

"(2) hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, and take such testimony, as he may deem advisable;

"(3) request directly from any executive department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, independent establishment, or instrumentality information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics needed to carry out the purposes of this Act; and each department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, establishment, or instrumentality is authorized to furnish such information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics directly to the Secretary;

"(4) under regulations prescribed by him, assign or sell at public or private sale, or otherwise dispose of for cash or credit, in his discretion and upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any evidence of debt, contract, claim, personal property, or security assigned to or held by him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act, and collect or compromise all obligations assigned to or held by him in connection with such loans or evidences of indebtedness until such time as such obligations may be referred to the Attorney General for suit or collection;

"(5) further extend the maturity of or renew any loan made or evidence of indebtedness purchased under this Act, beyond the periods stated in such loan or evidence of indebtedness or in this Act, for additional periods not to exceed ten years, if such extension or renewal will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loan or evidence of indebtedness;

"(6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, modernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any real or personal property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by, him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

"(7) pursue to final collection, by way of compromise or other administrative action, prior to reference to the Attorney General, all claims against third parties assigned to him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act. This shall include authority to obtain deficiency judgments or otherwise in the case of mortgages assigned to the Secretary. Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (41 U.S.C. 5), shall not apply to any contract of hazard insurance or to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on account of property obtained by the Secretary as a result of loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act if the premium therefor or the amount thereof does not exceed $1,000. The power to convey and to execute, in the name of the Secretary, deeds of conveyance, deeds of release, assignments and satisfactions of mortgages, and any other written instrument relating to real or personal property or any interest therein acquired by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of this Act may be exercised by the Secretary or by any officer or agent appointed by him for that purpose without the execution of any express delegation of power or power of attorney;

"(8) acquire, in any lawful manner, any property (real, personal, or mixed, tangible or intangible), whenever deemed necessary or appropriate to the conduct of the activities authorized in section 6 of this Act;

"(9) in addition to any powers, functions, privileges, and immunities otherwise vested in him, take any and all actions, including the procurement of the services of attorneys by contract, determined by him to be necessary or desirable in making, purchasing, servicing, compromising, modifying, liquidating, or otherwise administratively dealing with or realizing on loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

"(10) to such an extent as he finds necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act, procure the temporary (not in excess of six months) service of experts or consultants or organizations thereof, including stenographic reporting services, by contract or appointment, and in such cases such service shall be without regard to the civil service and classification laws, and, except in the case of stenographic reporting services by organizations, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5); any individual so employed may be compensated at a rate not in excess of $75 per diem, and, while such individual is away from his home or regular place of business, he may be allowed transportation and not to exceed $15 per diem in lieu of subsistence and other expenses;

"(11) sue and be sued in any court of record of a State having general jurisdiction or in any United States district court, and jurisdiction is conferred upon such district court to determine such controversies without regard to the amount in controversy; but no attachments, injunction, garnishment, or other similar process, mesne or final, shall be issued against the Secretary or his property. Nothing herein shall be construed to except the activities under this Act from the application of sections 507(b) and 2679 of title 28, United States Code, and of section 367 of the Revised Statutes (5 U.S.C. 316); and

"(12) establish such rules, regulations, and procedures as he may deem appropriate in carrying out the provisions of this Act.

"TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 12. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall be granted under this Act with respect to such area and, for the purposes of this Act, such areas shall not be considered a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secretary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment area. The Secretary shall keep the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

"URBAN RENEWAL

"SEC. 13. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

"SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (in this section referred to as a "municipality") is situated in an area designated under section 5 of the Area Redevelopment Act as a redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economy, the Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

"(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e) of this section, the Administrator may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirement or limitations of section 110(c) that the project area be predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses under the urban renewal plan, and without regard to any of the limitations of that section on the undertaking of projects for predominantly nonresidential uses; but no such assistance shall be provided in any area if the Administrator determines that it will assist business establishments in relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another.

"(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, a contract for financial assistance under this section may include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the project area designated under the urban renewal plan for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or non-profit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to such public agency or corporation under this section shall be made at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And provided further, That only the purchaser from or lessees of such public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obligations relating to the commencement of improvements imposed under section 105(b) hereof.

"(d) Following the execution of any contract for financial assistance under this section with respect to any project, the Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him under this section for the completion of such projects, notwithstanding any determination made after the execution of such contract that the area in which the project is located is no longer a redevelopment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

"(e) Not more than 10 per centum of the funds authorized for capital grants under section 103 after the date of the enactment of the Area Redevelopment Act shall be used for the purpose of providing financial assistance under this section. Amounts used for such purpose shall not be taken into account for the purpose of the limitation contained in the second proviso of the fifth sentence of section 110(c).

"URBAN PLANNING GRANTS

"SEC. 14. Paragraph (3) of section 701(a) of the Housing Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after "counties which" the following: "(A) are situated in areas designated by the Secretary of Commerce under section 5(a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as redevelopment areas or (B)".

"OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING

"SEC. 15. (a) The Secretary of Labor is authorized, upon request and whenever he determines such studies are needed, to undertake, or to provide assistance to others for, studies of the size, characteristics, skills, adaptability, occupational potentialities, and related aspects of the labor force of any redevelopment area.

"(b) When a redevelopment area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10), the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the Secretary, shall determine the occupational training or retraining needs of unemployed individuals residing in the redevelopment area. The Secretary of Labor shall notify the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare of the occupational training or retraining requirements of the area, and shall provide for the orderly selection and referral of those unemployed or underemployed individuals residing in the area who can reasonably be expected to obtain employment as a result of the skill they will acquire in the training which is to be made available. The Secretary of Labor shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and with existing State and local agencies and officials in charge of existing programs relating to vocational training and retraining for the purpose of assuring that the facilities and services of such agencies are made fully available to such individuals.

"(c) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that additional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet the occupational training or retraining needs of such individuals, he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall provide assistance, including financial assistance when necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational agency in the provision of such additional facilities or services. If the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare finds that the State vocational educational agency is unable to provide the facilities and services needed, he may, after consultation with such agency, provide for the same by agreement or contract with public or private educational institutions.

"(d) The Secretary of Labor shall arrange to provide any necessary assistance for setting up apprenticeships, and to promote journeyman and other on-the-job training.

"(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1961, such sums, not in excess of $10,000,000, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

"SEC. 16. (a) The Secretary of Labor in consultation with the Secretary may, on behalf of the United States, enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment areas are located, under which the Secretary of Labor shall make payments to such States either in advance or by way of reimbursement for the purpose of enabling such States, as agents of the United States, to make weekly retraining payments to unemployed individuals residing within such redevelopment areas who are certified by the Secretary of Labor to be undergoing occupational training or retraining under section 15 of this Act. Such payments shall be made for a period not exceeding sixteen weeks, and the amount of any such payment for any week shall not exceed the amount of the average weekly unemployment compensation payment (including allowances for dependents) payable for a week of total unemployment in the State making such payments.

"(b) No weekly retraining payment shall be made to any person otherwise eligible who, with respect to the week for which such payment would be made, has received or is seeking unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or any other Federal or any State unemployment compensation law, but if the appropriate State or Federal agency finally determines that a person denied benefits for any week because of this subsection was not entitled to unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or such Federal or State law with respect to such week, this subsection shall not apply with respect to such week.

"(c) Any agreement under this section may contain provisions (including, so far as may be appropriate, provisions authorized or made applicable with respect to agreements concluded by the Secretary of Labor pursuant to title XV of the Social Security Act) as will promote effective administration, protect the United States against loss, and insure the proper application of payments made to the State under such agreement. Except as may be provided in such agreements, or in the rules and regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, determinations by any duly designated officer or agency as to the eligibility of individuals for weekly retraining payments under this section shall be final and conclusive for any purposes and not subject to review by any court or any other officer.

"(d) The Secretary of Labor and the Secretary shall jointly prescribe such rules and regulations as they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1961, such sums, not in excess of $10,000,000, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"PENALTIES

"SEC. 17. (a) Whoever makes any statement knowing it to be false, or whoever willfully overvalues any security, for the purpose of obtaining for himself or for any applicant any financial assistance under section 6, or any extension thereof by renewal, deferment of action, or otherwise, or the acceptance, release, or substitution of security therefor, or for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of the Secretary, or for the purpose of obtaining money, property, or anything of value, under this Act, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than five years, or both.

"(b) Whoever, being connected in any capacity with the Secretary, in the administration of this Act (1) embezzles, abstracts, purloins, or willfully misapplies any moneys, funds, securities, or other things of value, whether belonging to him or pledged or otherwise entrusted to him, or (2) with intent to defraud the Secretary or any other body politic or corporate, or any individual, or to deceive any officer, auditor, or examiner, makes any false entry in any book, report, or statement of or to the Secretary, or without being duly authorized draws any order or issues, puts forth, or assigns any note, debenture, bonds, or other obligation, or draft, bill of exchange, mortgage, judgment, or decree thereof, or (3) with intent to defraud participates or shares in or receives directly or indirectly any money, profit, property, or benefit through any transaction, loan, grant, commission, contract, or any other act of the Secretary, or (4) gives any unauthorized information concerning any future action or plan of the Secretary which might affect the value of securities, or having such knowledge invests or speculates, directly or indirectly, in the securities or property of any company or corporation receiving loans or other assistance from the Secretary, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than five years, or both.

"EMPLOYMENT OF EXPEDITERS AND ADMINISTRATIVE EMPLOYEES

"SEC. 18. No financial assistance shall be extended by the Secretary under section 6 to any business enterprise unless the owners, partners, or officers of such business enterprise (1) certify to the Secretary the names of any attorneys, agents, and other persons engaged by or on behalf of such business enterprise for the purpose of expediting applications made to the Secretary for assistance of any sort, under this Act, and the fees paid or to be paid to any such person; and (2) execute an agreement binding such business enterprise, for a period of two years after such assistance is rendered by the Secretary to such business enterprise, to refrain from employing, tendering any office or employment to, or retaining for professional services, any person who, on the date such assistance or any part thereof was rendered, or within one year prior thereto, shall have served as an officer, attorney, agent, or employee, occupying a position or engaging in activities which the Secretary shall have determined involve discretion with respect to the granting of assistance under this Act.

"RECORD OF APPLICATIONS

"SEC. 19. The Secretary shall maintain as a permanent part of the records of the Department of Commerce a list of applications approved for financial assistance under section 6, which shall be kept available for public inspection during the regular business hours of the Department of Commerce. The following information shall be posted in such list as soon as each application is approved: (1) the name of the applicant and, in the case of corporate applications, the names of the officers and directors thereof, (2) the amount and duration of the loan for which application is made, (3) the purposes for which the proceeds of the loan are to be used, and (4) a general description of the security offered.

"PREVAILING RATE OF WAGE AND FORTY-HOUR WEEK

"SEC. 20. All laborers and mechanics employed by contractors or subcontractors on projects assisted by the Secretary under this Act and undertaken by public applicants shall be paid wages at rates not less than those prevailing on similar construction in the locality as determined by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act, as amended (40 U.S.C. 276a-276a-5), and every such employee shall receive compensation at a rate not less than one and one-half times his basic rate of pay for all hours worked in any workweek in excess of eight hours in any workday or forty hours in the workweek, as the case may be. The Secretary shall not extend any financial assistance under section 6 for such a project without first obtaining adequate assurance that these labor standards will be maintained upon the construction work. The Secretary of Labor shall have, with respect to the labor standards specified in this provision, the authority and functions set forth in Reorganization Plan Numbered 14 of 1950 (15 F.R. 3176; 64 Stat. 1267; 5 U.S.C. 1332-15), and section 2 of the Act of June 13, 1934, as amended (48 Stat. 948, as amended; 40 U.S.C. 276c).

"ANNUAL REPORT

"SEC. 21. The Secretary shall make a comprehensive and detailed annual report to the Congress of his operations under this Act for each fiscal year beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1962. Such report shall be printed and shall be transmitted to the Congress not later than January 3 of the year following the fiscal year with respect to which such report is made. Such report shall show, among other things, (1) the number and size of Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies and services placed with business enterprises located in redevelopment areas, and (2) the amount and duration of employment resulting from such contracts. Upon the request of the Secretary, the various departments and agencies of the Government engaged in the procurement of supplies and services shall furnish to the Secretary such information as may be necessary for the purposes of this section.

"APPROPRIATION

"SEC. 22. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act.

"USE OF OTHER FACILITIES

"SEC. 23. (a) To the fullest extent practicable in carrying out the provisions of this Act the Secretary shall use the available services and facilities of other agencies and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, but only with their consent and on a reimbursable basis. The foregoing requirement shall be implemented by the Secretary in such a manner as to avoid the duplication of existing staffs and facilities in any agency or instrumentality of the Federal Government. The Secretary is authorized to delegate to the heads of other departments and agencies of the Federal Government any of the Secretary's functions, powers, and duties under this Act as he may deem appropriate, and to authorize the redelegation of such functions, powers, and duties by the heads of such departments and agencies.

"(b) Departments and agencies of the Federal Government shall exercise their powers, duties, and functions in such manner as will assist in carrying out the objectives of this Act. This Act shall be supplemental to any existing authority, and nothing herein shall be deemed to be restrictive of any existing powers, duties, and functions of any other department or agency of the Federal Government.

"(c) Funds authorized to be appropriated under this Act may be transferred, with the approval of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, between departments and agencies of the Government, if such funds are used for the purposes for which they are specifically authorized and appropriated.

"(d) Subject to the standards and procedures prescribed by section 505 of the Classification Act of 1949, as amended, the head of any agency, for the performance of functions under this Act, including functions delegated pursuant to subsection (a), may place positions in grades 16, 17, and 18 of the General Schedule established by such Act, and such positions shall be in addition to the number of such positions authorized by section 505 of the Classification Act of 1949, as amended, to be placed in such grades: Provided, That not to exceed a total of fifteen such positions may be placed in such grades under this subsection, to be apportioned among the agencies by the Secretary, with the approval of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

"RECORDS AND AUDIT

"SEC. 24. (a) Each recipient of assistance under section 6 of this Act shall keep such records as the Secretary shall prescribe, including records which fully disclose the amount and the disposition by such recipient of the proceeds of such assistance, the total cost of the project or undertaking in connection with which such assistance is given or used, and the amount and nature of that portion of the cost of the project or undertaking supplied by other sources, and such other records as will facilitate an effective audit.

"(b) The Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States, or any of their duly authorized representatives, shall have access for the purpose of audit and examination to any books, documents, papers, and records of the recipient that are pertinent to assistance received under section 6 of this Act.

"LOANS TO STATE AND LOCAL DEVELOPMENT COMPANIES

"SEC. 25. Section 502 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 is amended by striking out paragraph (6).

"STUDY BY SECRETARY

"SEC. 26. The Secretary shall make a study of the feasibility of establishing procedures to provide for increased use of military bases, and Government-owned plants and facilities for the manufacture or production of munitions and other supplies for the Government, which are located in areas designated under section 5 of this Act as redevelopment areas and which are not fully utilized, whenever such use is consistent with the national defense, economy in Government operation, and other Government procurement objectives. Upon the completion of such study the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report of his findings together with such recommendations for legislative and other action as he may deem appropriate.

"APPLICATION OF ACT

"SEC. 27. As used in this Act, the terms 'State', 'States', and 'United States' include the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

Mr. WIDNALL (interrupting the reading of the amendment). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with and that it be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. This is the bill, I assume, that was offered as a substitute.

Mr. WIDNALL. H.R. 5943.

Mr. PATMAN. H.R. 5943?

Mr. WIDNALL. That is correct.

Mr. Chairman, I have asked to dispense with the further reading of the amendment because this amendment is the committee bill as reported with 15 changes. I would like to underline those changes to the members of the committee so that they will fully understand what is proposed.

These changes, in my opinion, are desirable and necessary if this bill is to provide assistance for the hard-core depressed areas suffering from chronic and persistent unemployment because of loss of their industrial base.

My bill will provide 50 percent more loan assistance for the construction of plants in the truly depressed areas, it will provide more than double the amount of funds allocated for occupational training and retraining, and it will do all of this with a reduction of 30 percent in the overall cost. The cost of my bill to the taxpayer is $275 million, contrasted with the $394 million cost of the committee bill. Under my bill, the loan assistance provided would be on a nonsubsidy basis.

Rather than attempt the whole series of 15 amendments to the committee bill, I am of the opinion that it would be preferable procedure to have these changes incorporated in one new bill which I intend to offer as a substitute to the committee bill when it is before the House.

Following is a brief summary of the differences between the bill I have introduced and the bill that was reported by the House Banking and Currency Committee:

First. Designation of industrial redevelopment areas—section 5(a):

(a) The broad authority to designate redevelopment areas contained in the first sentence of section 5(a) is eliminated. Under it, in the bill as reported, a whole State could be declared a redevelopment area. The truly depressed areas should not have to share benefits intended for them on any such broad basis as that. This is a basic policy decision.

(b) The term "labor market area" is used in place of "area." Department of Labor statistics on unemployment are tabulated on the basis of "labor market areas." Thus there will be correlation between the areas designated and the areas for which unemployment information is available.

(c) Areas within a State can only be designated as redevelopment areas after the chief executive of the State has requested that the designation be made. This preserves States rights in the making of such designations.

(d) The criteria under which it is mandatory that areas be designated as redevelopment areas—upon proper request—are made the minimum conditions that must exist for any labor market area to be declared a redevelopment area. This will tend to assure that the assistance provided in the bill will be available for the hardcore depressed areas which are the ones in greatest need.

Second. Rural areas—section 5(b):

(a) The loose and meaningless criteria for designation of rural development areas are eliminated. Under the committee bill, only two counties or as many as half of the counties in the United States could be declared to be redevelopment area. In addition, the hearing makes abundantly clear no one has the faintest idea of how this program would work.

But we would like to know the nature of the assistance, where it is to go, what the areas are. And nobody has given any intelligent explanation of that up to now, including all the committee witnesses.

(b) The sensible way to proceed with this part of the program is to require the Secretary of Agriculture to come up with a study that makes sense as to what could be done in rural areas, and Indian reservations. Accordingly, provision is made for such a study with a report to Congress not later than January 3, 1962. Appropriations of up to $500,000 are authorized for such study. The Secretary of Agriculture is specifically authorized to receive assistance from the Secretary of Interior in making the study.

Third. Plant loan funds for industrial redevelopment areas—section 6(b):

(a) In my bill, a 50-percent increase is provided in the loan funds available for the hard-core industrial depressed areas since that program can proceed on a sensible basis.

(b) Since it is the apparent intention of the committee bill that there be at least 15 percent State and local equity participation in plant loans, section 6(b) (9) (C) is amended to close a loophole under which, in certain cases, only a 10 percent participation would be required.

Fourth. Loans for public facilities—section 7:

(a) In place of establishing a new, duplicating public facility loan program on a subsidized basis, provision in my bill is made for expanding by $100 million the existing public facility loan program in the Housing Agency with provision for a priority for counties, cities, and other municipalities and political subdivisions in redevelopment areas. Such a program is on a nonsubsidized lending basis.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] has expired.

Mr. HIESTAND. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object—and I shall not object—I should like to get some understanding about time on this amendment, if we can. We have only one Member who is going to answer the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL]. If the gentleman wants to dispose of this in a reasonable length of time, I am willing that he be granted as much time as he desires now, with the understanding that the Member on our side will have the same amount of time, and then debate will be closed.

The CHAIRMAN. Is the gentleman proposing a time limitation?

Mr. PATMAN. I would like to know if there would be any objection to such an arrangement. If there is any objection, I shall not press it. I do not object to the unanimous consent request that the gentleman proceed for an additional 5 minutes at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. HIESTAND]?

There was no objection.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, (b) protection is afforded against such loan funds being utilized in a manner to induce pirating of industry from other areas to redevelopment areas.

Fifth. Grants for public facilities:

(a) This PWA type program—section 8 of the reported bill—is completely eliminated from my bill on basic policy considerations as follows: First, it is a foot-in-the-door start of omnibus Federal grant-in-aid legislation; second, the eligibility criteria are virtually unlimited; and, third, it could be used to foster unsound projects in that it would apply to a project for which there would be "little probability that such project can be undertaken without the assistance of a grant under this section."

Sixth. Termination of eligibility for further assistance—section 12:

(a) Although no change is made in this section, nevertheless for the first time it would acquire real meaning because of the deletion of the broad area designation authority contained in the first sentence of section 5(a) of the bill as reported. Eligibility of an area is terminated when it no longer meets requirements for designation as a redevelopment area.

Seventh. Urban renewal—section 13:

(a) A provision is added in my bill protecting against plant-pirating in the use of this program in redevelopment areas. Somewhat similar protection was included in the bill S. 722 which was sent to the President by the last Congress.

Eighth. Occupational training—section 15:

(a) Since this is the only help some of the unemployed in depressed areas will get out of this bill, the amount provided for occupational training in my bill has been more than doubled—increased from $4.5 million to $10 million.

(b) The authorized appropriation is placed on a 1-year basis to force the coordination within that time of this new program with the existing vocational training programs of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Ninth. Retraining subsistence payments—section 16:

(a) The amount is the same as the reported bill.

(b) The authorized appropriation is placed on a 1-year basis to afford the Ways and Means Committee an opportunity to coordinate and possibly consolidate this program with the basic unemployment compensation program.

So the essential differences are these:

In plant loans there is $50 million more in my bill.

As against $100 million in the rural development section in the committee bill, there is $500,000 in my bill for a study.

The public facility loans of $100 million on a subsidized-loan basis in a new agency have been eliminated, but the same $100 million is now authorized in the existing community facility program, with priority to the redevelopment areas.

Public facility grants of $75 million in the committee bill have been eliminated.

Technical assistance and subsistence payments remain the same, at $4,500,000.

Occupational training has been increased in my bill from $4.5 million, to $10 million.

May I call to the attention of the Members that there are many, many small areas that qualify today under both bills for the industrial loan assistance.

Page 18 of the committee report lists 83 smaller areas of substantial and persistent labor surplus which qualify for assistance under this bill. These areas each contain a work force of 15,000 or more and take their names from the principal community or communities in the area. The following tabulation shows the 1960 population of the "name-communities" of several of these smaller areas:

STATE AND AREA, 1960 POPULATION, U.S. CENSUS

Alabama: Jasper, 10,799.
Kentucky: Morehead, 4,170; Grayson, 1,692; Paintsville, 4,025; Prestonburg, 3,103.
Missouri: Washington, 7,961.
New Jersey: Ocean City, 7,618; Wildwood, 4,690; Cape May, 4,477.
Ohio: Batavia, 1,729; Georgetown, 2,674; West Union, 1,762.
Pennsylvania: Kittanning, 6,793; Ford City, 5,440; St. Marys, 8,065; Sayre, 7,917; Athens, 4,515; Towanda, 4,293.
Tennessee: LaFollette, 6,204; Jellico, 2,210; Tazewell, 1,264.
Virginia: Big Stone Gap, 4,688; Appalachia, 2,456.
Washington: Anacortis, 8,414.

West Virginia: Logan, 4,185; New Martinsville, 5,607; Oak Hill, 4,711; Montgomery, 3,000; Point Pleasant, 5,785; Gallipolis (under 1,000); Roncverte, 1,882; White Sulphur Springs, 2,676; Welch, 5,313.

It is very apparent from these population figures that the Department of Labor tabulations on employment conditions already cover even very small communities. The argument that flexible area designation authority is needed so that small communities will not be excluded as depressed areas, just does not square with the facts. What should concern this Congress is that under the broad area designation authority contained in the first sentence of section 5(a), whole States could be declared depressed areas. In that first sentence the word "area" means only what the administrator might decide it means. Obviously, the pockets of chronic unemployment—the truly depressed areas—just would not have a chance as whole States moved in to take most of the assistance intended for the local areas of chronic and persistent unemployment. This is a basic policy issue which in my opinion should be resolved in favor of the truly depressed areas. To do otherwise would make this bill a fraud on the local areas of greatest need.

(Mr. WIDNALL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Widnall amendment.

(By unanimous consent (at the request of Mr. PATMAN), Mr. RAINS was given permission to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, I assume this is the meat of the coconut on this bill. Since it covers about every category in it, with the 15 changes in the committee bill which the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] proposes, I would assume that the main vote would come on this particular substitute.

I was pleased to hear even stout opponents of this legislation say yesterday in the debate on the rule that this was a better bill than we have had before the Congress heretofore. That is a true statement. This bill is better than any other bill that has come out of the Committee on Banking and Currency on this particular subject. It is not a perfect bill. I have been here long enough, as you have, to know that no committee can write a perfect bill. It is not a bill on which you cannot find some criticism, because you can. You can do that on any bill. But from a legislative standpoint, this is a good approach to a tough and difficult problem.

Mr. Chairman, I shall confine my remarks strictly to the Widnall amendment.

The Widnall amendment seeks to butcher the bill completely, as the committee brought it out. It seems to take away from the bill its reasons for support from all elements, or call it what you will, so that the bill will get beat. That is how plain and simple the Widnall amendment is and that is how plain and simple the principle of the Widnall amendment is. When you say you want to take away from all the counties and the small cities and towns in America represented by all these Members here and confine it only to 50 urban areas, anybody here knows that that would beat this bill, if you adopted the amendment. That is clear and that is the intent and purpose. The purpose is not to make the bill better, because it does not make it better. It takes away from it the very thing that will help us to make a step forward in rural and urban development. I want to say this before I move into some specifics. I am the last one here who believes that this will solve the problem. I know that this small amount of money is not going to solve the problem. I also know though that it will be a step forward and a step in the direction which we ought to go, based on what I think is a fair formula and on what I believe the majority of the committee felt was a fair formula. There are two divisions to the bill. The first, refers to the mandatory section. The mandatory section of the bill refers to cities which have had long unemployment. There is a list of them in the committee report. To these areas under this bill, the Secretary of Commerce must give aid and assistance. He has no difficulty in arriving at that because the Secretary of Labor keeps statistics on employment in all cities and towns in America above 15,000 in population. But for those cities and towns of 15,000 and under, we found there were no statistics in the Bureau of Labor Statistics and, therefore, we had to write criteria into the bill, if we were to include the unemployed and the underemployed in those areas in the sections of this country where we do not have cities above 15,000 with an established record in the Bureau of Labor Statistics in the Department of Labor. People have asked me what this bill will do.

I yield to my good friend, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SIKES].

Mr. SIKES. The distinguished gentleman is giving a very important statement, and many of us here who recognize there is definitely a need for a bill designed as the bill is designed want to be certain that this bill reaches into every area and is not confined just to the major cities. We want to be certain that it will reach the small rural areas where there is just as much depression percentagewise as there is in any major city. Now will my distinguished friend tell us definitely, so that we may know exactly what this bill does for the rural areas how a small county or a rural county may qualify under this bill?

Mr. RAINS. I will say to the gentleman, he never made a truer statement than the one he just made when he said that there is just as much depression on the farms of America as there is in anybody's city. I hope my colleagues will listen to these figures and then I will get to the details.

In 1959, 35 percent of the farm families in America made less than $2,000 a year; 35 percent of the farm families had less than that income in this country.

As the farmers have increased their production they have lost their own jobs. They are the only people in America who have done such a job that they have run themselves out of business. The result is they are unemployed or underemployed, really, by the hundreds of thousands on farms in the rural areas of America.

This is how it will help: First, the committee bill will provide Government loans on very liberal terms to create new job opportunities in areas now predominantly rural. These loans for industrial building will provide the seed capital and the enabling leadership in these areas to intensify their industrial redevelopment programs of their own local organizations. I predict that chambers of commerce which now generally oppose this bill will be the agencies through which a great many of these small industries will be located in these small towns, or else a development organization of some type will do the job.

Second, there are loans and grants for public facilities. I do not want to say to you, Mr. Chairman, that I think this is a public facilities bill, because a little later on in this session I expect to bring before this Congress a bill that I hope will carry a substantial amount for community facilities. But that is not for the towns that we are talking about now. We are talking here about towns in the rural areas that might need another $15,000 that cannot float bonds at a reasonable rate of interest to build a little water system or a little water plant or some type of community facility which they need just as much as some big city might need a $100 million community facility. To base it on any unsound or inadequate financing would be about like throwing money down a rathole. The criteria have been broadened so that the Secretary of Commerce—and, of course, he will work with the Secretary of Agriculture—can identify any rural area that has a substantial amount of unemployment or underemployment and can establish that area as eligible to receive the aid and assistance under this section of the bill.

Mr. JONES of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. JONES of Missouri. What type of community would be eligible for community facilities which are not now already eligible and receiving loans for these specific purposes the gentleman has mentioned?

Mr. RAINS. I will be glad to answer the gentleman. First of all, there is not enough money in the present community facilities program to do what should be done. I can think of one program in my district, a place that needs a water system, that cannot float any kind of bonds and cannot qualify under the community facilities program at present and could not meet the payments possibly under that, but which would be helped by the provision in the pending bill which would spread the payments over a longer time and at a lower rate of interest than in the regular community facilities program.

Mr. JONES of Missouri. But is not the community facilities program working very well? I know there are cases in my own district where they have not been able to be served.

Mr. RAINS. The program has barely scratched the surface. The community facilities program should be extended, but the towns we are talking about here need special help.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

(On request of Mr. SIKES, and by unanimous consent, Mr. RAINS was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. SIKES. The gentleman has given us some very helpful information. Would the gentleman take another minute or two and tell us how a small rural county or community, a specific county or community, can qualify under this bill?

Mr. RAINS. That is difficult because I have to imagine myself in the place of the Secretary. No legislation can spell out the exact details but the qualification is that the Administrator must find a substantial amount of unemployment or underemployment, and that it has existed for a considerable length of time. He must find it in those areas that do not have reports from the Labor Department, and those are areas under 15,000. It places in the Administrator a great deal of leeway, and necessarily so, because of lack of records as to how he can establish and find an area that would be eligible.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. On page 19 of the report there are listed the seven criteria that are suggested as to designation of the most critical areas. The question is answered on page 19.

Mr. SEELY-BROWN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. SEELY-BROWN. How is the determination to be made? Will someone give us a specific example of what is actually anticipated to be done? That is the question I have. Once you determine that a rural area is eligible, are you going to make it a better farm area, or change it from a farm area to an industrial area? That is the question I would like to have answered.

Mr. RAINS. In a great many farm areas there are not farm jobs to be had. The people are moving to the cities. Under this bill they would retain a number of the farm workers under the vocational education program for other jobs instead of sending them to the big cities of America and let them take poor jobs or stand in the breadline because they lack any job training at all. I think that is one of the important things. What they would do is try to find other jobs and retrain them for other jobs if there were not farm jobs available.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. WIDNALL. In connection with this communities facilities program, that has been in existence for some time, there is an authorization of $100,- 000 in my substitute bill for that purpose. The gentleman states he expects to raise some more funds in the housing bill, but that will not be considered before July or August. This would provide aid in an area where assistance is needed.

Mr. RAINS. Before the day is over I expect to introduce the administration housing bill, and I hope to be able to say we will not have to wait until July or August before we get one passed. I do not think the amount of money in the administration housing bill is sufficient for community facilities. But we are talking about a depressed area here that needs public facility loans. We expect in connection with the housing bill to take up the regular community facilities program.

Mr. FORRESTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. FORRESTER. I would like to ask the gentleman this question: Suppose there is some little town or locality that wishes to obtain a loan, they could create a bonded indebtedness and get the money they needed for the project. Would they be eligible to obtain a loan under this legislation or would they be forced to issue bonds and obtain the money in that way?

Mr. RAINS. I do not quite understand the gentleman's question, but I can assure him there is nothing in this bill that would force a city that qualifies under this criteria to vote its own bonds in order to get a community facilities loan.

Mr. FORRESTER. Here is what I mean: Suppose there is one of these depressed communities, but they can under their constitution vote bonds for an amount which will be sufficient to obtain their facilities. Since they are able to obtain money by that avenue, would they be prohibited from borrowing money from the Government under this legislation?

Mr. RAINS. Only if they can raise the money on more reasonable terms elsewhere.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. KITCHIN. Under the public facilities portion of the bill, will the gentleman tell me, is there any delineation as to what constitutes a public facility? Can they build sidewalks, or even schools?

Mr. RAINS. The bill indicates the criteria which must be met to qualify. Schoolhouses are left out.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

(Mr. HIESTAND asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HIESTAND. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, just as the very eloquent gentleman from Alabama has discussed the proposed substitute, I shall take a few minutes to discuss the alternative, the bill that was originally introduced.

Mr. Chairman, I suggest that the committee bill itself is one of potentially the greatest boondoggles this House has had a chance to pass upon. Here we have only 3 hours of debate. True, there have been a lot of hearings on it, but in a limited 3 hours we are going to pass, if we do, a measure that can remain on the books anywhere from 50 to 500 years and create a public works program that can be far above anything that any of us have considered up to this time.

I suggest, Mr. Chairman, secondarily, that this bill has the weakness of a whole lot of other pieces of legislation that we have considered. It would endeavor to doctor the symptoms of the disease rather than to attack the causes and correct them. In the committee report there was a slight touch of discussion on causes but nothing toward correcting them. In the hearings I can find only a brief listing but nothing to correct them. Among these basic fundamental causes completely ignored by the committee are first, exhaustion of natural resources; second, changing markets; third, changing demand for goods; fourth, changes in transportation; fifth, labor problems; sixth, taxation problems; seventh, financing problems in particular communities; eighth, competition with imports (a major cause); ninth, automation; and, tenth, closing military bases.

Generally speaking, Mr. Chairman, chambers of commerce are noted for promoting business for their communities. Therefore, a wire from the California Chamber of Commerce might be of interest at this point. They object to this bill because, first, consumer demand, which is down, and available plant space, which is excessive in many industries, is what creates new job opportunities; second, measure treats symptoms rather than causes of unemployment; and third, it is not proper for the Federal Government, through the use of tax funds, to compel the citizens who are giving substantial private financial support to their own local community industrial development programs, to also underwrite the industrial development of competing communities in other parts of the country.

Mr. Chairman, my third point is that this bill, if enacted, simply would not work. We set in the bill some $394 million, and it is variously estimated to take $10 to $15 billion to do the job that is outlined in the bill, and the proponents freely admit the authorized funds are vastly insufficient. Now, we all know that starting a new business is a tough job; it will take several years to put it on its feet, and then it will be on the dole and it will have to be kept there. The mere establishing of a new industry in a depressed area does not of itself guarantee success to that industry or to that community. Matters of demand, supply, management, additional financing are requisites for success. Furthermore, the moving of an existing industry into a new community obviously requires it moving out of other areas, despite the antipiracy clause. Thousands of communities have literally lifted themselves out of local depressions by their own initiative. That is the American way. Bonds for community development and community facilities have always sold well and are still selling well.

Mr. Chairman, I direct the attention of the House to section 5(b) again, which would establish a rural section in this relief bill, without definition. It is entirely in the hands of the Secretary. This could be a gigantic political boondoggle. The hearings indicated that it would be very difficult to determine who is eligible and who is not, and to apportion the money.

May I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that this is a vote-getting gadget only. Many Members in the House may have felt that they had to vote for this bill because there was some unemployment in their own territory. May I suggest that this bill does not guarantee that it will go into any one area. There are 10 times as many areas as there is money to take care of them in this bill.

This is a bad bill. It would be ineffectual except to promote a colossal political bureaucracy, further build big government. It should be defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. HIESTAND] has expired.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the requisite number of words.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PERKINS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we can come to an agreement on limiting debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 25 minutes, after the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. PERKINS] has used his time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, before we finish, I wonder if the gentleman could help me get 5 minutes; that is all I want.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman will have plenty of opportunity, I am sure. I am not in a position to answer that question just now.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I just asked for the gentleman's help; I did not ask for a guarantee.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas that all debate on the pending amendment and all amendments thereto close in 25 minutes, after the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. PERKINS] has concluded?

There was no objection.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the committee amendment and against the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL], because I believe the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey will discriminate against the areas that have had chronic unemployment for many years. I believe that areas like eastern Pennsylvania, West Virginia, eastern Kentucky, and hundreds of mining communities that need assistance the worst will be completely eliminated under the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey. And I will tell you why I make that observation.

Down in the district that I am privileged to represent in eastern Kentucky we have about 120,000 nonagricultural workers, and out of this number we have about 45,000 unemployed. This means that for every three men working in the region, more than one person is unemployed. Now I have in mind one of the small coal-producing counties where we have every rail mine in the county closed down. The communities are very small. The income of three out of every four families in this county is less than $2,000. There are 2,000 families in this particular county with an income of $700. But for the welfare programs, veterans' pensions, and liberalization of our social security law, many of these communities would have less purchasing power than they had during the depression in the thirties. The amendment of the gentleman from New Jersey would delete the $100 million figure in the committee bill for rural areas. This particular county that I have reference to, in my judgment, under the Widnall substitute, would be classified as a rural community and therefore be excluded from consideration. It would only provide assistance in the larger cities. I personally believe that his amendment is discriminatory against some of the most needy areas in the whole country.

The same would hold true for dozens of communities, mining communities in eastern Kentucky that would be classified as rural. They would be classified as rural and you would delete from the committee bill the $100 million put in there for rural purposes and the $75 million in grants. The grant provision is badly needed in these communities where we have a dilapidated tax base.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PERKINS. I yield.

Mr. WIDNALL. What assurance has the gentleman that these communities he is describing would receive assistance under the committee bill? We were unable to obtain any information as to who would be helped, the type of projects, how anybody would receive one job. This is the purpose of the $500,000 for the study I have in my bill.

Mr. PERKINS. Yes; the gentleman provides for another study, but he deletes all the funds for the rural counties. The committee bill defines in no uncertain terms, which the gentleman's amendment does not, the rural counties that can qualify, and it sets out the criteria. There are 40 counties in Kentucky alone that would receive no assistance and would be excluded under this amendment.

Mr. WIDNALL. The gentleman has not answered my question. What assurance does the gentleman have that these counties would qualify?

Mr. PERKINS. I have no assurance other than studying the gentleman's amendment and the committee bill, and the criteria on which the committee bill qualifies these counties.

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PERKINS. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. EDMONDSON. The gentleman certainly has two assurances about this bill. In the first place, he knows that the Secretary of Commerce has testified he is willing to do all in his power to make it work for the rural areas as well as the urban areas. In the second place, he knows with absolute assurance that there is nothing for the rural areas in the Widnall substitute. The only chance for the rural areas is under the committee bill. The gentleman from Kentucky who has been one of the most effective champions of area redevelopment in the Congress is to be commended on his fine statement today.

Mr. PERKINS. I thank the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PERKINS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MULTER. There is the further assurance of the Secretary of Agriculture in the testimony that they will have the help of his administration to work this out.

Mr. PERKINS. I am interested in the grant provision of the Committee bill which has been knocked out of the gentleman's substitute. In eastern Kentucky and West Virginia there are dozens of mining communities that cannot even maintain their city governments today. The rail mines have collapsed, more unemployment in the coal fields than ever. We must have assistance and we must have it at the Federal level in the way of grants when they do not have the means to borrow money.

The proposal of the administration in the committee bill provides $75 million in grants to help these communities build plants and public facilities needed to service them such as water and sewer systems and roads. Where the community does not have the credit to borrow ample funds for these improvements, the Government certainly should provide grants.

I am hopeful that the committee bill will prevail and the Widnall amendment will be voted down.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. EDMONDSON].

Mr. EDMONDSON. Mr. Chairman, if there is anyone here who has any doubt at all in his mind about the need of the farming communities for this program and about the support of the organizations that speak for the farmers of America, I would appreciate your attention for just a minute.

In the committee hearings you will find at page 148 a strong statement by the head of the Rural Electric Cooperative Association for the country expressing the strong support of the rural electric cooperatives for this committee measure with the rural areas in it.

At page 177 you will find a strong statement by a spokesman for the National Farmers Union in which he expresses the strong support of the Farmers Union for this legislation with the rural areas in it.

At page 603 you will find another strong statement, one of the best made before the committee, by the assistant legislative counsel for the Grange, in which the Grange points out that there are approximately a million farm families in America with an annual income of less than $1,000 to subsist the entire family. The Grange is strongly in favor of this legislation with the farm areas in it.

Finally, at page 1 of the hearings you will find a letter from our Chief Executive, the President of the United States, in which he points out the need for this program and says that we need it both for rural and urban areas. He then tells the Congress of the United States:

I believe it is essential that we enact this legislation at the earliest possible date. It will constitute a major effort to revive and redevelop communities which have too long been handicapped.

Let us adopt the committee bill.

Let us give the President the tools to do the job.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GROSS].

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, perhaps, I can help out on the rural part of this program about which there has been so much question. If I may have the attention of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN], I understand from reading the hearings, it is entirely possible under this bill, with respect to the rural provision, to spend money for the establishment of shooting preserves, fishing ponds, recreational facilities, and so on and so forth; am I correct?

Mr. PATMAN. You are incorrect.

Mr. GROSS. Well, now, just a minute. This is my time you are laughing on. On page 63 of the hearings, Mr. REUSS of Wisconsin says:

And am I on the right track in suggesting that the possibilities under the proposed act include game farms, places where city people, for a fee, could go to hunt; fishing facilities such as trout or bass ponds where city people could get some sport fishing for a fee; campsites and resorts?

And so on.

And Secretary Freeman said:

All of that, I think, would be potentially possible.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Iowa yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. REUSS] to answer the question.

Mr. GROSS. I am happy to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. REUSS. That question was asked and the answer was as you described it. However, all of these things are possibilities—

Mr. GROSS. Just a minute. You have answered the question.

Mr. REUSS. Will the gentleman let me finish?

Mr. GROSS. I have only 2 minutes and I have not had a minute up to now on this bill.

Mr. REUSS. If you do not want to hear the answer, you do not have to.

Mr. GROSS. You gave the answer—it is here in the record. I wanted to be sure the authority is still in the bill. Now, I suppose, it is entirely possible to build dance pavilions for square dancing and bowling alleys for farmers or city people who want to go out and bowl in the country and other things of that nature; is that correct?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER].

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I repeat what was said a few moments ago by the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS]. The adoption of this amendment, the Widnall substitute, guts the bill. Those who want to meet the issue as to whether we do or do not do anything for these depressed areas ought to meet that issue forthrightly and not by gutting the bill by means of this substitute amendment. The substitute amendment will not do the job that needs to be done and which needs to be done badly. Time is running out and it is running out fast. The thing for us to do is to vote down the Widnall amendment and to adopt the bill, as it was brought to us by the committee, and then go to work and get this job done that needs doing so badly both for the depressed areas in the urban communities as well as in the rural communities. We have not put into this bill a provision for rural communities in order to get the farm vote. It was put in because the Secretary of Agriculture and our colleagues, representatives from the farm areas, have come in and told us they need this kind of bill as much as the cities need it. We want this bill, Mr. Chairman, for the United States of America and not for any particular section of the country. I urge my colleagues to vote down the Widnall substitute and then approve the committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DERWINSKI].

(Mr. DERWINSKI asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DERWINSKI. Mr. Chairman, we are debating the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey. It is quite obvious, however, and I am sure the gentlemen on the majority side will agree that the skids are greased. You are convincingly going to defeat this amendment and in accordance with the dictates of the administration, you are going to jam this bill through the House. However, let me point out a few things for the benefit of those of you who are going to make this mistake. Incidentally, I sympathize with you, realizing that intense pressure from the executive branch of Government forces many to vote against their own personal convictions.

First of all, honesty dictates that you withdraw your phony charges that the Widnall amendment is gutting the bill. Please look at the facts and figures for once. Here is what the facts are. Under the Widnall amendment, we are providing an extra $50 million to industrial plant loans. Furthermore, we are adding more than 100 percent to the occupational training fund, which is really the program you need in the depressed areas.

Furthermore, I would like to make a prediction for the benefit of those of you who are sitting there whipped into line.

I would like to predict that within a year you will admit your error in having voted for this bill for this basic reason, that it is an administrative monstrosity. Your own Secretary of Agriculture, your own Secretary of Commerce, or whoever else is saddled with the responsibility of administration will find that he cannot possibly administer this program.

But what is even more important, you are destroying any confidence that the people in the depressed areas may have in this type of legislation. You are going to have so many people hanging onto the coat-tails of this $394 million that you will not be able to do a thing for them. It is an absolute impossibility, and your own solution a year from now will be to request billions of dollars to perpetuate this completely inconsistent bill. Mr. Chairman, Members, please accept the Widnall amendment. It has some merit. Your administration bill is a fraud perpetuated at the expense of the American taxpayers, and, as I have indicated, citizens in depressed areas who are deluded by your false statements. I would like to say one last word in conclusion. Referring specifically to the rural area section of this bill you will probably wind up by training Mexican migrant workers for use in industrial operations. There is nothing in the bill to prevent this development. The language is so vague as to make it a blank check for the executive branch of Government to run wild with this appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. BAILEY].

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Chairman, in the minute or two allotted to me I would like to call attention to the growing tendency to impose upon this House this legislative farce that we are witnessing here on most of the major bills that have been presented. If we continue to practice "legislative piracy" you might just as well abolish the standing committees. A committee hears witnesses, takes maybe months or weeks considering legislation, then writes a bill and brings it to the floor. Overnight there is a combination set up and we have this legislative farce that destroys the work of the standing committees. You might just as well abolish them. The Widnall substitute would kill this legislation, not improve it.

I expect it to be the business of this House to carry out the recommendations of the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ALGER].

(Mr. ALGER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ALGER. Mr. Chairman, this bill, the substitute bill, and the committee bill, are not workable for the simple reason that they are unconstitutional. But it seems we are getting used to doing things unconstitutionally. It seems to me many times what we are doing is violating not just the language of the Constitution but the wisdom of those who believed in the private enterprise system.

Read the language on page 44 of the committee and the substitute bill, if you will. There is the same specified intent starting in line 18. This spells out complete Federal planning, regimentation, and control of industry. No bill will work that seeks to do these things, not the substitute bill, and least of all the committee bill.

Furthermore, on top of page 45 we find:

And that under the provisions of this act new development opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources.

Here we are spending the tax dollars and providing less employment. Money must be provided to run this program. You are taking it away from taxpayers under the guise of relieving unemployment. Actually you are adding to the cost burdens of industry that will result in more unemployment. I think we should be against both bills for the harm they do to the private enterprise system. Instead of taxing the people more we should tax them less.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. ROOSEVELT].

(Mr. ROOSEVELT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROOSEVELT. Mr. Chairman, I am strongly in favor of this bill. The program recognizes the need of attacking unemployment in all sections of our country. It perhaps for the first time, attacks the need for retraining many workers due to economic changes, including automation, on the farm and in the city. It should be noted that the bill is only a first step. The responsibility for good administration is large. If successful it should serve as a guidepost for revival of many hard-hit areas and provide a way to prevent such steep valleys of depression sometimes even in a period of general prosperity, as now dot our national map. The success of this program can, and we must hope will be, an example of a successful remedy of the ills of a free country within the legitimate powers of freedom, and with due regard to the immense value of each citizen.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VAN ZANDT].

(Mr. VAN ZANDT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the substitute. First, I think the House should understand that even though we have had no support for the committee bill from this side of the aisle there are a lot of us over here who are going to vote against the substitute and for the committee bill on final passage. Secondly, since 1954 we have been considering area redevelopment legislation, and many of us have listened over and over again to compromise and substitute bills. In my opinion these compromises and substitutes have been offered not only to delay consideration but to likewise kill area redevelopment legislation.

I recall the pocket veto of a bill some few years ago and the veto of last year, and frankly I apologized to the many unemployed residents of my district for the vetoes, and especially the one of last year.

Mr. Chairman, I am in the well of this House today asking support for the committee bill, because I feel the bill is a step in the right direction toward solving the nasty economic problem of these areas of chronic unemployment.

Mr. SAYLOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SAYLOR. I would like to join the gentleman in his statement. I am getting sick and tired of compromises. Let us stand for the committee bill and see what it will do.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. May I say in conclusion that the Congress since beginning has taken good care of the problems of certain segments of our population. This is proven by the billions of dollars spent on the farmer's problem, for relief from disasters, airport needs, flood control, and so forth. Today we have areas of depressions in our midst with thousands of good Americans unemployed. And through the committee bill Congress has an opportunity to extend a helping hand in our efforts to alleviate these distressing conditions.

Mr. Chairman, as my colleague the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SAYLOR] stated a moment ago, "let us stand for the committee bill and see what it will do."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY].

(By unanimous consent, the time of Mr. MONTOKA was given to Mr. COOLEY.)

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I speak to you not as Chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture. I speak to you only as a humble Member of this House, trying as best I can to represent a great congressional district.

I am intensely interested in the welfare of our farmers and I am likewise intensely interested in the welfare of all of the people of my district, State, and Nation. The pending substitute is an insult to those who live in the rural areas of our great Nation. The author of the substitute offers only a token to those who live and labor on the farms of the Nation. Under the substitute, all of the relief, aid, and assistance will go to those who live in the great cities of our country. The substitute provides only a meager half million dollars for the purpose of conducting a study in the rural areas of the Nation.

Can we be unmindful of the fact that hundreds of thousands, even millions of persons who have lived and labored on the farms of the Nation have been driven off the land and into the cities to look for jobs which are not there available to them. A lot of the unemployment in these distressed areas has resulted from the great exodus from the farms of those who could no longer survive even by laboring in the flourishing fields of our country.

The substitutes provides no hope for the people who remain on the farms and who are underemployed. It is difficult for me to understand how anyone interested in the welfare and future of our citizens who live in rural America could possibly vote for the substitute now under consideration.

In the committee bill there is at least some hope for those who have faithfully tilled our soil and have produced the great abundance which has blessed our Nation. The money provided by the proposals now under consideration is only "a drop in the bucket." We are told that we are "sowing seed." I am willing to accept this suggestion and to believe that we are sowing seed from which we may hereafter reap a rich harvest. If this is true, our efforts here today will not be in vain.

I am against the substitute and I urge all of my colleagues to vote against the substitute. I shall vote for the committee bill and I urge all of my colleagues to vote for the committee bill.

This is the first opportunity I have had to publicly congratulate and to commend the great President of our great Nation for having appointed a distinguished citizen of my grand State of North Carolina to high office. The manhood, the courage, and the patriotism of this whole Nation stood ready to serve our beloved President and to cooperate with him in his efforts to bring prosperity to our Nation and peace to the world. After considering the qualifications of a multitude of men, our President exercised great wisdom and selected a very distinguished North Carolinian to serve in his Cabinet as Secretary of Commerce. Naturally, all loyal North Carolinians were delighted because the former distinguished Governor of our State was selected by the President to serve as his Secretary of Commerce. Governor Luther H. Hodges served the people of our State well and faithfully for 6 long years. His magnificent record is written on the hearts and minds of our people and he has already proven himself to be a worthy member of the President's Cabinet. He is my personal friend. I respect and trust him, and I am perfectly willing to entrust into his hands the administration of the great program contemplated by the legislation under consideration. I know that with dignity and impartiality, and with fairness to all areas concerned, he will administer the law we are about to enact. I again appeal to my colleagues to vote down the pending substitute and to vote for the committee bill.

I am very glad that the distinguished gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. EDMONDSON], made the very splendid and brief speech we have just heard. He emphasized very effectively and very eloquently many of the reasons we should vote against this pending substitute.

I am in complete accord with the views expressed by our distinguished and beloved colleague from West Virginia [Mr. BAILEY].

The committee bill might not be perfect, my record in Congress might not be perfect, and I doubt very much if the record of any of you could in all respects be considered perfect, but this committee bill is at least a short step in the right direction. We must do something to improve the plight of our distressed citizens in the many distressed areas of America. We have provided many billions of dollars to relieve the distress of the suffering people of many of the disturbed and unhappy areas of the world, and now we are just about to provide a little relief for American citizens who are devoted to the institutions of freedom, and who will for all times to come despise all of the concepts of communism. I appeal to all of you, and especially to those of you who are interested in the welfare of rural America, to vote down the pending substitute and to vote for the committee bill on final passage.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Montana [Mr. BATTIN].

(Mr. BATTIN asked and was given permission to yield the time allotted him to Mr. HARVEY of Michigan.)

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HARVEY].

Mr. HARVEY of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I speak in favor of the Widnall amendment. I would like to also answer the gentleman from Alabama and the gentleman from North Carolina. The gentleman from Alabama had this to say: He inferred that we were trying to take away the vote-getting power of this bill. I say to you if section 5(b) providing for rural development areas was the vote-getting power in this bill, maybe it illustrates why we feel it was put in this bill, for vote-getting purposes.

Now, in regard to these rural areas, we have heard a lot said about underemployment. But, I thought when we started out that this bill was to help the unemployed and that it was those in the distressed areas that we were trying to help. Now, that is what the Widnall bill would do.

Now, as to the gentleman from North Carolina, I would just like to quote Secretary Freeman when he says himself that he would like to come back in a year. On page 72 of the hearings, when was asked by Mr. SCRANTON:

Have you any suggestion as to what could be done to make it more pinpointed since it already apparently includes almost every low-level income area in the United States?

Mr. Freeman said:

No, I think after a year's experience with this we would be better able to do it; we could try. At this point, really, I wouldn't feel prepared to make any public recommendations languagewise.

Now, are we going to hand over that $300 million and let him do with it just what he wants to do? That is just exactly what you are doing in the administration bill. I challenge anybody on the committee to point out where these rural development areas will be located, how many there will be, how large they will be. No one knows. Not even Mr. Freeman. Then I would like to answer the charge that there is no duplication in section 7 of this bill in regard to lending facilities. I say to you that just this morning I had my administrative assistant call the Communities Facilities Administration, and he was advised that there is now between $45 and $50 million uncommitted on hand.

I have in my hand a Thermo-Fax copy of a Housing and Home Finance Agency letter dated February 23, in which that Agency is just begging communities to borrow money. They state that it is now wide open for borrowing and will allow them to build any kind of public works program that they want:

Other policies which in the past restricted public facility loans to water, sewer, and gas projects have also been changed to provide financing for all types of public works, except schools, which the community is interested in placing under immediate construction.

So, I submit that we already have an existing agency to lend money for public facilities. The Widnall amendment is a far superior bill and will do more both in industrial loans and retraining, the two important features than S. 1, the administration bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. JONES].

(Mr. JONES of Missouri asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. JONES of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the substitute. However, I am not committed to this bill. My apprehension about this legislation is the fact that we have not considered what has caused these depressed areas and the necessity for redevelopment.

As many of you perhaps did, I saw a television program some time ago depicting the depressed area in Cairo, Ill. It was supposed to be an example of what this bill could correct. Being a neighbor of that part of the country, I can say that the film did not present in any way the cause of the depression there, where they lost some 3,000 population in the last 10 years; where they had lost four large industries; where people had moved out of the community. I will say that in many communities like that the people have not lived up to their responsibilities in law enforcement to keep out the gangs, goons, and the hoodlums and people like that who create an unsavory atmosphere unpleasant for the operation of any kind of legitimate industry. And, until the various communities which are losing some of these industries act accordingly—I am not referring to the coal sections or places like that where the demand is going down, but I am referring to communities where the facilities exist, where the factory buildings are now ample, where they already have the community facilities—those communities will never make a comeback until we have a change on the part of the people in those communities which will make them accept their responsibilities.

I also want to say that the reason I am reluctant to support the committee bill and am opposed to the substitute is that we have other agencies available, the Community Facilities Agency, the Housing and Home Finance Administration, the Small Business Administration, and others, all of which have demonstrated their ability to do most of the things which are proposed to be done by this legislation, but which in my opinion will result only in the waste of millions of dollars.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] to close debate.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, we have heard criticism about other agencies being permitted to do much of this work under the present law. The committee was very careful in writing this bill, and I just want to read you the language in section 24:

Whenever possible in carrying out the provisions of this act the Secretary shall use the available services and facilities of other agencies and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, but only with their consent and on a reimbursable basis. The foregoing requirement shall be implemented by the Secretary in such a manner as to avoid the duplication of existing staffs and facilities in any agency or instrumentality of the Federal Government.

This bill has been carefully written. We believe it safeguards the taxpayers. We believe it is in the interest of the country.

Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] has expired. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL].

The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the “noes” appeared to have it.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed as tellers Mr. WIDNALL and Mr. PATMAN.

The Committee divided and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 139, noes 242.

So the substitute amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

(Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Earlier the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VAN ZANDT], and there is no more able or patriotic Representative in the House—and we recall when he left this Chamber to go to the combat zone in the South Pacific and serve where there was fighting but, perhaps, he was a little excited when he suggested that those of us who sometimes voted for a substitute, or to recommit not always was our motive what the gentleman from Pennsylvania has suggested it was.

This bill does not carry a new purpose. We had a somewhat similar purpose in 1937 and again in 1945, and the purpose seems to be, as stated by this professor from Yale who said:

If we go through and establish that as a national policy, that at any time the worker who is willing and anxious to work and cannot find private employment immediately, should be given immediately the opportunity to work on some kind of public works at virtually full normal wages, then this country is unquestionably headed for a complete totalitarian economic economy with a dictator running it.

Then he added:

That is not a matter of opinion. That is a matter of history. From way back in ancient Chinese history up to the present time this idea that the government should be responsible at all times for providing normal employment for every citizen has come out. It has been tried again and again and always ends up in the same result, namely, that the government gradually takes over more and more of the economic life of the country, and finally becomes a complete totalitarian economic state with a dictator at the head of it. (From testimony of Hudson G. Hastings, professor of economics, Yale University, October 24, 1945, before House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, p. 670.)

To keep the record absolutely clear, permit me to state that at least in my judgment, there is not a Member of this House who is not sympathetic toward those who are unemployed provided they want to work and most of them do. No one here wants anyone to suffer, to be hungry, without proper clothing or shelter. Unfortunately, all unemployment cannot be avoided.

Nations have been trying to solve the unemployment situation. To date have not succeeded.

Later in 1945, our then Secretary of Agriculture was up before the committee.

The Secretary gave us his estimate of the then unemployment situation, which was as follows:

	Alexander Hamilton Institute	Robert R. Nathan (President's Committee on Employment Security)	National Industrial Conference Board, New York City	American Federation of Labor	Congress of Industrial Organizations
1934.....	13,528,000	11,469,000	11,544,000	13,382,000	12,669,000
1935.....	12,659,000	10,485,000	11,234,000	11,695,000	11,741,000
1936.....	11,454,000	9,688,000	9,434,000	10,952,000	11,620,000
1937.....	9,250,000	8,076,000	7,574,000	9,241,000	9,751,000
1938.....	11,809,000	10,265,000	10,328,000	10,926,000	11,714,000
1939.....	11,552,000	11,029,000	10,012,000	11,369,000	12,323,000

The Nation and the States spent billions in the effort to give everyone a job, and, from the record, are these figures:

Public expenditures for assistance and work-program earnings, 1934-39—Federal, State, and local.¹

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach, who participated in that program, said this:

Furthermore, it must be recognized that we are making efforts toward full employment. We have been for a long, long time through various pieces of legislation creating such things as the NRA, the CWA, the PWA, the WPA.

We tried it and we failed. Now, we all want to do something for the unemployed areas, but there is no use in trying to keep people like the miners in West Virginia, at artificial levels or rather in an area where there can be no economically sound industry. You remember how some tried to keep wages up by levying a tax of 40 cents a ton over a number of years on all the coal mined?

Distressed areas exist sometimes because natural resources have been exhausted. Sometimes because the cost of production has grown higher than purchasing power. Sometimes because of overproduction. Sometimes because of progress—automation. And it is far better, experience has shown, to trust readjustment to the law of supply and demand than it is to attempt artificially to create jobs.

Perhaps if we give private industry a chance by reducing the tax load and in other ways by letting them operate their own business when and where they would as long as they did not harm all of us, instead of trying as we are today to install the Federal Government as boss and dictator or permit labor union officials to determine when and where a plant may be built and how large it shall be. If we are going to turn that over to organizations interested in just one thing, increasing wages and better working conditions, we are not going to get us anywhere.

I cannot vote for this bill. It will neither lessen unemployment nor stabilize industry. It is a form of "share the wealth program." An interference with natural orderly development in our country.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with, that it be printed in the RECORD at this point and that it be subject to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

(The remainder of the bill reads as follows:)

DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best interests of the United States, but that some of our communities are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment; that such unemployment and underemployment cause hardship to many individuals and their families and detract from the national welfare by wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, should help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment to take effective steps in planning and financing their economic redevelopment; that Federal assistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals in areas needing redevelopment should enable such areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diversified local economies and improved local living conditions; and that under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATOR

SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that received by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Administrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") may assign.

ADVISORY POLICY BOARD

SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is created an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board (hereinafter referred to as the "Board"), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration. The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under this Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year.

(c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call together and confer with any persons, including representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and government, who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment or underemployment in the several areas designated by the Secretary as redevelopment areas.

REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas within the United States in which he determines, upon the basis of standards generally comparable with those set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2), that there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. There shall be included among the areas so designated any area—

(1) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the rate of unemployment, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in paragraph (2); and

(2) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the annual average rate of unemployment has been at least—

(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years.

The Secretary of Labor shall find the facts and provide the data to be used by the Secretary in making the determinations required by this subsection.

(b) The Secretary shall also designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas (including Indian reservations) within the United States which do not meet the requirements set forth in subsection (a) but which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underdevelopment. In making the designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are of the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent of migration out of the area, and the proportion of the population of each such area which has been receiving public assistance from the Federal Government or from the State or States in which such area is located or from any municipality therein. In making these determinations the Secretary shall be guided, but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies made, and information and data collected or compiled, by (1) departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, (2) State and local governments, (3) universities and land-grant colleges, and (4) private organizations.

(c) Upon the request of the Secretary, the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Interior, and such other heads of agencies as may be appropriate are authorized to conduct such special studies, obtain such information, and compile and furnish to the Secretary such data as the Secretary may deem necessary or proper to enable him to make the determinations provided for in subsection (b) of this section. The Secretary shall reimburse when appropriate, out of any funds appropriated to carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers for any expenditures incurred by them under this section.

(d) As used in this Act, the term "redevelopment area" refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area.

LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS

SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (which for purposes of this section shall include participations in loans) to aid in financing any project within a redevelopment area for the purchase or development of land and facilities (including, in exceptional cases, machinery and equipment) for industrial or commercial usage, including the construction of new buildings, the rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied buildings, and the alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings. Such financial assistance shall not be extended for working capital, or to assist establishments relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another.

(b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, subject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

(1) The total amount of loans (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding at any one time under this section (A) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(a) shall not exceed $100,000,000 and (B) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(b) shall not exceed $100,000,000.

(2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants, both private and public (including Indian tribes), approved for such assistance by the State (or any agency or instrumentality thereof concerned with problems of economic development) in which the project to be financed is or will be located.

(3) The project for which financial assistance is sought must be reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located.

(4) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms.

(5) The Secretary shall not make any loan without a participation unless he determines that the loan cannot be made on a participation basis.

(6) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there is a reasonable assurance of repayment.

(7) Subject to section 12(5) of this Act, no loan, including renewals or extension thereof, may be made hereunder for a period exceeding twenty-five years and no evidences of indebtedness maturing more than twenty-five years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor.

(8) Loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(d) (1) of this Act, plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum to cover administrative expenses and to provide for losses on loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section.

(9) Such assistance shall not exceed 65 per centum of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or developing land and facilities (including, in exceptional cases, machinery, and equipment), and of constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building or buildings of the particular project, and shall, among others, be on the condition that—

(A) other funds are available in an amount which, together with the assistance provided hereunder, shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

(B) not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by a community or area organization which is nongovernmental in character, as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance;

(C) in extending financial assistance under this section with respect to a redevelopment area, the Secretary shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such assistance is extended shall be supplied by nongovernmental sources as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance; and

(D) to the extent the Secretary finds such action necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular project by other lenders and investors, and except as otherwise provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), any Federal financial assistance extended under this section may be repayable only after other loans made in connection with such project have been repaid in full, and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other loans made in connection with the same project.

(10) No such assistance shall be extended unless there shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an overall program for the economic development of the area and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the State or local political subdivision in which the project would be located.

LOANS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 7. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase or development of land for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

(2) the funds requested for such project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms;

(3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of other available funds for such project are adequate to insure the completion thereof;

(4) there is a reasonable expectation of repayment; and

(5) such area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b) (10) and the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program.

(b) Subject to section 12(5), the maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than forty years after the date such loan is made. Any such loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(d) (2) of this Act, plus one-quarter of 1 per centum per annum.

(c) The total amount of loans outstanding at any one time under this section shall not exceed $100,000,000.

(d) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it is prepared to undertake.

GRANTS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 8. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make grants for land acquisition or development for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

(2) the entity requesting the grant proposes to contribute to the cost of the project for which such grant is requested in proportion to its ability so to contribute;

(3) the project for which a grant is requested will fulfill a pressing need of the area, or part thereof, in which it is, or will be, located, and there is little probability that such project can be undertaken without the assistance of a grant under this section; and

(4) the area for which a project is to be undertaken has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b) (10), and such project is consistent with such program.

The amount of any grant under this section for any such project shall not exceed 65 per centum of the difference between the funds which can be practicably obtained from loans (including a loan under section 7 of this Act) and from other Federal sources for such project, and the amount which is necessary to insure the completion thereof.

(b) The Secretary shall by regulation provide for the supervision of projects with respect to which grants are made under this section so as to insure that Federal funds are not wasted or dissipated.

(c) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it is prepared to undertake.

(d) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $75,000,000 for the purpose of making grants under this section.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT FUND

SEC. 9. (a) There is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States an area redevelopment fund (hereinafter referred to as the "fund"), which shall be available to the Secretary for the purpose of extending financial assistance under sections 6 and 7 and for the payment of all obligations and expenditures arising therefrom.

(b) When requested by the Secretary, advances shall be made to the fund from the appropriations made therefor. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of making advances to the fund, without fiscal year limitation, an amount not exceeding $300,000,000.

(c) Receipts arising from the programs of assistance under sections 6 and 7 shall be credited to the fund. Any moneys in the fund determined by the Secretary to be in excess of current needs shall be credited to the appropriation from which advanced to be held for future advances to the fund.

(d) There shall be paid into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury at the close of each fiscal year—

(1) interest, on advances made to the fund for use in extending financial assistance under section 6, at rates which shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury at the time the advances or commitments for advances are made after taking into consideration the current average market yields of outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to loans made by the Secretary under section 6; and

(2) interest, on advances made to the fund for use in extending financial assistance under section 7, at rates which shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury at the time the advances or commitments for advances are made but which shall not be more than the higher of (A) $2\frac{1}{2}$ per centum per annum or (B) the average annual interest rate on all interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt as computed at the end of the fiscal year next preceding the making of such advances or commitments and adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum.

(e) The fund shall contribute to the civil service retirement and disability fund a sum as provided by section 4(a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act (5 U.S.C. 2254(a)), except that such sum shall be determined by applying to the total basic salaries (as defined in that Act) paid to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act and covered by that Act the per centum rate determined annually by the Civil Service Commission to be the excess of the total normal cost per centum rate of the civil service retirement system over the employee deduction rate specified in such section 4(a). The funds shall also pay into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts that portion of the cost of administration of the civil service retirement and disability fund attributable to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act, as determined by the Civil Service Commission.

(f) In the performance of and with respect to the functions, powers, and duties vested in him by sections 6 and 7 of this Act, the Secretary shall—

(1) prepare annually and submit a budget program in accordance with the provisions of sections 102, 103, and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended; and

(2) determine the character of and the necessity for obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to provisions of law specifically applicable to Government corporations.

INFORMATION

SEC. 10. The Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas. The Secretary shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

SEC. 11. In carrying out his duties under this Act the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment (1) to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under this Act, and (2) to other areas which he finds have substantial need for such assistance. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secretary through members of his staff or through the employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations, or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such purposes. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purposes of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000 annually.

POWERS OF SECRETARY

SEC. 12. In performing his duties under this Act, the Secretary is authorized to—

(1) adopt, alter, and use a seal, which shall be judicially noticed;

(2) hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, and take such testimony, as he may deem advisable;

(3) request directly from any executive department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, independent establishment, or instrumentality information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics needed to carry out the purposes of this Act; and each department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, establishment, or instrumentality is authorized to furnish such information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics directly to the Secretary;

(4) under regulations prescribed by him, assign or sell at public or private sale, or otherwise dispose of for cash or credit, in his discretion and upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any evidence of debt, contract, claim, personal property, or security assigned to or held by him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act, and collect or compromise all obligations assigned to or held by him in connection with such loans or evidences of indebtedness until such time as such obligations may be referred to the Attorney General for suit or collection;

(5) further extend the maturity of or renew any loan made or evidence of indebtedness purchased under this Act, beyond the periods stated in such loan or evidence of indebtedness or in this Act, for additional periods not to exceed ten years, if such extension or renewal will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loan or evidence of indebtedness;

(6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, modernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any real or personal property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by, him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

(7) pursue to final collection, by way of compromise or other administrative action, prior to reference to the Attorney General, all claims against third parties assigned to him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act. This shall include authority to obtain deficiency judgments or otherwise in the case of mortgages assigned to the Secretary. Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (41 U.S.C. 5), shall not apply to any contract of hazard insurance or to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on account of property obtained by the Secretary as a result of loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act if the premium therefor or the amount thereof does not exceed $1,000. The power to convey and to execute, in the name of the Secretary deeds of conveyance, deeds of release, assignments and satisfactions of mortgages, and any other written instrument relating to real or personal property or any interest therein acquired by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of this Act may be exercised by the Secretary or by any officer or agent appointed by him for that purpose without the execution of any express delegation of power or power of attorney;

(8) acquire, in any lawful manner, any property (real, personal, or mixed, tangible or intangible), whenever deemed necessary or appropriate to the conduct of the activities authorized in sections 6 and 7 of this Act;

(9) in addition to any powers, functions, privileges, and immunities otherwise vested in him, take any and all actions, including the procurement of the services of attorneys by contract, determined by him to be necessary or desirable in making, purchasing, servicing, compromising, modifying, liquidating, or otherwise administratively dealing with or realizing on loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

(10) to such an extent as he finds necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act, procure the temporary (not in excess of six months) service of experts or consultants or organizations thereof, including stenographic reporting services, by contract or appointment, and in such cases such service shall be without regard to the civil service and classification laws, and, except in the case of stenographic reporting services by organizations, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5); any individual so employed may be compensated at a rate not in excess of $75 per diem, and, while such individual is away from his home or regular place of business, he may be allowed transportation and not to exceed $15 per diem in lieu of subsistence and other expenses;

(11) sue and be sued in any court of record of a State having general jurisdiction or in any United States district court, and jurisdiction is conferred upon such district court to determine such controversies without regard to the amount in controversy; but no attachment, injunction, garnishment, or other similar process, mesne or final, shall be issued against the Secretary or his property. Nothing herein shall be construed to except the activities under this Act from the application of sections 507(b) and 2679 of title 28, United States Code, and of section 367 of the Revised Statutes (5 U.S.C. 316); and

(12) establish such rules, regulations, and procedures as he may deem appropriate in carrying out the provisions of this Act.

TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

SEC. 13. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall be granted under this Act with respect to such area and, for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secretary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment area. The Secretary shall keep the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

URBAN RENEWAL

SEC. 14. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

"SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (in this section referred to as a 'municipality') is situated in an area designated under section 5 of the Area Redevelopment Act as a redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economy, the Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

"(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e) of this section, the Administrator may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirement or limitations of section 110(c) that the project area be predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses under the urban renewal plan, and without regard to any of the limitations of that section on the undertaking of projects for predominantly non-residential uses.

"(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, a contract for financial assistance under this section may include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the project area designated under the urban renewal plan for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or non-profit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to such public agency or corporation under this section shall be made at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And provided further, That only the purchaser from or lessees of such public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obligations relating to the commencement of improvements imposed under section 105(b) hereof.

"(d) Following the execution of any contract for financial assistance under this section with respect to any project, the Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him under this section for the completion of such projects, notwithstanding any determination made after the execution of such contract that the area in which the project is located is no longer a redevelopment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

"(e) Not more than 10 per centum of the funds authorized for capital grants under section 103 after the date of the enactment of the Area Redevelopment Act shall be used for the purpose of providing financial assistance under this section. Amounts used for such purpose shall not be taken into account for the purpose of the limitation contained in the second proviso of the fifth sentence of section 110(c)."

URBAN PLANNING GRANTS

SEC. 15. Paragraph (3) of section 701(a) of the Housing Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after "counties which" the following: "(A) are situated in areas designated by the Secretary of Commerce under section 5(a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as redevelopment areas or (B)".

OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING

SEC. 16. (a) The Secretary of Labor is authorized, upon request and whenever he determines such studies are needed, to undertake, or to provide assistance to others for, studies of the size, characteristics, skills, adaptability, occupational potentialities, and related aspects of the labor force of any redevelopment area.

(b) When a redevelopment area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10), the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the Secretary and the Secretary of Agriculture, shall determine the occupational training or retraining needs of unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in the redevelopment area. The Secretary of Labor shall notify the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare of the occupational training or retraining requirements of the area, and shall provide for the orderly selection and referral of those unemployed or underemployed individuals residing in the area who can reasonably be expected to obtain employment as a result of the skill they will acquire in the training which is to be made available. The Secretary of Labor shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and with existing State and local agencies and officials in charge of existing programs relating to vocational training and retraining for the purpose of assuring that the facilities and services of such agencies are made fully available to such individuals.

(c) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that additional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet the occupational training or retraining needs of such individuals, he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall provide assistance, including financial assistance when necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational agency in the provision of such additional facilities or services. If the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare finds that the State vocational educational agency is unable to provide the facilities and services needed, he may, after consultation with such agency, provide for the same by agreement or contract with public or private educational institutions.

(d) The Secretary of Labor shall arrange to provide any necessary assistance for setting up apprenticeships, and to promote journeyman and other on-the-job training.

(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $4,500,000 annually, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

SEC. 17. (a) The Secretary of Labor in consultation with the Secretary and the Secretary of Agriculture may, on behalf of the United States, enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment areas are located, under which the Secretary of Labor shall make payments to such States either in advance or by way of reimbursement for the purpose of enabling such States, as agents of the United States, to make weekly retraining payments to unemployed or underemployed individuals residing within such redevelopment areas who are certified by the Secretary of Labor to be undergoing occupational training or retraining under section 16 of this Act. Such payments shall be made for a period not exceeding sixteen weeks, and the amount of any such payment for any week shall not exceed the amount of the average weekly unemployment compensation payment (including allowances for dependents) payable for a week of total unemployment in the State making such payments.

(b) No weekly retraining payment shall be made to any person otherwise eligible who, with respect to the week for which such payment would be made, has received or is seeking unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or any other Federal or any State unemployment compensation law, but if the appropriate State or Federal agency finally determines that a person denied benefits for any week because of this subsection was not entitled to unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or such Federal or State law with respect to such week, this subsection shall not apply with respect to such week.

(c) Any agreement under this section may contain provisions (including, so far as may be appropriate, provisions authorized or made applicable with respect to agreements concluded by the Secretary of Labor pursuant to title XV of the Social Security Act) as will promote effective administration, protect the United States against loss, and insure the proper application of payments made to the State under such agreement. Except as may be provided in such agreements, or in the rules and regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, determinations by any duly designated officer or agency as to the eligibility of individuals for weekly retraining payments under this section shall be final and conclusive for any purposes and not subject to review by any court or any other officer.

(d) The Secretary of Labor and the Secretary shall jointly prescribe such rules and regulations as they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $10,000,000 annually, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

The following information shall be posted in such list as soon as each application is approved: (1) the name of the applicant and, in the case of corporate applications, the names of the officers and directors thereof, (2) the amount and duration of the loan or grant for which application is made, (3) the purposes for which the proceeds of the loan or grant are to be used, and (4) a general description of the security offered in the case of a loan.

PREVAILING RATE OF WAGE AND FORTY-HOUR WEEK

SEC. 21. All laborers and mechanics employed by contractors or subcontractors on projects assisted by the Secretary under this Act and undertaken by public applicants shall be paid wages at rates not less than those prevailing on similar construction in the locality as determined by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act, as amended (40 U.S.C. 276a-276a-5), and every such employee shall receive compensation at a rate not less than one and one-half times his basic rate of pay for all hours worked in any workweek in excess of eight hours in any workday or forty hours in the workweek, as the case may be. The Secretary shall not extend any financial assistance under section 6, 7, or 8 for such a project without first obtaining adequate assurance that these labor standards will be maintained upon the construction work. The Secretary of Labor shall have, with respect to the labor standards specified in this provision, the authority and functions set forth in Reorganization Plan Numbered 14 of 1950 (15 F.R. 3176; 64 Stat. 1267; 5 U.S.C. 1332-15), and section 2 of the Act of June 13, 1934, as amended (48 Stat. 948, as amended; 40 U.S.C. 276c).

Such report shall show, among other things, (1) the number and size of Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies and services placed with business enterprises located in redevelopment areas, and (2) the amount and duration of employment resulting from such contracts. Upon the request of the Secretary, the various departments and agencies of the Government engaged in the procurement of supplies and services shall furnish to the Secretary such information as may be necessary for the purposes of this section.

USE OF OTHER FACILITIES

SEC. 24. (a) Whenever possible in carrying out the provisions of this Act the Secretary shall use the available services and facilities of other agencies and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, but only with their consent and on a reimbursable basis. The foregoing requirement shall be implemented by the Secretary in such a manner as to avoid the duplication of existing staffs and facilities in any agency or instrumentality of the Federal Government. The Secretary is authorized to delegate to the heads of other departments and agencies of the Federal Government any of the Secretary's functions, powers, and duties under this Act as he may deem appropriate, and to authorize the redelegation of such functions, powers, and duties by the heads of such departments and agencies.

(b) The Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States, or any of their duly authorized representatives, shall have access for the purpose of audit and examination to any books, documents, papers, and records of the recipient that are pertinent to assistance received under section 6, 7, or 8 of this Act.

Upon the completion of such study the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report of his findings together with such recommendations for legislative and other action as he may deem appropriate.

APPLICATION OF ACT

SEC. 28. As used in this Act, the terms "State", "States", and "United States" include the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

(Mr. GROSS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, one of the prime reasons for this legislation, if there is a reason for it, is the flood of imports from foreign countries. Yet it is strange that in this House today and yesterday we have heard very few Members point to that fact as one of the reasons for the bill.

This bill is in the nature of providing compensatory payments to those injured by imports. The free traders and leaders of the New Frontier also call it "administrative adjustment." That is what this bill is about. In large measure it is to take up the slack caused by foreign imports and their impact upon American industry, agriculture, and labor.

I wish every Member of Congress could have seen the display in the Congressional Hotel of shoes imported into this country, made by 16-cent-an-hour labor in Hong Kong and 26-cent-an-hour labor in Japan flooding the markets of this country. The cheap labor of Italy and several other countries also makes its contribution to our troubles.

One of the Members spoke of Gloversville, N.Y. What is wrong with Gloversville, N.Y.? The markets of this country are flooded with knit gloves and mittens from Italy, Japan, and Hong Kong.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. I yield.

Mr. STRATTON. I certainly agree with the gentleman with respect to the problem of foreign imports, and this bill we have here today is the first piece of legislation which we have had presented to us in an effort to meet the problem of areas hurt by imports.

Mr. GROSS. Yes, it is a New Frontier administrative adjustment bill, compensatory payments from the Federal Treasury to relieve a situation brought about by foreign imports.

I do not like to ride the buses in the District of Columbia and be confronted with advertisements urging people to "buy Polish hams." We in Iowa have hams to sell to American working men and women.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield again?

Mr. GROSS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. STRATTON. I may say to the gentleman in respect to the legislation to which he refers, that no one has supported such legislation more vigorously than I have; but I do feel that if national policies are going to hurt certain areas because of imports, then the National Government has a distinct obligation to help those areas, as this bill does.

Mr. GROSS. The gentleman from West Virginia supports this bill but says nothing or practically nothing today about the oil coming in from Venezuela, the residual oil that is displacing coal and the jobs of miners. The New Frontier Secretary of the Interior hardly got his chair warm before he increased the residual oil coming into this country. So you come in here today loading on all the taxpayers another $400 million to take up the slack for foreign imports.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. I wish the gentleman one day would vote against some of these imports.

Mr. MULTER. I was going to ask the gentleman if he has any alternative to the present bill.

Mr. GROSS. You bet your life I have an alternative for it.

Mr. MULTER. What is it?

Mr. GROSS. A tariff representing the differential in costs of production as between the workingmen of this country and the workingmen of foreign countries. That is your answer.

Mr. MULTER. Is that the only alternative to a bill of this kind to help Americans who need help?

Mr. GROSS. Does the gentleman know of any more effective way to help the workingmen of this Nation, industry, and the farmers than to preserve the American market for their products?

Mr. MULTER. That is what we are trying to do with this bill.

Mr. GROSS. You are not doing anything of the sort. You are raiding the taxpayers under this piece of hodge-podge legislation. Nobody knows what it will do. Question after question has been asked this afternoon and no answers given. Sure, go out and build fish ponds and duck-shooting preserves. I suppose that next you will want Congress to furnish the unemployed miners of West Virginia and Pennsylvania with ammunition and shotguns so they can go out and shoot ducks.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. GROSS moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, may I say that I did not support the substitute that was offered a moment ago. I opposed the substitute and I am opposed to this bill. The substitute was just a little less worse than the committee bill, that is all.

Mr. HIESTAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HIESTAND. I congratulate the gentleman from Iowa for taking the position he has toward examining the causes of this alleged unemployment in a great many places. There are eight other major causes. I have looked in vain to find what the committee has done to correct any one of those causes. They have simply adopted the symptoms of the disease rather than the causes.

Mr. GROSS. All we are dealing with today is effects, and not causes. It is the same story all over again.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. WIDNALL. Did not the gentleman refer incorrectly to this bill as a hodge-podge bill? Should it not be called the Hodge bill?

Mr. GROSS. Call it what you want. Let us be fair to the taxpayers, and let us be fair to ourselves. Let us deal with causes and not with effects.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. What is the gentleman talking about, a share-the-wealth program?

Mr. GROSS. A sharing of the taxpayer bill.

Mr. PELLY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. PELLY. I hope that the gentleman is serious in offering this preferential motion because I shall be glad to vote for it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GROSS].

The motion was rejected.

Mr. HALPERN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HALPERN, of New York: Page 45 before the period in line 4, insert the following: "rather than by merely transferring employment opportunities from one area of the United States to another."

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HALPERN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I have discussed the amendment with the Members on our side, and we are willing to accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. HALPERN].

The amendment was agreed to.

(Mr. HALPERN asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. HALPERN. Mr. Chairman, this antipirating amendment leaves no question as to the intent of this legislation to prevent the raiding of industry from one area of the United States to another. By this amendment the intent is clearly spelled out in the bill's declaration of purpose.

As commendable as the principles of this bill may be, I feel it is necessary to further clarify it in order to safeguard the pirating of industry. I expressed my concern about this problem in my additional views in House Report No. 186 on the bill.

I am concerned that S. 1 as reported does not contain in its declaration of purpose language to effectively prevent the raiding of industries in some areas which could conceivably cause an economic setback in current thriving communities. I am not convinced that the language of the bill as reported is sufficient to protect against the migration or pirating of industries from established areas into distressed ones. I recognize that it would be exceedingly difficult to write an ironclad provision into the bill preventing such shifts in the location of industries. I feel, however, that the relevant provisions in S. 1 can be tightened, and more definite standards prescribed for its administration. This can be established once and for all by setting forth the antipirating principle in the declaration of purpose.

Nowhere in the declaration of purpose of this bill is mention made of the intent of Congress to guard against the pirating of industry or the runaway shop. That is why I offered this amendment. Under the bill as it now reads, the declaration of purpose in section 2, on page 45, lines 2 to 4, states that "and that under the provisions of this act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources."

I believe that the words "expanding new and existing facilities and resources" do not sufficiently stress the legislative intent that this bill is not designed merely to transfer employment opportunities from one area of the United States to another.

My amendment to the preamble would add the words: "rather than by merely transferring employment opportunities from one area of the United States to another." This addition would stress in clear and forceful terms the intent of Congress.

Such clarification would provide clear and specific guidelines to the administrators of the bill; it would emphasize the creation of new opportunities and economic growth; and it would discourage the raiding of developed areas.

It is obvious that heavily productive communities could be affected under such standards and particularly large cities such as my own city of New York. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to make clear that this process shall not occur and that funds shall not be used under the act to lure industries from developed communities with a consequent creation of unemployment there.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MULTER: On page 79, line 10, strike out "Whenever possible" and insert "To the fullest extent practicable".

[Mr. MULTER addressed the Committee. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Appendix.]

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is suggested by the Secretary of Commerce. I have discussed it with the chairman of the committee and the ranking minority member, and I understand it is acceptable to the committee.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MULTER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. We are willing to accept it on this side.

Mr. WIDNALL. That was in my substitute bill, and we accept it.

Mr. MULTER. In support of the amendment, permit me to read the letter dated March 24, 1961, to the distinguished chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee for the Honorable Robert E. Giles, General Counsel for the Department of Commerce, as follows:

THE GENERAL COUNSEL OF COMMERCE,
Washington, D.C., March 24, 1961.

HON. BRENT SPENCE,
Chairman, Committee on Banking and Currency,
House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: In reporting out S. 1 to provide a Federal program to assist areas of substantial and persistent unemployment, the Committee on Banking and Currency changed the first sentence of section 24 relating to use by the Secretary of Commerce of existing facilities of other Federal agencies to read as follows:

"Whenever possible in carrying out the provisions of this act the Secretary shall use the available services and facilities of other agencies and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, but only with their consent and on a reimbursable basis. The foregoing requirement shall be implemented by the Secretary in such a manner as to avoid the duplication of existing staffs and facilities in any agency or instrumentality of the Federal Government."

This change caused us concern because the phrase "whenever possible," when read comparatively with the phrase "to the extent practicable" in the sentence which was replaced, created a legislative history which might be interpreted as compelling a delegation when in fact such an action would be impracticable or unwise.

In discussing with Representative A. J. MULTER of the committee this change in S. 1 as reported, he suggested substitution of the phrase "to the fullest extent practicable" for the phrase "whenever possible" as not having the undesirable compelling implication which might be found in the committee provision. The Department of Commerce concurs in this suggestion of Representative MULTER, and urges that the phrase "to the fullest extent practicable" be inserted in lieu of the phrase "whenever possible."

As the record shows, Secretary Hodges testified before the committees of both Houses as to his purpose of using existing organizations engaged in activities closely related to the proposed program and thus avoid duplication and unwarranted expense entailed in setting up new staffs when they are not needed.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT E. GILES,
General Counsel.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. STRATTON: On pages 81 and 82 strike out Section 27 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"STUDY BY SECRETARY

"Sec. 27. Whenever the Department of Defense announces plans to deactivate or is in the process of deactivating any permanent military installation or major unit thereof and such installation is situated in an area in which the rate of unemployment is 6 per centum or more, the Secretary shall, upon the request of the Governor or Governors of the State or States in which the area is located, institute a study to determine the economic effects of the action which has been or is to be taken. In determining the economic effects of such action, the Secretary shall, among other relevant matters, consider and make findings with respect to the approximate amount of money which has been, or may reasonably be expected to be, saved by any department or agency of the Government as a result of such action, compared with—

"(1) the approximate costs or losses which have been, or may reasonably be expected to be, incurred by other departments or agencies of the Government, or by State and local governmental units, as a result of such action;

"(2) the approximate losses which have been, or may reasonably be expected to be, incurred by private interests as a result of such action in connection with any facilities which they have provided to serve the needs of any such installation and which would otherwise have to be provided in whole or in part by the Government;

"(3) the approximate cost to the Government of relocating any such installation in the event that such installation has been or will be relocated; and

"(4) the approximate cost to the Government of reactivating, in a national emergency or other contingency, any such installation with respect to which any such action is proposed to be taken.

Any such study shall be conducted as expeditiously as practicable, and the findings resulting therefrom shall be transmitted by the Secretary to the Secretary of Defense and to the Congress."

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STRATTON. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, the committee bill has a similar provision. I have discussed this question with the chairman of the Committee on Armed Services, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON], and after these discussions I am prepared to accept the gentleman's amendment in lieu of the similar provision in the committee bill.

[Mr. STRATTON addressed the Committee. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Appendix.]

Mr. RYAN. Mr. Chairman, I urge the Members of this House to support this amendment to S. 1.

This amendment is a sound approach to a very serious problem. When the armed services builds a military installation in an area, many people from the area and from outside the area depend upon the continuance of the installation for their livelihood. Private industry invests large sums of money in business which services the installation. Therefore, the decision to deactivate a military installation is one which has far-reaching consequences to the community where the installation is established.

A case in point is the Air Force base in Rome, N.Y. This base employs over 6,500 civilians. In addition, there are at least an additional 3,500 people who work for private concerns which directly service the base. Private business has invested substantial sums in the area. If this base is deactivated at least 10,000 persons may be out of work. This does not include the businesses and services in the community which are dependent upon the consumer spending of the base's personnel.

The effect of this additional unemployment in the area can be readily seen by looking at recent statistics.

The latest figures show that 9.5 percent of the labor force in the Rome-Utica labor market area are unemployed. This figure represents 12,500 people out of work. The Rome-Utica area just misses being one of the substantial and persistent labor surplus areas under S. 1.

In 1958 this area had 9.7 percent unemployment. Fifty percent above the national average was 10.2. In 1959 there was 8.2 percent of the labor force out of work. Fifty percent above the national average for that year was 8.3. In 1960 this area had 8.2 percent of the labor force out of work, with 50 percent above the national average being 8.4. It is apparent that, if 10,000 more people are unemployed, this area will probably be listed as a substantial and persistent labor surplus area under the formula in S. 1.

This amendment calls for a study of the economic consequences to the area and of the overall economic impact to the country which will result when a military installation is closed.

A report by the Secretary of Commerce to the Secretary of Defense will insure that the Government takes a broader view of the consequences.

The amendment deserves our support.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. STRATTON].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JAMES C. DAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JAMES C. DAVIS: On page 80, line 21, strike out the word "fifteen" and insert in lieu thereof the word "five".

[Mr. JAMES C. DAVIS addressed the Committee. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Appendix.]

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAMES C. DAVIS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, we have been negotiating on this question and we have decided we are willing to accept the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. JAMES C. DAVIS].

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman explain the amendment?

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, it reduces the number of supergrades to be used in the administration of the act from 15 to 5.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. JAMES C. DAVIS].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MONTTOYA. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONTTOYA: On page 72, after line 14, insert the following new subsection:

"(f) In providing assistance under this section with respect to unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in redevelopment areas, the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall give consideration to the special needs of individuals who are agricultural workers or are engaged in other seasonal occupations and who require occupational training in order to qualify them to engage in supplementary employment during the off season and during other periods of reduced activity in the field of their regular or primary occupations."

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, the Committee on our side is willing to accept the amendment.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman give us a word of explanation?

Mr. MONTTOYA. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the amendment is to place clearly within the provisions of the act a provision which will enable the Secretary to initiate vocational training programs wherever they are feasible for agricultural workers who out of season find themselves unemployed.

(Mr. MONTTOYA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MONTTOYA. Mr. Chairman, I propose an amendment which in my opinion will greatly benefit a segment of our population which I am sure we all agree needs help. I am speaking of the agricultural worker and the individuals engaged in seasonal occupations. In this connection, I offer the following amendment to S. 1:

On page 72, after line 14, insert the following new subsection:

"(f) In providing assistance under this section with respect to unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in redevelopment areas, the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall give consideration to the special needs of individuals who are agricultural workers or are engaged in other seasonal occupations and who require occupational training in order to qualify them to engage in supplementary employment during the off season and during other periods of reduced activity in the field of their regular or primary occupations."

Permit me now to make a number of observations which I believe substantiate the need for an adequate program of vocational retraining to help agricultural and seasonal workers. A massive retraining program for these two groups will enable them to acquire new skills which are needed to enter new fields of endeavor.

I do not have to remind any of my colleagues that agricultural employees are in dire need of help. In most of our discussions of how to solve the problem of high unemployment in distressed areas, too much emphasis has been placed on long-range solutions and ignoring the agricultural unemployment. Secretary Freeman in his testimony before the House Banking and Currency Committee on February 27, 1961, indicated that over 1,400,000 are unemployed and underemployed out of a total agricultural labor force of 4,700,000. It is difficult to comprehend an expanding economy with such a large segment of our population in a basic industry underemployed. He said:

There is enough underemployment each year among workers 20 to 64 years of age who live on farms to equal a full year of unemployment for 1,400,000 workers. That is to say—if we did not have so many people underemployed in agriculture, the Nation would have roughly 1,400,000 more unemployed workers than are currently reported.

It is clear that unemployment and underemployment are basically the same condition.

Since World War II, the Nation's economy has not grown enough to put to work and keep fully employed all of our people who want to work.

Already farm families get a third of their net income from nonfarm sources. Of every 100 farm operators, 45 did some work off their farms in 1959, and nearly a third of the operators worked off their farms 100 days or more.

However, representatives of 95 percent of the rural electric systems of the Nation report that there is need for additional work off the farms in the areas they serve. With the labor supply increasing and with technology making an hour of work more productive, we have permitted a situation to develop where demand has been outrun.

President Kennedy in his state of the Union message indicated that farm income in the past 10 years has decreased over 25 percent. The restoration of the purchasing power of the farmer could solve many of our problems in the other industrial areas. It seems to me that there are urgent human problems on the farm which need immediate attention. We cannot solve these problems through expanding surplus commodity distribution or extending legislation. We must seek a speedier solution which will give jobs to the agricultural unemployed. Underemployment in agriculture has become an increasingly serious problem since the end of the war. An increasing number and an increasing percentage of farm families are found in the lowest income group of the Nation—the lowest one-fifth. In the 1944-47 period, 40 percent of the farm operator families were in that group, but in the 1955-57 period more than 50 percent were in it. Another way to see this problem is to look at actual income figures. In 1959, only about 13 percent of the families in the Nation had incomes less than $2,000, but about 36 percent of the farm families had incomes under $2,000. The people want to work. Underemployment in agricultural is due to the national shortage of jobs rather than to inherent characteristics of regions or people. Department of Agriculture and State college research people studying the problems of specific areas find differences, it is true. The history of an area and the origins and history of a group of people are reflected to some extent in the opportunities available and the way the people react to them; but the differences among areas pale into insignificance when you consider this unifying similarity.

The American people wherever they are, whatever their origins and history, want to work. They aspire to better things for themselves and their children. They take jobs when and where they find jobs for which they are qualified. They are ingenious in putting their resources to work to make and sell useful goods and in selling needed services. This is true of the people in the areas that are short of resources and buying power, as it is in other areas, contrary to what some of us have assumed too easily in the past.

I am firmly convinced that the answer lies in a massive program of vocational retraining, fully utilizing the existing facilities of our high schools and other State institutions and creating additional regional vocational schools in areas affected. There is no single panacea to the distressed agricultural areas and unfortunately, most of the solutions offered by factfinding committees and legislators are of a pump-priming nature. Conditions are so critical in some areas that it is time for a new type of program to be effected. These agricultural unemployed must be made vocationally mobile so that they can properly seek employment in areas where job opportunities are available.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. MONTROYA].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MONTROYA. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MONTROYA of New Mexico: On page 82, after line 9, insert the following new section:

"RESEARCH

"SEC. 28. To assist in the long-range accomplishment of the purposes of this Act, the Secretary shall establish and conduct a continuing program of study and research designed to assist in determining the causes of unemployment, underemployment, underdevelopment, and chronic depression in the various areas of the Nation and in the Nation as a whole and in the formulation and implementation of National, State, and local programs which will raise income levels and otherwise produce solutions of the problems resulting from these conditions. The Secretary shall include in his annual report under section 22 a detailed statement concerning the study and research conducted under this section together with his findings resulting therefrom and his recommendations for legislative and other action."

And renumber the succeeding section accordingly.

Mr. MONTROYA. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment as I firmly believe that this legislation needs a long-term program of research to determine causes of underdevelopment and of chronic depression. I feel that the provisions of this bill will help correct the immediate problem facing the Nation in the depressed areas. However, I strongly urge that a long-range program be instituted. This could be accomplished after sufficient study and research has been made to determine the basic causes and alternative solutions that may be available to these areas.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, we are familiar with the gentleman's amendment and we are willing to accept it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. MONTROYA].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KEITH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, under the provisions of this bill many communities can qualify for assistance. Some of these cities are obviously more deserving of our attention than others. The question is, Is there in this bill any directive or instruction to the administrator of the program to give priority to those communities which have had substantial unemployment for extended periods of time?

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, the bill provides that areas such as the gentleman describes will be designated for assistance, and New Bedford is given a priority in the sense that it is one of 20 major areas which meet the test in the bill for mandatory designation. New Bedford will certainly be high on the priority list.

Mr. KEITH. I thank the gentleman very much for those words of reassurance.

In this city we have a flood control project which has been authorized by this or by an earlier Congress. The city is hard pressed to meet its financial commitments. Is it the intent of the provision pertaining to the grants for public facilities to take care of problems like that facing New Bedford in this instance?

Mr. PATMAN. It is intended to take care of cities like New Bedford provided there is no other way of financing the project on reasonable terms and it needs public facilities to solve its problems.

Mr. KEITH. I thank the gentleman very much.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I take this time to ask a question of my distinguished colleague, whose district adjoins mine in the Arkansas-Texas area.

On page 4 of the committee report it is stated:

Such planning should take into account all the potentials of the area. They may be in recreation or tourism, not heavy industry; they may lie in the promotion of parks and the restoration of forests, with the construction of necessary access roads.

First, may I ask in just what way under the provisions of this bill an area could qualify for assistance in promoting parks?

Mr. PATMAN. This is a rural area?

Mr. HARRIS. Yes, I assume it is; I do not know.

Mr. PATMAN. It would be within the discretion of the Administrator, if it conforms with the overall economic development program presented by the local community. I would not know unless I could see the plan. I would not know what to say, and then I would not have the power because it is entirely up to the Administrator.

Mr. HARRIS. In other words, any feasible plan that would be acceptable to the Administrator would be possible under this bill?

Mr. PATMAN. It would be possible under this act.

Mr. HARRIS. Now may I ask this further question with reference to access roads. The gentleman may or may not be familiar with Rich Mountain, in the northern part of my district and over in Oklahoma. It is substantially in the national forest. On top of this mountain is a State park. An effort has been made for some time to obtain funds locally, State or otherwise, for the development of a road across the top of this mountain into Oklahoma, and so forth. The question is, would a plan, if it were to be developed and acceptable to the Secretary, be eligible under this program?

Mr. PATMAN. It would not be ruled out. I see no reason why it should not be eligible.

Mr. HARRIS. In other words, if the criteria otherwise stated in the report earlier could be met, then such a program could possibly be worked out for a project of this nature?

Mr. PATMAN. It would be possible under this act.

Mr. HARRIS. I thank the gentlemen.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that each of the Members who offered amendments that have been adopted be permitted to revise and extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD immediately prior to the vote on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I take this time to ask certain questions, the first of which is, Is the effect of this legislation directed toward putting up plants with Government money in competition with plants already in existence?

Mr. PATMAN. No.

Mr. HEMPHILL. The committee is right here in saying that that is not proper and that the administration should be directed not in that direction but in other directions?

Mr. PATMAN. That is not the purpose.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Is the legislation directed toward stopping development in any one section of the country?

Mr. PATMAN. The answer is no.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I have in mind the language on page 9 of the report which seems to single out certain parts of the country, I thought unfairly. Would this stop the movement of industry from one part of the country to another where the industry had not previously been established?

Mr. PATMAN. It would not affect it unless there were an effort made to move a plant from one section to another. In that event public funds could not be used for that purpose. Under this act, they are prohibited.

Mr. HEMPHILL. Would you prohibit a plant relocating that wanted to relocate? Would you give the community assistance or not?

Mr. PATMAN. The Administrator would not have anything to do with that unless they asked for assistance. In that event, public money would be involved and could not be used for that purpose.

Mr. HEMPHILL. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I take this time to ask one question of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN]. Is there anything in the rural section of this bill that gives priority to the unemployed of a chronically distressed area over the underemployed?

Mr. PATMAN. I do not think that distinction is drawn. I think the underemployed and the unemployed are treated in a very similar way. The object is to help them whether they are underemployed or unemployed.

Mr. WIDNALL. Actually, it is not going to be a bill primarily to help those in the chronically distressed areas who are unemployed?

Mr. PATMAN. There is no distinction between underemployed and unemployed.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

(Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, permit a question to the gentleman from New Mexico who offered the amendment to assist the migrant or seasonal workers.

Mr. PATMAN. There is nothing in the bill that affects migrant workers.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Is the gentleman from New Mexico over there?

Mr. PATMAN. There is nothing in this bill that affects migrant workers.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Did we not have an amendment a little while ago about migrant or seasonal workers?

Mr. PATMAN. No, there was something about Indian reservations.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Was there not an amendment offered by the gentleman from New Mexico?

Mr. PATMAN. That was about Indian reservations.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. About seasonal workers.

Mr. PATMAN. Oh, seasonal workers.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Yes, what is the difference between seasonal and migrant workers except perhaps that seasonal workers are through with a job earlier? Now I am not asking the gentleman from Texas but—my question is this. Under that amendment, a seasonal worker who might be a migrant worker comes to Michigan to help harvest crops which are produced by stoop labor, as we call it. Under that amendment, do they receive help after the crops are harvested, if they are unemployed?

Mr. PATMAN. That would be unemployment benefits, I think. I do not know of anything in this act that would permit the payment of unemployment benefits.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. If the gentleman will just wait, quit stalling, some of these people come up and harvest crops and then go back, and they do not work any more except down in Mexico. Can they receive a benefit under this bill as amended?

Mr. PATMAN. They go back to their own country under the treaty that is in force.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Yes, and what I am asking you, under that amendment, are they to receive aid?

Mr. PATMAN. Not after they have finished their jobs, I am sure. But, in training—in training—

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. If they stay here—for instance, at Benton Harbor, Mich., as some do, the rest of the year, are they to receive aid for the rest of the year, or a benefit under this bill?

Mr. PATMAN. Not under this act, and I do not see where they could receive aid under this act.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Under the amendment.

Mr. PATMAN. Not under the act.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Under the amendment.

Mr. PATMAN. Under the employment act of your State, I do not know.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. I did not ask you about unemployment. Under the amendment in this act, I am asking you: Can they receive a benefit?

Mr. PATMAN. No, sir; my construction is no.

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. With that answer I cannot agree.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment, as amended.

The committee amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Boggs, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee having had under consideration the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas, pursuant to House Resolution 237, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. WIDNALL. I am opposed to the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman qualifies.

The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WIDNALL moves to recommit the bill to the Committee with instructions to report the same back to the House with the following amendment: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following: "That this Act may be cited as the 'Area Redevelopment Act'."

"DECLARATION OF PURPOSE"

"SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best interests of the United States, but that some of our communities are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment; that such unemployment and underemployment cause hardship to many individuals and their families and detract from the national welfare by wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, should help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment to take effective steps in planning and financing their economic redevelopment; that Federal assistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals in areas needing redevelopment should enable such areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diversified local economies and improved local living conditions; and that under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources.

"AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATOR"

"SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that received by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Administrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the 'Secretary') may assign.

"ADVISORY POLICY BOARD"

"SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is created an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board (hereinafter referred to as the 'Board'), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration. The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

"(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under this Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year.

"(c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call together and confer with any persons, including representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and government, who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment or underemployment in the several areas designated by the Secretary as redevelopment areas.

"REDEVELOPMENT AREAS"

"SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as a 'redevelopment area' any labor market area within the United States with respect to which the chief executive of the State in which such area is located has requested such designation and the Secretary of Labor has found and certified to the Secretary—

"(1) that the rate of unemployment in such area, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in paragraph (2); and

"(2) that the annual average rate of unemployment in such area has been at least—

"(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

"(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

"(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years.

"(b) The Secretary of Agriculture shall conduct such studies as he may deem necessary to enable him to develop and submit to the Congress, not later than January 3, 1962, a proposed workable program to provide for the participation of rural areas, rural nonfarm areas, and Indian reservations, in which there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment for an extended period of time, in the program of financial assistance under this Act. Upon the request of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Interior shall conduct such special studies and compile and furnish to the Secretary of Agriculture such information as the Secretary of Agriculture may deem necessary to enable him to carry out his duties under this subsection. The Secretary of Agriculture shall reimburse the Secretary of the Interior, out of funds appropriated under this subsection, for expenses incurred by the Secretary of the Interior under this subsection. There are authorized to be appropriated such sums, not to exceed $500,000, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this subsection.

"(c) The Secretary shall reimburse when appropriate, out of any funds available to the Secretary under this Act, the heads of other departments or agencies for expenses incurred by them under this section in conducting studies or furnishing information requested by the Secretary.

"(d) As used in this Act, the term 'redevelopment area' refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area.

"LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS"

"Sec. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (which for purposes of this section shall include participations in loans) to aid in financing any project within a redevelopment area for the purchase or development of land and facilities (including, in exceptional cases, machinery and equipment) for industrial or commercial usage, including the construction of new buildings, the rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied buildings, and the alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings. Such financial assistance shall not be extended for working capital, or to assist establishments relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another.

"(b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, subject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

"(1) The total amount of loans (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding at any one time under this section with respect to projects in redevelopment areas shall not exceed $150,000,000.

"(2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants, both private and public, approved for such assistance by the State (or any agency or instrumentality thereof concerned with problems of economic development) in which the project to be financed is or will be located.

"(3) The project for which financial assistance is sought must be reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located.

"(4) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms.

"(5) The Secretary shall not make any loan without a participation unless he determines that the loan cannot be made on a participation basis.

"(6) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there is a reasonable assurance of repayment.

"(7) Subject to section 11(5) of this Act, no loan, including renewals or extension thereof, may be made hereunder for a period exceeding twenty-five years and no evidences of indebtedness maturing more than twenty-five years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor.

"(8) Loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 8(d) of this Act plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum to cover administrative expenses and to provide for losses on loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section.

"(9) Such assistance shall not exceed 65 per centum of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or developing land and facilities (including, in exceptional cases, machinery and equipment), and of constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building or buildings of the particular project, and shall, among others, be on the condition that—

"(A) other funds are available in an amount which, together with the assistance provided hereunder, shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

"(B) not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by a community or area organization which is nongovernmental in character, as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance;

"(C) in extending financial assistance under this section with respect to a redevelopment area, the Secretary shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such assistance is extended shall be supplied by nongovernmental sources, in addition to any funds supplied from such sources under subparagraph (B), as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance; and

"(D) to the extent the Secretary finds such action necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular project by other lenders and investors, and except as otherwise provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), any Federal financial assistance extended under this section may be repayable only after other loans made in connection with such project have been repaid in full, and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other loans made in connection with the same project.

"(10) No such assistance shall be extended unless there shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an overall program for the economic development of the area and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the State or local political subdivision in which the project would be located.

"LOANS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES"

"Sec. 7. (a) In order to provide loans for public facilities in redevelopment areas, the first sentence of section 202(c) of title II of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended to read as follows:

"(c) In the processing of applications for financial assistance under this section, the Administrator shall give equal priority to applications of—

"(1) counties, cities, and other municipalities and political subdivisions for financing needed public facilities in areas determined to be redevelopment areas under the Area Redevelopment Act, if the Secretary of Commerce certifies there is reasonable probability that with assistance made available under the Area Redevelopment Act and other undertakings such areas will be able to achieve lasting improvement in their economic development; and

"(2) smaller municipalities for assistance in the construction of basic public works (including works for the storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water; sewage, sewage treatment, and sewer facilities; and gas distribution systems) for which there is an urgent and vital public need."

"(b) The first sentence of section 203(a) of title II of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended to read as follows:

"(a) In order to finance activities under this title, the Administrator is authorized and empowered to issue to the Secretary of the Treasury, from time to time and to have outstanding at any one time in an amount not exceeding $150,000,000, notes and other obligations, which limit shall be increased by such amounts, not exceeding $100,000,000, as may be specified from time to time in appropriation Acts."

"(c) No financial assistance shall be extended under the amendments made by this section with respect to—

"(1) any public facility situated in a redevelopment area which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it is prepared to undertake; or

"(2) any area if it will assist business establishments in relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another.

"AREA REDEVELOPMENT FUND"

"Sec. 8 (a) There is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States an area redevelopment fund (hereinafter referred to as the 'fund'), which shall be available to the Secretary for the purpose of extending financial assistance under section 6 and for the payment of all obligations and expenditures arising therefrom.

"(b) When requested by the Secretary, advances shall be made to the fund from the appropriations made therefor. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of making advances to the fund without fiscal year limitation, an amount not exceeding $150,000,000.

"(c) Receipts arising from the program of assistance under section 6 shall be credited to the fund. Any moneys in the fund determined by the Secretary to be in excess of current needs shall be credited to the appropriation from which advanced to be held for future advances to the fund.

"(d) There shall be paid into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury at the close of each fiscal year interest, on advances made to the fund for use in extending financial assistance under section 6, at rates which shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury at the time the advances or commitments for advances are made after taking into consideration the current average market yields of outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to loans made by the Secretary under section 6.

"(e) The fund shall contribute to the civil service retirement and disability fund a sum as provided by section 4(a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act (5 U.S.C. 2254(a)), except that such sum shall be determined by applying to the total basic salaries (as defined in that Act) paid to employees performing activities authorized under section 6 of this Act and covered by that Act the per centum rate determined annually by the Civil Service Commission to be the excess of the total normal cost per centum rate of the civil service retirement system over the employee deduction rate specified in such section 4(a). The fund shall also pay into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts that portion of the cost of administration of the civil service retirement and disability fund attributable to employees performing activities authorized under section 6 of this Act, as determined by the Civil Service Commission.

"(f) In the performance of and with respect to the functions, powers, and duties vested in him by section 6 of this Act, the Secretary shall—

"(1) prepare annually and submit a budget program in accordance with the provisions of sections 102, 103, and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended; and

"(2) determine the character of and the necessity for obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to provisions of law specifically applicable to Government corporations.

The Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas. The Secretary shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

In carrying out his duties under this Act the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment (1) to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under this Act, and (2) to other areas which he finds have substantial need for such assistance. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secretary through members of his staff or through the employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations, or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such purposes. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purposes of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000 annually.

"(5) further extend the maturity of or renew any loan made or evidence of indebtedness purchased under this Act, beyond the periods stated in such loan or evidence of indebtedness or in this Act, for additional periods not to exceed ten years, if such extension or renewal will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loan or evidence of indebtedness;

"(6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, modernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any real or personal property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by, him in connection with loans made or evidence of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

"(7) pursue to final collection, by way of compromise or other administrative action, prior to reference to the Attorney General, all claims against third parties assigned to him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act. This shall include authority to obtain deficiency judgments or otherwise in the case of mortgages assigned to the Secretary. Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (41 U.S.C. 5), shall not apply to any contract of hazard insurance or to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on account of property obtained by the Secretary as a result of loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act if the premium therefor or the amount thereof does not exceed $1,000. "TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 12. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall be granted under this Act with respect to such area and, for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secretary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment area. The Secretary shall keep the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

"URBAN RENEWAL

"SEC. 13. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

"SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (in this section referred to as a "municipality") is situated in an area designated under section 5 of the Area Redevelopment

Act as a redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economy, the Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

"(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e) of this section, the Administrator may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirement or limitations of section 110(c) that the project area be predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses under the urban renewal plan, and without regard to any of the limitations of that section on the undertaking of projects for predominantly non-residential uses; but no such assistance shall be provided in any area if the Administrator determines that it will assist business establishments in relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another.

"(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, a contract for financial assistance under this section may include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the project area designated under the urban renewal plan for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or nonprofit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to such public agency or corporation under this section shall be made at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And provided further, That only the purchaser from or lessees of such public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obligations relating to the commencement of improvements imposed under section 105(b) hereof.

"(d) Following the execution of any contract for financial assistance under this section with respect to any project, the Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him under this section for the completion of such projects, notwithstanding any determination made after the execution of such contract that the area in which the project is located is no longer a redevelopment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

"(e) Not more than 10 per centum of the funds authorized for capital grants under section 103 after the date of the enactment of the Area Redevelopment Act shall be used for the purpose of providing financial assistance under this section. Amounts used for such purpose shall not be taken into account for the purpose of the limitation contained in the second proviso of the fifth sentence of section 110(c)."

"URBAN PLANNING GRANTS

"Sec. 14. Paragraph (3) of section 701(a) of the Housing Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after 'counties which' the following: '(A) are situated in areas designated by the Secretary of Commerce under section 5 (a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as redevelopment areas or (B)'.

"OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING

"Sec. 15. (a) The Secretary of Labor is authorized, upon request and whenever he determines such studies are needed, to undertake, or to provide assistance to others for, studies of the size, characteristics, skills, adaptability, occupational potentialities, and related aspects of the labor force of any redevelopment area.

"(b) When a redevelopment area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10), the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the Secretary, shall determine the occupational training or retraining needs of unemployed individuals residing in the redevelopment area. The Secretary of Labor shall notify the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare of the occupational training or retraining requirements of the area, and shall provide for the orderly selection and referral of those unemployed or underemployed individuals residing in the area who can reasonably be expected to obtain employment as a result of the skill they will acquire in the training which is to be made available. The Secretary of Labor shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and with existing State and local agencies and officials in charge of existing programs relating to vocational training and retraining for the purpose of assuring that the facilities and services of such agencies are made fully available to such individuals.

"(c) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that additional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet the occupational training or retraining needs of such individuals, he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall provide assistance, including financial assistance when necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational agency in the provision of such additional facilities or services. If the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare finds that the State vocational educational agency is unable to provide the facilities and services needed, he may, after consultation with such agency, provide for the same by agreement or contract with public or private educational institutions.

"(d) The Secretary of Labor shall arrange to provide any necessary assistance for setting up apprenticeships, and to promote journeyman and other on-the-job training.

"(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1961, such sums, not in excess of $10,000,000, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

"Sec. 16. (a) The Secretary of Labor in consultation with the Secretary may, on behalf of the United States, enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment areas are located, under which the Secretary of Labor shall make payments to such States either in advance or by way of reimbursement for the purpose of enabling such States, as agents of the United States, to make weekly retraining payments to unemployed individuals residing within such redevelopment areas who are certified by the Secretary of Labor to be undergoing occupational training or retraining under section 15 of this Act. Such payments shall be made for a period not exceeding sixteen weeks, and the amount of any such payment for any week shall not exceed the amount of the average weekly unemployment compensation payment (including allowances for dependents) payable for a week of total unemployment in the State making such payments.

"(b) No weekly retraining payment shall be made to any person otherwise eligible who, with respect to the week for which such payment would be made, has received or is seeking unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or any other Federal or any State unemployment compensation law, but if the appropriate State or Federal agency finally determines that a person denied benefits for any week because of this subsection was not entitled to unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or such Federal or State law with respect to such week, this subsection shall not apply with respect to such week.

"(c) Any agreement under this section may contain provisions (including, so far as may be appropriate, provisions authorized or made applicable with respect to agreements concluded by the Secretary of Labor pursuant to title XV of the Social Security Act) as will promote effective administration, protect the United States against loss, and insure the proper application of payments made to the State under such agreement. Except as may be provided in such agreements, or in the rules and regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, determinations by any duly designated officer or agency as to the eligibility of individuals for weekly retraining payments under this section shall be final and conclusive for any purposes and not subject to review by any court or any other officer.

"(d) The Secretary of Labor and the Secretary shall jointly prescribe such rules and regulations as they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1961, such sums, not in excess of $10,000,000, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"PENALTIES

"Sec. 17. "(b) Whoever, being connected in any capacity with the Secretary, in the administration of this Act (1) embezzles, abstracts, purloins, or willfully misapplies any moneys, funds, securities, or other things of value, whether belonging to him or pledged or otherwise entrusted to him, or (2) with intent to defraud the Secretary or any other body politic or corporate, or any individual, or to deceive any officer, auditor, or examiner, makes any false entry in any book, report, or statement of or to the Secretary, or without being duly authorized draws any order or issues, puts forth, or assigns any note, debenture, bonds, or other obligation, or draft, bill of exchange, mortgage, judgment, or decree thereof, or (3) with intent to defraud participates or shares in or receives directly or indirectly any money, profit, property, or benefit through any transaction, loan, grant, commission, contract, or any other act of the Secretary, or (4) gives any unauthorized information concerning any future action or plan of the Secretary which might affect the value of securities, or having such knowledge invests or speculates, directly or indirectly, in the securities or property of any company or corporation receiving loans or other assistance from the Secretary, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than five years, or both.

"EMPLOYMENT OF EXPEDITERS AND ADMINISTRATIVE EMPLOYEES

"Sec. 18. No financial assistance shall be extended by the Secretary under section 6 to any business enterprise unless the owners, partners, or officers of such business enterprise (1) certify to the Secretary the names of any attorneys, agents, and other persons engaged by or on behalf of such business enterprise for the purpose of expediting applications made to the Secretary for assistance of any sort, under this Act, and the fees paid or to be paid to any such person; and (2) execute an agreement binding such business enterprise, for a period of two years after such assistance is rendered by the Secretary to such business enterprise, to refrain from employing, tendering any office or employment to, or retaining for professional services, any person who, on the date such assistance or any part thereof was rendered, or within one year prior thereto, shall have served as an officer, attorney, agent, or employee, occupying a position or engaging in activities which the Secretary shall have determined involve discretion with respect to the granting of assistance under this Act.

The Secretary shall not extend any financial assistance under section 6 for such a project without first obtaining adequate assurance that these labor standards will be maintained upon the construction work. The Secretary of Labor shall have, with respect to the labor standards specified in this provision, the authority and functions set forth in Reorganization Plan Numbered 14 of 1950 (15 F.R. 3176; 64 Stat. 1267; 5 U.S.C. 1332-15), and section 2 of the Act of June 13, 1934, as amended (48 Stat. 948, as amended; 40 U.S.C. 276c).

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may be privileged to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous matmous agreement. I should like to reserve this right as best I could. I have not had an opportunity to discuss it with anyone because I was called about it from the other side within the last 10 minutes.

Mr. McCORMACK. I can understand that fact.

Mr. HARRIS. The expiration date of the act is March 31. We do think it is quite important, if we can, to get it through. I would think it would certainly be noncontroversial, as far as I know.

Mr. HALLECK. Might that matter not be brought up right now?

Mr. HARRIS. No, I cannot do it because I have to agree to a conference. The other body has asked for a conference. That makes it necessary for the House to agree to the conference. Naturally it will take a little time to get the conference report back.

Mr. HALLECK. May I say that as far as I can find out on this side there will be no controversy about it. It can be disposed of tomorrow. As I understand it, we are to be in session tomorrow. I understood the majority leader's solicitude for the Members, but as far as I am concerned I would hope that we could dispose of the matter tomorrow.

Mr. McCORMACK. Of course, we are faced with a situation where we have to act. With the permission of the minority leader and the Members of the House, I should like to correct the statement I made to the gentleman from Iowa and say that in view of the information given to the leadership of the House by the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas that conference report will be brought up tomorrow. I never break an agreement, so I ask the Members of the House to permit me to correct this statement I made heretofore.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

CORRECTION OF THE RECORD

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to correct the RECORD as follows: On page 4153 of the RECORD of March 21, 1961, in the middle column, the next to last paragraph on the page, the second sentence should read as follows:

This is not intended to affect any processed sugar presently in the country under authorization for release by the Department of Agriculture.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

EXTENDING LOAN GUARANTEE AUTHORITY OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H.R. 1163) to amend section 510 of the Interstate Commerce Act so as to extend for 15 months the loan guarantee authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission, with amendments of the Senate thereto, disagree to the amendments of the Senate and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas? (After a pause.) The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. HARRIS, WILLIAMS, and SPRINGER.

BILL TO ENCOURAGE PRACTICAL NURSE TRAINING

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I take great pleasure in joining other members of this House in introducing legislation to encourage the training of practical nurses by continued Federal participation in the financial support of these vocational training programs. The question of health care in our society and the cost of this care must always be a matter of concern to the Congress and I believe that this is truly a constructive step toward improving health care for our people and providing it at a lower cost by action of the Federal Government.

The practical nurse occupies an important position in the health care team—the doctor, the registered nurse, therapists, hospital administrators, and others round it out. Hospitals, nursing homes, and other health facilities have need for the skills which a practical nurse can offer. In many cases, the practical nurse can replace a registered nurse in certain functions, leaving the registered nurse free for the accomplishment of higher skilled jobs. The concept of our health care team, the combined skills of many individuals using the techniques and facilities available which have given America the best health care of any society at any time, is one which has an important place for the practical nurse.

And this has an effect on the cost of medical care. Those services which the practical nurse performs, rather than having them left to the registered nurse, can be performed more cheaply. Thus, the freeing of the registered nurse to cover more patients gives better care for our people and the utilization of practical nurses wherever possible lowers the cost of care.

The extension and improvement of the training of practical nurses, with the resultant benefits of it, form one part of a program for the improvement of health care services and the lowering of their costs. In the last Congress, I sponsored an amendment to the National Housing Act which made FHA loans available for the construction of nursing homes. The response to this new feature of the FHA program has been heartening and hundreds of those who need nursing home care will be accommodated in homes built under this program. And, because the financing costs of the home will be lower, the cost to the patient will likewise be less.

There are further areas into which the Federal Government might go to make truly constructive advances in our program of health care. One of these areas is that of home care and the visiting nurse program. Just as nursing homes can care for many of the patients who might otherwise be sent to hospitals, many persons can be treated at home, and often best treated in the surroundings of their family. Costs of this care is less than that of the nursing home or the hospital. Adequate care, based upon the work of the visiting nurses and the training which she can give to the family in caring for the patient, given in the home is a part of the health care services of our society and should be encouraged and supported by the Government.

It is my hope that the Congress will extend the Federal participation in the practical nurse training program and will look into the other forms of health care which can be used to improve this country's system of health services.

AMENDMENT TO EQUALIZE TAXATION FOR THE REDEMPTION OF PREFERRED STOCK

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I have today introduced an amendment to section 302(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 dealing with the income tax treatment of funds received in redemption of paid-for preferred stock.

Preferred stock is, in reality, a cross between common stock with its characteristics of ownership and bonds. Under the law, in certain cases redemption of preferred stock is treated for tax purposes as the return of capital, in others this redemption of the same stock is treated as dividends and taxed accordingly. Those preferred stockholders who either own no common stock or whose common and preferred stock are held in widely varying proportions fall into the first category. On the other hand, those stockholders who own the common and preferred stock of a corporation in what is called "substantially" proportionate ratios fall into the second category. This denies the idea that one man may have two distinct relationships with a corporate entity. For example, this same reasoning is not applied to an individual who holds both the common stock and the bonds of a corporation and whose bonds are paid off, so long as the bonds represent true indebtedness and the equity capital is sufficient for the needs of the corporation.

My amendment to the Internal Revenue Code would end this capricious distinction between the treatment of the proceeds of the redemption of preferred stock in the differing situations cited and would permit this stock, insofar as it represents capital invested in money or goods, to be treated as a return of capital.

The present taxation of the income derived from the redemption of preferred stock as dividend income turns some corporations, especially closely held family corporations, to debt financing rather than equity financing when further investment is needed. A change in the system of taxation of the redemption proceeds of paid-for preferred stock would have the beneficial effect of making equity financing more attractive to the corporation and would, in the long run, produce greater tax revenues.

The taxation of capital return, as distinguished from interest or dividends paid on that capital, is contrary to our Constitution. This amendment would assure proper tax treatment for the redemption of all preferred stock.

PROPOSAL FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE CURRENT AND ELEVEN POINT RIVER AREA OF MISSOURI

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I have today introduced a bill which would establish the Ozark Scenic Riverways, an area of natural beauty and recreation in the Ozark River area of Missouri. This Scenic Riverway would be administered by the U.S. Forest Service as a part of the Clark National Forest in southern Missouri. I believe that action should be taken to preserve the natural beauty of this region and to develop it for the recreational use of all Americans.

In the last Congress, I introduced legislation for this area similar in purpose but with the National Park Service rather than the Forest Service playing the guiding role. In this Congress my colleague from Missouri [Mr. ICHORD] has introduced this proposal as H.R. 5712. It would establish an Ozark Rivers National Monument as part of the national park system and is designed to accomplish the same ends as the Scenic Riverways proposal.

I believe that it is only proper that the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee of this House have the opportunity to look into the alternative proposals for the development and preservation of this region and, for this reason, I wish to bring this second approach to its attention. I offer this bill in the belief that it is only by weighing the different approaches that the best final solution can be achieved. The important thing is that the Congress find a workable program by which the purposes outlined in both approaches can be achieved. I will be happy to support any workable program that the committee can draft, for it is the result and not which of the alternative methods of achieving it is used that is the important thing.

Along with a plea that the Congress give sympathetic hearing to this general proposal, I would like to highlight one of its features which opens a new approach to the very important job of administering recreational areas for the people of this country who are looking for healthy, enjoyable activity to round out their ever increasing leisure hours. This feature deals with the acquisition and management of strip property—such as riverfront property—as part of a coordinated recreational area program.

My bill would provide for the acquisition of easements, rather than fee title, on land bordering streams and rivers that are part of the Ozark Scenic Riverways. These easements would establish cooperative development areas, areas in which the purposes of the individual owner and the recreational management would be jointly developed. Use of the land not inconsistent with the purposes of the recreational area would be left open to the owners of it; they would be paid for the limitation on the full free use of the land but in the long run it would be less costly than acquisition of the land by the Government. This would be similar to the setback laws which are common features in municipal ordinances. The property owner must abide by the regulation that his house cannot be built closer to the street than, say, 20 feet. A man's front yard is still his own, and he can use it as his own except that he cannot build his house closer to the street than a set distance. The setback idea leaves ownership in the individual and provides only minimal restrictions on his land usage.

Together with this feature, my bill, and also the bill embodying the Park Service approach, provide for an advisory commission made up of interested individuals on the local, State and National level to advise the managing authority on matters pertaining to the area. Both also make provision for multiple use, including hunting and fishing. Payment in lieu of taxes for the land taken is also covered by the two bills.

The Ozark rivers area of Missouri can be a wonderful recreation area as well as a region of great natural beauty. To make these two elements of the Ozark rivers available to everyone and to protect and develop them, some program must be put into effect. I urge the Congress to study this matter thoroughly and present a program behind which those interested can join in this most worthy purpose.

DEPRESSED AREA BILL

Mr. WHALLEY. Mr. Speaker, I intend to support the Depressed Area bill, S. 1, which certainly is necessary to the State of Pennsylvania, due to the fact that Pennsylvania has more depressed areas than any other State.

Unemployment in Pennsylvania has increased from 300,000 in 1954 to more than 500,000 at the present time. Moreover, Pennsylvania paid almost $300 million for unemployment benefits in 1960, and approximately $200 million for public assistance.

Pennsylvania has already tried to help itself with its unemployment problem. As a member of the Pennsylvania State Senate, I cosponsored the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Act—PIDA—in 1955. Since that time, Pennsylvania has made 145 loans—total $17½ million—to local communities for new factory buildings; 26,000 new jobs have been created with a $100 million annual payroll. Now it is time for Federal aid.

The Federal Depressed Area bill will supply facilities and factory shell buildings. It will also contain a very strong anti-pirating section, which will prevent industries from being moved from one part of the country to another.

My principal concern is: Where will we get the industries and the jobs to put our unemployed back to work, even though S. 1 makes facilities and factory buildings possible?

The administration has just announced a $2 billion increase in defense spending, primarily for missiles. The administration has said that the Nation's depressed areas are one of its major problems.

Here is an opportunity for the administration to kill two birds with one stone by placing a major part of the $2 billion additional defense spending in the depressed areas. Industry and jobs will be supplied to put most of the unemployed back to work. The results will be phenomenal.

DEPRESSED AREA BILL

Mr. HARVEY of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, in recent months there has been increased attention focused on our unemployment situation. While I am not unaware of the unemployment figures, I am prompted to question the administration's approach to the solution of this problem. Federal aid to depressed areas, if adopted, would only be a forerunner of a tremendous expansion in Federal expenditures for future generations of taxpayers. Enactment of this proposal would create a "pie in the sky" atmosphere for the people of many of our communities now suffering from underdevelopment or adverse unemployment. The false security promised by passage of this proposal would only add to the feelings of frustration which exist among the 5 million unemployed. We must not destroy their faith in what the future holds for them, no matter how much emphasis the politicians have placed on passage of this proposal. Legislation of this type is destined to place the Federal Government in a position of discriminating between certain areas, by using tax resources from one area to promote economic growth in another. Legislation of this type cannot solve a community's unfavorable labor climate, which is one of the determining factors in redevelopment. Federal aid to depressed areas will not be able to determine the nearness of a market for a certain product nor will building a factory necessarily create a market. It is my feeling that the Federal Government should be more concerned with removing itself from the problems of business rather than interceding in an already complex dilemma.

CALLING FOR REPEAL OF DISCLAIMER AFFIDAVIT REQUIREMENT IN NATIONAL DEFENSE EDUCATION ACT

Mr. LINDSAY. Mr. Speaker, I have reintroduced in the House of Representatives a bill calling for the repeal of the disclaimer affidavit requirement in the National Defense Education Act. I pressed for this amendment in the 86th Congress and I regret it did not pass. The disclaimer affidavit is offensive. I rebel against this kind of requirement. It is a form of test oath which does violence to the principles for which our forefathers fought. This so-called safeguard alienates the good will of our loyal the Cheli Air Force Depot by private enterprise in keeping with the neighboring industries and businesses, and believes that said objective and the earliest development will be facilitated by a single developer; and

Whereas the Planning Commission of the City of Bell has recommended that the Cheli Air Force Base Depot area be zoned for industrial use; and

Whereas it appears that Chanslor-Western Oil & Development Co., an affiliate of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co. donated said property to the United States at the commencement of World War II and is seeking the enactment of legislation making possible the return of said property to it on the principles set forth in the Surplus Property Act of 1944 which expired in 1949; and

Whereas the members of the city council are familiar with the character of the industrial development by the Santa Fe in the area of the central manufacturing district, principally the area formerly known as Vail Field, adjacent to the Cheli Air Force Depot, and believes that a similar development of the Cheli Air Force Depot property would be of great benefit to the people residing in the southeast area of Los Angeles County, including the community of the city of Huntington Park, because this would provide many additional jobs for the people in this area as well as additional assessed valuation for local tax purposes; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the City Council of the City of Huntington Park, That it favors the enactment by the Congress of legislation making it possible to return the Cheli Air Force Depot property to Chanslor-Western Oil & Development Co., a subsidiary of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co., on such fair and equitable terms as are consistent with the principles of the Surplus Property Act of 1944; be it further

Resolved, that the city clerk is hereby directed to transmit a copy of this resolution to Senator THOMAS H. KUCHEL, Senator CLAIR ENGLE, and to Congressmen for the southeast area of Los Angeles County and to the appropriate congressional committee or committees to which such legislation may be referred for consideration.

A RESOLUTION OF THE HUNTINGTON PARK CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, HUNTINGTON PARK, CALIF.

Whereas the program of the Chamber of Commerce of the City of Huntington Park is interested in development and welfare of the general area; and

Whereas it is for the best interest of the area to provide a favorable business climate through a tax structure and increased job opportunities for the people of the area; and

Whereas the Chamber of Commerce of the City of Huntington Park encourages the development of Cheli Airbase to maintain and increase job opportunities in the southeast area; and

Whereas the Chanslor-Western Oil & Development Co., an affiliate of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Co., donated the property now comprising said Cheli Airbase as part of the war effort in 1943-44 to the U.S. Government and is now seeking legislation for the return of said property on the principles of the Surplus Property Act of 1944, which expired in 1949, and

Whereas the Huntington Park Chamber of Commerce feels that the Santa Fe Railroad has proven its ability in industrial land development; and

Whereas the industrial development of Cheli Airbase would provide additional employment and broaden the tax base by increasing the assessed valuation: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Huntington Park Chamber of Commerce of the City of Huntington Park, That it favors the enactment of legislation by the Congress of the United States to return the property presently comprising the Cheli Airbase to the Chanslor-Western Oil & Development Co., a subsidiary of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Co., on fair and equitable terms under the principles of the Surplus Property of 1944; be it further Resolved, That the manager of the Huntington Park Chamber of Commerce transmit copies of this resolution to the U.S. Senators representing California and to the Members of Congress representing the southeast area of Los Angeles County.

REDUCTION OF POSTAGE RATES ON CERTAIN PARCELS FOR RELIEF PURPOSES

Mr. HART. Mr. President, from time to time I have received inquiries from private groups interested in sending relief supplies to individuals and organizations overseas. Almost without exception the individuals and groups that have contacted me have indicated that the postal rates make it extremely difficult to send relief packages to deserving individuals and groups overseas. Today I am introducing a bill proposing that whenever the President determines that a disaster has occurred in the United States or overseas, he may authorize a reduction in postage rates of relief packages being mailed to organizations or individuals in the disaster area. It is my belief that areas affected by military acts or natural disasters, such as the earthquakes which recently occurred in Peru or the severe winter of 1956 in Italy, would be examples of the kind of natural disaster where standby authority such as authorized in this bill would be the most humanitarian method of enlisting the fullest assistance of the people of the United States in alleviating the suffering of those affected.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be received and appropriately referred; and, without objection, the bill will be printed in the RECORD.

The bill (S. 1500) to authorize a reduction of postage rates on parcels containing only food, clothing, medicines, or drugs sent by mail for relief purposes, introduced by Mr. HART, was received, read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Chapter 67 of title 39 of the United States Code is amended by adding at the end thereof a new section as follows:

"§ 4556. Postage rates on relief packages

"(a) Whenever the President determines that a disaster has occurred in any area in the United States, including the territories and possessions thereof, or in any foreign country the effects of which may be alleviated by relief packages from organizations and individuals in the United States, he is authorized to reduce the rates of postage on relief packages mailed in the United States for delivery to organizations or individuals in such area or foreign country. Such reduced rates shall remain in effect for such period of time as the President may specify.

"(b) The Postmaster General shall, at the close of each fiscal year, notify the President of the loss in postal receipts to the Post Office Department caused by transmitting during such year relief packages at reduced rates provided for by subsection (a). The President shall reimburse the Post Office Department for such loss in postal receipts out of funds appropriated therefor pursuant to the authorization contained in subsection (d).

"(c) As used in this section, the term 'relief packages' means any packages containing only food, clothing, medicines, or drugs, intended as a gift for relief purposes, and not for resale.

"(d) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the President such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Vermont. The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

BENEFITS FOR TEACHERS IN PRIVATE NONPROFIT SCHOOLS UNDER NATIONAL DEFENSE EDUCATION ACT—ADDITIONAL COSPONSOR OF BILL

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. President, if the distinguished majority leader will yield to me, I wish to state that the Senate has just now received a message that the House has passed the area redevelopment bill, S. 1. I ask that the President pro tempore lay that message before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas, which was, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That this Act may be cited as the "Area Redevelopment Act".

DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best interests of the United States, but that some of our communities are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment; that such unemployment and underemployment cause hardship to many individuals and their families and detract from the national welfare by wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, should help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment to take effective steps in planning and financing their economic redevelopment; that Federal assistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals in areas needing redevelopment should enable such areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diversified local economies and improved local living conditions; and that under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources rather than by merely transferring employment opportunities from one area of the United States to another.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATOR

SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that received by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Administrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") may assign.

ADVISORY POLICY BOARD

SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is created an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board (hereinafter referred to as the "Board"), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration. The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under this Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year.

(c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call together and confer with any persons, including representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and government, who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment or underemployment in the several areas designated by the Secretary as redevelopment areas.

REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas within the United States in which he determines, upon the basis of standards generally comparable with those set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2), that there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. There shall be included among the areas so designated any area—

(1) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the rate of unemployment, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in paragraph (2); and

(2) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the annual average rate of unemployment has been at least—

(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years.

The Secretary of Labor shall find the facts and provide the data to be used by the Secretary in making the determinations required by this subsection.

(b) The Secretary shall also designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas (including Indian reservations) within the United States which do not meet the requirements set forth in subsection (a) but which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are of the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent of migration out of the area, and the proportion of the population of each such area which has been receiving public assistance from the Federal Government or from the State or States in which such area is located or from any municipality therein. In making these determinations the Secretary shall be guided, but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies made, and information and data collected or compiled, by (1) departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, (2) State and local governments, (3) universities and land-grant colleges, and (4) private organizations.

(c) Upon the request of the Secretary, the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Interior, and such other heads of agencies as may be appropriate are authorized to conduct such special studies, obtain such information, and compile and furnish to the Secretary such data as the Secretary may deem necessary or proper to enable him to make the determinations provided for in subsection (b) of this section. The Secretary shall reimburse when appropriate, out of any funds appropriated to carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers for any expenditures incurred by them under this section.

(d) As used in this Act, the term "redevelopment area" refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area.

LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS

SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (which for purposes of this section shall include participations in loans) to aid in financing any project within a redevelopment area for the purchase or development of land and facilities (including, in exceptional cases, machinery and equipment) for industrial or commercial usage, including the construction of new buildings, the rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied buildings, and the alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings.

Such financial assistance shall not be extended for working capital, or to assist establishments relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another.

(b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, subject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

(1) The total amount of loans (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding at any one time under this section (A) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(a) shall not exceed $100,000,000 and (B) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(b) shall not exceed $100,000,000.

(2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants, both private and public (including Indian tribes), approved for such assistance by the State (or any agency or instrumentality thereof concerned with problems of economic development) in which the project to be financed is or will be located.

(3) The project for which financial assistance is sought must be reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located.

(4) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms.

(5) The Secretary shall not make any loan without a participation unless he determines that the loan cannot be made on a participation basis.

(6) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there is a reasonable assurance of repayment.

(7) Subject of section 12(5) of this Act, no loan, including renewals or extension thereof, may be made hereunder for a period exceeding twenty-five years and no evidences of indebtedness maturing more than twenty-five years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor.

(8) Loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(d)(1) of this Act, plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum to cover administrative expenses and to provide for losses on loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section.

(9) Such assistance shall not exceed 65 per centum of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or developing land and facilities (including, in exceptional cases, machinery and equipment), and of constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building or buildings of the particular project, and shall, among others, be on the condition that—

(A) other funds are available in an amount which, together with the assistance provided hereunder, shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

(B) not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by a community or area organization which is nongovernmental in character, as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance;

(C) in extending financial assistance under this section with respect to a redevelopment area, the Secretary shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such assistance is extended shall be supplied by nongovernmental sources as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance; and

(D) to the extent the Secretary finds such action necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular project by other lenders and investors, and except as otherwise provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), any Federal financial assistance extended under this section may be repayable only after other loans made in connection with such project have been repaid in full, and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other loans made in connection with the same project.

(10) No such assistance shall be extended unless there shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an overall program for the economic development of the area and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the State or local political subdivision in which the project would be located.

LOANS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 7. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase or development of land for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

(2) the funds requested for such project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms;

(3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of other available funds for such project are adequate to insure the completion thereof;

(4) there is a reasonable expectation of repayment; and

(5) such area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10) and the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program.

(b) Subject to section 12(5), the maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than forty years after the date such loan is made. Any such loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(d)(2) of this Act, plus one-quarter of 1 per centum per annum.

(c) The total amount of loans outstanding at any one time under this section shall not exceed $100,000,000.

(d) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it is prepared to undertake.

GRANTS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 8. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make grants for land acquisition or development for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

(2) the entity requesting the grant proposes to contribute to the cost of the project for which such grant is requested in proportion to its ability so to contribute;

(3) the project for which a grant is requested will fulfill a pressing need of the area, or part thereof, in which it is, or will be, located, and there is little probability that such project can be undertaken without the assistance of a grant under this section; and

(4) the area for which a project is to be undertaken has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10), and such project is consistent with such program.

The amount of any grant under this section for any such project shall not exceed 65 per centum of the difference between the funds which can be practicably obtained from loans (including a loan under section 7 of this Act) and from other Federal sources for such project, and the amount which is necessary to insure the completion thereof.

(b) The Secretary shall by regulation provide for the supervision of projects with respect to which grants are made under this section so as to insure that Federal funds are not wasted or dissipated.

(c) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it is prepared to undertake.

(d) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $75,000,000 for the purpose of making grants under this section.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT FUND

SEC. 9. (a) There is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States an area redevelopment fund (hereinafter referred to as the "fund"), which shall be available to the Secretary for the purpose of extending financial assistance under sections 6 and 7 and for the payment of all obligations and expenditures arising therefrom.

(b) When requested by the Secretary, advances shall be made to the fund from the appropriations made therefor. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of making advances to the fund, without fiscal year limitation, an amount not exceeding $300,000,000.

(c) Receipts arising from the programs of assistance under sections 6 and 7 shall be credited to the fund. Any moneys in the fund determined by the Secretary to be in excess of current needs shall be credited to the appropriation from which advanced to be held for future advances to the fund.

(d) There shall be paid into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury at the close of each fiscal year—

(1) interest, on advances made to the fund for use in extending financial assistance under section 6, at rates which shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury at the time the advances or commitments for advances are made after taking into consideration the current average market yields of outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to loans made by the Secretary under section 6; and

(2) interest, on advances made to the fund for use in extending financial assistance under section 7, at rates which shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury at the time the advances or commitments for advances are made but which shall not be more than the higher of (A) 2½ per centum per annum or (B) the average annual interest rate on all interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt as computed at the end of the fiscal year next preceding the making of such advances or commitments and adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum.

(e) The fund shall contribute to the civil service retirement and disability fund a sum as provided by section 4(a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act (5 U.S.C. 2254(a)), except that such sum shall be determined by applying to the total basic salaries (as defined in that Act) paid to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act and covered by that Act the per centum rate determined annually by the Civil Service Commission to be the excess of the total normal cost per centum rate of the civil service retirement system over the employee deduction rate specified in such section 4(a). The fund shall also pay into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts that portion of the cost of administration of the civil service retirement and disability fund attributable to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act, as determined by the Civil Service Commission.

(f) In the performance of and with respect to the functions, powers, and duties vested in him by sections 6 and 7 of this Act, the Secretary shall—

(1) prepare annually and submit a budget program in accordance with the provisions of sections 102, 103, and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended; and

(2) determine the character of and the necessity for obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to provisions of law specifically applicable to Government corporations.

INFORMATION

SEC. 10. The Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas. The Secretary shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

SEC. 11. In carrying out his duties under this act the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment (1) to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under this Act, and (2) to other areas which he finds have substantial need for such assistance. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secretary through members of his staff or through the employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations, or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such purposes. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purposes of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000 annually.

POWERS OF SECRETARY

SEC. 12. In performing his duties under this Act, the Secretary is authorized to—

(1) adopt, alter, and use a seal, which shall be judicially noticed;

(2) hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, and take such testimony, as he may deem advisable;

(3) request directly from any executive department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, independent establishment, or instrumentality information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics needed to carry out the purposes of this Act; and each department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, establishment, or instrumentality is authorized to furnish such information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics directly to the Secretary;

(4) under regulations prescribed by him, assign or sell at public or private sale, or otherwise dispose of for cash or credit, in his discretion and upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any evidence of debt, contract, claim, personal property, or security assigned to or held by him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act, and collect or compromise all obligations assigned to or held by him in connection with such loans or evidences of indebtedness until such time as such obligations may be referred to the Attorney General for suit or collection;

(5) further extend the maturity of or renew any loan made or evidence of indebtedness purchased under this Act, beyond the periods stated in such loan or evidence of indebtedness or in this Act, for additional periods not to exceed ten years, if such extension or renewal will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loan or evidence of indebtedness;

(6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, modernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any real or personal property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by, him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

(7) pursue to final collection, by way of compromise or other administrative action, prior to reference to the Attorney General, all claims against third parties assigned to him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act. This shall include authority to obtain deficiency judgments or otherwise in the case of mortgages assigned to the Secretary. Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (41 U.S.C. 5), shall not apply to any contract of hazard insurance or to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on account of property obtained by the Secretary as a result of loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act if the premium therefor or the amount thereof does not exceed $1,000. The power to convey and to execute in the name of the Secretary, deeds of conveyance, deeds of release, assignments and satisfactions of mortgages, and any other written instrument relating to real or personal property or any interest therein acquired by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of this Act may be exercised by the Secretary or by any officer or agent appointed by him for that purpose without the execution of any express delegation of power or power of attorney;

(8) acquire, in any lawful manner, any property (real, personal, or mixed, tangible or intangible), whenever deemed necessary or appropriate to the conduct of the activities authorized in sections 6 and 7 of this Act;

(9) in addition to any powers, functions, privileges, and immunities otherwise vested in him, take any and all actions, including the procurement of the services of attorneys by contract, determined by him to be necessary or desirable in making, purchasing, servicing, compromising, modifying, liquidating, or otherwise administratively dealing with or realizing on loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

(10) to such an extent as he finds necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act, procure the temporary (not in excess of six months) service of experts or consultants or organizations thereof, including stenographic reporting services, by contract or appointment, and in such cases such service shall be without regard to the civil service and classification laws, and, except in the case of stenographic reporting services by organizations, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5); any individual so employed may be compensated at a rate not in excess of $75 per diem, and, while such individual is away from his home or regular place of business, he may be allowed transportation and not to exceed $15 per diem in lieu of subsistence and other expenses;

(11) sue and be sued in any court of record of a State having general jurisdiction or in any United States district court, and jurisdiction is conferred upon such district court to determine such controversies without regard to the amount in controversy; but no attachment, injunction, garnishment, or other similar process, mesne or final, shall be issued against the Secretary or his property. Nothing herein shall be construed to except the activities under this Act from the application of sections 507(b) and 2679 of title 28, United States Code, and of section 367 of the Revised Statutes (5 U.S.C. 316); and

(12) establish such rules, regulations, and procedures as he may deem appropriate in carrying out the provisions of this Act.

TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

SEC. 13. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall be granted under this Act with respect to such area and, for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secretary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment area. The Secretary shall keep the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

URBAN RENEWAL

SEC. 14. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

"SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (in this section referred to as a 'municipality') is situated in an area designated under section 5 of the Area Redevelopment Act as a redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economy, the Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

"(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e) of this section, the Administrator may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirement or limitations of section 110(c) that the project area be predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses under the urban renewal plan, and without regard to any of the limitations of that section on the undertaking of projects for predominantly nonresidential uses.

"(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, a contract for financial assistance under this section may include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the project area designated under the urban renewal plan for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or non-profit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to such public agency or corporation under this section shall be made at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And provided further, That only the purchaser from or lessees of such public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obligations relating to the commencement of improvements imposed under section 105(b) hereof.

"(d) Following the execution of any contract for financial assistance under this section with respect to any project, the Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him under this section for the completion of such projects, notwithstanding any determination made after the execution of such contract that the area in which the project is located is no longer a redevelopment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

"(e) Not more than 10 per centum of the funds authorized for capital grants under section 103 after the date of the enactment of the Area Redevelopment Act shall be used for the purpose of providing financial assistance under this section. Amounts used for such purpose shall not be taken into account for the purpose of the limitation contained in the second proviso of the fifth sentence of section 110(c)."

URBAN PLANNING GRANTS

SEC. 15. Paragraph (3) of section 701(a) of the Housing Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after "counties which" the following: "(A) are situated in areas designated by the Secretary of Commerce under section 5(a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as redevelopment areas or (B)".

OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING

SEC. 16. (a) The Secretary of Labor is authorized, upon request and whenever he determines such studies are needed, to undertake, or to provide assistance to others for, studies of the size, characteristics, skills, adaptability, occupational potentialities, and related aspects of the labor force of any redevelopment area.

(b) When a redevelopment area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10), the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the Secretary and the Secretary of Agriculture, shall determine the occupational training or retraining needs of unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in the redevelopment area. The Secretary of Labor shall notify the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare of the occupational training or retraining requirements of the area, and shall provide for the orderly selection and referral of those unemployed or underemployed individuals residing in the area who can reasonably be expected to obtain employment as a result of the skill they will acquire in the training which is to be made available. The Secretary of Labor shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and with existing State and local agencies and officials in charge of existing programs relating to vocational training and retraining for the purpose of assuring that the facilities and services of such agencies are made fully available to such individuals.

(c) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that additional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet the occupational training or retraining needs of such individuals, he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall provide assistance, including financial assistance when necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational agency in the provision of such additional facilities or services. If the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare finds that the State vocational educational agency is unable to provide the facilities and services needed, he may, after consultation with such agency, provide for the same by agreement or contract with public or private educational institutions.

(d) The Secretary of Labor shall arrange to provide any necessary assistance for setting up apprenticeships, and to promote journeyman and other on-the-job training.

(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $4,500,000 annually, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

(f) In providing assistance under this section with respect to unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in redevelopment areas, the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall give consideration to the special needs of individuals who are agricultural workers or are engaged in other seasonal occupations and who require occupational training in order to qualify them to engage in supplementary employment during the off season and during other periods of reduced activity in the field of their regular or primary occupations.

RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

SEC. 17. (a) The Secretary of Labor in consultation with the Secretary and the Secretary of Agriculture may, on behalf of the United States, enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment areas are located, under which the Secretary of Labor shall make payments to such States either in advance or by way of reimbursement for the purpose of enabling such States, as agents of the United States, to make weekly retraining payments to unemployed or underemployed individuals residing within such redevelopment areas who are certified by the Secretary of Labor to be undergoing occupational training or retraining under section 16 of this Act. Such payments shall be made for a period not exceeding sixteen weeks, and the amount of any such payment for any week shall not exceed the amount of the average weekly unemployment compensation payment (including allowances for dependents) payable for a week of total unemployment in the State making such payments.

(b) No weekly retraining payment shall be made to any person otherwise eligible who, with respect to the week for which such payment would be made, has received or is seeking unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or any other Federal or any State unemployment compensation law, but if the appropriate State or Federal agency finally determines that a person denied benefits for any week because of this subsection was not entitled to unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or such Federal or State law with respect to such week, this subsection shall not apply with respect to such week.

(c) Any agreement under this section may contain provisions (including, so far as may be appropriate, provisions authorized or made applicable with respect to agreements concluded by the Secretary of Labor pursuant to title XV of the Social Security Act) as will promote effective administration, protect the United States against loss, and insure the proper application of payments made to the State under such agreement. Except as may be provided in such agreements, or in the rules and regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, determinations by any duly designated officer or agency as to the eligibility of individuals for weekly retraining payments under this section shall be final and conclusive for any purposes and not subject to review by any court or any other officer.

(d) The Secretary of Labor and the Secretary shall jointly prescribe such rules and regulations as they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $10,000,000 annually, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

The following information shall be posted in such list as soon as each application is approved: (1) the name of the applicant and, in the case of corporate applications, the names of the officers and directors thereof (2) the amount and duration of the loan or grant for which application is made, (3) the purposes for which the proceeds of the loan or grant are to be used, and (4) a general description of the security offered in the case of a loan.

Act and undertaken by public applicants shall be paid wages at rates not less than those prevailing on similar construction in the locality as determined by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act, as amended (40 U.S.C. 276a-276a-5), and every such employee shall receive compensation at a rate not less than one and one-half times his basic rate of pay for all hours worked in any workweek in excess of eight hours in any workday or forty hours in the workweek, as the case may be. The Secretary shall not extend any financial assistance under section 6, 7, or 8 for such a project without first obtaining adequate assurance that these labor standards will be maintained upon the construction work. The Secretary of Labor shall have, with respect to the labor standards specified in this provision, the authority and functions set forth in Reorganization Plan Numbered 14 of 1950 (15 F.R. 3176; 64 Stat. 1267; 5 U.S.C. 133z-15), and section 2 of the Act of June 13, 1934, as amended (48 Stat. 948, as amended; 40 U.S.C. 276c).

ANNUAL REPORT

SEC. 22. The Secretary shall make a comprehensive and detailed annual report to the Congress of his operations under this Act for each fiscal year beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1962. Such report shall be printed and shall be transmitted to the Congress not later than January 3 of the year following the fiscal year with respect to which such report is made. Such report shall show, among other things, (1) the number and size of Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies and services placed with business enterprises located in redevelopment areas, and (2) the amount and duration of employment resulting from such contracts. Upon the request of the Secretary, the various departments and agencies of the Government engaged in the procurement of supplies and services shall furnish to the Secretary such information as may be necessary for the purposes of this section.

The foregoing requirement shall be implemented by the Secretary in such a manner as to avoid the duplication of existing staffs and facilities in any agency or instrumentality of the Federal Government. The Secretary is authorized to delegate to the heads of other departments and agencies of the Federal Government any of the Secretary's functions, powers, and duties under this Act as he may deem appropriate, and to authorize the redelegation of such functions, powers, and duties by the heads of such departments and agencies.

(b) Departments and agencies of the Federal Government shall exercise their powers, duties, and functions in such manner as will assist in carrying out the objectives of this Act. This Act shall be supplemental to any existing authority, and nothing herein shall be deemed to be restrictive of any existing powers, duties, and functions of any other department or agency of the Federal Government.

(b) The Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States, or any of their duly authorized representatives, shall have access for the purpose of audit and examination to any books, documents, papers, and records of the recipient that are pertinent to assistance received under section 6, 7, or 8 of this Act.

LOANS TO STATE AND LOCAL DEVELOPMENT COMPANIES

STUDY BY SECRETARY

SEC. 27. Whenever the Department of Defense announces plans to deactivate or is in the process of deactivating any permanent military installation or major unit thereof and such installation is situated in an area in which the rate of unemployment is 6 per centum or more, the Secretary shall, upon the request of the Governor or Governors of the state or states in which the area is located, institute a study to determine the economic effects of the action which has been or is to be taken. In determining the economic effects of such action, the Secretary shall, among other relevant matters, consider and make findings with respect to the approximate amount of money which has been, or may reasonably be expected to be, saved by any department or agency of the Government as a result of such action, compared with—

(1) the approximate costs or losses which have been, or may reasonably be expected to be, incurred by other departments or agencies of the Government, or by State and local governmental units, as a result of such action;

(2) the approximate losses which have been, or may reasonably be expected to be, incurred by private interests as a result of such action in connection with any facilities which they have provided to serve the needs of any such installation and which would otherwise have to be provided in whole or in part by the Government;

(3) the approximate cost to the Government of relocating any such installation in the event that such installation has been, or will be, relocated; and

(4) the approximate cost to the Government of reactivating, in a national emergency or other contingency, any such installation with respect to which any such action is proposed to be taken.

Any such study shall be conducted as expeditiously as practicable, and the findings resulting therefrom shall be transmitted by the Secretary to the Secretary of Defense and to the Congress.

RESEARCH

SEC. 28. To assist in the long-range accomplishment of the purposes of this Act, the Secretary shall establish and conduct a continuing program of study and research designed to assist in determining the causes of unemployment, underemployment, underdevelopment, and chronic depression in the various areas of the Nation and in the Nation as a whole and in the formulation and implementation of national, State, and local programs which will raise income levels and otherwise produce solutions of the problems resulting from these conditions. The Secretary shall include in his annual report under section 22 a detailed statement concerning the study and research conducted under this section together with his findings resulting therefrom and his recommendations for legislative and other action.

APPLICATION OF ACT

SEC. 29. As used in this Act, the terms "State", "States", and "United States" include the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. President, I move that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House, request a conference thereon with the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. CLARK, Mr. PROXMIRE, Mr. WILLIAMS of New Jersey, Mr. MUSKIE, Mr. CAPEHART, Mr. BENNETT, and Mr. BUSH the conferees on the part of the Senate.

CLOSING OF THE SNARK MISSILE BASE AT PRESQUE ISLE, MAINE

Mrs. SMITH of Maine. Mr. President, this morning, at 9 o'clock, I received from the Department of the Air Force notification that it had been decided to close the Snark missile base at Presque Isle, Maine.

Upon receiving that notification, I made a public statement on the matter; and at this time I wish to repeat the statement, here in the Senate.

I regret that in the rapidly changing character of the security and defense of our country—and specifically in the development of the missile program—the long anticipated inactivation and termination of the now outmoded Snark program and the resulting scheduled closing of the Presque Isle Air Force Base have now become realities, as a result of the decision by President Kennedy.

The far easier course for me to pursue politically would be to vigorously protest this action and, as a Republican Senator, to point out that the decision was one made by a Democratic President, and to make a political attack on the decision of President Kennedy.

The far easier course for me to pursue politically would be to demand that the now outmoded Snark program be continued, so that the Presque Isle Air Force Base be kept operating, to aid the economy of the area and to avoid the impact and dislocation that its closing is bound to have on the economy of this area.

But in all good conscience I cannot do this, for this would simply be playing politics with our national security, our national defense, and our taxpayer's dollar. It would be submitting to the economic philosophy that our National Defense Establishment and our national security program must be operated primarily for the local economy.

I shall do what I can to help the Presque Isle area absorb the economic impact of this unpleasant decision made by President Kennedy; and while I can understand and appreciate the concern of the people of the area, I am confident that the great majority of the people of the area are not only fair-minded about this long anticipated development, but also are of such admirable self-reliance that they will meet the impact well and successfully.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mrs. SMITH of Maine. I am glad to yield.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I commend the distinguished senior Senator from Maine for the statement she has just made. To the best of my knowledge, she has never, in her many years in the Congress—and we have served together in the House as well as in the Senate—played politics with national defense or any other matter. I think her statement today is just another indication of the great work the distinguished Senator from Maine has done, and exemplifies the philosophy which has marked her through her entire political career.

Mrs. SMITH of Maine. I thank the distinguished majority leader for his usual thoughtfulness and his fair and understanding statement. I much appreciate his generous expressions.

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I wish to join in the remarks of the majority leader with regard to the services of the distinguished Senator from Maine [Mrs. SMITH]. I have always considered it a matter of great pride that I have been able to associate myself on so many occasions with the Senator from Maine on so many issues during our service in the Senate of the United States.

Mr. KUCHEL. Mr. President, I am happy to align myself with the comments which the distinguished majority leader has made with respect to our colleague, the distinguished and very able senior Senator from Maine [Mrs. SMITH]. Once again, with courage, she speaks with high statesmanship. This is not the first time I have had the opportunity, on this floor, to salute our colleague. Senator SMITH is a great American, not only in the efficient and productive labors which she has performed in the Senate Armed Services Committee, in which, it is conceded, she is an acknowledged expert, but in every one of the many productive labors which she performs as a Member of the Senate she has added luster not only to her own great reputation, but also to the reputation of the Senate of the United States.

It was not too many months ago that Senators on both sides of the aisle were happy to congratulate her on the longest continuous record of answering roll calls in the entire history of this parliamentary body. I am glad again, on this occasion, as the distinguished majority leader speaks as an American, to stand up and speak also as an American and to express my pride in being one of her colleagues.

I am sure neither the distinguished majority leader nor the distinguished Senator from Maine will take any umbrage whatsoever if I also say I am proud, as a Republican, to acknowledge her as a leader on this side of the aisle for progressive government in the United States.

MESSAGE OF ROMULO BETANCOURT, PRESIDENT OF REPUBLIC OF VENEZUELA, TO PRESIDENT KENNEDY

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I speak now as chairman of the Subcommittee on Latin American Affairs of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. In my judgment, Congress has a very important moral obligation, and also I think a legal obligation, to pass at a very early date the appropriation of $500 million to which I think the Congress committed itself last year when we authorized $500 million for an aid program, in the field of social progress, to Latin America.

A United States delegation went to the Bogotá Conference last fall based primarily, may I say, so far as its commitments at the Bogotá Conference are concerned, on that authorization. The record of that conference shows that the then Under Secretary Douglas Dillon and two congressional delegates from this body, the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER] and the senior Senator from Oregon, made clear this authorization of $500 million had been passed by the Congress and that it undoubtedly would be followed in this session of Congress with an appropriation.

The Congress should know that there are arising in Latin America some serious doubts and some pertinent questions as to whether or not Congress is going to fulfill its obligations.

My plea today is for early consideration, in both branches of Congress of passage of the appropriation of $500 million, on the basis of which the Bogotá Act was adopted at the conference in Bogotá, Colombia, last September.

In many countries in Latin America there are very serious situations developing, and some persons have said Venezuela is one of the key Latin American countries in the great contest between freedom and totalitarianism in Latin America.

There has been sent to me, in my capacity as chairman of the subcommittee on Latin American affairs, a message which the President of Venezuela, President Betancourt, has sent to the President of the United States. This is not a confidential memorandum, but is a memorandum of full public knowledge in Venezuela, and also of knowledge in various parts of the United States. In it, the President of Venezuela, very frankly and objectively, has called to the attention of the President and of the American people, some of the problems that confront Venezuela. I ask unanimous consent that the memorandum be printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the memorandum was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TEXT OF THE MESSAGE OF ROMULO BETANCOURT, PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC OF VENEZUELA, TO HIS EXCELLENCY JOHN F. KENNEDY, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, TRANSMITTED BY CABLE TO THE EMBASSY OF VENEZUELA IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

MIRAFLORES, CARACAS,
March 23, 1961.

His Excellency JOHN F. KENNEDY,
President of the United States of America,
The White House,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT AND FRIEND: I have had an opportunity to read your address of March 13, 1961, delivered at the White House to the representatives of the Latin American governments. This affirmative message, which clears the way toward better inter-American comprehension and understanding, was delivered just 2 days after I had fulfilled my constitutional obligation to present an annual message to the Congress of the Republic of Venezuela. In that document I said clearly and sincerely that your first steps as Chief of State of the United States were an indication of a change of direction in U.S. conduct toward Latin America. I wish to transcribe for you the statements I made to the Venezuelan Parliament and nation, because they show how democratic government officials in this hemisphere are disposed to adopt a receptive, responsible attitude of optimism when the White House begins to speak a language that has not been heard since the days of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

After referring to the message your Secretary of State sent to the Congress of the United States, urging it to make a legislative pronouncement regarding Dominican sugar that would be in accord with the concrete resolutions of the sixth meeting of Consultation of Ministers of Foreign Affairs, I continued:

"This attitude of President Kennedy is one more indication that the present President of the United States and his group of assistants are on the way toward correcting the repeated mistakes made by previous American administrations. In his inaugural address President Kennedy called on the peoples of America to join an 'Alliance for Progress' and said explicitly that his country desired 'to convert good words into good deeds * * * and to assist free governments in casting off the chains of poverty.' The peoples of Latin America aspire to nothing more and to nothing less * * * The contacts I have already had with personal representatives of the present President of the United States lead me to believe that his administration will be receptive to the views which I have stated with clarifying frankness. And I can assure you that the task force chosen by the President of that country to coordinate its Latin American policy comprises men with whom I have ties of friendship and whom I know to be sincere in their desire for positive cooperation with our nations."

Some of the questions stated in my speech, which were a synthesis of anxieties noted not only in Venezuela but in other Latin American nations among whose people I have lived, are answered in your message of March 13, in which you outline 10 very concrete points to provide a basis of acts rather than promises for your "Alliance for Progress" program. The fulfillment of that plan will make it possible for this decade—unlike the last decade, which was one of frustration of Latin American hopes and deterioration of relations between the United States and the other Americas—to be a period of accelerated economic, social and cultural progress in the vast underdeveloped portion of the hemisphere, and of real understanding and friendship among the peoples and governments.

Your idea and that of your associates, that foreign contribution to the development of our economies and the improvement of our standards of living and of culture should be matched by our own sustained and firm efforts to help ourselves, is also widespread in Latin America. The time when it was possible for loans or financing to be solicited abroad for the sole benefit of governmental authorities lacking administrative ethics and of privileged minorities is coming to an end.

Honesty in the management of public funds is already a rule of conduct of many governmental authorities, and the idea is growing daily in Latin America that there should be a revolution, accomplished through agrarian reform and the extension of the economic, social, and cultural advantages of civilization to the millions of people who are today deprived of everything that makes life worth living. Such a revolution would be entirely within the bounds of law. It can be accomplished by evolutionary methods, without breaking the ties and commitments of the regional system we have established in the Organization of American States.

The stabilization of prices of our raw materials, the long-term reimbursable loans for economic development plans, and other measures mentioned in your message are requisites essential to a future solution of the problems of underdevelopment, a technical term which for easier understanding we might define as problems of poverty and misery that plague millions of Latin Americans. Together with the planning and the long-term credit, bold and speedy measures to meet economic, fiscal and social problems whose solution must be delayed and to which priority must be assigned, are imperative.

These immediate problems are found in all the countries of the hemisphere. In some of them, convalescing from prolonged tyrannies, it is necessary, for the very stability of the democratic regime faced with its obstinate enemies, to prove to the people that systems based on law, which respect human liberties, are more appropriate not only for promoting human dignity but also for seeking a solution of their crushing common problems.

I also wish especially to mention that part of your message in which you refer so explicitly to the need for all the American nations to have systems of government guaranteeing the freedoms of the people.

If the Charter of the Organization of American States, of which I had the honor to be one of the drafters at the Ninth Inter-American Conference, held in Bogotá, is correctly interpreted, only representative governments that result from free elections, respect human rights, and guarantee human freedoms can belong to our juridical regional community. To give this rule greater force, the Government of Venezuela plans to present at the forthcoming Quito Conference a draft of an additional accord specifying and requiring that only such governments may belong to the regional community.

Accept, Mr. President, the renewed assurances of my esteem and friendship.

[COMMITTEE PRINT]

APRIL 4, 1961

Committee on Banking and Currency
United States Senate

In the House of Representatives, U. S.,

March 29, 1961.

Resolved, That the bill from the Senate (S. 1) entitled "An Act to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas", do pass with the following

AMENDMENT:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:
That this Act may be cited as the "Area Redevelopment Act".

DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best interests of the United States, but that some of our communities are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment; that such unemployment and underemployment cause hardship to many individuals and their families and detract from the national welfare by wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, should help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment to take effective steps in planning and financing their economic redevelopment; that Federal assistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals in areas needing redevelopment should enable such areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diversified local economies and improved local living conditions; and that under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources rather than by merely transferring employment opportunities from one area of the United States to another.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATOR

SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that received by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Administrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") may assign.

ADVISORY POLICY BOARD

SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is created an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board (hereinafter referred to as the "Board"), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration. The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under this Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year.

(c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call together and confer with any persons, including representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and government, who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment or underemployment in the several areas designated by the Secretary as redevelopment areas.

REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas within the United States in which he determines, upon the basis of standards generally comparable with those set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2), that there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. There shall be included among the areas so designated any area—

(1) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the rate of unemployment, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in paragraph (2); and

(2) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the annual average rate of unemployment has been at least—

(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years.

The Secretary of Labor shall find the facts and provide the data to be used by the Secretary in making the determinations required by this subsection.

(b) The Secretary shall also designate as “redevelopment areas” those areas (including Indian reservations) within the United States which do not meet the requirements set forth in subsection (a) but which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are of the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent of migration out of the area, and the proportion of the population of each such area which has been receiving public assistance from the Federal Government or from the State or States in which such area is located or from any municipality therein. In making these determinations the Secretary shall be guided, but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies made, and information and data collected or compiled, by (1) departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, (2) State and local governments, (3) universities and land-grant colleges, and (4) private organizations.

(c) Upon the request of the Secretary, the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Interior, and such other heads of agencies as may be appropriate are authorized to conduct such special studies, obtain such information, and compile and furnish to the Secretary such data as the Secretary may deem necessary or proper to enable him to make the determinations provided for in subsection (b) of this section. The Secretary shall reimburse when appropriate, out of any funds appropriated to carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers for any expenditures incurred by them under this section.

(d) As used in this Act, the term "redevelopment area" refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area.

LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS

SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (which for purposes of this section shall include participations in loans) to aid in financing any project within a redevelopment area for the purchase or development of land and facilities (including, in exceptional cases, machinery and equipment) for industrial or commercial usage, including the construction of new buildings, the rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied buildings, and the alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings. Such financial assistance shall not be extended for working capital, or to assist establishments relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another.

(b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, subject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

(1) The total amount of loans (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding at any one time under this section (A) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(a) shall not exceed $100,000,000 and (B) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(b) shall not exceed $100,000,000.

(2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants, both private and public (including Indian tribes), approved for such assistance by the State (or any agency or instrumentality thereof concerned with problems of economic development) in which the project to be financed is or will be located.

(3) The project for which financial assistance is sought must be reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located.

(4) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms.

(5) The Secretary shall not make any loan without a participation unless he determines that the loan cannot be made on a participation basis.

(6) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there is a reasonable assurance of repayment.

(7) Subject to section 12(5) of this Act, no loan, including renewals or extension thereof, may be made hereunder for a period exceeding twenty-five years and no evidences of indebtedness maturing more than twenty-five years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor.

(8) Loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(d)(1) of this Act, plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum to cover administrative expenses and to provide for losses on loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section.

(9) Such assistance shall not exceed 65 per centum of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or developing land and facilities (including, in exceptional cases, machinery and equipment), and of constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building or buildings of the particular project, and shall, among others, be on the condition that—

(A) other funds are available in an amount which, together with the assistance provided hereunder, shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

(B) not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by a community or area organization which is non-governmental in character, as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance;

(C) in extending financial assistance under this section with respect to a redevelopment area, the Secretary shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such assistance is extended shall be supplied by non-governmental sources as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance; and

(D) to the extent the Secretary finds such action necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular project by other lenders and investors, and except as otherwise provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), any Federal financial assistance extended under this section may be repayable only after other loans made in connection with such project have been repaid in full, and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other loans made in connection with the same project.

(10) No such assistance shall be extended unless there shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an overall program for the economic development of the area and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the State or local political subdivision in which the project would be located.

LOANS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 7. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public non-profit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase or development of land for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

(2) the funds requested for such project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms;

(3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of other available funds for such project are adequate to insure the completion thereof;

(4) there is a reasonable expectation of repayment;
and

(5) such area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10) and the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program.

(b) Subject to section 12(5), the maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than forty years after the date such loan is made. Any such loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(d)(2) of this Act, plus one-quarter of 1 per centum per annum.

(c) The total amount of loans outstanding at any one time under this section shall not exceed $100,000,000.

(d) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it is prepared to undertake.

GRANTS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 8. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make grants for land acquisition or development for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

(2) the entity requesting the grant proposes to contribute to the cost of the project for which such grant is requested in proportion to its ability so to contribute;

(3) the project for which a grant is requested will fulfill a pressing need of the area, or part thereof, in which it is, or will be, located, and there is little probability that such project can be undertaken without the assistance of a grant under this section; and

(4) the area for which a project is to be undertaken has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10), and such project is consistent with such program.

The amount of any grant under this section for any such project shall not exceed 65 per centum of the difference between the funds which can be practicably obtained from loans (including a loan under section 7 of this Act) and from other Federal sources for such project, and the amount which is necessary to insure the completion thereof.

(b) The Secretary shall by regulation provide for the supervision of projects with respect to which grants are made under this section so as to insure that Federal funds are not wasted or dissipated.

(c) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it is prepared to undertake.

(d) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $75,000,000 for the purpose of making grants under this section.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT FUND

SEC. 9. (a) There is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States an area redevelopment fund (hereinafter referred to as the "fund"), which shall be available to the Secretary for the purpose of extending financial assistance under sections 6 and 7 and for the payment of all obligations and expenditures arising therefrom.

(b) When requested by the Secretary, advances shall be made to the fund from the appropriations made therefor. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of making advances to the fund, without fiscal year limitation, an amount not exceeding $300,000,000.

(c) Receipts arising from the programs of assistance under sections 6 and 7 shall be credited to the fund. Any moneys in the fund determined by the Secretary to be in excess of current needs shall be credited to the appropriation from which advanced to be held for future advances to the fund.

(d) There shall be paid into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury at the close of each fiscal year—

(1) interest, on advances made to the fund for use in extending financial assistance under section 6, at rates which shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury at the time the advances or commitments for advances are made after taking into consideration the current average market yields of outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to loans made by the Secretary under section 6; and

(2) interest, on advances made to the fund for use in extending financial assistance under section 7, at rates which shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury at the time the advances or commitments for advances are made but which shall not be more than the higher of (A) $2\frac{1}{2}$ per centum per annum or (B) the average annual interest rate on all interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt as computed at the end of the fiscal year next preceding the making of such advances or commitments and adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum.

(e) The fund shall contribute to the civil service retirement and disability fund a sum as provided by section 4(a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act (5 U.S.C. 2254(a)), except that such sum shall be determined by applying to the total basic salaries (as defined in that Act) paid to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act and covered by that Act the per centum rate determined annually by the Civil Service Commission to be the excess of the total normal cost per centum rate of the civil service retirement system over the employee deduction rate specified in such section 4(a). The fund shall also pay into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts that portion of the cost of administration of the civil service retirement and disability fund attributable to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act, as determined by the Civil Service Commission.

(f) In the performance of and with respect to the functions, powers, and duties vested in him by sections 6 and 7 of this Act, the Secretary shall—

(1) prepare annually and submit a budget program in accordance with the provisions of sections 102, 103, and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended; and

(2) determine the character of and the necessity for obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to provisions of law specifically applicable to Government corporations.

INFORMATION

SEC. 10. The Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas. The Secretary shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

SEC. 11. In carrying out his duties under this Act the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment (1) to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under this Act, and (2) to other areas which he finds have substantial need for such assistance. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secretary through members of his staff or through the employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations, or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such purposes. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purposes of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000 annually.

(5) further extend the maturity of or renew any loan made or evidence of indebtedness purchased under this Act, beyond the periods stated in such loan or evidence of indebtedness or in this Act, for additional periods not to exceed ten years, if such extension or renewal will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loan or evidence of indebtedness;

(6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, modernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any real or personal property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by, him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (41 U.S.C. 5), shall not apply to any contract of hazard insurance or to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on account of property obtained by the Secretary as a result of loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act if the premium therefor or the amount thereof does not exceed $1,000. (10) to such an extent as he finds necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act, procure the temporary (not in excess of six months) service of experts or consultants or organizations thereof, including stenographic reporting services, by contract or appointment, and in such cases such service shall be without regard to the civil service and classification laws, and, except in the case of stenographic reporting services by organizations, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5); any individual so employed

Nothing herein shall be construed to except the activities under this Act from the application of sections 507(b) and 2679 of title 28, United States Code, and of section 367 of the Revised Statutes (5 U.S.C. 316); and

(12) establish such rules, regulations, and procedures as he may deem appropriate in carrying out the provisions of this Act.

TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

SEC. 13. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall be granted under this Act with respect to such area and, for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secretary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment area. The Secretary shall keep the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

URBAN RENEWAL

SEC. 14. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (in this section referred to as a ‘municipi-pality') is situated in an area designated under section 5 of the Area Redevelopment Act as a redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economy, the Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

“(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e) of this section, the Administrator may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirement or limitations of section 110(c) that the project area be predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses under the urban renewal plan, and without regard to any of the limitations of that section on the undertaking of projects for predominantly nonresidential uses.

“(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, a contract for financial assistance under this section may include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the project area designated under the urban renewal plan for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or nonprofit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to such public agency or corporation under this section shall be made at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And provided further, That only the purchaser from or lessees of such public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obligations relating to the commencement of improvements imposed under section 105(b) hereof.

“(d) Following the execution of any contract for financial assistance under this section with respect to any project, the Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him under this section for the completion of such projects, notwithstanding any determination made after the execution of such contract that the area in which the project is located is no longer a redevelopment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

“(e) Not more than 10 per centum of the funds authorized for capital grants under section 103 after the date of the enactment of the Area Redevelopment Act shall be used for the purpose of providing financial assistance under this section. Amounts used for such purpose shall not be taken into account for the purpose of the limitation contained in the second proviso of the fifth sentence of section 110(c).”

SEC. 15. Paragraph (3) of section 701(a) of the Housing Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after "counties which" the following: "(A) are situated in areas designated by the Secretary of Commerce under section 5(a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as redevelopment areas or (B)".

OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING

SEC. 16. (a) The Secretary of Labor is authorized, upon request and whenever he determines such studies are needed, to undertake, or to provide assistance to others for, studies of the size, characteristics, skills, adaptability, occupational potentialities, and related aspects of the labor force of any redevelopment area.

(b) When a redevelopment area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b) (10), the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the Secretary and the Secretary of Agriculture, shall determine the occupational training or retraining needs of unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in the redevelopment area. The Secretary of Labor shall notify the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare of the occupational training or retraining requirements of the area, and shall provide for the orderly selection and referral of those unemployed or underemployed individuals residing in the area who can reasonably be expected to obtain employment as a result of the skill they will acquire in the training which is to be made available. The Secretary of Labor shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and with existing State and local agencies and officials in charge of existing programs relating to vocational training and retraining for the purpose of assuring that the facilities and services of such agencies are made fully available to such individuals.

(c) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that additional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet the occupational training or retraining needs of such individuals, he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall provide assistance, including financial assistance when necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational agency in the provision of such additional facilities or services. If the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare finds that the State vocational educational agency is unable to provide the facilities and services needed, he may, after consultation with such agency, provide for the same by agreement or contract with public or private educational institutions.

(d) The Secretary of Labor shall arrange to provide any necessary assistance for setting up apprenticeships, and to promote journeyman and other on-the-job training.

(f) In providing assistance under this section with respect to unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in redevelopment areas, the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall give consideration to the special needs of individuals who are agricultural workers or are engaged in other seasonal occupations and who require occupational training in order to qualify them to engage in supplementary employment during the off season and during other periods of reduced activity in the field of their regular or primary occupations.

RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

SEC. 17. (a) The Secretary of Labor in consultation with the Secretary and the Secretary of Agriculture may, on behalf of the United States, enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment areas are located, under which the Secretary of Labor shall make payments to such States either in advance or by way of reimbursement for the purpose of enabling such States, as agents of the United States, to make weekly retraining payments to unemployed or underemployed individuals residing within such redevelopment areas who are certified by the Secretary of Labor to be undergoing occupational training or retraining under section 16 of this Act. Such payments shall be made for a period not exceeding sixteen weeks, and the amount of any such payment for any week shall not exceed the amount of the average weekly unemployment compensation payment (including allowances for dependents) payable for a week of total unemployment in the State making such payments.

(b) No weekly retraining payment shall be made to any person otherwise eligible who, with respect to the week for which such payment would be made, has received or is seeking unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or any other Federal or any State unemployment compensation law, but if the appropriate State or Federal agency finally determines that a person denied benefits for any week because of this subsection was not entitled to unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or such Federal or State law with respect to such week, this subsection shall not apply with respect to such week.

(c) Any agreement under this section may contain provisions (including, so far as may be appropriate, provisions authorized or made applicable with respect to agreements concluded by the Secretary of Labor pursuant to title XV of the Social Security Act) as will promote effective administration, protect the United States against loss, and insure the proper application of payments made to the State under such agreement. Except as may be provided in such agreements, or in the rules and regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, determinations by any duly designated officer or agency as to the eligibility of individuals for weekly retraining payments under this section shall be final and conclusive for any purposes and not subject to review by any court or any other officer.

(d) The Secretary of Labor and the Secretary shall jointly prescribe such rules and regulations as they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $10,000,000 annually, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

All laborers and mechanics employed by contractors or subcontractors on projects assisted by the Secretary under this Act and undertaken by public applicants shall be paid wages at rates not less than those prevailing on similar construction in the locality as determined by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act, as amended (40 U.S.C. 276a—276a-5), and every such employee shall receive compensation at a rate not less than one and one-half times his basic rate of pay for all hours worked in any workweek in excess of eight hours in any workday or forty hours in the workweek, as the case may be. (a) To the fullest extent practicable in carrying out the provisions of this Act the Secretary shall use the available services and facilities of other agencies and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, but only with their consent and on a reimbursable basis. The foregoing requirement shall be implemented by the Secretary in such a manner as to avoid the duplication of existing staffs and facilities in any agency or instrumentality of the Federal Government. The Secretary is authorized to delegate to the heads of other departments and agencies of the Federal Government any of the Secretary's functions, powers, and duties under this Act as he may deem appropriate, and to authorize the redelegation of such functions, powers, and duties by the heads of such departments and agencies.

(b) Departments and agencies of the Federal Government shall exercise their powers, duties, and functions in such manner as will assist in carrying out the objectives of this Act. This Act shall be supplemental to any existing authority, and nothing herein shall be deemed to be restrictive of any existing powers, duties, and functions of any other department or agency of the Federal Government.

(a) Each recipient of assistance under section 6, 7, or 8 of this Act shall keep such records as the Secretary shall prescribe, including records which fully disclose the amount and the disposition by such recipient of the proceeds of such assistance, the total cost of the project or undertaking in connection with which such assistance is given or used, and the amount and nature of that portion of the cost of the project or undertaking supplied by other sources, and such other records as will facilitate an effective audit.

(b) The Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States, or any of their duly authorized representatives, shall have access for the purpose of audit and examination to any books, documents, papers, and records of the recipient that are pertinent to assistance received under section 6, 7, or 8 of this Act.

LOANS TO STATE AND LOCAL DEVELOPMENT COMPANIES

SEC. 26. Section 502 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 is amended by striking out paragraph (6).

STUDY BY SECRETARY

SEC. 27. Whenever the Department of Defense announces plans to deactivate or is in the process of deactivating any permanent military installation or major unit thereof and such installation is situated in an area in which the rate of unemployment is 6 per centum or more, the Secretary shall, upon the request of the Governor or Governors of the state or states in which the area is located, institute a study to determine the economic effects of the action which has been or is to be taken. In determining the economic effects of such action, the Secretary shall, among other relevant matters, consider and make findings with respect to the approximate amount of money which has been, or may reasonably be expected to be, saved by any department or agency of the Government as a result of such action, compared with—

(1) the approximate costs or losses which have been, or may reasonably be expected to be, incurred by other departments or agencies of the Government, or by state and local governmental units, as a result of such action;

(2) the approximate losses which have been, or may reasonably be expected to be, incurred by private interests as a result of such action in connection with any facilities which they have provided to serve the needs of any such installation and which would otherwise have to be provided in whole or in part by the Government;

(3) the approximate cost to the Government of relocating any such installation in the event that such installation has been, or will be, relocated; and

(4) the approximate cost to the Government of reactivating, in a national emergency or other contingency, any such installation with respect to which any such action is proposed to be taken.

Any such study shall be conducted as expeditiously as practicable, and the findings resulting therefrom shall be transmitted by the Secretary to the Secretary of Defense and to the Congress.

RESEARCH

SEC. 28. To assist in the long-range accomplishment of the purposes of this Act, the Secretary shall establish and conduct a continuing program of study and research designed to assist in determining the causes of unemployment, underemployment, underdevelopment, and chronic depression in the various areas of the Nation and in the Nation as a whole and in the formulation and implementation of national, State, and local programs which will raise income levels and otherwise produce solutions of the problems resulting from these conditions. The Secretary shall include in his annual report under section 22 a detailed statement concerning the study and research conducted under this section together with his findings resulting therefrom and his recommendations for legislative and other action.

APPLICATION OF ACT

SEC. 29. As used in this Act, the terms "State", "States", and "United States" include the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

House of Representatives

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 12, 1961

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D.D., offered the following prayer:

From one of the greatest of all the penitential psalms, Psalm 51: 10: Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me.

Eternal God, in this moment of prayer, may our spirit be brought into tune with Thy Spirit and receive the needed strength and wisdom for the duties and demands of this new day.

We humbly confess that again and again we break faith with Thee and our own higher and better self by living on those lower levels to which the secular world is continually seeking to draw us.

Create within our hearts a nobler and more magnanimous spirit and endow our minds with a clear vision of that blessed day when righteousness and justice shall rule the thoughts and ways of men and nations.

Grant that some finer essence of good will and love may temper the soul of all mankind and show us how we may have a larger part in sustaining and strengthening the moral and spiritual fiber of the human race.

Hear us in Christ's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas, with House amendments thereto, insist on the House amendments and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. SPENCE, PATMAN, RAINS, MULTER, KILBURN, McDONOUGH, and WIDNALL.

COMMITTEE ON RULES

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Rules have until midnight tonight to file certain reports.

PROGRAM FOR THE BALANCE OF THE WEEK

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. ARENDS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and, of course, I shall not object—I wonder if the majority leader would be good enough to advise us as to any program for the balance of the week?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, if the Committee on Rules reports out a rule on the bill for direct loans to veterans, that will be programed for tomorrow.

Also, for tomorrow we have Pan American Day. I have no information of any other legislation for the remainder of the week. I should like to make a slight reservation in case anything unexpected should arise.

Mr. ARENDS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman; and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

There was no objection.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS, HOUSE ADMINISTRATION COMMITTEE

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Elections of the Committee on House Administration have permission to sit during general debate today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTS TO "BROKER" TYPE CONTRACTORS

(Mr. SHEPPARD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. Speaker, the question of the award of military construction contracts to broker type contractors has been discussed on this floor on several occasions. It is well known that this type of contractor has been a plague to the military construction program. In this connection I would like to call to the attention of the House a recent directive of the Department of Defense which is a step in the right direction toward controlling this problem. I am inserting this directive in the Record at this point and urge each of you to give it your consideration.

The military construction program has been plagued for some time by the award of contracts to so-called broker contractors. This type of contractor is awarded a project and does little if any of the work with his own forces but performs most of it by subcontracting. He all too frequently seeks to make his profit by chiseling on the Government and subcontractors wherever possible. You will recall that this was discussed to some extent during the recent debate on the military construction authorization bill. The Committee on Appropriations has been aware of this problem for some time and has been working with the Department of Defense in both the Kennedy and Eisenhower administrations, to find a solution to the problem. I am happy to call to the attention of the House certain correspondence I received from the Assistant Secretary of Defense, Installations and Logistics, including a memorandum for the several services outlining action to be taken in this respect. Many of us, perhaps, would like to see more drastic action taken, but certainly this regulation is a step in the right direction and the Assistant Secretary and his staff are to be congratulated for putting it into effect. Briefly, this amendment to the Armed Services Procurement Regulations provides that the prime contractor on any construction contract shall perform with his own organization work equivalent to at least 20 percent of the total amount of the work to be performed under the contract. In the case of Armed Forces housing contracts this percentage is changed to 15 percent. It should be noted that the required percentage is the minimum amount and the actual percentage shall be the maximum consistent with the nature of the work. The contractors are also required in submitting a bid to submit a description of the work which he will perform with his own organization and the estimated cost thereof. I am inserting in the Record at this point the correspondence which has been supplied me on this matter:

APRIL 6, 1961.

HON. HARRY SHEPPARD,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Military Construction, Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: We are pleased to send you the attached copies of a memorandum, dated April 1, 1961, instituting a Department-of-Defense-wide policy with regard to performance of work with own organization by construction contractors.

Sincerely yours,

THOMAS D. MORRIS,
Assistant Secretary of Defense,
Installations and Logistics.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF DEFENSE,
Washington, D.C. April 1, 1961.

Memorandum for the Assistant Secretary of the Army (Logistics), Assistant Secretary of the Navy (Installations and Logistics), Assistant Secretary of the Air Force (Materiel), Special Assistant for Installations, Office of the Secretary of the Air Force.

Subject: Construction contracts performance and supervision of work.

Effective April 30, 1961, the clause set forth in the attachment shall be included in all construction contracts, including contracts made under the armed services housing program, estimated to exceed $1 million. In addition, this clause may be included in any other construction contract as may be deemed appropriate. Use of the subject clause is authorized upon receipt of this memorandum. Outstanding invitations for bids are exempt from this requirement provided resulting contracts are awarded before May 30, 1961.

The purpose of the subject clause is to assure adequate interest in, and supervision of construction work by prime contractors. However, it is also essential that the need be considered, on a case-by-case basis, for requiring adequate, specifically described supervision.

If a construction contract is to include the attached clause, invitations for bids or requests for proposals shall contain a requirement that each bidder or offeror submit with his bid a description of the work which the contractor will perform with his own organization (e.g., earthwork, paving, brickwork, or roofing), the percentage of the total work this represents, and the estimated cost thereof.

Necessary steps have been taken to coordinate action required by this memorandum with the Federal Housing Commissioner.

Appropriate revision will be made to include these instructions in the Armed Services Procurement Regulations.

Please send me a copy of instructions carrying out the requirements of this memorandum within 15 days.

THOMAS D. MORRIS,
Assistant Secretary of Defense,
Installations and Logistics.

CONTRACT CLAUSE

PERFORMANCE OF WORK BY CONTRACTOR (MARCH 1961)

The contractor shall perform on the site, and with his own organization, work equivalent to at least — percent of the total amount of the work to be performed under the contract. If during the progress of the work hereunder, the contractor requests a reduction in such percentage, and the contracting officer determines that it would be to the Government's advantage, the percentage of the work required to be performed by the contractor may be reduced; provided written approval of such reduction is obtained by the contractor from the contracting officer.

* NOTE.—The required percentage shall be the maximum consistent with customary or necessary specialty subcontracting, complexity and magnitude of the work, and shall not, under any circumstances, be less than 20 percent (15 percent in Armed Forces housing contracts).

CONSIDERATION OF CONSENT CALENDAR BILLS

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert at this point in the RECORD a statement of the procedure which the members of the majority and minority objectors committees on the Consent Calendar will follow in the consideration of bills on the Consent Calendar.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

The statement referred to follows:

On February 7 and on March 2, respectively, the majority and minority floor leaders appointed their respective personnel of the objectors committees, Mr. McCORMACK, the gentleman from Massachusetts, appointing three members of his party and Mr. HALLECK, the gentleman from Indiana, appointing three members of his party. The objectors committees are unofficial committees of the House of Representatives, existing at the request and at the pleasure of the respective floor leaders of the two parties who, in order to facilitate the proper screening of legislation which may be placed on the Consent Calendar, designate Members of each side of the aisle charged with the specific responsibility of seeing to it that legislation passing by such procedure is in the interest of good government. The rule which is applicable to Consent Calendar procedure is rule 746 of the House Rules and Manual, found on pages 373, 374, and 375 of the Rules of the House of Representatives. The operation of such procedure is described on pages 95, 134, 135, 136, 173, and 327 of Cannon's Procedures in the House of Representatives.

For several sessions now objectors on both sides of the aisle have followed certain rules for consideration of Consent Calendar bills which they have made known to the Members at the beginning of a session. These rules are not publicized at this time to establish hard-and-fast procedures but rather to advise the Members of the House as to the manner in which the committee plans to operate throughout the 87th Congress. The members of the committees feel that generally no legislation should pass by unanimous consent which involves an aggregate expenditure of more than $1 million; second, that no bill which changes national policy or international policy should be permitted to pass on the Consent Calendar but rather should be afforded the opportunity of open and extended debate; third, that any bill which appears on the Consent Calendar, even though it does not change national or international policy, or does not call for an expenditure of more than $1 million, should not be approved without the membership being fully informed of its contents, providing it is a measure that would apply to the districts of a majority of the Members of the House of Representatives, in which case the minimum amount of consideration that should be given such a bill would be clearance by the leadership of both parties being brought before the House on the Consent Calendar—it has been the policy of the objectors on the Consent Calendar heretofore to put such a bill over without prejudice one or more times to give an opportunity to the Members to become fully informed as to the contents of such a bill, and the Consent Calendar objectors for the 87th Congress wish to follow like procedure; fourth, that if a bill has been placed on the Consent Calendar and the members of the committee having jurisdiction over the legislation show that it has not been cleared by the Bureau of the Budget, by the respective departments affected by such legislation, or that such reports from the committee or from the department show that the legislation is not in accord with the President's program, it should not pass on the Consent Calendar but that the chairman of the House committee having jurisdiction over the legislation should either call it up under suspension of the rules with the permission of the Speaker or should go to the Rules Committee for a rule for such legislation. While the members of the objectors' committees feel that a report from the Bureau of the Budget is necessary before a bill should be placed upon the Consent Calendar, they do not wish to take the position that the report from the Bureau of the Budget must necessarily show the approval of such legislation by the Bureau. However, if such approval is not shown, then in the consideration of the legislation, even if considered on the Consent Calendar, the chairman reporting the bill, or the sponsor of the bill, should be willing to accept the responsibility of stating to the Members the action of the Bureau of the Budget and the reasons for such action.

The members of the Consent Calendar objectors committee also feel it fair to state to the membership that it is not their purpose to obstruct legislation or to object to bills or pass them over without prejudice because of any personal objection to said bill or bills by any one member or all of the members of the Consent Calendar objectors committee, but rather that their real purpose, in addition to expediting legislation, is to protect the membership against having bills passed by unanimous consent which, in the opinion of the objectors any Member of the House might have objection to. The members of the Consent Calendar objectors committee earnestly request that the chairman of the standing committees of the House having the responsibility for bringing legislation before the House take into consideration the contents of this statement before placing bills on the Consent Calendar. While it is not absolutely necessary that the sponsors of bills appearing on the Consent Calendar contact the various members of the Consent Calendar objectors committee, nevertheless, in the interest of saving time and avoiding the possibility of having bills laid over unnecessarily, it is good practice to do so; and the objectors welcome the continuance of the procedure of getting in touch with them at least 24 hours before the legislation is called up under the regular Consent Calendar procedure. In many instances such thoughtfulness on the part of the sponsors will clear away questions which the objectors have and consequently will make for the expeditious handling of legislation.

WAYNE N. ASPINALL,
JOHN J. MCFALL,
EDWARD P. BOLAND,
Majority Objectors.
GERALD R. FORD, Jr.,
THOMAS M. PELLY,
PHIL WEAVER,
Minority Objectors.

IMPORTS FROM CUBA

(Mr. ROGERS of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I have introduced today a resolution calling on the President to halt all imports into this country from Cuba. This resolution will express to the President the will of the Congress that he act under the existing laws of the United States to stop the Cuban imports which continue to flow into this country. I, along with other Members of Congress, have urged for more than 1 year that the State Department take action on Cuban imports and have received with each request the answer that the matter is "under consideration." Our State Department has just this month issued a white paper entitled "Cuba," which stated in part:

The present situation in Cuba confronts the Western Hemisphere and the inter-American system with a grave and urgent challenge * * * the challenge results from the fact that the leaders of the revolutionary regime betrayed their own revolution, delivered that revolution into the hands of powers alien to the hemisphere, and transformed it into an instrument employed with calculated effect to suppress the rekindled hopes of the Cuban people for democracy and to intervene in the internal affairs of other American Republics * * * it is the considered judgment of the Government of the United States of America that the Castro regime in Cuba offers a clear and present danger to the authentic and autonomous revolution of the Americas—to the whole hope of spreading political liberty, economic

A provision that in making such designation the Secretary shall endeavor to distribute projects widely among the several States, so far as is feasible and proper, in order that actual experience with the program may be had in as many States and areas and under as many different circumstances as possible." ***

"FINANCING OF LOAN PROGRAMS

"The House amendment authorized appropriations to provide funds for loans under sections 6 and 7 of the bill. The Senate bill authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to obtain such funds through public debt transactions under the Second Liberty Bond Act. The conference substitute follows the provisions of the Senate bill in this respect but adopts the House provisions with respect to (1) the establishment of one area redevelopment fund (rather than three revolving funds as in the Senate bill), and (2) the requirement that the fund contribute to the civil service retirement and disability fund with respect to employees performing activities under sections 6 and 7." ***

"USE OF OTHER AGENCIES BY DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

"The conference substitute follows the language of the House bill with respect to delegation of authority by the Secretary of Commerce to other Federal agencies. The Secretary of Commerce has testified before the committees of both the House and the Senate that he will delegate to the Department of Agriculture major responsibility for assistance to be rendered in rural redevelopment areas, as designated under section 5(b) of the act, and the Secretary of Agriculture has testified to his willingness to accept such responsibility. It is the understanding of the conferees that the Department of Agriculture has services and facilities available of requisite competence and experience for effectively carrying out such delegation. It is, therefore, the expectation of the conferees that this delegation to the Department of Agriculture will be made promptly upon enactment of the bill." ***

"TERMINATION OF PROGRAM

"The conference substitute contains a provision that was in the Senate bill but not in the House amendment, terminating the program on June 30, 1965. It also provides for liquidation of the program after that date by the Secretary of the Treasury. The carrying out of contracts, commitments, and other obligations theretofore entered into under the program would not be affected by its termination."

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

APRIL 20, 1961.—Ordered to be printed

Mr. SPENCE, from the committee of conference, submitted the following

CONFERENCE REPORT

[To accompany S. 1]

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

That this Act may be cited as the "Area Redevelopment Act".

DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best interests of the United States, but that some of our communities are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment; that such unemployment and underemployment cause hardship to many individuals and their families and detract from the national welfare by wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, should help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment to take effective steps in planning and financing their economic redevelopment; that Federal assistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals in areas needing redevelopment should enable such areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diversified local economies and improved local living conditions; and that under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources rather than by merely transferring jobs from one area of the United States to another.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATOR

SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that received by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Administrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") may assign.

ADVISORY POLICY BOARD

SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is created an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board (hereinafter referred to as the "Board"), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration. The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under this Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year.

(c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call together and confer with any persons, including representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and government, who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment or underemployment in the several areas designated by the Secretary as redevelopment areas.

REDEVELOPEMENT AREAS

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas within the United States in which he determines, upon the basis of standards generally comparable with those set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2), that there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. There shall be included among the areas so designated any area—

(1) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the rate of unemployment, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in paragraph (2); and

(2) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the annual average rate of unemployment has been at least —

(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years.

The Secretary of Labor shall find the facts and provide the data to be used by the Secretary in making the determinations required by this subsection.

(b) The Secretary shall also designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas (including Indian reservations) within the United States which do not meet the requirements set forth in subsection (a) but which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection and before extending any financial assistance as the result of designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall, by regulation, prescribe detailed standards upon which the designations under this subsection shall be based. In the formulation of such standards the Secretary shall consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are of the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States, the extent to which "rural development" projects have previously been located in any such area under programs administered by the Department of Agriculture, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent of migration out of the area, and the proportion of the population of each such area which has been receiving public assistance from the Federal Government or from the State or States in which such area is located or from any municipality therein. In making the designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall endeavor to distribute the projects widely among the several States, so far as is feasible and proper, in order that actual experience with this program may be had in as many States and in as many areas and under as many different circumstances as possible. In making these determinations the Secretary shall be guided, but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies made, and information and data collected or compiled, by (1) departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, (2) State and local governments, (3) universities and land-grant colleges, and (4) private organizations.

(c) Upon the request of the Secretary, the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Interior, and such other heads of agencies as may be appropriate are authorized to conduct such special studies, obtain such information, and compile and furnish to the Secretary such data as the Secretary may deem necessary or proper to enable him to make the determinations provided for in subsection (b) of this section. The Secretary shall reimburse when appropriate, out of any funds appropriated to carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers for any expenditures incurred by them under this section.

(d) As used in this Act, the term "redevelopment area" refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area.

LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS

SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (which for purposes of this section shall include participations in loans) to aid in financing any project within a redevelopment area for the purchase or development of land and facilities (including, in cases of demonstrated need, machinery and equipment) for industrial or commercial usage, including the construction of new buildings, the rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied buildings, and the alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings. Such financial assistance shall not be extended (1) for working capital, or (2) to assist establishments relocating from one area to another. The limitation set forth in clause (2) shall not be construed to prohibit assistance for the expansion of an existing business entity through the establishment of a new branch, affiliate, or subsidiary of such entity if the Secretary finds that the establishment of such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary will not result in an increase in unemployment in the area of original location or in any other area where such entity conducts business operations, unless the Secretary has reason to believe that such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary is being established with the intention of closing down the operations of the existing business entity in the area of its original location or in any other area where it conducts such operations.

(b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, subject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

(1) The total amount of loans (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding at any one time under this section (A) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(a) shall not exceed $100,000,000 and (B) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(b) shall not exceed $100,000,000.

(2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants, both private and public (including Indian tribes), which have been approved for such assistance by an agency or instrumentality of the State or political subdivision thereof in which the project to be financed is located, and which agency or instrumentality is directly concerned with problems of economic development in such State or subdivision.

(3) The project for which financial assistance is sought must be reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located.

(4) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms.

(5) The Secretary shall not make any loan without a participation unless he determines that the loan cannot be made on a participation basis.

(6) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there is a reasonable assurance of repayment.

(7) Subject to section 12(5) of this Act, no loan, including renewals or extension thereof, may be made hereunder for a period exceeding twenty-five years and no evidences of indebtedness maturing more than twenty-five years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor.

(8) Loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(a) of this Act, plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum to cover administrative expenses and to provide for losses on loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section.

(9) Such assistance shall not exceed 65 per centum of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or developing land and facilities (including, in cases of demonstrated need, machinery and equipment), and of constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building or buildings of the particular project, and shall, among others, be on the condition that—

(A) other funds are available in an amount which, together with the assistance provided hereunder, shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

(B) not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by an Indian tribe or a community or area organization which is nongovernmental in character, as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance;

(C) in extending financial assistance under this section with respect to a redevelopment area, the Secretary shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such assistance is extended shall be supplied by nongovernmental sources as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance; and

(D) to the extent the Secretary finds such action necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular project by other lenders and investors, and except as otherwise provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), any Federal financial assistance extended under this section may be repayable only after other loans made in connection with such project have been repaid in full, and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other loans made in connection with the same project.

(10) No such assistance shall be extended unless there shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an overall program for the economic development of the area and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the State or local political subdivision in which the project would be located.

LOANS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 7. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase or development of land for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

(2) the funds requested for such project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms;

(3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of other available funds for such project are adequate to insure the completion thereof;

(4) there is a reasonable expectation of repayment; and

(5) such area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10) and the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program.

(b) Subject to section 12(5), the maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than forty years after the date such loan is made. Any such loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(a) of this Act, plus one-quarter of 1 per centum per annum.

(c) The total amount of loans outstanding at any one time under this section shall not exceed $100,000,000.

(d) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it agrees to undertake.

GRANTS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 8. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make grants for land acquisition or development for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

(2) the entity requesting the grant proposes to contribute to the cost of the project for which such grant is requested in proportion to its ability so to contribute;

(3) the project for which a grant is requested will fulfill a pressing need of the area, or part thereof, in which it is, or will be, located, and there is little probability that such project can be undertaken without the assistance of a grant under this section; and

(4) the area for which a project is to be undertaken has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10) and such project is consistent with such program.

The amount of any grant under this section for any such project shall not exceed the difference between the funds which can be practicably obtained from other sources (including a loan under section 7 of this Act) for such project, and the amount which is necessary to insure the completion thereof.

(b) The Secretary shall by regulation provide for the supervision of projects with respect to which grants are made under this section so as to insure that Federal funds are not wasted or dissipated.

(c) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it agrees to undertake.

(d) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $75,000,000 for the purpose of making grants under this section.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT FUND

SEC. 9. (a) To obtain funds for the purpose of extending financial assistance under sections 6 and 7, the Secretary may, with the approval of the President, issue and have outstanding at any one time notes and obligations for purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury in an amount not to exceed \$300,000,000. Such notes or other obligations shall be in such forms and denominations, have such maturities, and be subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds for financial assistance under section 6 shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, but such rate shall not be greater than the current average yields on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturities as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of such notes or other obligations. Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds for financial assistance under section 7 shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury which shall be not more than the higher of (1) $2\frac{1}{2}$ per centum per annum, or (2) the average annual interest rate on all interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt as computed at the end of the fiscal year next preceding the issuance by the Secretary and adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase any notes and other obligations issued under this section and for such purpose is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as amended, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under such Act are extended to include any purchase of such notes and other obligations. The Secretary of the Treasury may at any time sell any of the notes or other obligations acquired by him under this section. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such notes or other obligations shall be treated in every respect as public debt transactions of the United States.

(b) Funds obtained by the Secretary under subsection (a) shall be deposited in an area redevelopment fund (hereinafter referred to as the "fund"), which is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States, and which shall be available to the Secretary for the purpose of extending financial assistance under sections 6 and 7 and for the payment of all obligations and expenditures arising therefrom. Receipts arising from the programs of assistance under sections 6 and 7 shall be credited to the fund. Any moneys in the fund determined by the Secretary to be in excess of current needs shall be paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(c) The fund shall contribute to the civil service retirement and disability fund a sum as provided by section 4(a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act (5 U.S.C. 2254(a)), except that such sum shall be determined by applying to the total basic salaries (as defined in that Act) paid to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act and covered by that Act the per centum rate determined annually by the Civil Service Commission to be the excess of the total normal cost per centum rate of the civil service retirement system over the employee deduction rate specified in such section 4(a). The fund shall also pay into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts that portion of the cost of administration of the civil service retirement and disability fund attributable to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act, as determined by the Civil Service Commission.

(d) In the performance of and with respect to the functions, powers, and duties vested in him by sections 6 and 7 of this Act, the Secretary shall—

(1) prepare annually and submit a budget program in accordance with the provisions of sections 102, 103, and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended; and

(2) determine the character of and the necessity for obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to provisions of law specifically applicable to Government corporations.

INFORMATION

SEC. 10. The Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas. The Secretary shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

SEC. 11. In carrying out his duties under this Act the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment (1) to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under this Act, and (2) to other areas which he finds have substantial need for such assistance. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secretary through members of his staff or through the employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations, or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such purposes. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purposes of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000 annually.

POWERS OF SECRETARY

SEC. 12. In performing his duties under this Act, the Secretary is authorized to—

- (1) adopt, alter, and use a seal, which shall be judicially noticed;*
- (2) hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, and take such testimony, as he may deem advisable;*
- (3) request directly from any executive department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, independent establishment, or instrumentality information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics needed to carry out the purposes of this Act; and each department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, establishment, or instrumentality is authorized to furnish such information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics directly to the Secretary;*
- (4) under regulations prescribed by him, assign or sell at public or private sale, or otherwise dispose of for cash or credit, in his discretion and upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any evidence of debt, contract, claim, personal property, or security assigned to or held by him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebted-* ness purchased under this Act, and collect or compromise all obligations assigned to or held by him in connection with such loans or evidences of indebtedness until such time as such obligations may be referred to the Attorney General for suit or collection;

(5) further extend the maturity of or renew any loan made or evidence of indebtedness purchased under this Act, beyond the periods stated in such loan or evidence of indebtedness or in this Act, for additional periods not to exceed ten years, if such extension or renewal will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loan or evidence of indebtedness;

(6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, modernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any real or personal property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by, him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

(7) pursue to final collection, by way of compromise or other administrative action, prior to reference to the Attorney General, all claims against third parties assigned to him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act. This shall include authority to obtain deficiency judgments or otherwise in the case of mortgages assigned to the Secretary. Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (41 U.S.C. 5), shall not apply to any contract of hazard insurance or to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on account of property obtained by the Secretary as a result of loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act if the premium therefor or the amount thereof does not exceed $1,000. The power to convey and to execute, in the name of the Secretary, deeds of conveyance, deeds of release, assignments and satisfactions of mortgages, and any other written instrument relating to real or personal property or any interest therein acquired by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of this Act may be exercised by the Secretary or by any officer or agent appointed by him for that purpose without the execution of any express delegation of power or power of attorney;

(8) acquire, in any lawful manner, any property (real, personal, or mixed, tangible or intangible), whenever deemed necessary or appropriate to the conduct of the activities authorized in sections 6 and 7 of this Act;

(9) in addition to any powers, functions, privileges, and immunities otherwise vested in him, take any and all actions, including the procurement of the services of attorneys by contract, determined by him to be necessary or desirable in making, purchasing, servicing, compromising, modifying, liquidating, or otherwise administratively dealing with or realizing on loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

(10) to such an extent as he finds necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act, procure the temporary (not in excess of six months) service of experts or consultants or organizations thereof, including stenographic reporting services, by contract or appointment, and in such cases such service shall be without regard to the civil service and classification laws, and, except in the case of stenographic reporting services by organizations, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5); any individual so employed

may be compensated at a rate not in excess of $75 per diem, and, while such individual is away from his home or regular place of business, he may be allowed transportation and not to exceed $15 per diem in lieu of subsistence and other expenses;

(11) sue and be sued in any court of record of a State having general jurisdiction or in any United States district court, and jurisdiction is conferred upon such district court to determine such controversies without regard to the amount in controversy; but no attachment, injunction, garnishment, or other similar process, mesne or final, shall be issued against the Secretary or his property. Nothing herein shall be construed to except the activities under this Act from the application of sections 507(b) and 2679 of title 28, United States Code, and of section 367 of the Revised Statutes (5 U.S.C. 316); and

(12) establish such rules, regulations, and procedures as he may deem appropriate in carrying out the provisions of this Act.

TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

SEC. 13. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall be granted under this Act with respect to such area and, for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secretary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment area. The Secretary shall keep the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

URBAN RENEWAL

SEC. 14. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

"SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (in this section referred to as a 'municipality') is situated in an area designated under section 5 of the Area Redevelopment Act as a redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economy, the Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

"(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e) of this section, the Administrator may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirement or limitations of section 110(c) that the project area be predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses under the urban renewal plan, and without regard to any of the limitations of that section on the undertaking of projects for predominantly nonresidential uses.

"(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, a contract for financial assistance under this section may include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the project area designated under the urban renewal plan for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or nonprofit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to such public agency or corporation under this section shall be made at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And provided further, That only the purchaser from or lessees of such public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obligations relating to the commencement of improvements imposed under section 105(b) hereof.

"(d) Following the execution of any contract for financial assistance under this section with respect to any project, the Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him under this section as well as other provisions of this title for the completion of such projects, notwithstanding any determination made after the execution of such contract that the area in which the project is located is no longer a redevelopment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

"(e) Not more than 10 per centum of the funds authorized for capital grants under section 103 after the date of the enactment of the Area Redevelopment Act shall be used for the purpose of providing financial assistance under this section. Amounts used for such purpose shall not be taken into account for the purpose of the limitation contained in the second proviso of the fifth sentence of section 110(c)."

URBAN PLANNING GRANTS

SEC. 15. (a) Paragraph (3) of section 701(a) of the Housing Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after "counties which" the following: "(A) are situated in areas designated by the Secretary of Commerce under section 5(a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as redevelopment areas or (B)".

(b) Section 701(b) of such Act is amended by adding before the period at the end of the first sentence a colon and the following: "Provided, That a grant may be made under this section to a city, municipality, or county described in clause (A) of subsection (a)(3), or to a State planning agency (as provided in clause (C) of subsection (a)(1)) for the provision of planning assistance to such a city, municipality, or county, for not more than 75 per centum of such estimated cost".

OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING

SEC. 16. (a) The Secretary of Labor is authorized, upon request and whenever he determines such studies are needed, to undertake, or to provide assistance to others for, studies of the size, characteristics, skills, adaptability, occupational potentialities, and related aspects of the labor force of any redevelopment area.

(b) When a redevelopment area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10), the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the Secretary and the Secretary of Agriculture, shall determine the occupational training or retraining needs of unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in the redevelopment area. The Secretary of Labor shall notify the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare of the occupational training or retraining requirements of the area, and shall provide for the orderly selection and referral of those unemployed or underemployed individuals residing in the area who can reasonably be expected to obtain employment as a result of the skill they will acquire in the training which is to be made available. The Secretary of Labor shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and with existing State and local agencies and officials in charge of existing programs relating to vocational training and retraining for the purpose of assuring that the facilities and services of such agencies are made fully available to such individuals.

(c) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that additional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet the occupational training or retraining needs of such individuals, he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall provide assistance, including financial assistance when necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational agency in the provision of such additional facilities or services. If the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare finds that the State vocational educational agency is unable to provide the facilities and services needed, he may, after consultation with such agency, provide for the same by agreement or contract with public or private educational institutions.

(d) The Secretary of Labor shall arrange to provide any necessary assistance for setting up apprenticeships, and to promote journeyman and other on-the-job training.

(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $4,500,000 annually, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

(f) In providing assistance under this section with respect to unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in redevelopment areas, the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall give consideration to the special needs of individuals who are agricultural workers or are engaged in other seasonal occupations and who require occupational training in order to qualify them to engage in supplementary employment during the off season and during other periods of reduced activity in the field of their regular or primary occupations.

RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

SEC. 17. (a) The Secretary of Labor in consultation with the Secretary and the Secretary of Agriculture may, on behalf of the United States, enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment areas are located, under which the Secretary of Labor shall make payments to such States either in advance or by way of reimbursement for the purpose of enabling such States, as agents of the United States, to make weekly retraining payments to unemployed or underemployed individuals residing within such redevelopment areas who are certified by the Secretary of Labor to be undergoing occupational training or retraining under section 16 of this Act. Such payments shall be made only for the period the individual is receiving occupational training or retraining under section 16 of this Act, but not in any event to exceed sixteen weeks, and the amount of any such payment for any week shall be equal to the amount of the average weekly unemployment compensation payment (including allowances for dependents when appropriate) payable for a week of total unemployment in the State making such payments.

(b) No weekly retraining payment shall be made to any person otherwise eligible who, with respect to the week for which such payment would be made, has received or is seeking unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or any other Federal or any State unemployment compensation law, but if the appropriate State or Federal agency finally determines that a person denied benefits for any week because of this subsection was not entitled to unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or such Federal or State law with respect to such week, this subsection shall not apply with respect to such week.

(c) Any agreement under this section may contain provisions (including, so far as may be appropriate, provisions authorized or made applicable with respect to agreements concluded by the Secretary of Labor pursuant to title XV of the Social Security Act) as will promote effective administration, protect the United States against loss, and insure the proper application of payments made to the State under such agreement. Except as may be provided in such agreements, or in the rules and regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, determinations by any duly designated officer or agency as to the eligibility of individuals for weekly retraining payments under this section shall be final and conclusive for any purposes and not subject to review by any court or any other officer.

(d) The Secretary of Labor and the Secretary shall jointly prescribe such rules and regulations as they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $10,000,000 annually, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

STATEMENT OF THE MANAGERS ON THE PART OF THE HOUSE

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment struck out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute amendment. The conferees have agreed to a substitute for both the Senate bill and the House amendment. The House amendment made 26 substantive changes in the Senate bill. In agreeing upon a substitute, the Senate conferees accepted 14 of these changes, while the House conferees receded on 8; compromises were reached in the other 4 cases. Except for clarifying, clerical, and technical changes, the differences between the House amendment and the substitute agreed to in conference are explained below.

"ANTIPIRATING" PROVISIONS

Both the Senate bill and the House amendment contained provisions in section 2 (statement of policy) and section 6 (authority for plant loans) barring assistance for industries relocating from one area to another. In section 2, the conference substitute provides that "under the provisions of this act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources rather than by merely transferring jobs from one area of the United States to another." This follows the language of the House amendment except that the word "jobs" is used after "transferring," as in the Senate bill, rather than "employment opportunities," as in the House amendment. The conference substitute provides that assistance under section 6 shall not be used "to assist establishments relocating from one area to another." This omits the phrase "totally or partially" which was included after "relocating" in the House amendment. But the conference substitute includes the following language, which is virtually identical with language included in the House committee report, in explanation of how the prohibition is to be interpreted:

The limitation set forth in clause (2) shall not be construed to prohibit assistance for the expansion of an existing business entity through the establishment of a new branch, affiliate, or subsidiary of such entity if the Secretary finds that the establishment of such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary will not result in an increase in unemployment in the area of original location or in any other area where such entity conducts business operations, unless the Secretary has reason to believe that such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary is being established with the intention of closing down the operations of the existing business entity in the area of its original location or in any other area where it conducts such operations.

DESIGNATION OF RURAL AREAS

The conference substitute contains the following provisions, which were in the Senate bill but not in the House amendment, concerning designation of rural areas as redevelopment areas under the bill:

1. A requirement that detailed standards for designation of such areas must be prescribed before any financial assistance is extended as a result of such designations.

2. A provision that in making such designations consideration shall be given to the extent to which rural development projects have previously been located in such areas under programs of the Department of Agriculture.

3. A provision that in making such designations the Secretary shall endeavor to distribute projects widely among the several States, so far as is feasible and proper, in order that actual experience with the program may be had in as many States and areas and under as many different circumstances as possible.

GEOGRAPHICAL BOUNDARIES OF REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

The Senate bill provided that areas designated as redevelopment areas for assistance under the new program could include "one or more States, one or more counties, or one or more municipalities, or a part of a county or municipality." This provision was eliminated by the House amendment. The conferees agreed to follow the House amendment in this respect.

It is the intent of the conferees for both Houses that in designating industrial areas as redevelopment areas for assistance under the new program, the Secretary should have broad discretion. The data on eligible areas supplied to the Congress by the Labor Department during the hearings were based on existing labor market areas and the Secretary should certainly take this information into account in determining geographical boundaries of redevelopment areas.

At the same time, the conferees recognize that standard labor market area boundary lines may not be appropriate to the purposes of this act because smaller areas may be more realistic. The bill, therefore, does not necessarily require that the labor market area boundary lines be followed. It is contemplated instead that the Secretary of Commerce may establish appropriate new boundaries for redevelopment areas under the bill.

It is not, however, the intention of the conferees to authorize designation of part of a municipality as a redevelopment area in any case, but with that exception it is recognized that designation of redevelopment areas will not necessarily follow political boundary lines.

LOANS FOR MACHINERY AND EQUIPMENT

Section 6 of the Senate bill authorized loans for machinery and equipment for plants "in cases of demonstrated need." The corresponding provision of the House amendment authorized such loans "in exceptional cases." The conference substitute retains the language of the Senate bill.

APPROVAL OF APPLICANTS BY STATE

Section 6(b)(2) of the Senate bill provided for approval of applicants for section 6 loans (plant loans) by the State or political subdivision concerned, through an agency directly concerned with problems of economic development in the State or political subdivision. The corresponding provision in the House amendment required approval by the State; it did not authorize loans to applicants on the basis of approval by a political subdivision. The conference substitute conforms to the Senate bill.

INVESTMENT BY INDIAN TRIBES IN SECTION 6 PROJECTS

The House amendment provided (in sec. 6(b)(9)(B)) that a Federal loan could be made under section 6 only if at least 10 percent of the cost were invested by the State or political subdivision, or by a nongovernmental community or area organization. The Senate bill contained the same requirement except that it added "Indian tribes" to the list of organizations which might make the required 10 percent investment. The conference substitute conforms to the Senate bill.

COMPETITION WITH PRIVATELY OWNED UTILITIES

The Senate bill prohibited assistance under section 7 or 8 for public facilities which would compete with existing privately owned public utilities, unless the State regulatory body found a need for such service which the existing public utility was unable to meet now "or through an expansion which it agrees to undertake." The House amendment substituted "is prepared" for "agrees." The conference substitute retains the provision of the Senate bill.

PUBLIC FACILITY GRANTS

The Senate bill permitted grants under section 8 covering the entire difference between the cost of the project and the amount obtainable from other sources. The House amendment limited the grants under section 8 to 65 percent of the difference between the cost of the project and the amount obtainable from loans and other Federal grant programs. The conference substitute follows the language of the Senate bill.

FINANCING OF LOAN PROGRAMS

The House amendment authorized appropriations to provide funds for loans under sections 6 and 7 of the bill. The Senate bill authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to obtain such funds through public debt transactions under the Second Liberty Bond Act. The conference substitute follows the provisions of the Senate bill in perform functions in the administration of such plan.

ARBOR DAY

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, on Saturday Nebraska will observe the 89th anniversary of the first Arbor Day, and will do so in the usual fashion—our citizens will plant millions of trees.

Although the first Arbor Day in the United States was April 10, 1872, the Nebraska Legislature moved the date to April 22, because that is the birthday of Arbor Day's founder, the late J. Sterling Morton, of Nebraska City, Nebr., Secretary of Agriculture under President Grover Cleveland.

I think it interesting to note that in heading the first Arbor Day sponsored by the old Nebraska Horticulture Society Mr. Morton stated that this special occasion should be "a national observance which looks to the future rather than the past."

Mr. Morton truly was a man of vision. On that first Arbor Day, at his urging, more than 1 million seedlings were planted in Nebraska soil. Today many of those seedlings are trees which provide beauty and recreation for the Nebraska countryside.

Certainly that was no false start, for within the next 12 years approximately 350 million trees and vines were set out on the prairies of Nebraska. Millions more have been planted since then.

As an incumbent in public office, the political role Mr. Morton portrayed in Nebraska and in the Nation is most interesting to me. He was a scholarly, conservative Democrat, and he held a high place in the national councils of his party all his adult life. He could not compromise principle; in fact, as attributed to that paternal Democrat, Andrew Jackson, Mr. Morton "never sold the truth to serve the hour." He treated issues with a candor and frankness that left no doubt about where he stood on issues. While this attribute may have been a liability to him in certain election contests, he gave to the voters an explicit picture of his convictions on the issues of his time.

After he was defeated when he sought election to the Senate in 1893, Mr. Morton wrote in his diary:

This does not fret me. The people have benefited by my citizenship, if I have not. And a man should be prouder of what he has done for his State than of what the State has done for him.

To me, a remarkable insight into Mr. Morton's sense of public service is to be had from an aspect of his membership in President Cleveland's cabinet, wherein he served as Secretary of Agriculture. He displayed a talent sadly lacking in the official Washington of our day. Throughout his political career, he inveighed heavily against government paternalism. As territorial secretary of Nebraska, he remitted funds allocated for the annual operation of his office. One of his early acts as Secretary was writing to the director of an experiment station of a letter in which he stated:

I notice that the feed bill for your horses during the last 10 months has averaged $178.77 per month * * * if farmers of this country had to pay * * * this subsistence * * * I think the annual crop would find them badly in debt. I wish it distinctly understood that wherever there is an opportunity to economize, it should be embraced with alacrity, and that if you do not economize someone will be put in your place who will.

There is no question that Mr. Morton was an excellent Secretary of Agriculture. He was the first cabinet officer appointed west of the Missouri River. He had opposed President Cleveland in his election; yet Cleveland put prejudice aside to obtain the services of a conservative known to be a man of unquestioned integrity. His relations with other members of the Cabinet were warm, and he early earned the esteem of President Cleveland for his forthright and completely honest manner. During the 4 years of Mr. Morton's administration of the Department of Agriculture, he returned to the Treasury $2,066,661.19 out of appropriations totaling $11,179,445.45—a saving of 18 percent. This was accomplished by businesslike management, and by reduction in departmental employees from 2,497 to 2,217 persons.

From this tribute today to a great pioneer we can take a text to serve today and the future. On the Archives Building in Washington appears the scripture, "What is past is prologue." This is eternally true. It is true because men and their governments today operate under the same human limitations that they have since the beginning of civilized social systems. Problems of this day may seem more numerous or burdensome, but they do not exceed the profundity of man's capabilities.

Like 89 years ago, this Nation still needs trees. Tree planting results in far greater benefits to humanity than most people realize. We used to say that trees provide fuel, building material, shade, and fruit. But today the benefits derived from trees are numbered in the thousands, and new uses for wood are being found every day.

The backbone of the conservation program for natural resources is trees. Without them, our productive soil, water supply, wildlife, and the much-desired recreational areas would vanish. Yes, our standard of living would be lower if trees disappeared from our land.

Our country cannot stop planting trees, because we are using up our timber at an alarming rate. During one of the war years the consumption of trees was more than 50 percent greater than the replacement by new growth. Every year the balance is on the losing side.

It is not difficult to plant trees, but our responsibility as citizens should not end there. Trees must be cared for. Conditions must be made suitable for their normal growth. To plant trees on Arbor Day and then forget them is not carrying out "the look to the future" for which J. Sterling Morton asked in proclaiming the first Arbor Day in Nebraska 89 years ago.

We still have more than 100 million acres in this country which are suitable only for growing trees. Other crops cannot be produced in this soil at a profit.

More millions of trees can be grown on our lawns, in our parks, along highways, and on farms. We need trees, and we need tree planters who will protect them.

It is my pleasure to call attention to the fact that Saturday is Arbor Day, a day observed widely around the world, which was started by a distinguished and great man, whose statue is found in Statuary Hall in this building, the Honorable J. Sterling Morton, Secretary of Agriculture under Grover Cleveland.

CITATION OF DR. FRANK STANTON FOR THE GEORGE FOSTER PEABODY AWARD FOR OUTSTANDING PUBLIC SERVICE

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, on Tuesday, April 18, Dr. Frank Stanton, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, received the George Foster Peabody Award for Outstanding Public Service. The citation said:

The great debates between the presidential candidates are recognized as conceivably the most important service ever performed by broadcasting and one that may become a permanent part of our political heritage. The award goes to Dr. Frank Stanton for his initiative in suggesting the debates and his courageous leadership in bringing about the joint resolution of Congress which made the debates possible.

In accepting the award, Dr. Stanton said:

I cannot agree with the distinguished advisory board that I played a sufficient part in bringing about the debates to deserve its generous citation. I do agree that the debates did indeed constitute "conceivably the most important service performed by broadcasting."

Credit for bringing about the debates belongs to many people. Among them was the late Senator Blair Moody, of Michigan, who urged as early as 1952 that broadcasting could best serve the electorate by presenting the major candidates in face-to-face debates. The equal time restrictions of section 315 prevented this.

That it became possible 8 years later was due in great measure to another U.S. Senator and to the support of a veteran leader in the House. Senator JOHN O. PASTORE, of Rhode Island, chairman of the Subcommittee on Communications, Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, had the imagination, the patience, and the inexhaustible energy to spark the action of the Senate to suspend the equal time restriction in the presidential campaign of 1960. Representative OREN HARRIS, of Arkansas, Chairman of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, led a similarly vigorous campaign in the House—finally making the debates possible.

I accept this Peabody award on behalf of all those who helped bring about the debates. I accept it on behalf of the more than 1,400 radio and television stations which broadcast the debates. And finally, I accept it—not as a reward—but as a reminder. For we still have before us the task of permanently freeing broadcasting from unrealistic restrictions in the most serious business a democracy has—choosing its leadership.

Mr. President, my colleague, Senator PASTORE, did indeed labor long and hard, and imaginatively, to make the presidential debates possible. He has long been concerned with the wise and beneficial use of the broadcast media to serve the public interest. That this high tribute to his effectiveness has come from an outstanding leader in the industry is of more than passing significance and deserves more than passing notice.

BENEFITS TO CHILDREN OF UNEMPLOYED PARENTS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 4884) to amend title IV of the Social Security Act to authorize Federal financial participation in aid to dependent children of unemployed parents, and for other purposes.

Mrs. NEUBERGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to offer an amendment to the committee amendment as follows:

On page 3, strike out lines 11 through 18, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"For purposes of the preceding sentence, a State plan may, at the option of the State, provide for the denial of all (or any part) of the aid under the plan to which any child or relative might otherwise be entitled for any month, if the unemployed parent of such child receives unemployment compensation under an unemployment compensation law of a State or of the United States for any week any part of which is included in such month."

Mr. BYRD of Virginia. Mr. President, it is a clarification of the amendment adopted by the committee, and as chairman of the committee I am willing to accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT— CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I am very happy to present to the Senate the conference report on S. 1, the bill to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in the economically distressed areas of the country.

The report represents the compromise between the House and Senate versions of the bill. I must say that the managers of the two Houses met in a friendly spirit, and that the final bill does not represent a victory or defeat for either one or the other House, but represents, instead, the work of both Houses to agree to an effective bill, and one which, I think, we can all defend, regardless of any minor differences.

I cannot praise too highly the work of the House conferees, and particularly of Chairman Spence, of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

I am pleased that all the managers on the part of the Senate, including the Republican members, signed the report.

In moving very close to the final enactment of the bill, I wish to thank all of those who took part in the long struggle, and I hope it will not be considered invidious if I single out the Senators from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH and Mr. BYRD] for the fine work they did.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

(For the conference report, see House proceedings of today.)

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there may be printed in the RECORD an explanation of the two versions of the bill as passed by the Senate and the House, also an analysis of the action of the conference committee, in which it is pointed out that the Senate receded on 14 items, and the House receded on 8 items, and that there were compromises in 4 instances. I also ask that a discussion of each of the amendments be printed in the RECORD. There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMPARISON OF S. 1, AS PASSED THE SENATE WITH THE HOUSE AMENDMENT

(This memorandum omits discussion of technical, clarifying, and conforming changes made by the House.)

1. "Antipirating": There are two antipirating provisions in both the Senate bill and the House amendment: section 2 (statement of policy) and section 6 (plant loans). The differences are show below.

SENATE BILL

Section 2: "Under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources rather than merely transferring jobs from one community to another."

HOUSE AMENDMENT

"Under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources rather than by merely transferring employment opportunities from one area of the United States to another."

SENATE BILL

Section 6: "Such financial assistance shall not be extended (1) for working capital, or (2) to assist establishments relocating from one area to another. The limitation set forth in clause (2) above shall not be construed to prohibit assistance for the expansion of an existing business operation from its original location or for the establishment of a new branch affiliate, or subsidiary: Provided, That such assistance will not substantially decrease employment in the area of original location."

HOUSE AMENDMENT

"Such financial assistance shall not be extended for working capital, or to assist establishments relocating, totally or partially, from one area to another."

2. Formula for mandatory designation of redevelopment areas: This formula (in section 5(a)) is based in part on the following percentages of unemployment:

"(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

"(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

"(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years."

The House amendment inserts the word "calendar" in clause (C), as indicated by the underscoring.

3. Area adversely affected by reciprocal trade program: Section 5(a) of the Senate bill entitles such areas to special consideration for designation as redevelopment areas. This is omitted from the House amendment.

4. Designation of rural areas: The House amendment omits the following provisions of the Senate bill:

"(1) The second sentence of section 5(b), which requires that detailed standards for such designation be prescribed before any loans are made.

"(2) The provision in the third sentence of section 5(b) that consideration be given in making such designations to the extent to which 'rural development' projects have previously been located in such areas under Agriculture Department programs.

"(3) The fourth sentence of section 5(b), which provides for wide distribution of projects among the States, and limits each State to one project unless the Secretary has considered such applications for assistance under this Act as may have come from the several States which apply for such assistance."

5. Geographical boundaries of redevelopment areas: The House amendment omits that part of section 5(d) of the Senate bill which expressly provides that a redevelopment area may "include one or more States, one or more counties, or one or more municipalities, or a part of a county or municipality."

6. Loans for machinery and equipment: Section 6 of the Senate bill authorizes loans for machinery and equipment "in cases of demonstrated need." The corresponding provision of the House amendment authorizes such loans "in exceptional cases."

7. Approval of applicants by State agency: Section 6(b)(2) of the Senate bill provides for approval of applicants for section 6 loans (plant loans) by the State or political subdivision concerned. The corresponding provision of the House amendment requires approval by the State; it does not authorize loans to applicants on the basis of approval by a political subdivision.

8. Investment by Indian tribes in section 6 projects: The House amendment provides (in section 6(b)(9)(B)) that a Federal loan will be made under section 6 only if at least 10 percent of the project cost is invested by the State or political subdivision, or a nongovernmental community or area organization. The Senate bill has the same requirement except that it adds "Indian tribes" to the list of organizations which may make the required 10 percent investment.

9. Subordination of required 10-percent and 5-percent investments: The House amendment provides that the required 10-percent investment referred to above, and the 5-percent private investment which must be made before a Federal loan will be made under section 6, must be subordinate to the Federal loan. That is, these required investments must be equity investments or, if loans, be repayable only after the Federal loan is repaid in full, and the security, if any, shall be subordinate to the Federal lien. These requirements, which are in section 6(b)(9)(B) and (C) of the House amendment, are not in the Senate bill.

10. Types of public facilities to be assisted: The Senate bill limits loans under section 7 and grants under section 8 to public facilities that "will serve primarily industrial or commercial needs." This restriction is not in the House amendment.

11. A 65-percent limit on public facility loans: Loans for public facilities under section 7 of the Senate bill are limited to 65 percent of project cost. The State or political subdivision or Indian tribe concerned must supply at least 10 percent. To encourage participation by other investors, the Secretary is authorized to subordinate the Federal loan. No such provisions are in the House amendment, which permits public facility loans up to 100 percent.

12. Competition with privately owned utilities: The Senate bill prohibits assistance under sections 7 or 8 for public utilities which will compete with existing privately owned public utilities, unless the State regulatory body finds a need for such service which the existing public utility is unable to meet now or "through an expansion which it agrees to undertake." The House amendment substitutes "is prepared" for "agrees."

13. Studies of need for public facility grants: Section 8(a) of the Senate bill provides for studies by the Secretary of Commerce of the need for public facility grants. This is omitted from the House amendment.

14. A 65 percent limit on public facility grants: The Senate bill permits grants under section 8 covering the entire difference between the cost of the project and the amount obtainable from other sources. The House amendment limits the grant under section 8 to 65 percent of the difference between the cost of the project and the amount obtainable from loans and from other Federal grant programs. In effect, the House amendment thus requires a grant from some non-Federal source in the ratio of $35 to every $65 supplied by the Federal Government under section 8.

15. Appropriations versus public debt transactions: The Senate bill provides that funds for loans under sections 6 and 7 may be obtained by Treasury borrowing under the Second Liberty Bond Act. The House amendment does not authorize the use of public debt transactions to obtain these funds, but authorizes appropriations for that purpose. There are other less significant differences, relating to the manner in which the revolving funds are established.

16. Limit on urban renewal grants: Although the urban renewal program is normally limited to predominantly residential uses, existing law authorizes use of 20 percent of the available grant funds for nonresidential purposes. The Senate bill, in authorizing urban renewal assistance for nonresidential purposes in depressed areas, requires that funds so used shall be taken out of the existing 20 percent authorization for nonresidential use, and authorizes an increase in this limit (up to an additional 10 percent) for depressed areas only after the 20 percent limit has been reached. The House amendment fixes a separate 10 percent limit on the urban renewal funds which can be used to assist depressed areas under the bill (10 percent of capital grant funds authorized after enactment of this bill).

17. Urban planning grants: Both the Senate bill and the House amendment authorize urban planning grants under section 701 of the Housing Act of 1954 to local Governments in areas designated under section 5(a) as redevelopment areas. The Senate bill also authorizes such grants up to 75 percent of cost for such areas. Under the House amendment, the 50 percent limit in existing law would not be changed.

18. Occupational training and subsistence payments: The House amendment differs from the Senate bill in four respects.

(1) Both the Senate bill and the House amendment provide that the Secretary of Labor shall consult with the Secretary of Commerce in determining needs for occupational training and in making agreements with the States for subsistence payments to trainees. The House amendment provides for consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, as well.

(2) Section 16 of the House amendment omits language in the Senate bill directing the Secretary of Labor to "make appropriate provision for such supervision by the appropriate agency as is necessary to the successful operation of any training program established under this section." The House committee report explains that this language led to misunderstanding, and that its purpose can be accomplished under other provisions of the bill.

(3) Section 16(d) of the Senate bill authorizes the Secretary of Labor to provide "technical assistance for setting up apprenticeships." The House amendment eliminates the word "technical" from this phrase.

(4) The House amendment includes a new subsection 16(f), which is not in the Senate bill. It provides that consideration shall be given to the special needs of agricultural workers and other seasonal workers in providing assistance under section 16.

19. Reports to Congress: Section 22 of the Senate bill requires the Secretary of Commerce to make semiannual reports, and specifies eight categories of information required in each report. Section 22 of the House amendment provides for annual (rather than semiannual) reports, and specifies only two categories of information required.

20. Use of other agencies by Commerce Department: The Senate bill (in sections 24 and 25) and the House amendment (in section 24) include differing provisions concerning the Secretary of Commerce's use of other agencies to avoid duplication. The principal difference is that the Senate bill authorizes delegation of functions by the Secretary to an outside agency only if the President approves, whereas the House amendment authorizes such delegation without Presidential approval. The House amendment also emphasizes that the Secretary shall use other agencies "to the fullest extent practicable * * * (so) as to avoid the duplication of existing staffs and facilities." The Senate bill provides for such use "to the extent practicable * * * whenever such (use) will avoid the duplication of existing staffs and facilities."

21. Supergrades: The Senate bill (section 24(d)) creates one additional position (in grade 16, 17, or 18 of the general schedule under the Classification Act of 1949) to assist in performing functions under the program. The House amendment creates five such additional positions (to be apportioned among the Federal agencies involved by the Secretary of Commerce with the approval of the Budget Bureau).

22. SBA loans to local development companies: The House amendment (section 26) amends the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 to eliminate the termination date (June 30, 1961) on SBA's program of secured loans to local development companies for plant construction, conversion, and expansion, thereby making such program permanent. There is no corresponding provision in the Senate bill.

23. Study by the Secretary of Commerce: The House amendment (section 27) directs the Secretary of Commerce, when the Department of Defense proposes to deactivate or is deactivating a permanent military installation (or major unit thereof) in an area where the unemployment rate is 6 percent or more, to make a study to determine the economic effects of such deactivation when requested to do so by the Governor of the State where the installation is located. The Secretary's findings would be transmitted to the Secretary of Defense and to the Congress. There is no corresponding provision in the Senate bill.

24. Research: The House amendment (section 28) directs the Secretary of Commerce to conduct a continuing program of study and research to assist in determining the causes of unemployment, underemployment, underdevelopment, and chronic depression and in developing national, State, and local programs to meet the problems resulting from these conditions. There is no corresponding provision in the Senate bill.

25. Termination of program: The Senate bill (section 27) terminates the program on June 30, 1965 (and makes provision for its liquidation after that date by the Secretary of the Treasury). The carrying out of contracts, commitments, and other obligations theretofore entered into under the program would not be affected by its termination. There is no corresponding provision in the House amendment, under which the program would be permanent.

26. Geographical scope of program: The Senate bill (section 28) provides that the bill shall be applicable to the several States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. The House amendment also covers Guam and American Samoa.

DETAILED ANALYSIS

The agenda for the conference consisted of 26 substantive differences between the Senate bill and the House Amendment.

The House receded to the Senate on 8 items. The Senate receded to the House on 14 items. There were 4 compromises.

The conferees have agreed to a substitute for both the Senate bill and the House amendment. Except for clarifying, clerical, and technical changes, the difference between the Senate bill and the substitute agreed to in conference are explained below.

FINANCING

The major difference between the Senate bill and the House amendment was the method of financing the $300 million of revolving loan funds. The Senate bill called for financing these loans by public debt transactions. The House amendment required financing of loan funds by annual appropriations.

The conferees were deadlocked over this issue for several sessions of the conference. The House conferees were adamant for its position.

The Senate conferees were equally adamant for public debt financing.

The Senate conferees argued that public debt transactions are a well established method of financing certain activities of the Federal Government. For instance, the following are some of the programs for which public debt transactions have been approved in the past:

Defense Production Act of 1950.
The Export-Import Bank of Washington.
Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.
Federal National Mortgage Association.
Home Owners' Loan Corporation.
The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board.
The Housing and Home Finance Agency.
The Reconstruction Finance Corporation.
The United States Information Agency.
The Commodity Credit Corporation.

This list is only suggestive, a more complete listing of Federal programs financed by public debt transactions follows:

¹ These repayments were deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the U.S. Treasury.² Obligations for guaranteed letters of credit and loans disbursed by commercial banks, amounting to $139,822,381.97 as of June 30, 1959, are applicable against the statutory borrowing authority. The unused authority to borrow from the Treasury has not been reduced thereby, since the Corporation may borrow from the Treasury to liquidate these obligations.³ Represents net repayments made to the U.S. Treasury.⁴ The balance shown represents unused portion of authorization to expend from public debt receipts, available for loans to the secondary market operations fund without further action by Congress. Due to other borrowings (shown in pt. II of this table) by that fund and the capital structure of the fund, the maximum it could borrow from the Treasury without adjusting its other borrowing or its capital structure as of June 30, 1959, would be as follows:

Borrowing authorized (10 times capital plus surplus)..... $2,028,830,590.60

Borrowing outstanding..... -1,331,656,035.07

Unused balance of borrowing authorized..... 697,174,555.53

¹ Minus sign represents net repayments in excess of net borrowings.² Less than $50,000.

⁴ Includes unused portion of authorization to expend from public debt receipts, available for loans to the secondary market operations fund of the Federal National Mortgage Association without further action by Congress. Due to other borrowing by that fund and the capital structure of the fund, the maximum it could borrow from the Treasury without adjusting its other borrowing or its capital structure as of June 30, 1959, would be as follows:

Borrowing authorized (10 times capital plus surplus)..... $2,028,830,591
Borrowing outstanding..... -1,331,656,035

Unused balance of borrowing authorized..... 697,174,556

⁵ If the borrowing authority of an agency is limited to the amount as needed, the amount borrowed and outstanding has been set up as the amount of the authority.

⁶ Excludes $700,000, representing return of uncommitted funds by the Farmers Home Administration loan programs, which was not received in time for reduction of the outstanding balance of borrowings due the U.S. Treasury by that Administration as shown in the daily Treasury statement of June 30, 1959.

⁷ Has not been reduced by $700,000 representing return of uncommitted funds by the Farmers Home Administration loan programs. (See footnote 6.)

⁸ Includes net repayments of $3,600,000 which did not affect borrowing authority.

⁹ Includes repayments of $3,123,400,000 which did not affect borrowing authority.

¹⁰ Includes note cancellations of $2,918,800,000 which did not affect borrowing authority.

It should be clear that these loans for area redevelopment will be assets of the Federal Government. They will be repaid in full in the future. The interest rate to be charged to borrowers includes an additional one-half of 1 percent in the case of plant loans, and one-fourth of 1 percent in the case of public facility loans for the purposes of covering losses and administrative expenses.

It is intended that these loans, of course, will be fully repaid to the Federal Government over a period of years. Therefore, on both a current and long-run basis, this loan program should be self-financing.

In the long run, it should result in no net Federal expenditures.

It should also be clear that grants of authority to spend money obtained by Treasury borrowing are in one sense tentative, as are appropriations; both are subordinate to the public debt limit. Public debt transactions cannot be utilized when the resulting disbursements by the Treasury would require the Treasury to borrow beyond the public debt limit.

Also, the Congress will have ample opportunity to review and scrutinize loan activities under this act. Under section 9(b), the Secretary of Commerce will be required to prepare annually and submit a budget program under sections 102, 103, and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act. The budget program must contain estimates of the financial condition and operations, and a statement of financial condition, a statement of income and expenses, a statement of sources and application of funds, estimates of operations by major types of activities, estimates of administrative expenses and borrowings, and other financial information. This must be transmitted to the Congress as a part of the President's annual budget.

Therefore, the Appropriations Committees and the public will be completely informed about this program on an annual basis if it included public-debt transactions.

The Senate conferees argued that if this is to be an effective and efficient loan program, the Secretary of Commerce must know what funds would be available for area redevelopment loans over a period of several years. The built-in checks in this program, approval by the community for the economic development program of each area, approval by the State of the economic development plan, and approval by the Secretary of Commerce for this plan are all prerequisites to loan assistance. Therefore, in some cases, particularly if modifications are required by the Secretary in the program, it will take some time to completely develop the basis for a loan project. From the point of view of careful financial management, it would seem prudent that the Secretary of Commerce be assured that loan funds will be available if and when any particular project is finalized. We cannot expect an efficient program tied to annual appropriations. The uncertainty which results from an annual financing procedure prohibits the businesslike operation of this Government lending enterprise. It would inhibit the authority of the Area Redevelopment Administration to require careful and thoughtful programs of local development. These area redevelopment loans ought to be established on a solid long-term basis in order to protect fiscal soundness of the loan program. Nongovernmental entities in the lending business have found it absolutely vital to finance their activities through long-term borrowing.

Chairman SPENCE of the House Banking and Currency Committee, informed the conferees that the administration had informed the House conferees that it preferred the Senate provision for financing loans—that is, by public debt transactions.

The House receded and accepted a new section with Treasury financing.

TERMINATION DATE

In view of the fact that the House receded on their financing provision, the Senate stood adamant on the 4-year termination date for this program.

This will give the Congress the opportunity to completely review this act in 4 years. If there has been any difficulty as a result of the public debt financing, the Congress can then change this provision. If the program has not lived up to expectations, it will expire automatically.

ANTIPIRATING PROVISIONS

Both the Senate bill and the House amendment contained provisions in section 2, the statement of policy, and section 6, the authority for plant loans, barring assistance for industries relocating from one area to another. The conference substitute combines the House and Senate provisions, in a fashion which, in the opinion of the Senate conferees, strengthens the antipirating provisions of the bill.

The Senate version of section 2 prohibited "transferring jobs from one community to another." The conference version of section 2 prohibits "transferring jobs from one area of the United States to another."

Both the Senate version of section 6 and the conference substitute prohibit financial assistance "to assist establishments relocating from one area to another." In the Senate version of section 6 this provision was followed by a sentence stating that it should not be construed "to prohibit assistance for the expansion of an existing business operation from its original location or for the establishment of a new branch, affiliate, or subsidiary: Provided, That such assistance will not substantially decrease employment in the area of original location."

This restriction was deleted in the conference substitute and the following provision inserted instead:

"The limitation set forth in clause (2) shall not be construed to prohibit assistance for the expansion of an existing business entity through the establishment of a new branch, affiliate, or subsidiary of such entity if the Secretary finds that the establishment of such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary will not result in an increase in unemployment in the area of original location or in any other area where such entity conducts business operations, unless the Secretary has reason to believe that such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary is being established with the intention of closing down the operations of the existing business entity in the area of its original location or in any other area where it conducts such operations."

FORMULA FOR MANDATORY DESIGNATION OF NON-RURAL REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

In Section 5(a) of the Senate bill and the House amendment there is a minor difference in part of the formula for the mandatory designation of nonrural redevelopment areas.

Section 5(a)(2) of the Senate bill contained the following language in regard to the qualifying percentages of unemployment for mandatory designation:

"(A) 50 percentum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

"(B) 75 percentum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

The House amendment inserts the word "calendar" in clause (C), between the words "two" and "years." The Senate conferees receded to the House on this difference so that the language of clause (C) in the conference substitute reads:

The Senate conferees receded because it appeared that the language of the Senate bill in clause (3) might be a costly burden for the Department of Labor which has been collecting this unemployment data on a calendar year basis.

AREAS ADVERSELY AFFECTED BY RECIPROCAL TRADE PROGRAM

Section 5(a) of the Senate bill entitled such areas to special consideration for designation as redevelopment areas. This was omitted from the House amendment.

The House conferees were adamant on the House position.

After long discussion, the Senate conferees receded on this provision as part of the compromise under which the House receded on the method of financing the revolving loan funds.

Under the conference substitute, such areas would receive no special consideration, but merely the same consideration as any other area.

DESIGNATION OF RURAL AREAS

There were four differences between the Senate bill and the House amendment in section 5(b) which spells out criteria for designation of rural areas for assistance. On three of these differences the House receded.

The Senate conferees receded on the fourth difference. Therefore the conference substitute differs from the Senate bill in that the substitute does not limit each State to one project "unless the Secretary has considered such applications for assistance under this Act as may have come from the several States which apply for such assistance."

However, the conference substitute does retain the language of the Senate bill requiring the Secretary to distribute the "projects widely among the several States, so far as is feasible and proper, in order that actual experience with this program may be had in as many States and in as many areas and under as many different circumstances as possible."

GEOGRAPHICAL BOUNDARIES OF REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

The House amendment omitted that part of section 5(d) of the Senate bill which expressly provides that a redevelopment area may "include one or more States, one or more counties, or one or more municipalities, or a part of a county or municipality."

The Senate conferees receded to the House with the understanding that the following language would be included in the conference report to limit the discretion of the Secretary:

"It is the intent of the conferees for both Houses that in designating industrial areas as redevelopment areas for assistance under the new program, the Secretary should have broad discretion. The data on eligible areas supplied to the Congress by the Labor Department during the hearings were based on existing labor market areas and the Secretary should certainly take this information into account in determining geographical boundaries of redevelopment areas."

"At the same time, the conferees recognize that standard labor market area boundary lines may not be appropriate to the purposes of this act because smaller areas may be more realistic. The bill, therefore, does not necessarily require that the labor market area boundary lines be followed. It is contemplated instead that the Secretary of Commerce may establish appropriate new boundaries for redevelopment areas under the bill."

"It is not, however, the intention of the conferees to authorize designation of part of a municipality as a redevelopment area in any case, but with that exception it is recognized that designation of redevelopment areas will not necessarily follow political boundary lines."

SUBORDINATION OF REQUIRED 10-PERCENT AND 5-PERCENT INVESTMENTS

The Senate bill and the House amendment provided that a Federal loan could be made under section 6 only if at least 10 percent of the project cost were invested by the State or political subdivision, or a nongovernmental community or area organization and at least 5 percent should be obtained from nongovernmental sources.

The Senate bill provided that the required 10 percent public or semipublic investment, and the required 5 percent private investment might be given priority over the Federal loan, if necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular project. The House amendment provided that the 10-percent and 5-percent investments must be subordinate to the Federal loan. That is, these required investments must be equity investments or, if loans, be repayable only after the Federal loan is repaid in full, and the security, if any, shall be subordinate to the Federal lien. The Senate conferees receded. The conference substitute includes the House provision.

It was argued that requiring the Federal loans to be repaid first would place the Federal Government in a preferred, and, therefore, a sounder financial position. It was also argued that if the non-Federal participation in the cost of the project were not in the form of equity investment, but in the form of loans, they should bear a greater degree of risk by being repayable only after the Federal loan were repaid in full.

In view of the fact that the House conferees later receded on their method of financing the loan funds, this more stringent requirement should protect the fiscal soundness of the revolving loan funds.

TYPES OF PUBLIC FACILITIES TO BE ASSISTED

The Senate bill limited loans under section 7 and grants under section 8 to public facilities that "will serve primarily industrial or commercial needs." This restriction did not appear in the House amendment.

However, the House amendment, as well as the Senate bill, in Sections 7 and 8 required that "the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area." Therefore since the two provisions appeared to be similar in purpose, the Senate conferees receded and the substitute does not contain the additional clause which had been in the Senate bill.

EXTENT OF FEDERAL FINANCING OF PUBLIC FACILITY LOANS

Loans for public facilities under section 7 of the Senate bill were limited to 65 percent of project cost. The House amendment permitted public facility loans up to 100 percent of project cost.

It was argued that many redevelopment areas, because of sustained unemployment and the low levels of economic activity would not have the financial resources to meet their portion of the project cost and would have to appeal for a public facility grant from the Federal Government. This might leave the Secretary of Commerce in the position of either denying this assistance to the most needy areas or being forced to approve a Federal grant for a public facility project. Therefore it seemed preferable to give the Secretary the discretion to make a public facility loan up to 100 percent of the project cost.

The Senate conferees receded and the substitute bill contains the House provision.

STUDIES OF NEED FOR PUBLIC FACILITY GRANTS

Section 8(a) of the Senate bill provided for studies by the Secretary of Commerce of the need for public facility grants. This was omitted from the House amendment.

The Senate conferees receded and the substitute bill does not contain this provision.

It was pointed out that other sections of both bills including the general powers vested in the Secretary of Commerce gave adequate authority to the Secretary to make whatever studies of public facility grants he deemed prudent or necessary.

Of course, the Secretary is still required to screen each individual request for a grant carefully as required in the Senate bill and conference substitute.

URBAN RENEWAL GRANTS

Both the Senate bill and the House amendment authorized use of grant funds under the urban renewal program for nonresidential purposes in redevelopment areas. Both restricted the amount of such grant funds which could be so used. The Senate bill included the funds so used as part of the 20-percent share of these grant funds now authorized for nonresidential purposes, and authorized a 10-percent increase for development areas, if necessary. The House amendment imposed a new and independent limit of 10 percent of the grant funds under the urban renewal program.

The Senate conferees receded. The conference substitute adopts the House provision.

URBAN PLANNING GRANTS

The Senate provision for Federal contributions of up to 75 percent for urban planning grants for redevelopment areas was retained, with a technical amendment to make it clear that this percentage applied whether the grant went directly to the areas or through State planning agencies.

It was the understanding of the conferees that the provision for making urban renewal grants directly to redevelopment areas was not intended to bypass State planning agencies. Instead the intention was to provide an alternative route for extending this planning assistance where deemed necessary or advisable but that existing State agencies will continue to be consulted and utilized wherever practicable.

OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING AND SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

The House amendment differed from the Senate bill in four respects.

1. Both the Senate bill and the House amendment provided that the Secretary of Labor shall consult with the Secretary of Commerce in determining needs for occupational training and in making agreements with the States for subsistence payments to trainees. The House amendment provided for consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, as well.

2. Section 16 of the House amendment omits language in the Senate bill directing the Secretary of Labor to "make appropriate provision for such supervision by the appropriate agency as is necessary to the successful operation of any training program established under this section." The House committee report explained that this language led to misunderstanding, and that its purpose would be accomplished under other provisions of the bill.

3. Section 16(d) of the Senate bill authorized the Secretary of Labor to provide "technical assistance for setting up apprenticeships". The House amendment eliminated the word "technical" from this phrase.

4. The House amendment included a new subsection 16(f), which was not in the Senate bill. It provided that consideration shall be given to the special needs of agricultural workers and other seasonal workers in providing assistance under section 16.

The Senate conferees receded and the substitute contains those provisions contained in the House amendment.

REPORTS TO CONGRESS

Section 22 of the Senate bill required the Secretary of Commerce to make semiannual reports, and specified eight categories of information required in each report. Section 22 of the House amendment provided for annual (rather than semiannual) reports, and specified only two categories of information required.

After long discussion the conferees compromised in the following manner.

The conference substitute follows the language of the House amendment as to reports to the Congress, and does not include all of the specific provisions of the Senate bill with respect to matters to be included in such reports. The conferees on the part of the Senate intend, however, that such reports shall give full and complete information concerning the operation of the program and shall include the following items in addition to those specified in the act: (1) The total number of unemployed persons in redevelopment areas, (2) the total principal amount of loans outstanding under the new act, the aggregate expenditures incurred by the Government in providing grants and other forms of assistance under the act, and the administrative expenses incurred by the Government in providing assistance under the act, (3) the number of applications for assistance under the act which are pending and the total amount of assistance requested in such applications, (4) the number of industrial or commercial enterprises which have commenced or expanded operations in redevelopment areas as a result of assistance under the act, the total asset value of such enterprises and a description of each such enterprise in terms of whether it is an expanding enterprise already located in a redevelopment area, a wholly new enterprise, an enterprise which has moved from another area, or a branch of an existing enterprise located elsewhere, and (5) the total number of jobs directly created in each economically distressed area as a result of assistance extended under the act, and the Secretary's estimate of the increase in employment in each such area indirectly resulting from such assistance.

USE OF OTHER AGENCIES BY COMMERCE DEPARTMENT

The Senate bill (in secs. 24 and 25) and the House amendment (in sec. 24) included differing provisions concerning the Secretary of Commerce's use of other agencies to avoid duplication. The principal difference was that the Senate bill authorized delegation of functions by the Secretary to an outside agency only if the President approved, whereas the House amendment authorized such delegation without Presidential approval.

The Senate conferees receded. The substitute bill contains the House language. Also the conferees agreed that the following language should be included in the conference report.

"The Secretary of Commerce has testified before the committees of both the House and the Senate that he will delegate to the Department of Agriculture major responsibility for assistance to be rendered in rural redevelopment areas, as designated under section 5(b) of the act, and the Secretary of Agriculture has testified to his willingness to accept such responsibility. It is the understanding of the committee that the Department of Agriculture has services and facilities available of requisite competence and experience for effectively carrying out such delegation. It is, therefore, the expectation of the committee that this delegation to the Department of Agriculture will be made promptly upon enactment of the bill."

SUPERGRADES

The Senate bill (sec. 24(d)) created one additional position (in grade 16, 17, or 18 of the General Schedule under the Classification Act of 1949) to assist in performing functions under the program. The House amendment created five additional positions.

The Senate conferees receded. The substitute bill contains the House provisions.

SBA LOANS TO LOCAL DEVELOPMENT COMPANIES

The House amendment contained a provision amending section 502 of the Small Business Investment Act, which authorizes SBA to make loans to local development companies up to June 30, 1961. The House provision would eliminate this expiration date, making the program permanent.

The Senate unanimously passed the same provision last year, as part of its amendment to H.R. 11207, 86th Congress, but it did not become law.

Under these circumstances the Senate conferees saw no reason to object to the new House provision, which is contained in the conference substitute.

RESEARCH ON CAUSES OF UNEMPLOYMENT

The House amendment (section 28) directed the Secretary of Commerce to conduct a continuing program of study and research to assist in determining the causes of unemployment, underemployment, underdevelopment, and chronic depression in the various areas of the Nation and in the Nation as a whole, and to assist in developing programs to solve these problems. The Senate bill contained no corresponding provision.

The Senate conferees receded and accept this House amendment after two changes had been made in the language of this section.

The first change provides that the study shall be made in cooperation with other agencies having similar functions.

The second change eliminates the phrase "and in the Nation as a whole" so as to make it clear that the research to be undertaken by the Secretary of Commerce shall concentrate on those problems directly related to the purposes of this act.

GEOGRAPHICAL SCOPE OF PROGRAM

The House amendment provided that the bill shall be applicable to Guam and American Samoa, in addition to the several States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. The Senate bill did not cover Guam and American Samoa. The Senate conferees receded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the report.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah was one of the conferees on the bill, and he would like to congratulate the Senator from Illinois on his great success in maintaining the Senate's position. The Senator from Illinois stated that the Senate yielded in 14 instances, and the House in 8 instances. Actually, from the point of view of important amendments, the Senate's yielding, in most of the instances, was on more or less inconsequential items. On the major provisions, the ones on which there were real differences as between the two versions of the bill, the House yielded.

Mr. President, it was a very interesting experience to sit through the first conference under the New Frontier, because it was obvious there were forces outside the room of the conference which were controlling some of the major decisions in this case.

I signed the report as a conferee, because I think, as a conferee representing the Senate, the Senate came out very well with respect to the bill.

I realize that when the bill was before us for consideration, its support in the Senate was overwhelming, and there is no point in trying to make a fight against the conference report now; but I should like to make it clear that, having voted against the bill originally, and then, having signed the report under my obligation as a member of the conference, I feel free now to express my original position.

I think the whole concept around which the bill is built is a mistake. I do not think it is going to accomplish its purpose, and I should like to have the RECORD show that, regardless of how the vote on the conference report is taken, the Senator from Utah is recorded against it.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I join my colleague from Utah in congratulating the able senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] upon his success in supporting the Senate version of the proposed legislation in the conference.

Like the Senator from Utah, I signed the conference report. Unlike him, I voted in the first instance for the bill, for several reasons.

In the first place, the bill attempts to deal with one of the most serious problems facing us in the United States, which is the problem of those areas with persistent and chronic unemployment.

Mr. President, this is an issue on which there is no partisanship. Nobody can claim all the compassionate feelings. I think we all feel deep concern over these problems. I have felt, and I still feel, that the bill has been improperly advertised as being a solution to the problems, or that it will make a substantial contribution toward solving the problems. My feeling of enthusiasm for that concept is at a rather low ebb. I do not think the bill will come to grips with the serious problems of unemployment which have been chronic and prolonged due to circumstances not affecting the financing of new industries, but rather due to the exhaustion of resources indigenous to these communities.

I simply cannot see how passage of such a bill can provide a cure for such situations. It will take a long time for the program to get under way and for any results from passage of the legislation to be attained.

The bill has been considerably improved since its original conception. It does contain satisfactory antipirating provisions, which was one of my most grievous concerns in connection with the bill. Only after these provisions were adopted in the Senate did I agree to support the bill.

The bill also contains the Senate version of a termination date, which is 4 years. This will require that the whole picture be thoroughly examined at least at the end of that time.

The bill also provides for an annual report by the Secretary.

The bill further provides that the financing of grants-in-aid under the bill are to be appropriated and not made available through the back-door process of financing by direct borrowing from the Treasury.

But this is not true in respect of the three $100 million loan funds. Here backdoor financing prevailed.

I was surprised, as was the Senator from Utah, to see the effect of pressure from the administration on the conferees in connection with the bill. The administration had stood solidly behind the appropriation process of financing—for loans as well as grants—in its own proposal, which was sent to the House as the administration bill. In the final analysis, the House conferees admitted they were put under very heavy pressure from the administration to yield to the Senate and agree to so-called backdoor financing in connection with this very important matter.

It will be interesting to see whether the apprehensions of the conferees are justified when the House acts upon this report, because they felt this was a very important matter and that the House might reject the conference report on the basis that the appropriations process is rejected in the conference report, this having been one of the chief points at issue in connection with the proposed legislation when it was debated in the House.

Mr. President, I must say for the able Senator from Illinois that he was an excellent chairman of the conference committee. He presided amiably and fairly over the deliberations of the committee in connection with the bill.

I shall vote for the conference report. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

Mr. MANSFIELD subsequently said: Mr. President, I move that the Senate reconsider the vote by which the conference report on the depressed areas bill was agreed to.

Mr. KERR. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to table was agreed to.

BENEFITS TO CHILDREN OF UNEMPLOYED PARENTS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 4884) to amend title IV of the Social Security Act to authorize Federal financial participation in aid to dependent children of unemployed parents, and for other purposes.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I thank my colleague for his complimentary comments, but the truth of the matter is that I am not a skilled negotiator. The passage of the bill is not due to my efforts in any degree, but simply due to the logic of the situation and the compelling power of the Senate amendments on the crucial matter of financing.

Similarly, while I think it is probably true the administration was in favor of the Senate position in the matter, I am sure also this was not a determining influence. The advice of the administration was listened to and considered, as it should have been, but the Members of the House are strong and sturdy men who do not accept dictation from anyone. It was the sheer logic of financing Government investments by public debt transactions which carried the day.

While I appreciate the compliments of my friends from across the aisle—they were most courteous, cooperative and friendly—they are not deserved in my case, and I must disavow any praise. If we had not had such a strong case to present I feel we would have failed completely.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I comment that the Senator's skill as a negotiator is only exceeded by his humility and by his modesty.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me on the conference report?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Yes; I yield.

Mr. JAVITS. I was upstairs doing a television and radio show, and I missed the proceedings. I should like to ask the Senator a question.

I understand the Senate gave up on the provision in the bill which would have given a community help if it were harmed by imports. Is that correct?

Mr. DOUGLAS. We put up a terrific fight on that point, and resisted until the very end. We felt that in the interest of harmony we should yield to the House, which was adamant on this provision. We did so very reluctantly.

Mr. JAVITS. May I ask the Senator if there is any likelihood that this general question will have consideration in the Committee on Finance, in view of the fact that it has now been eliminated from the bill?

Mr. DOUGLAS. When the reciprocal trade bill comes up next year, I pledge that I personally will strive for such a provision in the reciprocal trade bill.

Mr. JAVITS. I think, with all respect, unless we take some action upon that, and unless the administration will give it some backing, the administration may find a very difficult atmosphere for the Reciprocal Trade Act. No one has a greater respect for my colleague's economic judgment than I, but the portentous implications, in respect to American trade especially—in view of the imbalance in international payments, and the fact that a deficiency in world trade can nullify any aid efforts of which anyone can conceive in terms of amount—are so serious that if the United States is going to contract its foreign trade policy simply because we do not have the wit or the wisdom to look after the problems of people, in business and labor alike, who are harmed by concentrated imports, we shall be doing one of the greatest disservices to foreign policy of which we are capable, one far more serious than even the terrible reverse freedom suffered in Cuba.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I quite agree with the Senator from New York.

Mr. McCARTHY subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that these remarks may appear preceding the remarks of the Senator from South Carolina on the bill, H.R. 4844, which was passed earlier.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. President, a number of Senators have received telegrams expressing concern over the bill. One reads in part:

Grave concern over the action on H.R. 4844 which may come upon the Senate floor on Wednesday. The bill provides an extension of ADC into the area of unemployment compensation. This is a radical departure from the traditional concept of the purpose of categorical assistance programs. We are deeply concerned about the movement of this bill without the opportunity for public hearings by which the alleged need might be determined on the basis of facts.

Mr. President, this is a temporary program to meet an emergency situation. Its purpose is to assist those families where the wage earner has exhausted his unemployment compensation—or never had coverage. It has particular application for those 14 States whose laws exclude the unemployed from eligibility for general assistance.

This is not proposed legislation based on an alleged or prospective need. The need exists. The House held hearings on this bill in February, but long before this the need was adequately established.

This problem came up frequently before the Special Committee on Unemployment Problems. The committee held hearings in the fall of 1959. The committee received testimony from community leaders about fathers deserting their families so that their wife and children would be eligible for ADC payments, because those unemployed men were excluded from general assistance programs. We had testimony from school superintendents that the school lunch program represented the only hot meal that many children had each day; about children losing weight during Christmas vacation because they did not have enough to eat at home; of children saving a part of their school lunch to take home to feed younger brothers and sisters.

Mr. President, I do not believe that anyone who has seen the condition under which the families of many long-term unemployed have lived could oppose a temporary aid program to do something now for the hundreds of thousands of underfed, ill-clothed, and poorly sheltered children. The estimate supplied the Committee on Finance is that 750,000 children would receive assistance if all States participated for the 14-month period.

The majority of the members of the Committee on Unemployment Problems recommended congressional action to solve this problem. We recommended a program of Federal grants to the States to assist the States in bringing their general assistance programs into line with other public assistance programs, particularly to aid the children of the unemployed.

I believe that the most desirable way to handle this problem would be through expansion of the public assistance program to include a title for Federal grants for general assistance, and in the last session I introduced a bill to accomplish this purpose.

But this is an emergency situation. The great increase in the number of unemployed in the past year has created new problems that cannot await the complete study involved in creating a new title to the public assistance program, a step which involves a number of policy decisions.

The machinery for ADC exists. It is a relatively simple matter to extend Federal grants to needy families through this method. Its purpose and effect are to keep the families of the unemployed together and to give them some relief.

I hope that during the next 14 months, while this emergency program is in effect, Congress will consider permanent legislation to provide a more consistent program of grants to States for general assistance.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I simply wish to say I did not favor the so-called depressed areas bill; however, I am glad the provision relating to excessive imports was deleted from the bill, for the impact of low-wage imports cannot be solved by subsidies from the Public Treasury, only camouflaged where the cancerous growth can go unchecked.

In my opinion, one of the great problems facing this country today is the problem of stopping excessive imports of goods coming to this country from low-wage countries. I know the effect of this on the textile industry of my State, and I understand it is the same in many other industries elsewhere. I know it is a nationwide problem with the textile industry.

There are certain things we could do which would make it unnecessary to have any so-called depressed areas legislation. We should stop excessive imports. We should allow more reasonable depreciation rates on machinery and equipment. If increased wages and fringe benefits obtained by collective bargaining could be based on increased productivity rather than on pressure methods, industries could survive, and it would not be necessary for the National Government to pass such legislation as that embodied in the conference report on area redevelopment.

I regret that the bill is passing the Congress. I feel it is a great mistake, as I stated when the proposed legislation was being considered by the Senate.

If we will face the facts realistically, we must conclude that depressed areas are resulting from our failure to impose at least flexible quotas on imports to guarantee survival of domestic industries. Eight hundred and twenty-eight textile mills have closed their doors in this country within the past few years, with a loss of over 400,000 jobs. If that loss means anything to the economy of the Nation, the Senate of the United States should fight to preserve that industry and others similarly impacted, and subsidies are no solution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and third reading of the bill.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I have no objection to the third reading. I merely wish to say a few words.

The bill (H.R. 4844) was read the third time.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I wish to say a few words on the bill.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. I thought we were considering the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The conference report was agreed to.

Mr. KERR. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Carolina withhold his remarks until after the passage of the bill?

No. 67—15

ELECTIONS. SUBCOMMITTEE OF COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. ASHMORE], I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Elections of the Committee on House Administration be permitted to sit during general debate today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE], I ask unanimous consent that the conferees may have until midnight tonight to file a conference report on the bill S. 1.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The conference report and statement follow:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 256)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in ceragreed to recommend and do recommend to tain economically distressed areas, having met, after full and free conference, have their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following: "That this Act may be cited as the 'Area Redevelopment Act'."

"DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

"SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best interests of the United States, but that some of our communities are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment; that such unemployment and underemployment cause hardship to many individuals and their families and detract from the national welfare by wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, should help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment to take effective steps in planning and financing their economic redevelopment; that Federal assistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals in areas needing redevelopment should enable such areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diversified local economies and improved local living conditions; and that under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources rather than by merely transferring jobs from one area of the United States to another.

"AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATOR

"SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that received by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Administrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the 'Secretary') may assign.

"ADVISORY POLICY BOARD

"SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is created an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board (hereinafter referred to as the 'Board'), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration. The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

"(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under this Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year.

"(c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call together and confer with any persons, including representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and government, who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment or underemployment in the several areas designated by the Secretary as redevelopment areas.

"REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

"SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as 'redevelopment areas' those areas within the United States in which he determines, upon the basis of standards generally comparable with those set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2), that there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. There shall be included among the areas so designated any area—

"(1) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the rate of unemployment, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in paragraph (2); and

"(2) where the Secretary of Labor finds that annual average rate of unemployment has been at least—

"(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceeding four calendar years, or

"(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

"(C) 100 per centum above the national average of one of the preceding two calendar years.

The Secretary of Labor shall find the facts and provide the data to be used by the Secretary in making the determinations required by this subsection.

"(b) The Secretary shall also designate as 'redevelopment areas' those areas (including Indian reservations) within the United States which do not meet the requirements set forth in subsection (a) but which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection and before extending any financial assistance as the result of designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall, by regulation, prescribe detailed standards upon which the designations under this subsection shall be based. In the formulation of such standards the Secretary shall consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are of the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States, the extent to which 'rural development' projects have previously been located in any such area under programs administered by the Department of Agriculture, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent of migration out of the area, and the proportion of the population of each such area which has been receiving public assistance from the Federal Government or from the State or States in which such area is located or from any municipality therein. In making the designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall endeavor to distribute the projects widely among the several States, so far as is feasible and proper, in order that actual experience with this program may be had in as many States and in as many areas and under as many different circumstances as possible. In making these determinations the Secretary shall be guided, but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies made, and information and data collected or compiled, by (1) departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, (2) State and local governments, (3) universities and land-grant colleges, and (4) private organizations.

"(c) Upon the request of the Secretary, the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Interior, and such other heads of agencies as may be appropriate are authorized to conduct such special studies, obtain such information, and compile and furnish to the Secretary such data as the Secretary may deem necessary or proper to enable him to make the determinations provided for in subsection (b) of this section. The Secretary shall reimburse when appropriate, out of any funds appropriated to carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers for any expenditures incurred by them under this section.

"(d) As used in this Act, the term 'redevelopment area' refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area.

"LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS"

"SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (which for purposes of this section shall include participations in loans) to aid in financing any project within a redevelopment area for the purchase or development of land and facilities (including, in cases of demonstrated need, machinery and equipment) for industrial or commercial usage, including the construction of new buildings, the rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied buildings, and the alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings. Such financial assistance shall not be extended (1) for working capital, or (2) to assist establishments relocating from one area to another. The limitation set forth in clause (2) shall not be construed to prohibit assistance for the expansion of an existing business entity through the establishment of a new branch, affiliate, or subsidiary of such entity if the Secretary finds that the establishment of such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary will not result in an increase in unemployment in the area of original location or in any other area where such entity conducts business operations, unless the Secretary has reason to believe that such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary is being established with the intention of closing down the operations of the existing business entity in the area of its original location or in any other area where it conducts such operations.

"(b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, subject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

"(1) The total amount of loans (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding at any one time under this section (A) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(a) shall not exceed $100,000,000 and (B) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(b) shall not exceed $100,000,000.

"(2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants, both private and public (including Indian tribes), which have been approved for such assistance by an agency or instrumentality of the State or political subdivision thereof in which the project to be financed is located, and which agency or instrumentality is directly concerned with problems of economic development in such State or subdivision.

"(3) The project for which financial assistance is sought must be reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located.

"(4) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms.

"(5) The Secretary shall not make any loan without a participation unless he determines that the loan cannot be made on a participation basis.

"(6) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there is a reasonable assurance of repayment.

"(7) Subject to section 12(5) of this Act, no loan, including renewals or extension thereof, may be made hereunder for a period exceeding twenty-five years and no evidences of indebtedness maturing more than twenty-five years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor.

"(8) Loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(a) of this Act, plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum to cover administrative expenses and to provide for losses on loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section.

"(9) Such assistance shall not exceed 65 per centum of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or developing land and facilities (including, in cases of demonstrated need, machinery and equipment), and of constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building or buildings of the particular project, and shall, among others, be on the condition that—

"(A) other funds are available in an amount which, together with the assistance provided hereunder, shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

"(B) not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by an Indian tribe or a community or area organization which is nongovernmental in character, as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance;

"(C) in extending financial assistance under this section with respect to a redevelopment area, the Secretary shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such assistance is extended shall be supplied by nongovernmental sources as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance; and

"(D) to the extent the Secretary finds such action necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular project by other lenders and investors, and except as otherwise provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), any Federal financial assistance extended under this section may be repayable only after other loans made in connection with such project have been repaid in full, and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other loans made in connection with the same project.

"(10) No such assistance shall be extended unless there shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an overall program for the economic development of the area and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the State or local political subdivision in which the project would be located.

"LOANS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES"

"SEC. 7. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase or development of land for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

"(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

"(2) the funds requested for such project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms;

"(3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of other available funds for such project are adequate to insure the completion thereof;

"(4) there is a reasonable expectation of repayment; and

"(5) such area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b) (10) and the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program.

"(b) Subject to section 12(5), the maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than forty years after the date such loan is made. Any such loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(a) of this Act, plus one-quarter of 1 per centum per annum.

"(c) The total amount of loans outstanding at any one time under this section shall not exceed $100,000,000.

"(d) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be reserved by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it agrees to undertake.

"GRANTS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

"Sec. 8. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make grants for land acquisition or development for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

"(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

"(2) the entity requesting the grant proposes to contribute to the cost of the project for which such grant is requested in proportion to its ability so to contribute;

"(3) the project for which a grant is requested will fulfill a pressing need of the area, or part thereof, in which it is, or will be, located, and there is little probability that such project can be undertaken without the assistance of a grant under this section; and

"(4) the area for which a project is to be undertaken has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b) (10) and such project is consistent with such program.

The amount of any grant under this section for any such project shall not exceed the difference between the funds which can be practicably obtained from other sources (including a loan under section 7 of this Act) for such project, and the amount which is necessary to insure the completion thereof.

"(b) The Secretary shall by regulation provide for the supervision of projects with respect to which grants are made under this section so as to insure that Federal funds are not wasted or dissipated.

"(c) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it agrees to undertake.

"(d) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $75,000,000 for the purpose of making grants under this section.

"AREA REDEVELOPMENT FUND

"Sec. 9. (a) To obtain funds for the purpose of extending financial assistance under sections 6 and 7, the Secretary may, with the approval of the President, issue and have outstanding at any one time notes and obligations for purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury in an amount not to exceed $300,000,000. Such notes or other obligations shall be in such forms and denominations, have such maturities, and be subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds for financial assistance under section 6 shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, but such rate shall not be greater than the current average yields on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturities as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of such notes or other obligations. Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds for financial assistance under section 7 shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury which shall be not more than the higher of (1) 2½ per centum per annum, or (2) the average annual interest rate on all interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt as computed at the end of the fiscal year next preceding the issuance by the Secretary and adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase any notes and other obligations issued under this section and for such purpose is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as amended, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under such Act are extended to include any purchase of such notes and other obligations. The Secretary of the Treasury may at any time sell any of the notes or other obligations acquired by him under this section. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such notes or other obligations shall be treated in every respect as public debt transactions of the United States.

"(b) Funds obtained by the Secretary under subsection (a) shall be deposited in an area redevelopment fund (hereinafter referred to as the 'fund'), which is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States, and which shall be available to the Secretary for the purpose of extending financial assistance under sections 6 and 7 and for the payment of all obligations and expenditures arising therefrom. Receipts arising from the programs of assistance under sections 6 and 7 shall be credited to the fund. Any moneys in the fund determined by the Secretary to be in excess of current needs shall be paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

"(c) The fund shall contribute to the civil service retirement and disability fund a sum as provided by section 4(a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act (5 U.S.C. 2254(a)), except that such sum shall be determined by applying to the total basic salaries (as defined in that Act) paid to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act and covered by that Act the per centum rate determined annually by the Civil Service Commission to be the excess of the total normal cost per centum rate of the civil service retirement system over the employee deduction rate specified in such section 4(a). The fund shall also pay into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts that portion of the cost of administration of the civil service retirement and disability fund attributable to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act, as determined by the Civil Service Commission.

"(d) In the performance of and with respect to the functions, powers, and duties vested in him by sections 6 and 7 of this Act, the Secretary shall—

"(1) prepare annually and submit a budget program in accordance with the provisions of sections 102, 103, and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended; and

"(2) determine the character of and the necessity for obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to provisions of law specifically applicable to Government corporations.

"INFORMATION

"Sec. 10. The Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas. The Secretary shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

"TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

In carrying out his duties under this Act the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment (1) to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under this Act, and (2) to other areas which he finds have substantial need for such assistance. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secretary through members of his staff or through the employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations, or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such purposes. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purposes of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000 annually.

"(5) further extend the maturity of or renew any loan made or evidence of indebtedness purchased under this Act, beyond the periods stated in such loan or evidence of indebtedness or in this Act, for additional periods not to exceed ten years, if such extension or renewal will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loan or evidence of indebtedness;

"(6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, modernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any real or personal property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by, him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

"(7) pursue to final collection, by way of compromise or other administrative action, prior to reference to the Attorney General, all claims against third parties assigned to him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act. This shall include authority to obtain deficiency judgments or otherwise in the case of mortgages assigned to the Secretary. Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (41 U.S.C. 5), shall not apply to any contract of hazard insurance or to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on account of property obtained by the Secretary as a result of loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act if the premium therefor or the amount thereof does not exceed $1,000. The power to convey and to execute, in the name of the Secretary, deeds of conveyance, deeds of release, assignments and satisfactions of mortgages, and any other written instrument relating to real or personal property or any interest therein acquired by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of this Act may be exercised by the Secretary or by any officer or agent appointed by him for that purpose without the execution of any express delegation of power or power of attorney;

Nothing herein shall be construed to except the activities under this Act from the application of sections 507(b) and 2679 of title 28, United States Code, and of section 367 of the Revised Statutes (5 U.S.C. 316); and

"(12) establish such rules, regulations, and procedures as he may deem appropriate in carrying out the provisions of this Act.

"TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE"

"SEC. 13. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall be granted under this Act with respect to such area and, for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secretary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment area. The Secretary shall keep the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

"URBAN RENEWAL"

"SEC. 14. Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT"

"SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality

(in this section referred to as a "municipality") is situated in an area designated under section 5 of the Area Redevelopment Act as a redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economy, the Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

"(b) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e) of this section, the Administrator may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirement or limitations of section 110(c) that the project area be predominantly residential in character or be redeveloped for predominantly residential uses under the urban renewal plan, and without regard to any of the limitations of that section on the undertaking of projects for predominantly nonresidential uses.

"(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, a contract for financial assistance under this section may include provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the project area designated under the urban renewal plan for industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or nonprofit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as practicable by such public agency or corporation for the redevelopment of the land in accordance with the urban renewal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land to such public agency or corporation under this section shall be made at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And provided further, That only the purchaser from or lessees of such public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be required to assume the obligations relating to the commencement of improvements imposed under section 105(b) hereof.

"(d) Following the execution of any contract for financial assistance under this section with respect to any project, the Administrator may exercise the authority vested in him under this section as well as other provisions of this title for the completion of such projects, notwithstanding any determination made after the execution of such contract that the area in which the project is located is no longer a redevelopment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

"(e) Not more than 10 per centum of the funds authorized for capital grants under section 103 after the date of the enactment of the Area Redevelopment Act shall be used for the purpose of providing financial assistance under this section. Amounts used for such purpose shall not be taken into account for the purpose of the limitation contained in the second proviso of the fifth sentence of section 110(c)."

"URBAN PLANNING GRANTS"

"SEC. 15. (a) Paragraph (3) of section 701(a) of the Housing Act of 1954 is amended by inserting after 'counties which' the following: '(A) are situated in areas designated by the Secretary of Commerce under section 5(a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as redevelopment areas or (B)'.

"(b) Section 701(b) of such Act is amended by adding before the period at the end of the first sentence a colon and the following: 'Provided, That a grant may be made under this section to a city, municipality, or county described in clause (A) of subsection (a)(3), or to a State planning agency (as provided in clause (C) of subsection (a)(1)) for the provision of planning assistance to such a city, municipality, or county, for not more than 75 per centum of such estimated cost'.

"OCCUPATIONAL TRAINING"

"SEC. 16. (a) The Secretary of Labor is authorized, upon request and whenever he determines such studies are needed, to undertake, or to provide assistance to others for, studies of the size, characteristics, skills, adaptability, occupational potentialities, and related aspects of the labor force of any redevelopment area.

"(b) When a redevelopment area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10), the Secretary of Labor, in consultation with the Secretary and the Secretary of Agriculture, shall determine the occupational training or retraining needs of unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in the redevelopment area. The Secretary of Labor shall notify the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare of the occupational training or retraining requirements of the area, and shall provide for the orderly selection and referral of those unemployed or underemployed individuals residing in the area who can reasonably be expected to obtain employment as a result of the skill they will acquire in the training which is to be made available. The Secretary of Labor shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and with existing State and local agencies and officials in charge of existing programs relating to vocational training and retraining for the purpose of assuring that the facilities and services of such agencies are made fully available to such individuals.

"(c) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that additional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet the occupational training or retraining needs of such individuals, he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall provide assistance, including financial assistance when necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational agency in the provision of such additional facilities or services. If the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare finds that the State vocational educational agency is unable to provide the facilities and services needed, he may, after consultation with such agency, provide for the same by agreement or contract with public or private educational institutions.

"(d) The Secretary of Labor shall arrange to provide any necessary assistance for setting up apprenticeships, and to promote journeyman and other on-the-job training.

"(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $4,500,000 annually, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(f) In providing assistance under this section with respect to unemployed and underemployed individuals residing in redevelopment areas, the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall give consideration to the special needs of individuals who are agricultural workers or are engaged in other seasonal occupations and who require occupational training in order to qualify them to engage in supplementary employment during the off season and during other periods of reduced activity in the field of their regular or primary occupations.

"RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

"Sec. 17. (a) The Secretary of Labor in consultation with the Secretary and the Secretary of Agriculture may, on behalf of the United States, enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment areas are located, under which the Secretary of Labor shall make payments to such States either in advance or by way of reimbursement for the purpose of enabling such States, as agents of the United States, to make weekly retraining payments to unemployed or underemployed individuals residing within such redevelopment areas who are certified by the Secretary of Labor to be undergoing occupational training or retraining under section 16 of this Act. Such payments shall be made only for the period the individual is receiving occupational training or retraining under section 16 of this Act, but not in any event to exceed sixteen weeks, and the amount of any such payment for any week shall be equal to the amount of the average weekly unemployment compensation payment (including allowances for dependents when appropriate) payable for a week of total unemployment in the State making such payments.

"(b) No weekly retraining payment shall be made to any person otherwise eligible who, with respect to the week for which such payment would be made, has received or is seeking unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or any other Federal or any State unemployment compensation law, but if the appropriate State or Federal agency finally determines that a person denied benefits for any week because of this subsection was not entitled to unemployment compensation under title XV of the Social Security Act or such Federal or State law with respect to such week, this subsection shall not apply with respect to such week.

"(c) Any agreement under this section may contain provisions (including, so far as may be appropriate, provisions authorized or made applicable with respect to agreements concluded by the Secretary of Labor pursuant to title XV of the Social Security Act) as will promote effective administration, protect the United States against loss, and insure the proper application of payments made to the State under such agreement. Except as may be provided in such agreements, or in the rules and regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, determinations by any duly designated officer or agency as to the eligibility of individuals for weekly retraining payments under this section shall be final and conclusive for any purposes and not subject to review by any court or any other officer.

"(d) The Secretary of Labor and the Secretary shall jointly prescribe such rules and regulations as they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not in excess of $10,000,000 annually, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"PENALTIES

"Sec. 18. (a) Whoever makes any statement knowing it to be false, or whoever willfully overvalues any security, for the purpose of obtaining for himself or for any applicant any financial assistance under section 6, 7, or 8, or any extension thereof by renewal, deferment of action, or otherwise, or the acceptance, release, or substitution of security therefor, or for the purpose of influencing in any way the action of the Secretary, or for the purpose of obtaining money, property, or anything of value, under this Act, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than five years, or both.

"EMPLOYMENT OF EXPEDITERS AND ADMINISTRATIVE EMPLOYEES

"Sec. 19. No financial assistance shall be extended by the Secretary under section 6, 7, or 8 to any business enterprise unless the owners, partners, or officers of such business enterprise (1) certify to the Secretary the names of any attorneys, agents, and other persons engaged by or on behalf of such business enterprise for the purpose of expediting applications made to the Secretary for assistance of any sort, under this Act, and the fees paid or to be paid to any such person; and (2) execute an agreement binding such business enterprise, for a period of two years after such assistance is rendered by the Secretary to such business enterprise, to refrain from employing, tendering any office or employment to, or retaining for professional services, any person who, on the date such assistance or any part thereof was rendered, or within one year prior thereto, shall have served as an officer, attorney, agent, or employee, occupying a position or engaging in activities which the Secretary shall have determined involve discretion with respect to the granting of assistance under this Act.

"Sec. 21. All laborers and mechanics employed by contractors or subcontractors on projects assisted by the Secretary under this Act and undertaken by public applicants shall be paid wages at rates not less than those prevailing on similar construction in the locality as determined by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act, as amended (40 U.S.C. 276a—276a-5), and every such employee shall receive compensation at a rate not less than one and one-half times his basic rate of pay for all hours worked in any workweek in excess of eight hours in any workday or forty hours in the workweek, as the case may be. The Secretary shall not extend any financial assistance under section 6, 7, or 8 for such a project without first obtaining adequate assurance that these labor standards will be maintained upon the construction work. The Secretary of Labor shall have, with respect to the labor standards specified in this provision, the authority and functions set forth in Reorganization Plan Numbered 14 of 1950 (15 F.R. 3176; 64 Stat. 1267; 5 U.S.C. 133z-15), and section 2 of the Act of June 13, 1934, as amended (40 U.S.C. 276c).

The Secretary is authorized to delegate to the heads of other departments and agencies of the Federal Government any of the Secretary's functions, powers, and duties under this Act as he may deem appropriate, and to authorize the redelegation of such functions, powers, and duties by the heads of such departments and agencies.

"(b) Departments and agencies of the Federal Government shall exercise their powers, duties, and functions in such manner as will assist in carrying out the objectives of this Act. "(b) The Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States, or any of their duly authorized representatives, shall have access for the purpose of audit and examination to any books, documents, papers, and records of the recipient that are pertinent to assistance received under section 6, 7, or 8 of this Act.

"(c) The termination of this Act shall not affect the disbursement of funds under, or the carrying out of, any contract, commitment, or other obligation entered into pursuant to this Act prior to the date of such termination, or the taking of any action necessary to preserve or protect the interests of the United States in any amounts advanced or paid out in carrying on operations under this Act."

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The House amendment struck out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute amendment. The conferees have agreed to a substitute for both the Senate bill and the House amendment. The House amendment made 26 substantive changes in the Senate bill. In agreeing upon a substitute, the Senate conferees accepted 14 of these changes, while the House conferees receded on 8; compromises were reached in the other 4 cases. Except for clarifying, clerical, and technical changes, the differences between the House amendment and the substitute agreed to in conference are explained below.

"ANTIPIRATING" PROVISIONS

Both the Senate bill and the House amendment contained provisions in section 2 (statement of policy) and section 6 (authority for plant loans) barring assistance for industries relocating from one area to another. In section 2, the conference substitute provides that "under the provisions of this act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources rather than by merely transferring jobs from one area of the United States to another." This follows the language of the House amendment except that the word "jobs" is used after "transferring," as in the Senate bill, rather than "employment opportunities," as in the House amendment. The conference substitute provides that assistance under section 6 shall not be used "to assist establishments relocating from one area to another." This omits the phrase "totally or partially" which was included after "relocating" in the House amendment. But the conference substitute includes the following language, which is virtually identical with language included in the House committee report, in explanation of how the prohibition is to be interpreted:

"The limitation set forth in clause (2) shall not be construed to prohibit assistance for the expansion of an existing business entity through the establishment of a new branch, affiliate, or subsidiary of such entity if the Secretary finds that the establishment of such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary will not result in an increase in unemployment in the area of original location or in any other area where such entity conducts business operations, unless the Secretary has reason to believe that such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary is being established with the intention of closing down the operations of the existing business entity in the area of its original location or in any other area where it conducts such operations."

DESIGNATION OF RURAL AREAS

The conference substitute contains the following provisions, which were in the Senate bill but not in the House amendment, concerning designation of rural areas as redevelopment areas under the bill:

1. A requirement that detailed standards for designation of such areas must be prescribed before any financial assistance is extended as a result of such designations.

2. A provision that in making such designations consideration shall be given to the extent to which rural development projects have previously been located in such areas under programs of the Department of Agriculture.

3. A provision that in making such designations the Secretary shall endeavor to distribute projects widely among the several States, so far as feasible and proper, in order that actual experience with the program may be had in as many States and areas and under as many different circumstances as possible.

GEOGRAPHICAL BOUNDARIES OF REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

The Senate bill provided that areas designated as redevelopment areas for assistance under the new program could include "one or more States, one or more counties, or one or more municipalities, or a part of a county or municipality." This provision was eliminated by the House amendment. The conferees agreed to follow the House amendment in this respect.

It is the intent of the conferees for both Houses that in designating industrial areas as redevelopment areas for assistance under the new program, the Secretary should have broad discretion. The data on eligible areas supplied to the Congress by the Labor Department during the hearings were based on existing labor market areas and the Secretary should certainly take this information into account in determining geographical boundaries of redevelopment areas.

At the same time, the conferees recognize that standard labor market area boundary lines may not be appropriate to the purposes of this act because smaller areas may be more realistic. The bill, therefore, does not necessarily require that the labor market area boundary lines be followed. It is contemplated instead that the Secretary of Commerce may establish appropriate new boundaries for redevelopment areas under the bill.

It is not, however, the intention of the conferees to authorize designation of part of a municipality as a redevelopment area in any case, but with that exception it is recognized that designation of redevelopment areas will not necessarily follow political boundary lines.

LOANS FOR MACHINERY AND EQUIPMENT

Section 6 of the Senate bill authorized loans for machinery and equipment for plants "in cases of demonstrated need." The corresponding provision of the House amendment authorized such loans "in exceptional cases." The conference substitute retains the language of the Senate bill.

APPROVAL OF APPLICANTS BY STATE

Section 6(b)(2) of the Senate bill provided for approval of applicants for section 6 loans (plant loans) by the State or political subdivision concerned, through an agency directly concerned with problems of economic development in the State or political subdivision. The corresponding provision in the House amendment required approval by the State; it did not authorize loans to applicants on the basis of approval by a political subdivision. The conference substitute conforms to the Senate bill.

INVESTMENT BY INDIAN TRIBES IN SECTION 6 PROJECTS

The House amendment provided (in sec. 6(b)(9)(B)) that a Federal loan could be made under section 6 only if at least 10 percent of the cost were invested by the State or political subdivision, or by a nongovernmental community or area organization. The Senate bill contained the same requirement except that it added "Indian tribes" to the list of organizations which might make the required 10 percent investment. The conference substitute conforms to the Senate bill.

COMPETITION WITH PRIVATELY OWNED UTILITIES

The Senate bill prohibited assistance under section 7 or 8 for public facilities which would compete with existing privately owned public utilities, unless the State regulatory body found a need for such service which the existing public utility was unable to meet now "or through an expansion which it agrees to undertake." The House amendment substituted "is prepared" for "agrees." The conference substitute retains the provision of the Senate bill.

PUBLIC FACILITY GRANTS

The Senate bill permitted grants under section 8 covering the entire difference between the cost of the project and the amount obtainable from other sources. The House amendment limited the grants under section 8 to 65 percent of the difference between the cost of the project and the amount obtainable from loans and other Federal grant programs. The conference substitute follows the language of the Senate bill.

FINANCING OF LOAN PROGRAMS

The House amendment authorized appropriations to provide funds for loans under sections 6 and 7 of the bill. The Senate bill authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to obtain such funds through public debt transactions under the Second Liberty Bond Act. The conference substitute follows the provisions of the Senate bill in this respect but adopts the House provisions with respect to (1) the establishment of one area redevelopment fund (rather than three revolving funds as in the Senate bill), and (2) the requirement that the fund contribute to the civil service retirement and disability fund with respect to employees performing activities under sections 6 and 7.

URBAN PLANNING GRANTS

Both the House and Senate versions of the bill contained identical language making it possible for urban planning grants to be made directly to areas designated under section 5(a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as redevelopment areas. It is our understanding that this provision is not intended to bypass State planning agencies. Rather it is our understanding that the intention is to provide an alternative route for extending this planning assistance where deemed necessary or advisable but that existing State agencies will continue to be consulted and utilized wherever practicable.

The Senate bill also authorizes urban planning grants of up to 75 percent of cost for such areas. This provision was not included in the House amendment which kept the 50-percent limit applicable to urban planning grants under existing law. The House recedes. Under the substitute agreed to in conference, 75-percent grants could be made for such areas either directly or through State planning agencies.

REPORTS TO CONGRESS

The conference substitute follows the language of the House amendment as to reports to the Congress, and does not include all of the specific provisions of the Senate bill with respect to matters to be included in such reports. The conferees on the part of both Houses intend, however, that such reports shall give full and complete information concerning the operation of the program, and shall include the following items in addition to those specified in the act: (1) The total number of unemployed persons in redevelopment areas; (2) the total principal amount of loans outstanding under the act, the aggregate expenditures incurred by the Government in providing grants and other forms of assistance under the act, and the administrative expenses incurred by the Government in providing assistance under the act; (3) the number of applications for assistance under the act which are pending and the total amount of assistance requested in such applications; (4) the number of industrial or commercial enterprises which have commenced or expanded operations in redevelopment areas as a result of assistance under the act, the total asset value of such enterprises, and a description of each such enterprise in terms of whether it is an expanding enterprise already located in a redevelopment area, a wholly new enterprise, an enterprise which has moved from another area, or a branch of an existing enterprise located elsewhere; and (5) the total number of jobs directly created in each redevelopment area as a result of assistance extended under the act, and the Secretary's estimate of the increase in employment in each such area indirectly resulting from such assistance.

USE OF OTHER AGENCIES BY DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

The conference substitute follows the language of the House bill with respect to delegation of authority by the Secretary of Commerce to other Federal agencies. The Secretary of Commerce has testified before the committees of both the House and the Senate that he will delegate to the Department of Agriculture major responsibility for assistance to be rendered in rural redevelopment areas, as designated under section 5(b) of the act, and the Secretary of Agriculture has testified to his willingness to accept such responsibility. It is the understanding of the conferees that the Department of Agriculture has services and facilities available of requisite competence and experience for effectively carrying out such delegation. It is, therefore, the expectation of the conferees that this delegation to the Department of Agriculture will be made promptly upon enactment of the bill.

STUDY BY THE SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

The House amendment (sec. 27) directed the Secretary of Commerce, when the Department of Defense proposes to deactivate a permanent military installation or major unit thereof in an area where the employment rate is 6 percent or more, to make a study to determine the economic effects of such deactivation when requested to do so by the Governor of the State where the installation is located. It provided that the Secretary's findings would be transmitted to the Secretary of Defense and the Congress. The House recedes and the provision is omitted from the substitute agreed to in conference.

RESEARCH ON CAUSES OF UNEMPLOYMENT

The House amendment (sec. 28) directed the Secretary of Commerce to conduct a continuing program of study and research to assist in determining the causes of unemployment, underemployment, underdevelopment, and chronic depression in the various areas of the Nation and in the Nation as a whole, and to assist in developing programs to solve these problems. The Senate bill contained no corresponding provision. The substitute agreed to in conference retains this provision with two amendments. One amendment provides that the study shall be made in cooperation with other agencies having similar functions. The second amendment eliminates the phrase "and in the Nation as a whole."

TERMINATION OF PROGRAM

The conference substitute contains a provision that was in the Senate bill but not in the House amendment, terminating the program on June 30, 1965. It also provides for liquidation of the program after that date by the Secretary of the Treasury. The carrying out of contracts, commitments, and other obligations theretofore entered into under the program would not be affected by its termination.

THIRTEENTH BIRTHDAY OF STATE OF ISRAEL

(Mr. TOLL asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. TOLL. Mr. Speaker, today is the 13th birthday of the State of Israel. Traditionally in Jewish chronology the 13th birthday is the day marking the growth into adulthood. The State of Israel has attained maturity not only in years. The population has increased from 790,000 to 2,128,000. Industrial production is now over a billion dollars. Exports are over a quarter of a billion, and imports over a half a billion. Agricultural production is $183 million. In 1960 a fleet of 53 ships handled 445,000 tons of cargo. Elementary school education to 600,000 students, and Israel has now over 22,000 teachers.

In the House today a distinguished rabbi of my district, Alex J. Goldman, the spiritual leader of the West Oak Lane Jewish Community Center, has delivered the opening prayer calling attention to this anniversary. The Philadelphia Zionist Council, in conjunction with the city of Philadelphia, has scheduled a celebration luncheon at the Warwick Hotel on Sunday, April 23, in honor of His Excellency, Michael S. Comay, Ambassador of Israel to the United Nations. Immediately following the luncheon a public celebration will be held at Independence Hall. The members of the Philadelphia congressional delegation will participate in this observance, and the Lieutenant Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the Honorable John Morgan Davis, will join with the Ambassador in commemorating Israel's bar mitzvah anniversary.

The chairman of the Philadelphia Zionist Council is the distinguished spiritual leader of the Germantown Jewish Community Center, Rabbi Elias Charry of my district. The chairman of the Independence Hall celebration is an outstanding leader of the Philadelphia bar, Herbert S. Levin, Esq.

I hope that at the next celebration of Israel's birthday I will be able to include a statement that Israel has been able to establish peace with her neighbors.

FEDERAL TAX SYSTEM—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 140)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

A strong and sound Federal tax system is essential to America's future. Without such a system, we cannot maintain our defenses and give leadership to the free world. Without such a system, we cannot render the public services necessary for enriching the lives of our people and furthering the growth of our economy.

The tax system must be adequate to meet our public needs. It must meet them fairly, calling on each of us to contribute his proper share to the cost of Government. It must encourage efficient use of our resources. It must promote economic stability and stimulate economic growth. Economic expansion in turn creates a growing tax base, thus increasing revenue and thereby enabling us to meet more readily our public needs, as well as our needs as private individuals.

This message recognizes the basic soundness of our tax structure. But it also recognizes the changing needs and standards of our economic and international position, and the constructive reform needs to keep our tax system up to date and to maintain its equity. Previous messages have emphasized the need for prompt congressional and executive action to alleviate the deficit in our international balance of payments—to increase the modernization, productivity and competitive status of American industry—to stimulate the expansion and growth of our economy—to eliminate to the extent possible economic injustice within our own society—and to maintain the level of revenues requested in my predecessor's budget. In each of these endeavors, tax policy has an important role to play and necessary tax changes are herein proposed.

The elimination of certain defects and inequities as proposed below will provide revenue gains to offset the tax reductions offered to stimulate the economy. Thus no net loss of revenue is involved in this set of proposals. I wish to emphasize here that they are a "set"—and that considerations of both revenue and equity, as well as the interrelationship of many of the proposals, urge their consideration as a unit.

I am instructing the Secretary of the Treasury to furnish the Committee on Ways and Means of the House a detailed explanation of these proposals in connection with their legislative consideration.

I. LONG-RANGE TAX REFORM

While it is essential that the Congress receive at this time this administration's proposals for urgent and obvious tax adjustments needed to fulfill the aims listed above, time has not permitted the comprehensive review necessary for a tax structure which is so complicated and so critically important to so many people. This message is but a first though urgent step along the road to constructive reform.

I am directing the Secretary of the Treasury, building on recent tax studies of the Congress, to undertake the research and preparation of a comprehensive tax reform program to be placed before the next session of the Congress.

Progressing from these studies, particularly those of the Committee on Ways and Means and the Joint Economic Committee, the program should be aimed at providing a broader and more uniform tax base, together with an appropriate rate structure. We can thereby work toward the goal of a higher rate of economic growth, a more equitable tax structure, and a simpler tax law. I know these objectives are shared by—and, at this particular time of year, acutely desired by—the vast majority of the American people.

In meeting the demands of war finance, the individual income tax moved from a selective tax imposed on the wealthy to the means by which the great majority of our citizens participates in paying for well over one-half of our total budget receipts. It is supplemented by the corporation income tax, which provides for another quarter of the total.

This emphasis on income taxation has been a sound development. But so many taxpayers have become so preoccupied with so many tax-saving devices that business decisions are interfered with,

Senate

The Senate was not in session today. Its next meeting will be held on Thursday, April 27, 1961, at 12 o'clock meridian.

House of Representatives

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 26, 1961

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Revelation 19: 6-7: The Lord God omnipotent reigneth; let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to Him.

O Thou whose divine sovereignty and authority we cannot doubt or deny and whose overtures and appeals of love we cannot silence, grant that we may seek Thy counsel and companionship as we strive to grapple victoriously with the hard facts and experiences of life.

May all the leaders and members of the various branches of our Government have that serene inner confidence and courage which will guide them through the bewildering confusion of our times and make them equal to every emergency.

Give them a clear perception of their responsibilities and inspire them with the devotion of our forefathers whose character and conduct enshrined our country's noblest ideals and traditions.

Help us to cultivate a lofty conception of the sanctity of Thy laws and cling with increasing tenacity of faith to the eternal truth that Thou reigneth and righteousness shall prevail whatever may be the posture and peril of the days in which we are living.

Hear us in Christ's name. Amen.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order at any time on Thursday, May 4, 1961, for the Speaker to declare a recess for the purpose of receiving in joint meeting the President of Tunisia.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

CORRECTION OF VOTE

Mr. ZELENKO. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 42 on yesterday I voted "yea." The RECORD today shows I voted "nay." It has been determined that this is the result of an error in printing, and I ask unanimous consent that the permanent RECORD and Journal be corrected accordingly, to show that I voted "yea" on rollcall No. 42.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

THE LATE VERY REVEREND ROBERT J. SLAVIN, O.P., S.T.D.

(Mr. McCORMACK asked and was given permission to address the House.)

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, the death last Monday of the Very Reverend Robert J. Slavin, O.P., S.T.D., president of Providence College, Providence, R.I., takes from our midst a great priest, an outstanding leader in the field of education, and a dedicated American.

There are few persons anywhere in the world who more clearly understood the evil mind of the Communist, or the dastardly intent of this destructive world conspiracy, than Father Slavin.

Father Slavin, or Father "Joe" as Mrs. McCormack and I fondly called him, was near and dear to us and considered by us as an immediate member of our family.

It was only last Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday while attending meetings in Washington of a committee discussing problems concerning pending legislation in the field of education, that he stayed with Mrs. McCormack and myself.

In 1926, Father Slavin entered the Order of Preachers, which is popularly known as the Dominican Order, and was ordained a priest in 1934.

A recognized authority on Thomistic philosophy—St. Thomas of Aquinas, the great philosopher of the Christian era—Father Slavin was professor of philosophy at Catholic University from 1936 to 1947.

In 1947 he was appointed as president of Providence College, which position he continuously occupied until his unexpected death last Tuesday.

A doctor of philosophy, master of sacred theology, Father Slavin was the recipient of many degrees and other honors. He was universally respected by persons of all creeds.

Father Slavin was truly a great priest, possessing an understanding mind, who broadened areas of agreement, and lessened, thereby, areas of tension and disagreement.

Father Slavin was an outstanding educator, and a man whose human friendliness and sympathy endeared him to millions. In his priestly service, Father Slavin was an entirely dedicated man. His magnificent intellectual attainments, his thorough academic training, his great physical energy, and the drive of his moral force, were all channeled to the service of the Catholic church and of his religious order, the Order of Preachers—the Dominican.

The task to which Father Slavin was assigned, the administration of Providence College, was one for which he was eminently suited by his capacities and turn of mind, and it was a task in which he achieved great things. He has built up the college, doubling the number of students, doubling the size of the faculty, carrying through and expanding an ambitious building program inherited from his predecessor, and adopting far-reaching measures for the improvement of courses and educational methods in the college.

His knowledge and experience in the educational field has also been given generously and effectively to the Nation, through his participation in the work of such bodies as the American Council on Education, the Advisory Committee on New Educational Media of the U.S. Office of Education, and the Advisory Committee to the Surgeon General on medical education.

Father Slavin was the author of several important books, and the collaborator in the writing of other books, particularly on philosophy of education. He was one of the founders of the Thomist magazine, as well as the pioneer in perfecting theology courses on the undergraduate level.

Father Slavin was a member of a number of educational associations, such as the National Catholic Education Association, the American Association of Colleges and Universities, The National Catholic Philosophical Association, the Conference on Science, Philosophy, and Religion, serving on important committees of these associations.

The memory of this great priest, this outstanding leader in the field of education, this dedicated American, will always remain, in particular, in the minds and hearts of his brother priests of the Dominican Order in the minds and hearts of the students of Providence College for all time, as well as in the minds and hearts of countless of thousands of his friends and admirers. His influence for good will be felt, and his memory blessed, for many years to come, and by many who never had the privilege of knowing him. I knew and loved the man, and it is with deep grief that I mourn his passing.

The sorrow of Mrs. McCormack and myself in the death of Father Slavin is second only, and very close second, to the grief and sorrow of the loved ones he has left behind.

To his dear father, his sisters, one of whom is a Sister (Nun) of the Catholic church, and his brother, Mrs. McCormack and I extend our deep sympathy in their great loss and sorrow.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ACT

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House may be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

(For conference report and statement see proceedings of the House of April 20, 1961.)

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN].

(Mr. PATMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, 4 weeks ago today the House passed S. 1, the Area Redevelopment Act, by a vote of 251 to 167. The bill previously had passed the Senate by a vote of 63 to 27.

There is no question about the desperate conditions in the areas this legislation is designed to help. While there are some signs of an upturn in our economy, there has been no improvement in the unemployment figure, which now stands at 6.9 percent for the country as a whole, seasonally adjusted. Even a general upturn in the economy will not solve the problems of these hard-core areas, which have had heavy unemployment in good times and bad for years. They have been trying hard to work their way out of their difficulties, and they will keep working hard at it, but they must have some help from the Federal Government.

In the 85th Congress and the 86th Congress, legislation to provide this help was sent to the White House but was vetoed. Today this House has the opportunity to send to the White House a bill we know the President will sign. This help is long overdue, and I hope that the House will agree to this conference report today so that the Federal Government can begin to meet its responsibilities toward helping to restore strong and vigorous economies in these areas, without further delay.

MUST BE VOTED UP OR DOWN

The conference report has been adopted in the Senate and the conferees have been discharged. The question today is a question of voting up or down this conference report.

Amendments will not be in order, a motion to recommit to the conference committee will not be in order, because there is no conference. This is an opportunity to vote for this bill or against the bill only. I doubt, and I seriously doubt, and I have reasons to state that doubt, that if this conference report is not adopted here in the House we will not have any area redevelopment bill during this session of the Congress. In other words, this is it. We either vote for it or against it.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HALLECK. In the first place, we should have acted first on this conference report, in which event we would have had the opportunity to offer a motion to recommit. However, the gentleman knows that if this conference report is voted down the chairman of the committee would have no other alternative except to ask for a further conference, with the appointment of new conferees, and get a bill. I do not think the gentleman should be inclined to scare people to death.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman is trying to scare folks, I am not. I am telling the truth, and I know what the situation is. If this conference report is defeated, the Senate can act or not act. I have reason to believe the Senate will not act. There is no way on earth for the House of Representatives to compel the Senate to act, and the minority leader knows that. We cannot force the Senate to act.

Mr. HALLECK. As I understood the gentleman's statement, it was to the effect that there would be no further effort to get a bill.

Mr. PATMAN. That is my opinion.

Mr. HALLECK. That is where I disagree with the gentleman. In other words, many Members are for a depressed areas bill, but they are against the backdoor spending that is provided. There is no reason in the world why it cannot be amended, and it can be amended if the conference report is voted down.

Mr. PATMAN. I know the gentleman would like to get off the difficult spot he is on. His side is in the position of being against unemployed and against the depressed areas bill. I would like to get him out of that position. I do not blame him. There is only one way to do it, and that is to vote for this conference report, because if you vote against it, I am giving you warning now, there will be no depressed areas bill this session. This is the only opportunity. If you are against it, vote against it.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COOLEY. I notice on page 23 of the report this language:

The Secretary of Commerce has testified before the committees of both the House and the Senate that he will delegate to the Department of Agriculture major responsibility for assistance to be rendered in rural redevelopment areas, as designated under section 5(b) of the act, and the Secretary of Agriculture has testified to his willingness to accept such responsibility.

Is it perfectly clear that the Secretary of Commerce will delegate all phases of this bill to the Secretary of Agriculture which affects rural areas?

Mr. PATMAN. The very next sentence would have answered the gentleman's question. It is right here in the report:

It is, therefore, the expectation of the conferees that this delegation to the Department of Agriculture will be made promptly upon enactment of the bill.

Mr. COOLEY. That means all phases of the bill?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I appreciate the gentleman's desire to explain the conference report.

Mr. PATMAN. Just for a question.

Mr. McDONOUGH. The question is, Was not the gentleman one of the most adamant Members on the Democratic side against back-door spending until within the last 24 hours of the conference?

Mr. PATMAN. I was representing this House as a conferee, and I was standing up for the House bill against the Senate bill. But two things happened, one thing right here on the floor of the House. While I was standing up with the Senate conferees this House, in a way that could be considered by unanimous consent, passed a bill that just pulled the rug out from under us as conferees. There we were standing up against the adamant Senate expecting to have the House provision on financing adopted, and this House right here where we are now passed another bill.

Mr. McDONOUGH. What bill?

Mr. PATMAN. The veterans housing bill that provided for 2½ times as much money, I believe by unanimous consent, carrying the Senate provision on financing. So what could we do?

Now, here is where I say it was by unanimous consent. A motion was made to recommit, to strike out the method of financing. Any Member of the House could have asked for a division. Not one asked for a division. Any Member of the House could have demanded a rollcall because there was not a quorum present. No Member did. The minority leader was sitting right there at the time. He did not ask for a division. He did not ask for a rollcall. Therefore, that bill passed unanimously. There we were standing up with the Senate objecting to their method of financing and the House adopting a bill at that very time that carried 2½ times as much by unanimous consent.

Mr. LOSER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. LOSER. I recall the other day when this bill was originally considered in the House that the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] made the statement that 10 times as many counties or governmental agencies would qualify for benefits under this bill as would receive it by reason of the small sum authorized in the bill. Now, my question is this: There has been a complete revision of the formula set out in the House bill.

Mr. PATMAN. Just ask a question, please, sir, because my time is very much limited.

Mr. LOSER. I am asking if there has not been a complete revision of the formula under which the State governmental agencies could qualify for aid under the bill.

Mr. PATMAN. I do not agree.

Mr. LOSER. Is not the language entirely different in the conference report?

Mr. PATMAN. It remains substantially the same. And, I will state to the gentleman that I do not believe I said 10 times as much. I do not believe I used any figure, and I doubt that it would have been inaccurate if I did, but I do know that there is not near as much money as will be needed. And most of these projects could properly be designated as pilot projects. But, at least, a start will be made to help distressed areas and help the unemployed. You have that chance.

TWENTY-SIX DIFFERENCES RESOLVED

This conference report is a compromise, worked out after 4 weeks of hard negotiations, informally as well as in formal conference between the managers on the part of the House and Senate. Of the 26 issues in conference, the managers on the part of the Senate yielded on 14; the managers on the part of the House yielded on 8; and compromises were reached on the remaining 4. The so-called antipirating provisions were compromised in a way that strengthened them considerably over the original Senate bill, because the strong antipirating language of the House committee report was written right into the bill in conference. The Senate conferees yielded and accepted the Scranton amendment, which puts the section 6 plant loan program on a business-like basis by making certain that the required 10 percent State or local investment, and the required 5 percent private investment, are subordinate to the Federal loan. The Senate also agreed to the House provisions extending the Small Business Administration's authority to make loans to local development corporations, which is now due to expire June 30. We also succeeded in persuading the Senate conferees to accept without any modification the provisions of the House bill concerning public facility loans, the House provisions on occupational training, and the strong provisions of the House bill requiring that the Secretary of Commerce utilize other existing agencies to the fullest extent practicable so as to avoid the duplication of existing staffs and facilities.

FINANCING PROVISION MAJOR DIFFERENCE

As in all compromises, we had to give in on some things to reach an agreement. For 4 weeks we tried to find some means of persuading the Senate conferees to accept the financing provisions of the House bill. We fought hard to convince the Senate conferees of the soundness of the House provision. But you should realize that the Senate conferees were convinced that if they accepted the House provision requiring that these funds be obtained by appropriations it would kill the program. When we argued that they were endangering passage of the bill by insisting on public debt transaction financing, we actually discovered that there was a strong feeling among the Senate conferees that it would be better not to have a bill than to accept the House provision. Still, we fought on, until the President indicated that in order to break the deadlock he felt we should recede. We then agreed to do so, in order that some agreement could be reached.

HOUSE YIELDED ON FINANCING

While I tried hard to keep the appropriations provisions of the House bill, I am now prepared to accept the Treasury financing provisions agreed to in conference. There are respectable and impressive arguments against this type of financing, but I think we should keep the argument in perspective. While there have been repeated charges that this type of financing somehow violates the Constitution, I have never seen one single opinion of a court of law cited in support of this charge. My own reading of the opinions of the Supreme Court and legal commentators on this point convinces me this is perfectly consistent with the Constitution, and of course it has been used for over 30 years in programs involving billions of dollars, without ever having been ruled unconstitutional by the courts. The epithet "back-door spending" has been applied so frequently to this type of financing that the impression has been created that it has been used to squander public funds surreptitiously under programs that could not stand the light of day. Let me remind the House that this type of financing has a distinguished history, both in terms of social objectives it has helped to achieve and in terms of dollars earned for the Treasury in the process. The Home Owners Loan Corporation refinanced mortgages on more than a million homes with this type of financing. It paid into the Treasury, on liquidation, net earnings of $14 million, after repaying all Treasury investments and meeting all costs.

TYPE OF FINANCING NOT UNUSUAL

The Veterans' Administration's direct home-loan program uses this type of financing, and, of course, the House approved legislation continuing this program less than 2 weeks ago. Through 1960, $1.5 billion had been loaned under this program, which has shown a profit of $74 million to the taxpayers, as the House was told 2 weeks ago by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. TEAGUE] and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ADAIR]. Other typical examples of earnings under programs financed with public debt receipts are $367 million for the Federal National Mortgage Association, $613 million for the Export-Import Bank, and $485 million for the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

NO GIVEAWAY PROGRAM

This bill is not a giveaway program. This type of financing would be used only for loans, which will be repaid to the Treasury with interest, in the same way the other programs I have referred to have operated. It worked well in those programs, showing a direct profit to the taxpayers as well as tremendous indirect profits by strengthening our economy. It will do the same thing here.

TERMINATION DATE 4 YEARS

One of the eight provisions the House conferees yielded on was a provision of the Senate bill terminating the program on June 30, 1965. We agreed to this simply to make sure that no one can charge that the public debt financing provisions prevent congressional review of the program. Even without this termination date, there will, of course, be an annual review when appropriations are requested for administrative expenses and grants under the bill. But this termination date assures the Congress of the opportunity for a complete review of the entire program within a reasonable period of time. It provides a 4-year period in which the program must prove itself or come to an end.

I urge you to accept this compromise bill. It is desperately needed, and I am convinced it is the best bill we can get under the circumstances. We should send this bill to the White House so that this program can get underway without further delay.

NEEDED: A NEW LOOK AT AMERICAN BANKING

Mr. Speaker, America's banks can play a central part in reinvigorating depressed areas. But to do this job requires banks intimately familiar with local conditions and with local people. Chain banks with branches in small towns are not able to supply this personal touch. Hence, our concern with depressed areas cannot be separated from what has been happening to America's banking system. I submit, therefore, it is appropriate that we take a new look at America's banking system, and analyze whether it is carrying out its obligation to serve communities throughout America.

The American Constitution grants to the Federal Government the right to create and determine the value of money. Although this right resides in the Federal Government, it has seen fit to delegate this right largely to commercial banking interests. When the Federal Government delegates one of its constitutional prerogatives to private persons, such persons have a fearful and sacred duty to use this power in the public interest. Has the American banking community discharged this obligation to the public?

The entire banking system has been transformed drastically in recent years, and the events of recent months warn of further upheavals surpassing anything experienced previously. I submit that we have ignored the developments in this industry for too long.

Developments in monetary affairs touch upon every part of America's economic life. Money is the bloodstream and banks are the heart of every economic system. Because banking is such a vital organ in our economic system, many well-meaning persons have urged that only delicate surgery be performed upon it. But there is such a thing as being too delicate, of being too cautious, of fearing to do anything which might cause some pain. When the very life of the patient is at stake, however, we must risk more extensive surgery. And experience with the banking system leaves no doubt in my mind but that it is sufficiently hardy, although somewhat obese, to withstand even the most radical surgery. Although today I am not proposing extensive surgery, I do feel that we can wait no longer to make an examination to determine whether such surgery is necessary. The banking community's performance has not been satisfactory for some time, and I am not sanguine about the prospects of improvement.

I should like to review a few of these developments with you today.

DECLINING BANKING SERVICES

In 1921 there were 31,076 banks. Since then the American population increased from 109 to 180 million. Since then the gross national product increased from $74 to $503 billion. Since then the money supply has increased from $21 to $144 billion. But in spite of the tremendous growth of the American economy over the past 40 years, the number of banks decreased by over one-half to just 13,999 in 1960.

This centralization of banking facilities has resulted in the demise of hundreds of local banks in many communities throughout America. As a result many local communities are completely without banks, and even more often local banks have been acquired and turned into branches of vast banking institutions or units of immense holding companies.

When a community loses control of its local bank, the entire community is the loser. Control over the community's money shifts from main street to some impersonal banker in a faraway city. Local merchants must deal with hirings and clerks rather than deal face to face with the owner. The human element which is the heart and soul of small business dealings is replaced with the impersonal accounting of debits and credits. This development is one of the leading causes for the deterioration of American community life; it is one factor which is transforming the population of main street in many communities from proud local merchants and bankers to clerks and employees of chainstores and chainbanks.

CONCENTRATION MEANS CONTROL OF MONEY

The increasing concentration in American banking gives bankers more and more control over the money market. In a market economy, variation of interest rates can play a powerful role in ending recessions. As a recession sets in, interest rates fall, thereby encouraging borrowing for business expansion. But the vast concentration of banking power has largely negated the responsiveness of interest rates to changing economic conditions. Interest rates still go up with booms but come down very little during recessions.

This is an open secret. All but the most naive are aware of the tremendous power bankers possess over interest rates. For example, Business Week magazine in a story entitled "Big Mergers and Good Profits" reported:

There's no doubt that the good earnings of the banks in 1960 are largely due to the slowness of bankers to reduce their lending rates. Not until late August, months after open-market interest rates had dropped, did they cut their prime lending rate.

Joint Resolution 375, calling for a moratorium on bank mergers, which I introduced on April 17, and which has been referred to the House Banking and Currency Committee, is directed at preventing further irreversible deterioration in community life and further increase in banking concentration. Such a moratorium will give us time to take a new look at American banking before it is too late.

BANK MERGERS ON RISE

Bank mergers have taken an awful toll over the past 40 years. Since 1921 nearly 10,000 banks have been consolidated, merged or acquired. The merger tempo has been high for many years. But it accelerated after 1950. In every year since 1952 there have been over 100 bank mergers, and for the past 8 years there has been an average of about 170 bank mergers annually. And the situation seems to be accelerating further. Immense consolidations have been consummated and more are in the works. Business Week reported as follows on February 4, 1961:

The first proposal for a suburban acquisition by a New York bank came in September, when Bankers Trust Co.—sixth in deposits in the city and eighth in the Nation—announced plans to join with County Trust Co., the largest in Westchester County, in a holding company.

Since September, merger proposals have come thick and fast:

Manufacturers Trust and Hanover Bank said they planned to merge. This would not affect the suburbs, since both banks operate entirely within the city except for overseas offices, but it will have a big effect on bank competition in the New York money market, since it would unite a major retail bank (Manufacturers) with one of the few remaining wholesale banks (Hanover).

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., already the largest wholesale bank in the United States, announced plans to set up a holding company to span New York State from end to end. This would probably create the Nation's largest bank holding company, with assets of over $6 billion. Currently the No. 1 holding company is Firtsamercia Corp., whose latest statement showed assets of $4.9

billion. Morgan Guaranty plans to join with Manufacturers & Traders Trust Co., in Buffalo, Lincoln Rochester Trust Co., National Commercial Bank & Trust Co. of Albany First Trust & Deposit Co. in Syracuse, Oneida National Bank & Trust of Central New York, and First-City National Bank of Binghamton. All six upstate banks are active in retailing.

THE TREND SPREADS

The New York banks weren't the only ones that became merger minded during 1960:

In Chicago, Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co.—No. 2 in the city behind First National Bank—announced a merger with City National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago. Had the deal gone through on December 31, it would have added $392 million to Continental Illinois' $2.5 billion in deposits and would have pushed it ahead of First National. Final approval would mean that City National and its employees would have to move en masse into Continental's giant headquarters in the Loop, since Illinois prohibits all forms of branch banking.

In Philadelphia, in another move that would upset traditional leadership, Philadelphia National Bank is bidding to combine with Girard Trust Corn Exchange Bank. The merger would give Philadelphia National about $2 billion in assets, clearly the biggest in its area and topping First Pennsylvania Banking & Trust Co. by a wide margin. In addition, the branch system of the projected Philadelphia Girard National Bank & Trust Co. would blanket the Philadelphia metropolitan area.

In Boston, State Street Bank & Trust Co. plans to absorb Rockland-Atlas National Bank, in a move that would supplant National Shawmut Bank as the second largest in Massachusetts. The merged bank would have $530 million in deposits, compared to National Shawmut's $452 million. However, First National Bank of Boston would remain far out in front.

ANTIMERGER POLICY FRUSTRATED

Congress has expressed frequently its concern over the trend and results of bank mergers. It has given authority to rule on the desirability of particular mergers to various agencies. The Comptroller of the Currency has jurisdiction over national banks. The Federal Reserve has jurisdiction over State-chartered banks of the Federal Reserve System and bank holding companies. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has jurisdiction over insured State-chartered banks. Although the Justice Department is required to give an opinion to the responsible agency on whether a merger would have an adverse effect on competition, these agencies need not be bound by Justice's opinion. For example, last week the Federal Reserve Board, reportedly by a three to two decision, approved a proposed merger between the State Street Bank & Trust Co. and Rockland-Atlas National Bank, both of Boston, despite an adverse opinion on the competitive factor from the Justice Department.

I understand that recently Treasury Secretary Dillon made an agreement with the Justice Department that the Comptroller of the Currency would withhold final approval of mergers within his jurisdiction if the Justice Department objects. It is also reported that the Justice Department has been seeking similar agreements with the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

I am not sure how the Federal Reserve Board goes about assessing what is in the public interest. But clearly the effect of a merger on banking competition is not a very critical factor in its analysis. This is unfortunate. And those interested in preserving a competitive economy must seriously question the value system embraced by the Federal Reserve Board.

Either we are for a competitive economy or we simply give lipservice to one. We have been drifting far too long in our policy toward American banking. The hour already is late and we must act before the final hour is struck. This calls for drastic action now.

It is for these reasons that I have offered for the serious consideration of Congress, House Joint Resolution 375, a joint resolution calling for a moratorium on bank consolidations, mergers and acquisitions.

Mr. Speaker, in the area redevelopment bill conference report there is a provision about urban planning grants as follows:

URBAN PLANNING GRANTS

Both the House and Senate versions of the bill contained identical language making it possible for urban planning grants to be made directly to areas designated under section 5(a) of the Area Development Act as redevelopment areas. It is our understanding that this provision is not intended to bypass State planning agencies. Rather it is our understanding that the intention is to provide an alternative route for extending this planning assistance where deemed necessary or advisable but that existing State agencies will continue to be consulted and utilized wherever practicable.

The Senate bill also authorizes urban planning grants of up to 75 percent of cost for such areas. This provision was not included in the House amendment which kept the 50-percent limit applicable to urban planning grants under existing law. The House recedes. Under the substitute agreed to in conference, 75-percent grants could be made for such areas either directly or through State planning agencies.

SMALL TOWNS ARE URBAN

President Kennedy's proposal—which I favor—for creation of a Cabinet-level Department of Urban Affairs and Housing to help prevent the appalling deterioration of many of our urban areas should remind all of us that this appalling deterioration is just as much of a spreading cancer in Small Town, U.S.A.

While we are considering legislation to aid depressed areas, let us also look into some of the causes of depressed areas. One main cause of the blight—particularly in our smaller urban areas—is the concentration of economic wealth in our larger metropolitan areas at the expense and to the economic distress of smaller communities.

However, this withering blight has affected communities of all sizes and action must be taken to remedy a curse that is sapping the strength of our economy.

Let me say again that I endorse the President's recommendation with the understanding that the small town would receive equal recognition, equal representation, and equal treatment with her bigger-sister cities in charting a constructive course for the Nation's economy. I am confident President Kennedy will concur in this.

The small town with its locally owned independent industries and stores, its owner-occupied dwellings and tree-lined avenues has been, and should remain, the backbone of our Nation.

WALL STREET RUNS MAIN STREET

But now—as I have stressed before—Main Street is being run by Wall Street. We can no longer think of Main Street as a place of hometown merchants—a community of locally owned, independent shops, banks, and service establishments. It is true that the stores are still there, but the store front is a false front as far as local ownership is concerned. The Main Streets of the Nation's crossroads communities are largely owned and operated by a few nationwide corporations. It is almost tantamount to authorizing outsiders to erect tollgates at the city limits sign to extort local resources for uses in far distant environs. It is centralized control by absentee directors. Through little expense to themselves these absentee directors control a community's destiny and drain its financial resources away from the locality and into the big cities. This tends to make us a nation of salaried clerks and shop attendants for the financial benefit of absentee financial autocrats who have no interest in the locality's community life, its homes, schools, churches. Financial Autocrats, Inc., cares not whether or if Small Town, U.S.A., has sufficient revenues for its educational, religious, and recreational facilities. The absentee-owner is not interested in parks and playgrounds, in streets and sidewalks, and the scores of services a modern community is obligated to provide for a healthy and wholesome community life.

IMPAIRS ENTIRE ECONOMY

We must keep up our fight for small business and our free enterprise system. We must not fail because failure will hurt not only small business but our country. In the interest of the public, we must reverse the present trend toward concentration and control of business by a few giants. Unless we reverse the trend toward concentration, it means that community life will be destroyed. Unless we do something—not just to stem the trend, but to turn the tide—we will not only lose control of affairs in our communities, but invite the suicidal prospect of having the country's entire economy taken over by a totalitarian or socialistic type of centralized power. We know that there is but a short step from centralized control of business by a few giant corporations to socialism. Our best insurance against socialism or any form of totalitarianism is in the strength and vigor of many small and independent business institutions of all kinds scattered throughout our land.

I have called attention to the plight of the small, independent businessman on many occasions. Two years ago, to cite a specific case, I referred to columns written by Sylvia Porter about the historic city of Louisville. Here, in part, is what she said:

If you work for a manufacturing firm in Louisville today, the odds are better than 6 to 4 that you are an employee of a plant owned by outsiders—controlled by interests far removed from your hometown.

More than 60 percent of the manufacturing jobs in your proud, 187-year-old Kentucky city are in absentee-owned corporations. Decisions of crucial importance to you, your family, your entire community are not made by Louisville residents; often they're made by tycoons, efficiency experts, or financiers who only rarely visit your city.

If you work for a big retail store in Louisville, the odds are a towering 8 or 9 to 1 that you are working for a branch, a coast-to-coast chain.

REALITY IS HERE

Of Louisville's seven biggest stores, only one is homeowned and that one is No. 5 in size. Your store manager may appear in charge but it's most improbable that the key policies are set by him. Rather, the likelihood is they're fixed at headquarters elsewhere.

In Louisville, absentee ownership of industrial plants, stores, major service organizations is no longer a threat arising from the great merger trend of this decade.

Here, the trend—which I first reported from Rochester, N.Y., a month ago—has become a startling reality. And the implications go far beyond the obvious—the inclination of imported managers to disregard local charities, to give only minimum support to city groups.

In Louisville, absentee control is striking at the very industrial and financial heart of the city itself. Here is a tale which cites the Nation over will ignore at their own peril.

STRICTER CONTROLS NEEDED

Is this digression a condemnation of big business per se? Not at all. Big business brought us mass production which, in turn, brought our Nation dynamic strength and economic growth.

But I am convinced that decisive action must be taken to protect the smaller businessman and his community against unfeeling greed. Perhaps James C. Worthy, a vice president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., expressed it better in his book, "Big Business and Free Men." He said:

We can preserve democracy as we can preserve free economic institutions, only by holding them in continuous danger of being destroyed from within—not by their enemies but by their friends, their own citizens who have freedom to act but who must be depended upon to act with judgment and restraint and with proper consideration for the general welfare as well as their own.

It is my contention that too often our industrial emperors fail to act with the judgment and restraint with proper consideration for the general welfare. We cannot condemn them for doing everything the law allows, and that is all they are doing. But should not we change the laws for the good of the general welfare?

Prior to the President's recommendation of a Department of Urban Affairs and Housing, I had given considerable thought to proposing a Department of Small Business on a Cabinet level. While I favor the President's proposal, I do believe that—if the President's recommendation becomes reality—strenuous efforts must be made to guarantee that Small Town, U.S.A., will receive the same recognition and consideration as the major metropolitan areas.

I think we have reason to fear that such a department will have a strong tendency to give preferential consideration to large cities at the expense of the smaller communities, unless provisions for serving the smaller communities are spelled out. And this, any administrative official in the same situation could do easily without intent. The larger cities have well-paid professional staffs—lawyers, engineers, city planners—who are alert to every service or aid made available by the Federal Government. They would be the first to rap on the door of a new department for help. The smaller cities, not so well staffed, would be slower to learn the ropes and take advantage of any assistance or guidance offered. The larger cities also are in close touch with Government departments and agencies and their staff personnel are frequent visitors to the Nation's Capital. This is exactly what happened when the 1949 Housing Act was passed. The big cities were Johnny-on-the-spot for grants, loans and planning advances. The smaller cities came along later and got what was left, and some years that was nothing.

SMALL BUSINESS DIVISION

If it is the sense of Congress to establish a Department of Urban Affairs and Housing, I urgently recommend creating a separate Division for Smaller Community Development within the Department.

My fears that big city influence would dominate a Department of Urban Affairs and Housing prompt me to continue pounding away for coequal status for the smaller communities. With the metropolitan areas already draining the resources of our smaller cities, how incomprehensibly unjust it would be for the Government of the United States to take tax revenues from smaller communities to benefit those who happen to work and live in large cities. To prevent this discrimination, equal treatment protection must be provided for smaller communities—perhaps headed by an assistant secretary—if this Department is established.

What are some of the things a Division for Smaller Community Development could do for these areas? What are the needs to be met? Here are a few:

This Division would investigate and study problems relating to highways, public services, water resources, schools, financing, recreation, law enforcement, and with special emphasis on business, industrial development, and housing. It would seek to improve Federal, State, and smaller town cooperative efforts, and serve in an advisory capacity to small communities on programs calling for Federal participation or Federal assistance.

This Division also should involve itself with municipal securities of smaller communities. There is no genuine, adequate, dependable, competitive market for these municipal securities which makes it necessary for these smaller communities to be protected. There is a premium on securities for the larger cities.

These problems, although not of great and major importance to larger cities, are an enigma to smaller communities. Many larger cities have practically no need for the services and assistance needed so desperately by the smaller communities.

Mr. Speaker, I submit that a Division to help small communities could spearhead their revival to a vigorous community and business life.

In past years bill have been introduced in both bodies of Congress to establish independent commissions on problems of small towns. One was introduced in the House early this year by the Honorable THOMAS F. JOHNSON, of Maryland, and has been referred to the House Committee on Government Operations. Introduction of legislation of this nature shows that the problems of small towns are recognized. We must not ignore them. The problem before us as Members of Congress is to determine what constructive action to take to correct them, and to act effectively to help those who live in communities housing the major portion of the Nation's population.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL].

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Speaker, we will debate today, in the short time at our disposal, not the enactment of a depressed areas bill or distressed areas bill but the method of financing of that bill. And, this is important to remember. Remember that the House conferees abandoned the former administration position of financing through the appropriation process.

When we can finance $45 billion of national security a year through the regular appropriation process there just is no excuse for abandoning a basic principle of fiscal responsibility and placing the financing of this new depressed area program on a back-door Treasury financing basis.

This is a new program. In a large sense it is an experimental program. It contemplates weak loans. It is a program that will grow into the billions. Its termination date is a tranquilizer for the Members of the Congress. If ever an activity of the Federal Government should be placed under the regular appropriation process, this is it. That is a decision we must make today.

By design and not coincidental, the House is required to make this decision the hard way. To defeat this back-door spending approach it is necessary to vote down this conference report. But it is important to note, that it will not kill the legislation.

If and when that is done, a request is in order to appoint new conferees, and those new conferees can be instructed to insist on the House provisions that the program be financed through the regular appropriations process. So a clear-cut test can then be made solely on the question of back-door spending.

If this conference report is voted down, it is unthinkable that a request would not be made promptly for appointment of new conferees. The situation is that we have a Senate-passed bill and a House-passed amendment thereto. Actually those actions remain alive for the remaining days of this Congress with the differences to be resolved through the conference process. It can be done at any time, but I repeat it would be unthinkable that a request for a new conference would not be made promptly.

When we went to conference, frankly I was shocked, and I believe the Democratic conferees from the House were more shocked, when the administration abruptly did a flip-flop and about-face on the financing provision of this bill.

On February 20 of this year, shortly after the administration had sent to the Congress its proposed new distressed areas bill, H.R. 4569, I issued a statement in which I called attention to the fact that the new administration had provided for expenditures under the regular appropriation process in sharp contrast to the back-door financing provided in S. 1, the original Douglas bill. I ended that statement, in which I made other comments about changes in the bill, including placing administration in the Department of Commerce, by saying, "There is more care than scare in this proposal." Now the care is gone.

I again want to repeat that I am shocked and I am sure the Democratic conferees are shocked by the unexpected and abrupt about-face of the administration on the question of responsible financing. Why has the administration suddenly determined that it cannot trust the members of the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives? Why is the administration seeking to bypass and circumvent the Congress, eliminating the responsible method of legislation for our country? I fear the connotations of this development with a trend toward government by appointees and not by elected representatives.

The proposed program is acknowledged by all to be only a pittance toward solving unemployment problems. If this method of financing is permitted and the door is opened for unlimited spending without check and balance, Congress and the country can rue the day this action was permitted. I again repeat what I have said before, that to vote down this conference report at this time will not prevent enactment in this session of a responsible depressed areas bill. Conferees may rapidly be appointed and the House position demonstrated as with respect to financing the program.

In case there are any lingering doubts about this threat to fiscal responsibility, members of this body and the Appropriations Committee should carefully note the power squeeze play that is being applied. The Senate acted first on this bill. The House amended the bill and the Senate asked for a conference. Normally the papers would go to the House and the House would act first on the conference report. If that were done, a motion would be in order to recommit the conference report with instructions that the House conferees insist that the appropriation provision of the House amendment be retained. That would give a clear-cut test on the issue without jeopardizing enactment of the bill. But, as of now, the regular conference procedure is not to be followed. The Senate has retained the papers, the Senate will act first on the conference report and presumably adopt it, and the Senate conferees will be discharged.

Then the conference report will come to the House on a take-or-leave-it basis. The conference report must be voted up or down.

That is a rough, power squeeze play challenge to the authority of the Appropriations Committee and to this House on the question of fiscal responsibility. No longer is it just a question of the House approving or disapproving a depressed areas bill. Bigger principles are now involved. I hope the House will meet this challenge head on and for what it is. If procedure is to be followed which makes it necessary for the House to vote down the conference report to preserve fiscal responsibility, that, in my opinion, is what the House should do.

The Wall Street Journal of April 26, 1961, contains the following article I commend to your attention:

BACKDOOR SPENDING—DEPRESSED AREA PROGRAM TO JOIN LONG LIST FINANCED DIRECT FROM U.S. TREASURY

(By John A. Grimes)

WASHINGTON.—A familiar fiscal drama is scheduled for performance in the House of Representatives today, enhanced by the debut of a new star—the Kennedy administration.

The attraction is billed as a vote on a proposal to provide $451 million in Federal grants and loans to aid areas of chronically high unemployment. But the substance of the plot will deal, not so much with the advisability of initiating the new program, but how to finance it. As fashioned by a Senate-House conference committee, the proposed legislation calls for direct withdrawals from the Treasury rather than requiring the program to rely on annual spending grants from appropriations committees dominated by economic conservatives.

This direct withdrawal device, dubbed "backdoor spending" by its foes, is not new; far from it. The financing scheme has expanded from a special arrangement to propel the late, and largely unlamented, Reconstruction Finance Corporation into making business loans during the great depression until it now supports more than two dozen Federal programs ranging from home loans to ship mortgages to farm price support loans. More than $100 billion of taxpayers' money has been dispensed without resort to the appropriations process; authority to dole out another $25 billion already is on the books.

READY AND WILLING

Despite this long run, today's performance takes on some of the excitement of a first night. For the Kennedy administration is ready and willing to find out whether it will be able to make even more extensive use of the controversial spending approach. Already the President has asked Congress to permit him to bankroll a $7.3 billion 5-year program of foreign development loans by tapping the Treasury directly. And, though the administration didn't plan to make the depressed areas bill a key test of Congressional attitude, the die has been cast. A defeat today would bode ill not only for the Development Loan program but also for future attempts to travel directly from the White House to the Treasury building next door. A victory, though it would not assure the success of the controversial development loan and other programs, would surely aid the effort. Says one observer: "The Kennedy administration would like to make as much use of back-door spending as it thinks it can." The former Eisenhower administration, in contrast, at least tried to prevent the expansion of back-door spending practices.

Esoteric as it may seem, the issue can have an important impact on taxpayers' pocketbooks. For example: Last session Congress trimmed some $221 million from the Eisenhower administration's regular appropriations request; at the same time, however, the lawmakers approved a combined increase of nearly $1 billion above the administration's requests for programs financed by direct withdrawals from the Treasury.

The back-door approach to the Treasury takes various forms. Sometimes it's called authority to spend from public debt receipts. Other times, it may be labeled "contract authority." Or, it may be a revolving fund, or permission to spend foreign currencies owned by the United States. Whatever the name, the result is the same—direct withdrawals from the Treasury without annual appropriations from Congress.

In theory, a new agency or program has to get double approval from Congress. The first comes in the authorizing legislation; this sets up the framework and the limits of the program, and is handled by a regular legislative committee. Then, the administration must run the proposal through the Appropriations Committee for funds. Each year, also in theory, the agency of the program must return to Congress for reexamination and new money.

THE CALMER LOOK

Because authorizations for new programs may be shoved through Congress quickly under crisis conditions, a second and calmer look by a supposedly disinterested committee is essential, backdoor spending foes contend. They also maintain that the legislative committees that handle the authorizing legislation over the years have become special pleaders for particular interest; the Agriculture Committee, the argument runs, is inclined to spend all it can for the farmers; the Banking Committee pushes measures to spread Federal funds throughout the housing industry; and the Veterans' Committee seeks to tap the Treasury for the benefit of the veterans. Authority over money bills was taken from the legislative committees in 1920 and given to the appropriations committees just to avoid this, House economy advocates assert.

Probably the most widely used of the backdoor spending devices is the authority to spend from public debt receipts. Simply, this allows a Federal agency to write an IOU and give it to the Treasury in return for the needed money; the Treasury, in turn, is authorized to borrow the money publicly to replace that lent to the agency.

The technique is used mostly to finance Government lending programs: The Commodity Credit Corporation's price support program, Export-Import Bank lending, Veterans' Administration direct home loans, and others. Back when the RFC was set up, it was argued that Government loans eventually would be repaid so there was no need to complicate the budget process by requiring lending agencies to come to Congress each year for funds. But now that Uncle Sam is firmly in the lending business, it is apparent that some loans will never be paid off. No one, for example, really expects the CCC to recover the money it has sunk into surplus crops.

But perhaps the sharpest setback for the traditional appropriations process came in 1949 in a ruling on the House floor that direct Treasury borrowing was not an appropriation of Treasury money, and thus did not have to be routed through the appropriations committees. Since then, backdoor spending opponents have been trying without success to close the door.

Early this year, a resolution to ban any backdoor spending proposals was voted down by the newly enlarged and liberalized House Rules Committee.

Whatever the outcome of the impending drama, the performance can be expected to be reenacted again and again. For, as far as backdoor spending is concerned, the Kennedy administration seems committed to the motto: "The show must go on."

I personally will change my own position in opposition to the administration bill if the appropriation process is secured and voted in and insisted upon in the final bill, as I can only support a responsible approach. I now urge a vote against the conference report.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, if this House does not believe in this irregular back-door method of extracting money from the Treasury then this conference report presents to you the acid test, because there is no reason in the world why this particular bill should seek that approach except the obvious purpose of getting money out of the Treasury without going through the regular process and in the easy way.

I was shocked when the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] said that there would be no depressed areas bill this year if this conference report was voted down. I think every Member here experienced in parliamentary procedure knows just exactly what would happen if this conference report is voted down.

The chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency would immediately move to appoint new conferees. That would be done. It would go to conference. The information would be conveyed to the other body that this House insisted upon the usual method of appropriation and stood by its record vote here of a few weeks ago in which we did adopt the regular method of appropriation as it has been recommended by the administration.

In this case there is no possible excuse. I have talked on this subject a number of times. Every time such a bill comes up it is stated that this is a project that has already gone into effect and has been running for years—"If you don't do this, it is going to mess things all up and injure the operation of the program." This does not do so. This is a brandnew program. We are starting out on spending some $300 or $400 millions, the potentialities and the cost of which no man living can predict. If this bill goes into full force and effect it is going to be a stupendous expenditure.

Yesterday many of us voted for a bill because we thought we were voting for a project, a bill that had not been justified, a bill we did not know what the money was going to be spent for. Here today we have practically the same thing. I heard all the details of this bill up in the Rules Committee when it was under consideration. I asked them if they could point out to me any project in this bill that was not already in operation by some other department of the Government, and I could not get any answer.

Let us not be deceived by this. If you vote down this conference report, all you are doing is saying, "We believe that in this new and stupendous project we are launching here we want the money gotten through the regular processes of appropriation where it can be examined, where we can know what this money is going to be spent for, instead of this big mess of words we have here."

Nobody knows exactly what is going to be done with it. There is no excuse in this bill for using this method because it is a brand new program and does not interfere with anything that is in existence.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BROWN. Is not the real and the only issue before us now whether or not we are going to endorse and approve backdoor spending?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. That is the only issue.

Mr. BROWN. That is the thing against which over 200 Members of this House have signed petitions.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. We were told that even if we could have a change in the method of financing, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BROWN] would not vote for it, anyway.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Of course, I would not vote for it. I think it is the craziest thing you ever started. If you carry it out as you want to carry it through you will break this country. But that is not the question before us. The question before us now is whether you are going to adopt the backdoor procedure on new projects, which this is, and there is no earthly excuse for it. If you establish this precedent you might just as well abolish the Appropriations Committee and spend it all through the back door.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I must differ with the distinguished gentleman from Texas. He said in opening the debate that he did not want to scare anybody.

Now, on the other hand, I am here to scare everybody. And may I say to you, my friends, that the Members of the House and the people of the Nation had better be scared.

The Speaker of the House said the other day in a formal address that this country, in his estimation, is in the greatest danger it had ever been in all its history. And, as usual, he is right. We are today in greater danger, and we are today less prepared to meet that danger than ever before. We suddenly find ourselves today in exactly the same situation in which Chamberlain found himself when he had to hurry over to Munich to meet Hitler and found that England's armament was not ready to meet the armament of the Central Powers.

We are not prepared to fight. We are not ready for war. We do not have the weapons.

And most important of all, we do not have the money.

Financially we are less ready for war than ever before in our history. Solvency is the most important equipment for war and we are not only insolvent but Congress has been obligating the Nation at such a rapid rate and on such a ridiculous plan that no one down at the Treasury or anywhere else can tell us how much we are obligated for.

I ask any of these gentlemen who are jamming this bill through the House to give us the total amount the U.S. Government is obligated to pay. Nobody knows. There is no way for anybody to know. We have been shoveling money out through the back door at such a rate there is no way to estimate it.

Does any body here deny that statement? What a way to run a business—any business—from a peanut stand to a national bank. And yet that is the way we are running the greatest government on earth. Could it be that we do not want to know—that we do not want the people to find out?

But Russia will let them know. Russia has been teaching us some bitter lessons these last few months. And the bitterest lesson of all is still ahead of us. Stalin said long ago that they would let us spend ourselves into bankruptcy and then we would fall like a ripe apple into their lap. Under this backdoor spending—which no one can estimate—the apple is getting riper every day. If you will look at this spending you will find some of it is getting rotten. There is some of it they do not dare to come up here and attempt to justify before the Committee on Appropriations. So they are sneaking it out the back door. They do not have to justify it there. There is nobody to check it out and nobody to check what becomes of it.

And mind you it is not defense money they are spending. It is nondefense money that is throwing us into the red. We have proved that time and again in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. It is non-defense expenditures. It is money like this bill—taxpayers money for a few favored spots in the country—that is running up our national debt—and running down our ability to defend ourselves.

But let us get back to the war. I know these gentlemen do not like to talk about the war. But it is high time somebody thought about the war. Russia is closing in. She has taken over world sentiment. She has destroyed the Monroe Doctrine, an integral part of world law for a century, and she is thumbing her nose at us on our own doorstep.

When we finally have to go to war where will we get the money? We owe more than we will ever pay. The only thing left is to start the printing presses. And how long will that last?

Already we know we will have to fight by ourselves. The only friend we have left on earth will be our pocketbook. And we will be friendless, indeed.

Mr. Speaker, the people are getting tired paying war taxes in time of peace and then seeing their money thrown away on foolishness like this. We are levying today even the nuisance taxes we levied in time of war. And with these war taxes we have taken in the largest revenues these last years ever collected by any nation.

But the more we take in the more we spend. Interest alone on our indebtedness is greater than the entire budget a few years ago. And what have we got for it. Even if Russia was not waiting to take us over, this thing cannot go on forever. It will explode like an inflated balloon.

Mr. Speaker, let us talk a little commonsense here. Let us act like businessmen and quit spending money we do not have for things we can get along without. Let us close the back door. Let us lower taxes and give the people a chance to catch their breath.

Let us vote down this conference report with this silly back-door shenanigan put in by the Senate.

It is financial duplicity. It is fiscal insanity.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. PELLY].

Mr. PELLY. Mr. Speaker, the vote of the House today on the question of accepting or rejecting the conference report on the distressed area bill involves only one issue. That issue has to do with the method of financing the program.

As the Members of this House know, the President of the United States asked for a program to be financed by the normal appropriation process. That is the way this House passed the bill.

The other body saw fit to provide for financing the program by use of the so-called back door method; in other words, funds would be obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury in exchange for evidences of indebtedness, thereby circumventing normal appropriations and budgetary control procedures.

As I say, the issue is clear. We can, as the House has often done in the past, allow the other body to force upon the House a system of financing which, to put it mildly, bypasses the traditional major instrument of congressional control of the purse strings of Government, or we can reject the action of the other body and retain an important safeguard of economy.

Mr. Speaker, a review of major legislative bills during past years shows that the traditional prerogative of the House to initiate appropriations has been ignored by the other body. Secondly, the House has vacillated when it came to insisting on the provision for annual scrutiny and review of committees having jurisdiction over appropriations. As a result, the Congress has abrogated much of its independence of judgment and responsibility to the executive branch. We have been headed toward one-man rule.

In urging Members to reject this conference report on the sole issue of its continuing the public debt transaction financing, I call attention to the position of Congress' own chief financial officer on authorizing borrowing from the Treasury. Joseph Campbell, Comptroller General of the United States, in 1958 wrote a letter to the chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, at the committee's request, and stated as follows:

We believe that the financing of loan programs through public debt transactions, by combining program authority with funding tends to perpetuate programs that might not otherwise stand the test of continuing congressional scrutiny.

The General Accounting Office for many years has said that funds to finance Government activities should be made available to the corporations and agencies responsible for administering the programs through the normal appropriation processes, rather than through authorizations to finance through public debt transactions.

Mr. Speaker, recently I addressed a letter to the President of the United States with regard to this matter of back-door spending and in response received a letter from David Bell, Director of the Bureau of the Budget. Mr. Bell stated that the Bureau of the Budget believes Congress as well as the executive branch should exercise close authority over the provision and expenditure of Government funds. He stated it favored a periodic review of emergency spending programs, such as is achieved through our normal appropriation process. He stated it supports the Congress' desire to develop and improve financing arrangements and only made the reservation that any change in financing arrangements should be within the framework which would not disrupt existing basic programs.

Of course, this is not an existing program and insisting on the appropriation process would in no manner disrupt it. I urge Members to vote down the conference report and thereby take a position for greater responsibility and control by Congress over expenditures. We must have overall responsibility so that the need and urgency can be weighed against revenue and economic conditions. Too, we must have annual review of programs in order to see that programs can meet the test of continued congressional scrutiny.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS].

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Speaker, the question before the House is a very simple one. Are we for or against those suffering from unemployment? If we are for them we must back it up by being willing to take some action to relieve their plight and cure the basic causes of chronic unemployment. It is heartless to say: "Of course I would like to help the unemployed but I am not willing to do anything about it."

Mr. Speaker, with one exception, all the Members who have spoken in opposition to this conference report, voted against it on the rollcall the other day and therefore voted to kill the bill.

Many times over the years past I have taken the well of the House to voice the opposite viewpoint of some of my esteemed friends with reference to Treasury spending. I would like to call the attention of a great many of the Members on the other side of the aisle that during the last 8 years they have voted literally billions of dollars for back-door financing through the Export-Import Bank and various international organizations for people all over the world.

The amount of direct Treasury financing in S. 1 is relatively small when compared with some of the earlier requests on this basis. Just 2 years ago the Republican Administration requested and obtained $4.5 billion for the International Bank and the International Monetary Fund. That was $4.5 billion authorized by the backdoor route of the Treasury, if you will, and it was requested and supported by some of those who are now most vocal in their opposition to using this method of financing to meet a pressing domestic problem. Apparently this method is alright to assist foreign countries but cannot be used to help our own people.

Then I pose the question, If you can give it to somebody in Timbuktu, with Treasury financing, why can you not give it to somebody who has been out of a job somewhere here in America?

You would assume from some of the speeches heard here today that somebody actually goes up to the backdoor of the Treasury and slips the money out of the Treasury and runs off with it. I make the suggestion that other committees of the Congress are just as sane and just as sensible as the Committee on Appropriations, and I have a high regard for every one of the members of that committee.

In this instance the Treasury financing is going to be used for loans repayable to the Treasury of the United States. The money that is not repayable to the Treasury of the United States under this conference report, in the amount of $75 million for public facility grants, is in the hands of the Appropriations Committee.

Some of my good friends forget that we financed the Commodity Credit Corporation through back-door spending. They forget that we financed TVA through back-door spending. I think some of us fail to remember that the Export-Import Bank that we hope is going to do a good job to help bring about the settlement of a lot of our problems with the rest of the world was financed through so-called back-door spending. I would like for the people of the cities to remember that we financed the greater portion of urban renewal by back-door spending; I would like for the people of the small towns to remember that we have and will continue to finance community facilities such as the construction of sewer systems and other projects throughout this country in this way.

The point I make is this: The issue before the Congress today is the same as it was when we passed the bill before—whether or not we want to do anything to aid the distressed areas of America. We have passed two bills in previous Congresses and they have been vetoed. This Congress passed the bill by an overwhelming vote. But today a scarecrow is being brought in as if this is something new, dangerous, and will bankrupt America. This is a common method that we have used before, since long before I came to the Congress, in the financing of programs of this kind. It is done by responsible legislative committees of Congress.

The need for this assistance is immediate and pressing. In fact, this bill should have become law long before now. No good purpose would be served by holding up the program while it went back over the appropriations hurdle.

Mr. Speaker, I fail to see the point of the cry of alarm which are voiced against the direct Treasury method of financing. This in no way relaxes congressional control of the purse strings. And let me say, I defend this control as staunchly as anyone here, but I do not think the question is relevant. Every single Member of the House had full opportunity to offer amendments on the provisions of the bill when it was considered before and every Member had the opportunity to vote on it.

The Congress set the dollar limitations on the program in this bill after careful study and extensive hearings of the Banking and Currency Committee and in consultation with administration officials. These are the amounts recommended by the administration and it is generally agreed by those who support the program that this is the amount necessary to get the program underway.

Certainly the $394 million is a minimum amount. In view of the size and vital importance of the problem we could not conscientiously do with less. There is no possibility that the Department of Commerce can take this money and go off on a long-term major program without having to come back to the Congress at some point for additional funds. In fact, the conference report carries a 4-year cutoff date on the program. This is a provision from the Senate bill and means that the program will die in 4 years unless the Congress, after reviewing it, finds that the money is being well spent and the program is doing the job.

Mr. Speaker, I regret that I felt it necessary to talk so long on this feature of the bill. As I said earlier, I feel that debate on this point is no longer relevant. The Senate has now approved the conference report with this feature in it, and the only choice we have today is to vote the bill up or down. I am confident that the House will approve this measure today. The reasons for doing so are extremely pressing. They involve the plight of millions of people, the unemployed, and the families in areas of chronic economic distress. I simply cannot imagine any of my colleagues voting against this bill and then going home to his constituents and telling them he really wanted to do something for them but he got involved in a side issue on how to finance the program.

Therefore I say to you, Mr. Speaker, this is not a fight on back-door spending. This is a fight on the administration's distressed area bill. This is the position of the administration, which I take, and which this conference report takes. Any vote to the contrary is a vote in opposition to the wishes of the administration.

I hope this conference report will be adopted, as it should be.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Ford].

(Mr. FORD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, we have on this occasion a unique opportunity to come to grips with this problem and the basic issue of back-door spending. Over the years there has developed this technique of making money available for programs after the authorization legislation has been approved; the money to be made available without further control or consideration by the Congress.

Mr. Speaker, these programs have grown up and have been continued, and never in the past have we ever been able to change the course that was started in the first instance. But today we have a new program which the proponents seek to embark on by financing by a back-door spending program. If we want to change the method of financing, this is the time to do it.

So, our opportunity today is unique. It is a single issue which will be decided by this vote this afternoon. At the same time, we have a last chance to meet this issue head on because if this conference report is approved, never again will we have a chance to change the method of financing. If we approve this conference report, no committee of the House of Representatives will ever, on an annual basis, truly analyze or scrutinize the expenditure programs under this basic legislation; never again.

I do not contend, I will say to my good friend from Alabama, that the members of the House Committee on Appropriations are any saner or any more responsible than the members of any other committee of the House of Representatives. I do say, however, that the procedures of the House Committee on Appropriations require that we have annual analyses and scrutiny of the many requests for the future, and at the same time we conduct a yearly review of the expenditures of the past. If you want that kind of sound and sensible approach to the fiscal operations of this $300 million program, I respectfully suggest that we vote down the conference report. Then we can approve the kind of financing provisions which were included in the bill at the time this body acted affirmatively.

I say as emphatically as I can that we must meet this issue head on. It is a unique opportunity for us. And, secondly, if we do not win on this issue today, forever, as far as this program is concerned, we have capitulated to the exclusive control and jurisdiction of financing by the executive branch of the Government.

I think we have seen in my time, and certainly before, the erosion of congressional control over expenditures by the utilization of the back-door method of financing, and if we do not erect the barriers, if we do not put a road block on this kind of process and procedure right here today, the responsibility of the Congress over the expenditures, the withdrawals from the Treasury, will be less and less. Consequently I urge that on this issue and this issue alone, today, we disapprove this conference report.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Saylor].

(Mr. SAYLOR asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I urge that this conference report be accepted. The House conferees were successful in almost every phase of the conference except the manner of financing. Let us look at this phase of the report. If you will examine this conference report you will find that this establishes a program that is to begin on the 30th day of June 1961, and terminate June 30, 1965, a definite term that was not included in the House version of the bill. After that date the program is to be liquidated by the Secretary of the Treasury. The amount of money to be expended in that period of time is definitely established in the bill. The agency will be required to report to Congress annually and such reports shall give full and complete information concerning the operation of the program; and if any member of the Committee on Appropriations or any Member of Congress does not like what is in the report, he can bring the matter to the floor of the House or have a congressional committee investigate the entire program. This is the Congress of the United States which is superior to any committee of either the House or Senate telling the executive branch of the Government that they are to go to the Treasury and get their money and the manner in which they will do it, and it is not only limited in the period of time but in the amount of money it can spend.

Mr. Speaker, if this conference report is voted down what you are saying is that this agency will have to come back after this program is approved, to the Appropriations Committee of the House, and then the Finance Committee of the Senate four times during the next 4 years. Then, if the Committee on Appropriations and the Finance Committee like the program they will get their money. Otherwise they will not. If you believe in a program that will help the distressed areas of this country, if you believe we have a duty to help the citizens of our country who live in these depressed areas, I urge you to vote for this conference report.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I think perhaps I ought to bring into this situation an experience that I had myself in my own district with reference to back-door spending. We had two large groups of houses built in one place and two very large apartment houses in another. They went sour and the Government had to take them on their back-door guarantee. The Government lost several millions of dollars. That is the kind of thing you get into when you have that kind of approach.

We cannot afford in this country to give up to the Executive the power of the purse that is in the Congress. If we do that and do not know what we are doing when we make our appropriations, we are going to be in trouble. We are in trouble now because we have such an enormous debt. We are in trouble because we have been too careless in the way we have operated and provided for the protection of our interests.

The only way we can do it is to stop providing a back-door entrance to the Treasury. Every time we do that we get in deeper and deeper. Last year alone there were back-door appropriations of $5.7 billion; and actually I think there was a great deal more.

We have had enormous losses on these backdoor operations. The Commodity Credit Corporation is an example. That has been the way they were financed. Whether they would have been any better if it had been done any other way I do not know. But I should like to see us try to do the job in such a way that we could protect the Treasury.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HALLECK. I want to make this brief comment. I have listened to this debate. It is very clear to me that those who insist on the Appropriations Committee process are right in this argument, and I am going to vote against this conference report.

I also want to make it very clear in the light of some of the things that were said here that if this conference report is voted down the chairman of the committee can immediately move for appointment of new conferees and a bill can be forthcoming from the new conferees after conference with the other body that will provide for this program. I defy anyone to challenge the correctness of my statement in that regard.

Mr. TABER. The gentleman has stated the situation exactly correctly.

Mr. HALLECK. As a matter of fact, all we are doing in asking Members to vote against this conference report is, first of all, to maintain the position that was taken by the House Committee on Banking and Currency and by the House itself, which provided for the Appropriations Committee process, and also we will be standing by the original recommendation of the administration.

Mr. TABER. That is the only way the Congress is going to be able to keep the country's finances right side up.

Mr. GARY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. GARY. May I ask the gentleman this question: Is it not true that the regular appropriations processes and the Appropriations Committee are trusted with our defense appropriations, upon which the national defense of this country rests?

Mr. TABER. That is exactly correct, and that runs into right around $40 billion a year.

Mr. GARY. If that is true, is there any reason why they cannot be trusted in a case of this kind?

Mr. TABER. There is not.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DERWINSKI].

(Mr. DERWINSKI asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DERWINSKI. Mr. Speaker, after this period of debate it is becoming clear that we are down to one basic issue, that is, of removing the smoke-screen some people are trying to put over this debate. I am opposed to depressed areas legislation. I do not approve of the bill. However, all that we are trying to do is make the best of a bad situation. There is no attempt in connection with this conference report today to defeat the legislation. The legislation will be passed. The back-door financing is the only issue.

I have been a Member of Congress long enough to appreciate the complaint that some of the veteran Members have of the irresponsible attitude the bureaucrats and the agencies have toward the Congress. I have heard complaints of congressional committees having difficulty in getting information from certain agencies, the reason being that we no longer have control of the purse strings.

I would like to make it perfectly clear that should we defeat the conference report there will be a depressed areas bill. This is obvious. All we are trying to do is support the position of the chairman of the Appropriations Committee and support the position and the philosophy of good, veteran Members of Congress, in retaining through congressional appropriations procedures the necessary congressional balancing of the executive department powers.

I would also like to point out to the gentlemen on my right that certainly the support of the Appropriations Committee is in accordance with good, sound Jeffersonian Democratic philosophy. I should think that Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic Party, would be proud this afternoon if the men who bear his party's label will support the appropriation process, reject backdoor financing, and support responsible action in connection with spending the funds requested in this bill. The charges made by the gentleman from Alabama are inaccurate distortions and do not contribute to proper understanding of the issue before us, basically traditional congressional control of the Nation's purse strings.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. McDONOUGH].

(Mr. McDONOUGH asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, I think the point has been made very clear that this is definitely, first of all, an experiment. We have never passed this kind of legislation heretofore. As an experiment, we are not certain how it is going to be administered. For that reason, it should not be given the blank check privilege of back-door spending. As a member of the conference, we sat for 3 days and on every occasion the conferees on the other side of the aisle adamantly maintained their position, that the House had voted an appropriation bill and that they were going to stand on the appropriation policy. Toward the end of the last day, the policy was suddenly changed and the Democrat conferees capitulated, as I was informed, at the request from the administration. The administration bill that passed the House was for appropriations. So the administration was originally for appropriations—then at the last minute, in order to convince the Democrat conferees that they were on the wrong side, according to the administration's change of policy, they asked them to change. The gentleman from Alabama, my colleague on the conference committee [Mr. RAINS], was present and voted for the passing of this bill. Now he argues against this kind of policy. We are at present in hearings on the new housing bill. We are going to be called upon to vote for $7 billion of back-door spending, if that bill comes to the floor in its present condition. The gentleman from Alabama who is the ranking member of the subcommittee on housing has advocated funds for housing for the elderly for a number of years, and we have supported him. But, it has always been on appropriations and not by the back-door spending. I want to make one or two points clear. First of all, the defeat of the conference report does not defeat the bill. If the administration wants a depressed area bill, they certainly ought to be able to take it on the appropriation basis and regardless of the arguments you have heard from others that this is going to kill the bill, it is not true. We can proceed and call for a new conference and we could go into conference and we could maintain our position. The House went to conference with instructions to maintain the appropriation policy, and your conferees maintained it except for the last few hours on the third day, and you will notice that the conference report does not contain the name of a single member of the Republican conferees. I recommend a "no" vote on the conference report.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK].

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I assume that my colleagues have taken legislative notice of the fact that practically all Members who have spoken against the conference report—if not all of them—are Members who voted against the bill. They are opposed to this legislation. This is an effort made in the hope that there will be nothing passed at all. Furthermore, when it gets into the hands of the committee that is seeking it, of course, it will be a much different bill in its effect than what is necessary in the best interests of our country. This is a bill providing for $300 million of loans. That is where the public debt transaction policy applies. It does not apply to the appropriations for grants or for administrative expenses of $94 million.

Furthermore, under the rules of the House, the standing committee is supposed to supervise the administration of bills. All standing committees out of which a bill is reported are supposed to do that, and the Committee on Appropriations on the yearly appropriations on the grants and administrative expenses have complete opportunity to scrutinize the program. Furthermore, this is a 4-year program. There is a time limit on the program.

This bill is aimed to help America, to help communities in America to help themselves in lifting the economic blight that exists in various communities in our country.

If we do not have the public debt transaction provision, the ability to get maximum results will not be accomplished. Members of the Appropriations Committee talk about this. Why, they have included it in appropriation bills themselves. Whenever they included a contract obligation they have included a public debt transaction in its broadest aspects. They had to do it; and I approved of it because in connection with defense, for example, the making of contracts for several years is necessary, and the agency had to have the contract authority to do so.

Why the argument against something to help the chronic unemployed of America? And remember that for every dollar loaned, local communities and local business interests will have to contribute a given amount, running into the millions.

Why the opposition to a bill of this kind?

The same principle was involved in the rural electrification program. I voted for the REA program. The Government has made money out of that program. We did not hear any argument against the use of this policy in the Federal Highway Act. We did not hear it when only a few weeks ago the veterans housing bill came up. Right after this conference report is disposed of the extension of Public Law 480 comes up, and the public debt transaction is a fundamental part of that law. So immediately after this conference report is disposed of we are going to have another bill which provides for a public debt transaction. I wonder how many of those who represent agricultural districts who oppose this conference report will take the floor and make any comment about the public debt transaction in relation to Public Law 480? And there are so many other bills. There is the small business loan bill involving a public debt transaction. There are commodity credit loans; there is slum clearance; there is the home loan guarantee, the Veterans' Administration; there is the FHA. Yes, that benefits the contractors. I am for it because we need homes. But in that bill is included a public debt transaction. All of these bills that have been enacted into law have included a public debt transaction because it was necessary to do so in order to make them operate effectively and efficiently. Now, we come to one bill involving $300 million loans to help the communities of America to rebuild themselves economically to improve employment opportunities and they are vigorously fighting this conference report. I hope it will be adopted.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, the legislation providing $394 million for aid to depressed areas in the country is long overdue. If the previous administration had supported such a bill, the depression resulting from its policies—and which we inherited from them—might not have been so severe; and we might have had some measure of recovery generated through the stimulus it would have given our economy.

My State of Pennsylvania has been affected most severely. We have thousands of unemployed in various sections of our State, and the detrimental effects have spread to Philadelphia, and throughout the entire State.

We are spending billions of dollars to help the economy of other nations throughout the world. Is it too much to ask that we at least use a small proportion of our resources to alleviate conditions just as bad amongst our own citizens? Five and a half million Americans are out of work. In some sections of the country, the major portion of the employable workers are in the ranks of the unemployed. In these communities it is not a spotty condition. It is definitely disastrous, with not much relief in sight if we do not enact this legislation. It will get worse, not better, within a very short time; and the repercussions will be felt in adjacent communities, which already have their share of unemployment due to the depression.

I know we again hear the familiar cry of socialism coming from those who have opposed every piece of social legislation which has been enacted in the last 25 or 30 years. They have no convincing argument against the merits of this legislation, so the same group indulges in the same cry; they use the same tactics of obstruction; they trot out the old bugaboos that they used to fight social security, unemployment benefits, wage and hour laws, and every other worthwhile law that has meant so much to the well-being of the average American family.

I strongly urge quick passage of this legislation as sponsored by President Kennedy and the Democratic administration.

Mr. STRATTON. Mr. Speaker, I intend to vote for the conference report because I have long been an advocate of distressed areas legislation and have in fact cosponsored the distressed areas bill.

I am, however, greatly disturbed that the Stratton amendment which I offered to the legislation in the House and which was included as section 27 of the bill as it passed the House was deleted by the conference committee. This amendment simply provided that some action be taken within the Government to coordinate its operations so that the protection which this bill would give to unemployment areas would not be completely nullified and undone by the action of the Defense Department in closing down defense installations across the country. Specifically, my amendment provided that when such an installation was to be closed down in an area suffering from 6 percent or more unemployment the Secretary of Commerce would make a study of the economic effects of this closing and would report on it to Congress and to the Secretary of Defense. My amendment laid no requirement upon the Department of Defense and did not in fact, even prevent the Department in the slightest from closing down any installation it so desired. It simply made it possible for Congress and the public to take a second, long look at the economic consequences of the Defense Department's action. In view of the sweeping economic changes that are likely to occur in the next few months across the United States as one military base after another is closed down, surely the provisions of my amendment would seem to represent the very minimum which we as a Congress should do to deal with this serious situation.

I am particularly disturbed because the Stratton amendment was deleted from the conference report, so I have been advised, at the express request of the Secretary of Defense. The Secretary apparently wants no outside interference at all with his action, in closing down military bases across the country in the next few months. In fact, Mr. McNamara's views on this subject were expressed rather forcefully just the other day in an address to the annual luncheon meeting of the Associated Press at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City, in which he said:

We cannot afford to modify these decisions to accommodate local or private interests no matter how legitimate.

Again he went on to say:

The basis of the previous policy has been the fear that decisions taken upon sound military grounds may be upset by the pressures of local and private interests. I expect to make it clear that our decisions, once taken, will not be subject to reversal except for changes in the facts on which they were based originally.

Very frankly, Mr. Speaker, I cannot go along with Secretary McNamara in this expression of an almost moral fervor in resistance to any attempt, "no matter how legitimate," to point out to the Department of Defense and to the public the impact in terms of human jobs and lives that some of these base closings will most assuredly entail. Certainly no one wants to make the Defense Department into a WPA. Certainly no one wants to continue jobs or military operations which are clearly unnecessary or obsolete. But by the same token I do not think we can take any particular pride in saying that we will just shut our eyes to the economic impact of these closings or that the Department of Defense is somehow above and beyond the requirement to be as much concerned with unemployment areas as is every other agency of our Federal Government.

To imply, for example, that an attempt to protect the jobs of one's fellow citizens and to keep their families together at a time of economic recession is somehow a kind of "pork barrel" operation or typifies some type of nefarious "logrolling" is, I think, to perform a grave disservice to our American people and ultimately to the defense program itself.

Mr. Speaker, the fact that the Secretary of Defense insisted that the Stratton amendment be taken out of this legislation is at least evidence that he is aware that some of us in this body are deeply concerned with this problem and do not intend to remain silent on it. Indeed in his address to the Associated Press he went on to say:

We have an obligation to take steps to mitigate the consequences of these closings for the people affected.

He also said:

I anticipate that we and the communities affected by these decisions will join together to take the time between the action and the closing to develop plans to reduce the impact of the change.

All of this is certainly to the good, and I commend the Secretary for it. In fact, in addition to this statement, I received today in the mail a letter from the Secretary which describes in even greater detail the steps which he intends to take to meet to some extent the economic impact which these base closings will have, and at this point I include the Secretary's letter in the RECORD:

THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE,
Washington, D.C., April 25, 1961.

HON. SAMUEL S. STRATTON,
House of Representatives.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN STRATTON: I know that you have been very concerned as to the economic implications involved in the inactivation and disposal of unneeded bases and installations. We, too, are very anxious that all possible care be taken to minimize unemployment problems that could result from such actions, and to lessen the impact on the communities concerned to the greatest extent we can.

The President also recognized, in his special message on the Defense budget, that problems could be created, and stated: "We cannot permit these actions to be deferred; but the Government will make every practicable effort to alleviate these hardships, and I have directed the Secretary of Defense to take every possible step to ease the difficulties for those displaced."

Consistent with the President's instructions, we have established a broad program within the Defense Department to attack the employment and community problems in a number of ways. First, we will review very carefully all installations and bases, and will reach decisions as to those to be reduced in scope, or closed, only after studying all of the facts.

In cases where our actions could cause economic dislocations, the Commerce Department, the Labor Department, and others, can be of assistance during the decision-making process. Once our decisions have been reached they will be made public as quickly as possible. In this way we will have the maximum time possible to solve employee and community problems during the phaseout period. We will, where possible, keep actual phaseout plans flexible so that adjustments can be made to meet special problems.

During the phase-down period, we intend to take all possible steps to find jobs for employees affected, whether such jobs be with the Defense Department, with other Government agencies, or with private industry. To do this we will, where necessary, modify existing personnel regulations; we will establish special personnel officers; we will draw upon the Civil Service Commission and the Labor Department; and we will work closely with community groups. Here again, we will assure the maximum feasible time between the decision and the actual closing since normal attrition will help solve unemployment problems.

Dealing with employee problems is, however, not the whole answer. We must also attempt to make unneeded facilities available on a schedule, and in a condition, to provide the best chance for their being put to worthwhile use. Here we are working, and will continue to work closely, with the General Services Administration, the Commerce and Labor Departments, the Small Business Administration, and others. In connection with our recently announced actions, for example, we are now making visits to affected communities, together with representatives of the Departments and Agencies referred to above. We will meet with community groups during these visits, and attempt to find mutually satisfactory answers to the problems they are facing.

As you can see, we are attempting to deal with all facets of this matter. For this purpose, we have created a specific organization within the Defense Department which we will modify or add to as appears necessary. We are well aware that we can never completely eliminate the local problems incident to our decisions to close installations. We are confident, however, that we can go a long way toward softening them, and at the same time comply with the President's wish that we eliminate activities and installations which are of no further use in the national defense, in the light of the new challenges and requirements facing the Nation.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT S. McNAMARA.

This is fine, Mr. Speaker, and I particularly congratulate Secretary McNamara for the steps he has taken in creating a separate agency within the Department of Defense to deal with this problem. This is much more consideration than we were ever to get from the Defense Department before, and I dare say it is in part a direct result of the action of this House in adopting my amendment to the distressed areas bill.

But I do not believe that this is a responsibility which we in Congress can or should leave entirely and exclusively to voluntary action by the Secretary of Defense. We have a responsibility of our own here too, and I think it must be discharged in some kind of appropriate legislation. Let nobody think that the closing down of military bases has come to an end by any means. Only the other day, on Friday, April 21, Deputy Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric, in an address reported in the Washington Post for that date said that there will be new closings of defense bases "on a scale never done before" in American history. And the published report in the Washington Post indicated that these announcements "of the new list of larger airbases, Army posts, and Navy yards will be withheld until Congress goes home."

Mr. Speaker, at this point I include the article from the Washington Post referring to Secretary Gilpatric's remarks:

MANY MORE BASES WILL BE SHUT DOWN,
PENTAGON DECLARES

(By John G. Norris staff reporter)

The Kennedy administration intends to shut down many, many more outmoded military bases and plow back the savings of "hundreds of millions" of maintenance dollars to bolster defense, a high Pentagon official said yesterday.

Deputy Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric served notice of the new closings—"on a scale never done before"—in an address to the American Society of Newspaper Editors. He asked editorial support of such an unpopular move.

"We're not kidding ourselves it will be easy," Gilpatric said. "We'll need public support, determination and a program to minimize the impact on local communities affected."

SPECIFICS WITHHELD

Plans to close 73 defense bases—most of them small facilities—already has been announced. Announcement of the new list of larger "air bases, Army posts and navy yards" will be withheld until Congress goes home, a Pentagon official said.

Gilpatric said the Nation must have a greater capacity for handling "sub-limited war" such as in Laos and Cuba—as well as stronger, hardened major-war forces—because several such small conflicts may have to be faced at the same time.

Mr. Speaker, in fact, just this morning in the New York Times there is a report that two-thirds of the Nation's 150 major industrial centers still show substantial unemployment in spite of reports of pick-up in business activity. I feel very strongly that in the light of these figures we in Congress must write some kind of legislation to see that the executive branch does everything possible to ease the impact of defense base closings and not leave it solely and simply to the discretion of the Defense Department alone, particularly when the press reports that closings are going to take place at a rate never before seen in the history of our country, and are going to be announced just as soon as the elected representatives of Congress get out of town.

Mr. Speaker, while I intend, as I say, to vote for the conference report, I want therefore to serve notice at this point that I intend to continue my fight for legislation to protect unemployment areas from the added hardship which defense closings are bound to create.

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. BECKER. Mr. Speaker, this conference report makes it impossible to support and vote for this legislation, if for no other reason than the "back-door spending" injected by the other body. If the Congress intends to spend money in any area of our country, then it should approach the matter by making direct appropriations from the Treasury and not seek to increase the national debt by authorizing the issuance of treasury bonds that merely increases the debt and also the annual deficit, which leads to further inflation. This in no wise aids the lower income families or the unemployed. It causes them to pay more for the very necessities of life upon which they are dependent. If the Democratic controlled Congress wishes to face up to their responsibility, then they should appropriate and tax accordingly. If they desire to spend, then they must seek the revenue. This is the only honest way to head off inflation and increased national debt. As an aspect to this depressed areas problem, I am inserting herewith a resolution passed by the Conference of Appalachian Governors, at Lexington, Ky., October 18, 1960. I am also inserting a letter I sent to the Governor of Kentucky in reply. It is indicative of the times, that I did not receive any reply to the questions I asked in my letter. I wonder why? I cannot in good conscience vote for this conference report. This is no way to proceed to try to solve a vexing problem.

Good legislation, technically, is that which accurately sizes up a problem and poses sensible steps for its solution.

When legislation does not meet these standards, it is bad legislation, no matter what its original intent may have been.

The administration has stressed the importance of solving the problem of depressed areas in our economy. Undoubtedly this is an important measure, but there are those of us who believe that the administration's solution to the problem of the depressed area is, at best, ineffective.

A depressed area, by current definition, is a geographic section, within the bounds of which exist wholesale unemployment and unbalanced economic conditions. The definition in itself assumes that there are accurate and measurable stages of economic development, and that there are sensible methods by which economic stimuli may be applied to a given area with the specific intention of ending unemployment.

But when these stimuli create artificial, unnatural, conditions, we have only substituted one problem for another. And the new problem would, in this case, be infinitely more serious.

Unemployment is not a nationwide problem. It is spotted in certain areas such as the coal mining States—Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, and so forth—and the automobile manufacturing State—Michigan.

If our country is producing consumer goods at increasing rates and increasing inventories, it is logical to assume that giving Federal money to put up plants in presently depressed areas must create unemployment in competitive areas which are not now classified as "depressed."

In the long run, the only effective answer to the problem will come from the cities and towns themselves, as they learn to adapt their natural resources and manpower potential to the needs of new industry. The only lasting way to solve the problem is through coordination of effort, with the Government working with business. Only business and industry can create jobs. The Government cannot.

The depressed areas bill—at this writing, in debate by a conference committee of the House and Senate—has two unsatisfactory aspects. The first is in its structure; the second, in its financing.

Briefly, the bill would establish a $200 million loan fund to help communities expand present industries and attract new ones. Technically, any community—depressed or otherwise—would be eligible to apply for these Federal loan funds. The bill will also provide money for roads, utilities, and other public facilities deemed necessary to attract new industry. Could this not lead to Federal hospital grants, school grants, library grants, et cetera?

Provision is also made for a fund to maintain unemployed workers while they are undergoing training to develop new skills, and to provide such vocational rehabilitation.

There are not only the dangers pointed out above, but there is needless duplication of existing Federal agency programs, such as the HHFA and the vocational rehabilitation program of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

The loan provisions of the bill are so constructed that a depressed area would often find it easier to go on the open market for development funds, since they could borrow at significantly lower interest rates than could be obtained from the Federal Government. By going to the open market, they would, of course, stimulate the entire economy.

To quote the minority view of the House Banking and Currency Committee:

This is not a bill to solve the general unemployment problem. This is not a bill to meet the problems arising from structural unemployment. This is not even a good depressed areas bill. Only 1 out of 17 unemployed workers in industrial depressed areas and only 1 out of 37 underemployed workers in rural areas could get jobs out of this bill.

However, the substantive objections to this bill are far outweighed by a more immediate concern—its proposed method of financing. The Douglas bill (S. 1) would call for back-door spending. The House bill would require that this gigantic $400 million program go through the regular—and authorized—channels of the Appropriations Committees.

"Back-door spending" is a term used to denote that practice of bypassing congressional scrutiny of the use of public funds. Under this practice, Congress authorizes an existing Federal agency to borrow a specific amount of money from the Treasury. To finance this, the Treasury must resort to selling Government bonds on the open market.

Such an appropriation is not reflected in the budget or authorized by the Appropriations Committees, but it does become a part of the public debt. By so doing, it casts an inaccurate light on our country's fiscal picture.

The House of Representatives is constitutionally charged with the responsibility of balancing unlimited fiscal demands with limited revenues. No matter what the need for a depressed areas program may be, the fact remains that the very economy we seek to stimulate by aid to depressed areas will be seriously damaged if the Government itself becomes so enmeshed in deficit spending that our entire economic picture goes out of focus.

I believe that a program to aid economically depressed areas must be considered. But before I will concede that it is good legislation, I must be satisfied that it meets the criteria I mentioned. It must recognize the problem as it is and pose sensible and effective steps for its solution.

CONFERENCE OF APPALACHIAN GOVERNORS, LEXINGTON, KY., OCTOBER 18, 1960

A RESOLUTION SUBSCRIBING TO AND SUPPORTING A DECLARATION FOR ACTION REGARDING THE APPALACHIAN REGION

Be it resolved by the Governors of States with areas lying in the Appalachian region, in conference assembled at Lexington, Ky., That they do subscribe to and support the following Declaration for Action Regarding the Appalachian Region.

In many heavily populated areas of the Appalachian region, a chronic condition of underdevelopment and severe unemployment exists. As a result, many people are denied reasonable economic and cultural opportunities through no fault of their own. In addition, the productive force in both physical and human resources is severely limited in its contribution to the Nation, while the costs of essential welfare services are steadily increasing.

We, the Governors of the Appalachian States, deplore the deprivation and lack of opportunity for these people. This situation can be alleviated through purposeful and dynamic use of resources and technology available to us today.

By underdevelopment we mean that basic handicaps to development of adequate facilities involving transportation and water resources have in turn hindered the local ability to support necessary public services and private enterprise activity. Because of such basic deficiencies, the success of local development activity in all areas of life is severely handicapped.

This region has great resources. Its people are productive and self-reliant. Technological advances have displaced the employment opportunity of many workers.

Therefore, we believe that a special regional program of development is required and justified in terms of both the necessity to treat the human need and the opportunity to realize the region's potential to contribute to its own and the State and National economies.

Such a program, to be effective, must involve local, State, and Federal governments, and both private and public forces, and must provide for:

A. The creation of major economic facilities such as key roads and water control facilities, required to provide the people of the region with essential services and to enable them to make their own contribution to national progress.

B. Establishment of a comprehensive State and regional development program for positive and constructive action in appropriate fields of activity including forestry, agriculture, mineral resources, and tourist travel; industrial and community development; education, health, and welfare.

To this end, we propose to form and continue a voluntary association of our States to advance this program of regional development.

We pledge our assistance and encouragement to citizens working to carry out programs of development in the local communities and areas of this region. We look especially to the application of personal initiative, imagination, and work as the essential element in the solution of the region's problems.

We urge that the candidates for the Office of President and the Congress recognize the pressing needs of the Appalachian region. Appropriate Federal participation is necessary.

We insist that high priority be given to the increasingly crucial needs of the people of this region and pledge our own maximum and joint efforts to this end.

NOVEMBER 8, 1960.

Hon. BERT THOMAS COMBS,
Governor, State of Kentucky, Frankfort, Ky.

DEAR GOVERNOR: This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter, together with the copy of resolutions passed by the Governors of the States in the Appalachian region. It is a very laudible resolution, but the last paragraph intrigues me, wherein it states: "We insist that high priority be given to the increasingly crucial needs of the people of this region and pledge our own maximum and joint efforts to this end."

I am wondering just what efforts these States are putting forth and what they are doing to solve this problem. It seems to me that, if every problem is coming to the Federal Government dealing with local areas, we might as well give up our State charters and have a complete centralized Government. It would also seem that, when a resolution of this kind is passed and sent to the Members of Congress, it would also contain a detailed statement of just what the States are doing on their own volition, and in what specific way the Federal Government should step in.

Yours very truly,

FRANK J. BECKER,
Member of Congress.

Mr. GALLAGHER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to express my support of the aid to depressed areas bill. This legislation will permit the administration of President Kennedy to move ahead on major proposals which will permit urgently needed action to save many metropolitan areas where whole industrial complexes have been consumed with dry rot.

This legislation which failed passage in the House a year ago, will be the salvation of many cities that are facing economic crisis because of the flight of industries to suburban and rural areas.

The act will permit local governments, industrial commissions and other similar local agencies and private business to receive financial aid from the Federal Government either in the form of loans or grants for the purpose of rebuilding facilities. New and modern industrial structures, close to shipping terminals will be attractive to business.

In this case, the chronic unemployment, that has plagued many areas for years will be relieved and the whole economic structure of our cities strengthened.

The plight of big cities in recent years has become acute. The aid to depressed areas legislation, coupled with moves to improve transportation and vehicle traffic, will serve to relieve the big city problem. We can look for a healthy new growth of our cities.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. Speaker, on March 29, when the House depressed areas bill H.R. 4569, was before us, I voted for that measure. However, I am today opposing the adoption of the conference report on depressed areas and wish to register for the Record the reason for my opposition. My objection is to the "back-door spending" provisions which it contains, and to which I am strongly opposed in principle. I feel it is dangerous for Congress to lose control of the purse strings in this, and other Federal programs, and know of no adequate excuse for bypassing the normal appropriation process in this case.

Mr. ALGER. Mr. Speaker, in view of the errors of dictatorial form of government, why should we give the President dictatorial power over spending, in contrast to our time-honored appropriation of money by congressional committee study? The House should not accede to the Senate in permitting the back-door raid on the Treasury substituted by the other body as the method of financing. Control over the purse strings resides in the Appropriation Committee of the House and we must not abandon our responsibilities. Rather, all expenditures by the Federal Government should be reappropriated every year by the Appropriations Committee. Otherwise we as Representatives and through us our constituents will lose control of the expenditures of the taxpayers hard-earned money. Members of Congress, not administrative appointees of the executive branch should control appropriations.

To me, it is particularly shocking that the President has demanded this new authority as declared by the chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE], and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS]. Such action characterizes a dictatorship form of government not an elective republic. As the chairman of the Appropriations Committee said, "financial solvency is our greatest military weapon" and this action of back-door spending is "financial insanity." The arbitrary demand by the administration and the about-face of the Democrat House conferees is particularly damning because this aid to depressed areas is a new, and experimental program—all the more reason to keep closer, not lose, scrutiny of the program and control of expenditures.

This high-handed action suggests to me that members of his party including the chairman of Appropriations, should remind the President of the time tested good sense of Congressional procedures. All that stands between us and dictatorship are the rules of procedure followed by the House consonant with our Constitution. This action following the first of its kind $500 million foreign aid without explanation and justification heralds a new form of administration that intends to run roughshod over Congress and the people we represent.

I, for one, resent this intrusion on the legislative branch prerogatives and I shall oppose the conference report. By defeating this report we will close the door on those who want to substitute Executive spending by decree for congressional appropriation and have a new conference report that retains our appropriation procedure. To do less would be to betray the people we represent.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Speaker, the sole issue presented on this conference report is whether the loan part of this program should be handled as Treasury financing or by direct appropriations.

I reemphasize what has already been pointed out several times.

The grants and administration expenses are only authorized by this bill and must be appropriated in the usual manner by the Congress.

The loans will be financed directly by the Treasury. That is the traditional method as to loans.

But, even as to that, it is absurd to argue that Congress loses all control over the program. The bill itself requires elaborate reporting to the Congress. All congressional committees retain their continuing jurisdiction to review the operations of all the departments.

More important, the entire program comes to an end without any action by Congress in 1965. It can be continued only by our affirmative action. At that time, either we will continue it after a complete and thorough review or let it lapse.

Any time before that we can repeal it. The chances are that if it is successful, as we hope it will be, the money now authorized will be insufficient. In that case we will review the entire matter, in 1962 or 1963, and take further action as the facts then may require.

Permit me to advert for a moment to the question propounded by the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture Committee, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY]. While it is intended for the Secretary of Commerce to delegate to the Secretary of Agriculture such functions as can more efficiently be performed by the latter, it is not intended to have the Secretary of Agriculture duplicate the efforts or invade the jurisdiction of the Small Business Administration.

The Small Business Administration's policies and procedures since the inception of the agency provide financial assistance, government procurement, production, and other technical services to small business concerns and State and local development companies located in rural and urban areas, and in areas of surplus labor.

SBA's existing procedures have been drawn and are constantly under review to make all of the Agency's services to small business concerns effective and productive for the individual small businessman. Marked for special consideration are loan applications from small concerns in the smaller cities, towns, villages, and rural communities for commercial and industrial loans where employees are drawn primarily from the surrounding rural population.

For the small businessman in local rural areas, the Small Business Administration also provides counseling services in connection with financial, production, technical, managerial problems, and Government contracting. In addition, SBA issues management publications written especially for small business operators located in rural as well as urban areas.

The agency has established programs to assist in the economic development of particular local communities by lending to a State or local development company which, in turn, provides facilities to specific small business concerns located in either urban or rural areas.

The Small Business Administration approved 432 rural development loans amounting to $27 million in 1960.

There is located in the 55 SBA field offices established in key cities throughout the Nation, a staff of technical, financial, managerial, and production specialists who provide services to the small businessman in these various programs. Under this legislation, before aid can be granted, financial assistance must be unavailable on reasonable terms from other sources, including other Federal agencies.

Accordingly, small concerns will be obliged to seek assistance from SBA under section 7(a) of the Small Business Act and title V of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, before they will be eligible for assistance under section 6 of this bill. Thus, SBA will have reviewed the concern's application for financial conditions and the availability of other financing, so that only SBA can effectuate section 6 without duplicating the work of other Federal agencies.

SBA will continue to provide informational, technical, and managerial services to small business concerns in rural as well as urban areas. For other agencies to perform these services would constitute duplication of SBA efforts, which are prohibited by this bill. The Secretary of Commerce, under his authority from the Area Redevelopment Act, should delegate to Small Business Administration responsibility and authority to carry out his functions for programs in rural areas as they pertain to business and industrial loans and the other services of SBA described above. SBA is in a position to accept the delegation and carry out the responsibilities thereunder.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky is recognized.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, the President wants this bill enacted into law as reported by the conferees. The Secretary of Commerce, who will be the Administrator, also joins in this request.

Four times the Banking and Currency Committee has reported bills, the objective of which was to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in economically distressed areas. One such bill sustained a pocket veto and one was vetoed by the President and the veto was not overridden by Congress. Now we have a President who I am sure will approve the legislation. It is recognized that depressed areas are evils. We cannot attain full economic growth or be assured of domestic tranquility while they exist. I ask the House to agree to the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the conference report.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 223, nays 193, not voting 17, as follows:

Public Law 87-27
87th Congress, S. 1
May 1, 1961

AN ACT

To establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically distressed areas.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Area Redevelopment Act".

Area Redevelopment Act.

DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best interests of the United States, but that some of our communities are suffering substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment; that such unemployment and underemployment cause hardship to many individuals and their families and detract from the national welfare by wasting vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the Federal Government, in cooperation with the States, should help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment to take effective steps in planning and financing their economic redevelopment; that Federal assistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals in areas needing redevelopment should enable such areas to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and diversified local economies and improved local living conditions; and that under the provisions of this Act new employment opportunities should be created by developing and expanding new and existing facilities and resources rather than by merely transferring jobs from one area of the United States to another.

75 STAT. 47.
75 STAT. 48.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATOR

SEC. 3. There shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an Area Redevelopment Administrator in the Department of Commerce who shall receive compensation at a rate equal to that received by Assistant Secretaries of Commerce. The Administrator shall perform such duties in the execution of this Act as the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") may assign.

ADVISORY POLICY BOARD

SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance of functions authorized by this Act, there is created an Area Redevelopment Advisory Policy Board (hereinafter referred to as the "Board"), which shall consist of the following members, all ex officio: the Secretary as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health, Education, and Welfare; Interior; Labor; and Treasury; and the Administrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Small Business Administration. The Chairman may from time to time invite the participation of officials of other agencies of the executive branch interested in the functions herein authorized. Each member of the Board may designate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

(b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of twenty-five members and shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, State and local governments, and the public in general.

National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment.

From the members appointed to such Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under this Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year.

(c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to call together and confer with any persons, including representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and government, who can assist in meeting the problems of unemployment or underemployment in the several areas designated by the Secretary as redevelopment areas.

REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

Standards.

SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas within the United States in which he determines, upon the basis of standards generally comparable with those set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2), that there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. There shall be included among the areas so designated any area—

75 STAT. 48.

75 STAT. 49.

(1) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the rate of unemployment, excluding unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time periods specified in paragraph (2); and

(2) where the Secretary of Labor finds that the annual average rate of unemployment has been at least—

(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years.

The Secretary of Labor shall find the facts and provide the data to be used by the Secretary in making the determinations required by this subsection.

(b) The Secretary shall also designate as "redevelopment areas" those areas (including Indian reservations) within the United States which do not meet the requirements set forth in subsection (a) but which he determines are among the highest in numbers and percentages of low-income families, and in which there exists a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection and before extending any financial assistance as the result of designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall, by regulation, prescribe detailed standards upon which the designations under this subsection shall be based. In the formulation of such standards the Secretary shall consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are of the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States, the extent to which "rural development" projects have previously been located in any such area under programs administered by the Department of Agriculture, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment, the extent of migration out of the area, and the proportion of the population of each such area which has been receiving public assistance from the Federal Government or from the State or States in which such area is located or from any municipality therein. In making the designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall endeavor to distribute the projects widely among the several States, so far as is feasible and proper, in order that actual experience with this program may be had in as many States and in as many areas and under as many different circumstances as possible. In making these determinations the Secretary shall be guided, but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies made, and information and data collected or compiled, by (1) departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, (2) State and local governments, (3) universities and land-grant colleges, and (4) private organizations. Studies.

(c) Upon the request of the Secretary, the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Interior, and such other heads of agencies as may be appropriate are authorized to conduct such special studies, obtain such information, and compile and furnish to the Secretary such data as the Secretary may deem necessary or proper to enable him to make the determinations provided for in subsection (b) of this section. The Secretary shall reimburse when appropriate, out of any funds appropriated to carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers for any expenditures incurred by them under this section. 75 STAT. 49.
75 STAT. 50.

(d) As used in this Act, the term "redevelopment area" refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Secretary as a redevelopment area. Definition.

LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS

SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (which for purposes of this section shall include participations in loans) to aid in financing any project within a redevelopment area for the purchase or development of land and facilities (including, in cases of demonstrated need, machinery and equipment) for industrial or commercial usage, including the construction of new buildings, the rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied buildings, and the alteration, conversion, or enlargement of existing buildings. Such financial assistance shall not be extended (1) for working capital, or (2) to assist establishments relocating from one area to another. The limitation set forth in clause (2) shall not be construed to prohibit assistance for the expansion of an existing business entity through the establishment of a new branch, affiliate, or subsidiary of such entity if the Secretary finds that the establishment of such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary will not result in an increase in unemployment in the area of original location or in any other area where such entity conducts business operations, unless the Secretary has reason to believe that such branch, affiliate, or subsidiary is being established with the intention of closing down the operations of the existing business entity in the area of its original location or in any other area where it conducts such operations. Limitations.

(b) Financial assistance under this section shall be on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines, subject, however, to the following restrictions and limitations:

(1) The total amount of loans (including purchased evidences of indebtedness) outstanding at any one time under this section (A) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(a) shall not exceed $100,000,000 and (B) with respect to projects in redevelopment areas designated under section 5(b) shall not exceed $100,000,000.

(2) Such assistance shall be extended only to applicants, both private and public (including Indian tribes), which have been approved for such assistance by an agency or instrumentality of the State or political subdivision thereof in which the project to be financed is located, and which agency or instrumentality is directly concerned with problems of economic development in such State or subdivision.

75 STAT. 50. (3) The project for which financial assistance is sought must 75 STAT. 51. be reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located.

(4) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder unless the financial assistance applied for is not otherwise available from private lenders or other Federal agencies on reasonable terms.

(5) The Secretary shall not make any loan without a participation unless he determines that the loan cannot be made on a participation basis.

(6) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that there is a reasonable assurance of repayment.

Maximum loan period.

(7) Subject to section 12(5) of this Act, no loan, including renewals or extension thereof, may be made hereunder for a period exceeding twenty-five years and no evidences of indebtedness maturing more than twenty-five years from date of purchase may be purchased hereunder: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor.

(8) Loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(a) of this Act, plus one-half of 1 per centum per annum to cover administrative expenses and to provide for losses on loans made and evidences of indebtedness purchased under this section.

(9) Such assistance shall not exceed 65 per centum of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking) of acquiring or developing land and facilities (including, in cases of demonstrated need, machinery and equipment), and of constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or enlarging the building or buildings of the particular project, and shall, among others, be on the condition that—

(A) other funds are available in an amount which, together with the assistance provided hereunder, shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate cost;

(B) not less than 10 per centum of such aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof, or by an Indian tribe or a community or area organization which is nongovernmental in character, as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance;

(C) in extending financial assistance under this section with respect to a redevelopment area, the Secretary shall require that not less than 5 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such assistance is extended shall be supplied by nongovernmental sources as equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the Federal financial assistance extended under this section has been repaid in full according to the terms thereof and, if such a loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing such Federal financial assistance; and

(D) to the extent the Secretary finds such action necessary to encourage financial participation in a particular project by other lenders and investors, and except as otherwise provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), any Federal financial assistance extended under this section may be repayable only after other loans made in connection with such project have been repaid in full, and the security, if any, for such Federal financial assistance may be subordinate and inferior to the lien or liens securing other loans made in connection with the same project.

(10) No such assistance shall be extended unless there shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary an overall program for the economic development of the area and a finding by the State, or any agency, instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof, that the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for any project prohibited by laws of the State or local political subdivision in which the project would be located.

LOANS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 7. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase or development of land for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

Conditions for loans.

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

(2) the funds requested for such project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms;

(3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of other available funds for such project are adequate to insure the completion thereof;

(4) there is a reasonable expectation of repayment; and

(5) such area has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10) and the project for which financial assistance is sought is consistent with such program.

(b) Subject to section 12(5), the maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than forty years after the date such loan is made. Any such loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Secretary on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 9(a) of this Act, plus one-quarter of 1 per centum per annum.

(c) The total amount of loans outstanding at any one time under this section shall not exceed $100,000,000. Limitation.

(d) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it agrees to undertake.

GRANTS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

Conditions for grants.

SEC. 8. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public nonprofit organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make grants for land acquisition or development for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities, within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will tend to improve the opportunities, in the redevelopment area where such project is or will be located, for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities which will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in such area;

(2) the entity requesting the grant proposes to contribute to the cost of the project for which such grant is requested in proportion to its ability so to contribute;

(3) the project for which a grant is requested will fulfill a pressing need of the area, or part thereof, in which it is, or will be, located, and there is little probability that such project can be undertaken without the assistance of a grant under this section; and

(4) the area for which a project is to be undertaken has an approved economic development program as provided in section 6(b)(10) and such project is consistent with such program.

The amount of any grant under this section for any such project shall not exceed the difference between the funds which can be practicably obtained from other sources (including a loan under section 7 of this Act) for such project, and the amount which is necessary to insure the completion thereof.

Supervision.

(b) The Secretary shall by regulation provide for the supervision of projects with respect to which grants are made under this section so as to insure that Federal funds are not wasted or dissipated.

(c) No financial assistance shall be extended under this section with respect to any public facility which would compete with an existing privately owned public utility rendering a service to the public at rates or charges subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless the State regulatory body determines that in the area to be served by the public facility for which the financial assistance is to be extended there is a need for an increase in such service (taking into consideration reasonably foreseeable future needs) which the existing public utility is not able to meet through its existing facilities or through an expansion which it agrees to undertake.

Appropriation.

(d) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $75,000,000 for the purpose of making grants under this section.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT FUND

SEC. 9. (a) To obtain funds for the purpose of extending financial assistance under sections 6 and 7, the Secretary may, with the approval of the President, issue and have outstanding at any one time notes and obligations for purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury in an amount not to exceed \$300,000,000. Such notes or other obligations shall be in such forms and denominations, have such maturities, and be subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds for financial assistance under section 6 shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, but such rate shall not be greater than the current average yields on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturities as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of such notes or other obligations. Any such notes or other obligations which are issued by the Secretary to raise funds for financial assistance under section 7 shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury which shall be not more than the higher of (1) $2\frac{1}{2}$ per centum per annum, or (2) the average annual interest rate on all interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt as computed at the end of the fiscal year next preceding the issuance by the Secretary and adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase any notes and other obligations issued under this section and for such purpose is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as amended, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under such Act are extended to include any purchase of such notes and other obligations. The Secretary of the Treasury may at any time sell any of the notes or other obligations acquired by him under this section. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such notes or other obligations shall be treated in every respect as public debt transactions of the United States.

Interest rates.

40 Stat. 288.
31 USC 774.

(b) Funds obtained by the Secretary under subsection (a) shall be deposited in an area redevelopment fund (hereinafter referred to as the "fund"), which is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States, and which shall be available to the Secretary for the purpose of extending financial assistance under sections 6 and 7 and for the payment of all obligations and expenditures arising therefrom. Receipts arising from the programs of assistance under sections 6 and 7 shall be credited to the fund. Any moneys in the fund determined by the Secretary to be in excess of current needs shall be paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(c) The fund shall contribute to the civil service retirement and disability fund a sum as provided by section 4(a) of the Civil Service Retirement Act (5 U.S.C. 2254(a)), except that such sum shall be determined by applying to the total basic salaries (as defined in that Act) paid to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act and covered by that Act the per centum rate determined annually by the Civil Service Commission to be the excess of the total normal cost per centum rate of the civil service retirement system over the employee deduction rate specified in such section 4(a). The fund shall also pay into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts that portion of the cost of administration of the civil service retirement and disability fund attributable to employees performing activities authorized under sections 6 and 7 of this Act, as determined by the Civil Service Commission.

(d) In the performance of and with respect to the functions, powers, and duties vested in him by sections 6 and 7 of this Act, the Secretary shall—

(1) prepare annually and submit a budget program in accordance with the provisions of sections 102, 103, and 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended; and

(2) determine the character of and the necessity for obligations and expenditures and the manner in which they shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, subject to provisions of law specifically applicable to Government corporations.

INFORMATION

SEC. 10. The Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas and other areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas. The Secretary shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

SEC. 11. In carrying out his duties under this Act the Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance which would be useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment (1) to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under this Act, and (2) to other areas which he finds have substantial need for such assistance. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Secretary through members of his staff or through the employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations, or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such purposes. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purposes of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000 annually.

Appropriations.

POWERS OF SECRETARY

SEC. 12. In performing his duties under this Act, the Secretary is authorized to—

(1) adopt, alter, and use a seal, which shall be judicially noticed;

(2) hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, and take such testimony, as he may deem advisable;

(3) request directly from any executive department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, independent establishment, or instrumentality information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics needed to carry out the purposes of this Act; and each department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, establishment, or instrumentality is authorized to furnish such information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics directly to the Secretary;

(4) under regulations prescribed by him, assign or sell at public or private sale, or otherwise dispose of for cash or credit, in his discretion and upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any evidence of debt, contract, claim, personal property, or security assigned to or held by him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act, and collect or compromise all obligations assigned to or held by him in connection with such loans or evidences of indebtedness until such time as such obligations may be referred to the Attorney General for suit or collection;

(5) further extend the maturity of or renew any loan made or evidence of indebtedness purchased under this Act, beyond the periods stated in such loan or evidence of indebtedness or in this Act, for additional periods not to exceed ten years, if such extension or renewal will aid in the orderly liquidation of such loan or evidence of indebtedness;

(6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, modernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any real or personal property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by, him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act;

(7) pursue to final collection, by way of compromise or other administrative action, prior to reference to the Attorney General, all claims against third parties assigned to him in connection with loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act. This shall include authority to obtain deficiency judgments or otherwise in the case of mortgages assigned to the Secretary. Section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (41 U.S.C. 5), shall not apply to any contract of hazard insurance or to any purchase or contract for services or supplies on account of property obtained by the Secretary as a result of loans made or evidences of indebtedness purchased under this Act if the premium therefor or the amount thereof does not exceed $1,000. S. 1

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

Ordered to lie on the table and to be printed

AMENDMENT

(IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE)

Intended to be proposed by Mr. SCOTT to the bill (S. 1) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in certain economically depressed areas, viz: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

1 That this Act be cited as the "Area Redevelopment Act".

2 DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

3 SEC. 2. The Congress declares that the maintenance
4 of the national economy at a high level is vital to the best
5 interests of the United States, but that some of our com-
6 munities are suffering substantial and persistent unemploy-
7 ment which causes hardship to many individuals and their 8 families and detracts from the national welfare by wasting

1 vital human resources; that to overcome this problem the
2 Federal Government in cooperation with the States, should 3 help areas of substantial and persistent unemployment to 4 take effective steps in planning and financing their economic 5 development; that Federal assistance should enable com-
6 munities to achieve lasting improvement and enhance the 7 domestic prosperity by the establishment of stable and di-
8 versified local economies; and that new employment oppor-
9 tunities should be created rather than merely transferred 10 from one community to another.

11 AREA ECONOMIC REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

12 SEC. 3. To assist areas in the United States designated 13 hereinafter as redevelopment areas, the Secretary of Com-
14 merce is authorized to take such action as may be necessary
15 to carry out the provisions of this Act. To assist the Sec-
16 retary of Commerce (hereinafter referred to as the "Sec-
17 retary"), there is hereby established within the Department
18 of Commerce an Area Economic Redevelopment Adminis-
19 tration which shall be headed by an Administrator who shall 20 be appointed by the Secretary and who shall receive com-
21 pensation at a rate equal to that received by Assistant Sec-
22 retaries of Commerce. The Administrator shall perform
23 such duties in the execution of this Act as the Secretary may 24 assign.

2 SEC. 4. (a) To advise the Secretary in the performance
3 of functions authorized by this Act, there is authorized to 4 be created an Area Economic Redevelopment Advisory 5 Board (hereinafter referred to as the "Board", which shall 6 consist of the following members, all ex officio: The Secre-
7 tary, as Chairman; the Secretaries of Agriculture; Health,
8 Education, and Welfare; Labor; and Treasury; the Admin-9 istrators of the Housing and Home Finance Agency and of 10 the Small Business Administration. The Chairman may from 11 time to time invite the participation of officials of other agen-
12 cies of the executive branch interested in the functions
13 herein authorized. Each member of the Board may desig-14 nate an officer of his agency to act for him as a member of 15 the Board with respect to any matter there considered.

16 (b) The Secretary shall appoint a National Public 17 Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall 18 consist of twenty-five members and which shall be composed 19 of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and 20 the public in general. From the members appointed to such 21 Committee the Secretary shall designate a Chairman. Such 22 Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, 23 shall from time to time make recommendations to the 24 Secretary relative to the carrying out of his duties under this

1 Act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings
2 during each calendar year.

3 (c) The Secretary is authorized from time to time to 4 call together and confer with representatives of the various 5 parties in interest from any industry in which employment
6 has dropped substantially over an extended period of years
7 and which in consequence has been a primary source of 8 high levels of unemployment in several areas designated
9 by the Secretary as redevelopment areas. Conferences con-
10 vened under authority of this subsection shall consider with 11 and recommend to the Secretary plans and programs with 12 special reference to any such industry to carry out the pur-
13 poses of this Act.

14 REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

15 SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary shall designate as "indus-16 trial redevelopment areas" those industrial areas within the 17 United States in which he determines that there has existed
18 substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended
19 period of time. There shall be included among the areas so
20 designated any industrial area—

21 (1) where the rate of unemployment, excluding 22 unemployment due primarily to temporary or seasonal 23 factors, is currently 6 per centum or more and has
24 averaged at least 6 per centum for the qualifying time
25 periods specified in (2) below; and

(2) where the annual average rate of unemployment has been at least—

(A) 50 per centum above the national average for three of the preceding four calendar years, or

(B) 75 per centum above the national average for two of the preceding three calendar years, or

(C) 100 per centum above the national average for one of the preceding two calendar years.

(b) The Secretary shall also designate as “rural re-development areas” those rural areas within the United States in which he determines that there exist the largest number and percentage of low-income families, and a condition of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider, among other relevant factors, the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are to the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the families in each such area to the general levels of income in the United States, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, and the availability of manpower in each such area for supplemental employment.

(c) In making the determinations provided for in this section, the Secretary shall be guided, but not conclusively

1 governed, by pertinent studies made, and information and 2 data collected or compiled, by (1) departments, agencies,
3 and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, (2) State
4 and local governments, (3) universities and land-grant
5 colleges, and (4) private organizations.

6 (d) Upon the request of the Secretary, the Secretary
7 of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Director of 8 the Bureau of the Census are respectively authorized to 9 conduct such special studies, obtain such information and 10 compile and furnish to the Secretary such data as the 11 Secretary may deem necessary or proper to enable him to 12 make the determinations provided for in this section. The 13 Secretary shall reimburse, out of any funds appropriated to 14 carry out the purposes of this Act, the foregoing officers for 15 any expenditures incurred by them under this section.

16 (e) As used in this Act, the term "redevelopment 17 area" refers to any area within the United States which has 18 been designated by the Secretary as an industrial redevel-
19 opment area or a rural redevelopment area, and may include
20 one or more counties, or one or more municipalities, or a 21 part of a county or municipality.

22 LOANS AND PARTICIPATIONS

23 SEC. 6. (a) The Secretary is authorized to purchase
24 evidences of indebtedness and to make loans (including

1 immediate participations therein) to aid in financing any
2 project for the purchase or development of land and facil-
3 ities for industrial usage, for the construction of new factory
4 buildings, for rehabilitation of abandoned or unoccupied fac-
5 tory buildings, or for the alteration, conversion, or enlarge-
6 ment of any existing buildings for industrial use. Such 7 financial assistance shall not be extended for working capital,
8 for purchases of machinery or equipment, or to assist estab-
9 lishments relocating from one area to another when such 10 assistance will result in substantial detriment to the area of 11 original location by increasing unemployment.

12 (b) Financial assistance under this section shall be 13 on such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines,
14 subject, however, to the following restrictions and limita-
15 tions:

16 (1) The total amount of loans and loan participa-
17 tions (including purchased evidences of indebtedness)
18 outstanding at any one time under this section (A)
19 with respect to projects in industrial redevelopment
20 areas shall not exceed $100,000,000, and (B) with 21 respect to projects in rural redevelopment areas shall 22 not exceed $50,000,000;

23 (2) Such assistance shall be extended only to ap-
24 plicants, both private and public, approved by the State

1 (or any agency or instrumentality thereof concerned
2 with problems of economic development) in which the 3 project to be financed shall be located;

4 (3) No such assistance shall be extended hereunder
5 unless the financial assistance applied for is not other-
6 wise available from private lenders or other Federal 7 agencies on reasonable terms;

8 (4) No loan shall be made unless it is determined
9 that an immediate participation is not available;

10 (5) No evidences of indebtedness shall be purchased
11 and no loans shall be made unless it is determined that 12 there is a reasonable assurance of repayment;

13 (6) Subject to section 11 (5) of this Act, no loan,
14 including renewals or extension thereof may be made
15 hereunder for a period exceeding thirty years and no
16 evidences of indebtedness maturing more than thirty
17 years from date of purchase may be purchased here-
18 under: Provided, That the foregoing restrictions on 19 maturities shall not apply to securities or obligations
20 received by the Secretary as a claimant in bankruptcy
21 or equitable reorganization or as a creditor in other
22 proceedings attendant upon insolvency of the obligor, 23 or if extension or renewal for additional periods, not to 24 exceed, however, a total of ten years, will aid in the

1 orderly liquidation of such loan or of such evidence of 2 indebtedness;

3 (7) Such assistance shall not exceed 50 per centum
4 of the aggregate cost to the applicant (excluding all
5 other Federal aid in connection with the undertaking)
6 of acquiring or developing land and facilities, and of 7 constructing, altering, converting, rehabilitating, or en-
8 larging the building or buildings of the particular project
9 and shall, among others, be on the following conditions:

10 (A) That other funds are available in an 11 amount which, together with the assistance provided 12 hereunder, shall be sufficient to pay such aggregate
13 cost;

14 (B) That not less than 10 per centum of such 15 aggregate cost be supplied by the State or any 16 agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision
17 thereof, or by a community or area organization, as 18 equity capital or as a loan repayable only after the 19 financial assistance hereunder has been repaid in full 20 according to the terms thereof and, if such loan is 21 secured, its security shall be subordinate and in-22 ferior to the lien or liens securing the financial 23 assistance hereunder; and

1 (C) That in making any loan under this section
2 with respect to an industrial redevelopment area, the 3 Secretary shall require that not less than 5 per 4 centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which 5 such loan is made shall be supplied by nongovern-
6 mental sources.

7 (8) No such assistance shall be extended unless 8 there shall be submitted and approved by the Secre-
9 tary an overall program for the economic development of 10 the area and a finding by the State, or any agency,
11 instrumentality, or local political subdivision thereof,
12 that the project for which financial assistance is sought
13 is consistent with such program: Provided, That noth-14 ing in this Act shall authorize financial assistance for 15 any project prohibited by laws of the State or local 16 political subdivision in which the project would be 17 located.

18 (c) Of the funds authorized to be appropriated under 19 section 8 of this Act, not more than $100,000,000 shall be 20 deposited in a revolving fund which shall be used for the pur-
21 pose of making loans under this section with respect to 22 projects in industrial redevelopment areas, and not more than 23 $50,000,000 shall be deposited in a revolving fund which 24 shall be used for the purpose of making loans under this sec-
25 tion with respect to projects in rural redevelopment areas.

LOANS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 7. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, or private or public organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Secretary is authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase or development of land for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities within any redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in the redevelopment area wherein such project is, or will be, located, and will tend to improve the opportunities in such area for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities;

(2) the funds requested for such project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms;

(3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of other available funds for such projects are adequate to insure the completion thereof; and

(4) there is a reasonable expectation of repayment.

(b) No loan under this section shall be for an amount in excess of 50 per centum of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made. Subject to section 11 (5), the

1 maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than thirty
2 years after the date such loan is made.

3 (c) In making any loan under this section, the Secre-
4 tary shall require that not less than 10 per centum of the 5 aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made
6 shall be supplied by the State (including any political sub-
7 division thereof) within which such project is to be located
8 as equity capital, or as a loan repayable only after the finan-
9 cial assistance provided under this section has been repaid
10 in full, and, if such loan is secured, its security shall be sub-
11 ordinate to the lien or liens securing the financial assistance
12 provided under this section. In determining the amount of 13 participation required under this subsection with respect to 14 any particular project, the Secretary shall give consideration
15 to the financial condition of the State or local government,
16 and to the per capita income of the residents of the redevel-
17 opment area, within which such project is to be located.

18 (d) Of the funds authorized to be appropriated under 19 section 8 of this Act, not more than $50,000,000 shall be 20 deposited in a revolving fund which shall be used for the pur-
21 pose of making loans under this section.

22 APPROPRIATION FOR LOANS

23 SEC. 8. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated 24 not to exceed $200,000,000 to provide funds for loans under 25 this Act.

2 SEC. 9. The Secretary shall aid redevelopment areas by 3 furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries,
4 and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical 5 information, market research, or other forms of assistance, in-6 formation, or advice which are obtainable from the various 7 departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal 8 Government and which would be useful in alleviating con-
9 ditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment
10 within such areas. The Secretary shall furnish the procure-11 ment divisions of the various departments, agencies, and 12 other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list 13 containing the names and addresses of business firms which

20 Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance to 21 areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under 22 this Act. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating 23 the needs of, and development potentialities for, economic 24 growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by 25 the Secretary through members of his staff or through the

1 employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, cor-

16 (5) further extend the maturity of or renew any

21 (6) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, mod-
22 ernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such 23 terms and conditions and for such consideration as he

17 deeds of conveyance, deed of release, assignments and 18 satisfactions of mortgages, and any other written instru-

4 (11) establish such rules, regulations, and proce-

7 TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

8 SEC. 12. Whenever the Secretary shall determine that
9 employment conditions within any area previously desig-
10 nated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such
11 an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such desig-
12 nation under section 5 of this Act, no further assistance shall 13 be granted under this Act with respect to such area and,
14 for the purposes of this Act, such area shall not be considered
15 a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained
16 herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being 17 designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this 18 Act if the Secretary determines it to be eligible under such 19 section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or under-
20 takings with respect to such area which were entered into 21 pursuant to this Act prior to a determination by the Secre-
22 tary that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment
23 area. The Secretary shall keep the departments and agen-
24 cies of the Federal Government, and interested State or

1 local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made
2 hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

3 PROCUREMENT BY GOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES

4 SEC. 13. Each department, agency, or other instru-
5 mentality of the Federal Government engaged in the pro-
6 curement of any supplies or services for use by or on behalf
7 of the United States shall—

8 (1) use its best efforts to award negotiated procure-
9 ment contracts to contractors located within redevelop-
10 ment areas to the extent procurement objectives will 11 permit;

12 (2) where deemed appropriate, set aside portions of 13 procurements for negotiation exclusively with firms lo-
14 cated in redevelopment areas, if a substantial proportion 15 of production on such negotiated contracts will be per-16 formed within redevelopment areas and if such firms
17 will contract for such portions of the procurement at 18 prices no higher than those paid on the balance of such 19 procurements;

20 (3) where deemed appropriate and consistent with 21 procurement objectives, after the expiration of the period
22 during which bids for any procurement are permitted to 23 be submitted and if the lowest of such bids was sub-
24 mitted by a firm in an area other than a redevelopment

1 area, negotiate with firms in redevelopment areas with 2 a view to ascertaining whether any such firm will furnish 3 the services or supplies with respect to which bids were 4 theretofore submitted for an amount equal to, or less
5 than, the amount of the lowest bid theretofore submitted
6 for the furnishing of such services or supplies, and if 7 such firm can be found, award the contract for the fur-
8 nishing of such services or supplies to such firm;

9 (4) assure that firms in redevelopment areas which 10 are on appropriate bidders' lists will be given the oppor-

12 for which they are qualified and on which small business

14 the number of firms on a bidders' list is exclusive, there 15 shall be included a representative number of firms from
16 redevelopment areas;

17 (5) in the event of tie bids on offers on any procure-
18 ment, award the contract to the firm located in a re-
19 development area, other things being equal;

20 (6) encourage prime contractors to award subcon-
21 tracts to firms in redevelopment areas; and

22 (7) cooperate with other departments, agencies,
23 and instrumentalities of the Federal Government in “INDUSTRIAL REDEVELOPMENT AREAS UNDER THE AREA ECONOMIC REDEVELOPMENT ACT

“SEC. 113. (a) Whenever the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Housing and Home Finance Administrator (1) that any county, city, or other municipality (in this section referred to as a ‘municipality’) is situated in an area designated under section 5 (a) of the Area Redevelopment Act as an industrial redevelopment area, and (2) that there is a reasonable probability that with assistance provided under such Act and other undertakings the area will be able to achieve more than temporary improvement in its economic development, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator is authorized to provide financial assistance to a local public agency in any such municipality under this title and the provisions of this section.

“(b) The Housing and Home Finance Administrator may provide such financial assistance under this section without regard to the requirements or limitations of section 110 (c) that the project area be clearly predominantly residential in character or that it be redeveloped for predomi-

1 nantly residential uses; but no such assistance shall be pro-
2 vided in any area if such Administrator determines that it
3 will assist in relocating business operations from one area to 4 another when such assistance will result in substantial detri-
5 ment to the area of original location by increasing unemploy-
6 ment.

7 “(c) Financial assistance under this section may be pro-
8 vided for any project involving a project area including pri-
9 marily industrial or commercial structure suitable for reha-
10 bilitation under the urban renewal plan for the area.

11 “(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, 12 a contract for financial assistance under this section may in-13 clude provisions permitting the disposition of any land in the 14 project area designated under the urban renewal plan for 15 industrial or commercial uses to any public agency or non-16 profit corporation for subsequent disposition as promptly as 17 practicable by such public agency or corporation for the re-
18 development of the land in accordance with the urban re-
19 newal plan: Provided, That any disposition of such land
20 under this section shall be made at not less than its fair value 21 for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan: And 22 provided further, That the purchasers from or lessees of such 23 public agency or corporation, and their assignees, shall be 24 required to assume the obligations imposed under section
25 105 (b).

1 “(e) Following the execution of any contract for finan-
2 cial assistance under this section with respect to any project,
3 the Housing and Home Finance Administrator may exercise
4 the authority vested in him under this section for the com-
5 pletion of such project, notwithstanding any determination
6 made after the execution of such contract that the area in 7 which the project is located may no longer be an industrial 8 redevelopment area under the Area Redevelopment Act.

9 “(f) Not more than 10 per centum of the funds author-
10 ized for loans under section 102 or for capital grants under 11 section 103 shall be available to provide financial assistance

2 existing programs relating to vocational training and re-
3 training for the purpose of assuring that the facilities and 4 services of such agencies are made fully available to such 5 individuals.

6 (b) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that addi-
7 tional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet
8 the vocational training or retraining needs of such individ-
9 uals, he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education,
10 and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Wel-

12 assistance, including financial assistance when necessary, to 13 the appropriate State vocational educational agency in the

8 ployment compensation benefits have been exhausted or

11 undergoing vocational training or retraining under section 16
12 of this Act. Such payments shall be made only during the 13 period the individual is receiving vocational training or re-
14 training under section 16 of this Act, but not in any event
15 to exceed sixteen weeks, and the amounts of such payments
16 shall be equal to the amount of the average weekly unem-
17 ployment compensation payment payable in the State mak-
18 ing such payments.

19 (b) The Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Com-

10 and (2) the approximate amount of money which has been,

24 have to be provided by the Government;

7 such action has been, or is proposed to be, taken.

8 Any such investigation shall be conducted as expeditiously 9 as practicable, and the findings resulting therefrom shall be 10 submitted to the Administrator for transmittal to the Secre-
11 tary of Defense and to the Congress. The Secretary shall 12 take no further action in connection with the deactivation
13 or removal of any existing military installation, with respect
14 to which he has sent a notification to the Administrator un-
